Of these imperfections no person can be more conscious than myself. I trust, nevertheless, that I may at least have facilitated the future labours of others, and thereby have contributed somewhat towards promoting the welfare of a portion of the human race in whom I have ever taken the deepest interest. Your already expressed opinion of the object and plan of my undertaking encourages me to hope, that however inadequately I may have accomplished my task, I may not, in this respect, be altogether disappointed.

I have the honour to remain,

Your faithful servant,

INTRODUCTION.

EVERY one who has attempted the study of the Law as administered in the British territories in India must have felt, and will be ready to acknowledge, the want of elementary and comprehensive works treating of this most important subject.

The laws themselves are so diverse and complicated in their nature, and are spread over such a multitude of volumes, that, in the absence of such works, a long course of laborious investigation and patient study becomes requisite, before the student can see his way through the mass of legislation, which must appear to all, at the outset, an impenetrable chaos.

It is true that the Regulations and the Acts of the Legislative Council of India have been printed and published, and that various treatises on native law, both by European authors and in translations from the works of Hindû and Muhammadan lawyers, have appeared at different times. The Regulations, however, are frequently vague, and not easily to be construed, and from their voluminousness, and the manner in which they are framed, are always difficult of reference ; whilst, with regard to the native laws, a difficulty arises, on the other hand, from the paucity of the materials, and still greater obstacles present themselves on the ground of obscurity. The works on native law by European writers are unfortunately few in number ; and those translated from the original languages, though more numerous, are, from their nature, not calculated to be of much assistance to a beginner : the latter class treat of the doctrines of different schools, in many instances totally opposed to each other, without adverting to the distinction ; they abound with subtleties of reasoning supporting contradictory interpretations of the texts of the ancient lawgivers ; and they are in every case couched in terms difficult to be understood, unless after a long acquaintance with the method pursued by the Indian jurists in treating of legal subjects, and some preliminary knowledge of those religious systems with which the laws are intimately connected, and of which, in fact, they form an integral part.

Thus this want of elementary books presents a serious difficulty at the very commencement of the legal education of those destined to exercise judicial functions in India : and, were it not for the system of progressive advancement, which wisely assigns the lighter labour and the more limited authority to those newly arrived in that country, would long since have been productive of consequences totally subversive of justice, and fatal to our interests.

The system of progressive advancement to which I have alluded, has, it is true, by granting time for the gradual acquirement of the laws by study on the spot, and for the accumulation of knowledge by actual experience, in proportion to the increasing duties which the judicial officers are called upon to perform, supplied, to some extent, the absence of facilities for preliminary study. But it must not be concluded from this that such facilities are unnecessary. It cannot be disputed that men have succeeded very well, and have become distinguished as Judges and Magistrates, without having turned their attention to the laws of India previously to their going to that country ; but no one can say how much greater might have been their success, or how much sooner they might have attained the same distinction, had the study of those laws formed a part of their early education.

The Judges of Her Majesty's Courts of Judicature, in nearly every instance, arrive in India totally unacquainted with more than one branch of the laws which they are called upon to administer, and frequently return to England before they have had time to acquire the requisite knowledge, either by study or experience. They are appointed at a more advanced age than the civil servants of the Honourable East-India Company ; their time is fully occupied; and though they certainly possess the advantage of a legal education in this country, they have for these reasons fewer opportunities of gaining information, with respect to the native systems of law, than those enjoyed by the Judges of the Sudder and Mofussil Courts, and must consequently feel in a greater degree the absence of works affording such information.

Almost all the European authors who have written upon Indian law have principally devoted their attention to theories; each writer dilating upon the course which he conceives ought to be pursued in legislating for India, and neglecting to describe the system which has been adopted, and the laws as they now exist.

Taking all these circumstances into consideration, it will at once be evident that any work tending to render the knowledge of the actual law of British India more readily accessible must be productive of advantage.

Several years since I contemplated an attempt to supply such a work; but I soon found that one great source, from which fixed principles must mainly be derived, was extremely difficult of access. I allude to the decisions of competent Courts, illustrating the doctrines laid down in the text books, and fixing with certainty the doubtful points which have arisen as to the interpretation of the various codes.

The published collections of these decisions are comparatively few in number; many of them are not procurable without great difficulty; and in most instances they are destitute of adequate Indices to direct the attention of the reader to the sought-for point.

Having in my possession a large, and, I believe, a perfect collection of the printed decisions, as well as a number of MS. notes of cases and judgments, I accordingly determined that I could not employ my time more usefully than in completing and publishing, in the first instance, an Analytical Digest, which I had already commenced for my own use, and which should contain all the decided cases I could procure, arranged under appropriate titles for reference.

The following work is the result of my labours. It does not pretend to be of so comprehensive a nature as the Digests of English cases in use in this country, the comparative scarcity of published Reports not admitting of the full illustration of each particular title ; but it comprises all the cases that are included in the list of works cited in the sixth section of this Introduction, with the exception only of some few of the later decisions, which came into my hands when the Digest was sent to press ; and contains, in addition, a large number of most important decisions in the Supreme Courts at Calcutta and Bombay, which are now published for the first time from the note books of learned Judges of those Courts.

Although a Digest of Cases be not strictly an elementary work, it is still one of an eminently practical nature ; and by exhibiting at once, so far as the decisions extend, the actual state of the law in India, it may be regarded as in some measure supplying the place, if not as the necessary precursor, of a more full and detailed exposition of such law.

The utility of a work of this nature will not be questioned by any lawyer, more especially with relation to India, where we have to deal with questions arising on points of law peculiar to the country, and frequently depending entirely upon usage. Such a work presents at one view the constructions, opinions, and decisions of the most competent persons in all doubtful matters ; and, if perfectly carried out, and sufficient materials were brought to the task, would, at one and the same time, offer to the student a running commentary on the doctrines laid down in the text books and the enacted law of India, and, to the practitioner and the Judge, data upon which both argument and decision might be founded with safety.

So long ago as the year 1813 Mr. Dorin remarked on the necessity of establishing the authority of precedent in India in the following words—"I think it should be enacted by a Regulation, that, from a given period, the judgments of the Court shall be considered as precedents binding upon itself and on the inferior Courts in similar cases which may arise thereafter. This will have the effect of making the superior Courts more cautious, and of introducing something like a system for the other Courts, the want of which is now very much felt." Again, he says, "Hitherto it has not been much the custom to refer to precedent; and for aught the Judges of the Court may know, the same points may have been decided over and over again, and perhaps not always the same way. It is obvious, that having something like a system established would tend to abridge the labours of the Civil Courts."¹

Although decided cases are now occasionally referred to in the Courts as precedents, it is by no means a general practice; and though this is to be deplored, it may be in some measure accounted for, by the difficulty which exists in consulting the Reports to which I have already alluded. It is obvious that the employment of a Digest of Cases removes this difficulty.

It appears to me, that in no instance is the maxim "stare decisis" so imperative or so peculiarly adapted to the circumstance as when applied to the laws administered in India, since the practice of the Courts is unsettled, and not easily to be ascertained, and in some instances their jurisdiction is ill-defined, and encompassed with doubt and difficulty; whilst in questions of Native, and especially of Hindú law, a reference to the law officers is generally unsatisfactory. In speaking of such references, Sir William Jones long since observed—"I could not with any conscience concur in a decision merely on the written opinion of native lawyers, in any cause in which they could have the remotest interest in misleading the Court; nor, how vigilant soever we might be, would it be very difficult for them to mislead us; for a single obscure text, explained by themselves, might be quoted as express authority, though perhaps in the very book from which it was selected it might be differently explained, or introduced only for the purpose of being exploded."² And again, Sir Francis Macnaghten says, alluding to the Pandits—"Native lawyers may not be deserving of the blame which is imputed to them; but there are instances of their partiality and tergiversation, which cannot be palliated or denied. Nothing but an ascertainment of the law can prove a corrective of this evil.”¹ There can be no doubt but that the native law-officers, as a body, are both learned and respectable, and far above suspicion of corruption ; but a mere knowledge of texts, however extensive such knowledge may be, is most often quite insufficient for the purpose of arriving at a conclusion ; and it is perhaps too much to expect from an Indian education, that the law-officers should possess and exercise the discrimination and impartiality which belong more nearly to the province of a Judge. “The interminable and troubled sea of Hindú jurisprudence,” says an accomplished author, “is sure to present something for the support of any opinion which it may be desirous to keep afloat for the purpose of temporary convenience”²—and thus the ignorance or partiality of the law-officers may always be supported, and seemingly justified, by quotations from the commentators, which, taken separately, are perhaps diametrically opposed to the actual true state of the law, only to be ascertained by fuller investigation and a comparison of all the conflicting authorities. The last-mentioned writer gives it as his deliberate opinion that “the speculations of commentators have done much to unsettle the Hindú law ; and the venality of the Pundits has done more.” And again, “to the Pundits is chiefly attributable the perplexity of the system which it is their province to expound.”³

These inconveniences of a reference to the native law-officers would in a great measure be obviated by the existence of a Digest of Decisions, which would frequently supersede, and generally controul, such a reference ; since in all cases where a point of native law has been already determined by men who have made the study of that law the work of their lives, and who have brought to the task the advantages of a liberal education, such determination would at once present itself, and be sufficient to fix the vacillating mind of a doubting Judge ; whilst the native law-officers would hesitate before they advanced opinions, or quoted authorities, at variance with the principles laid down by European Judges of established reputation as native lawyers. • No one will for a moment dispute, that in any question of Hindú law the word of the illustrious Henry Colebrooke is worth the exposition of a thousand Pandits.

Thus a sufficiently perfect Digest of Cases would become, not only a guide for the Judge and those who practise in the Courts, but a check upon the law-officers, and a touchstone of their knowledge and honesty, which might be in the hands of every one.

The practice of abiding by precedent is perfectly recognized both by the Hindú and the Muhammadan laws. The text of Menu—" If it be asked, how the law shall be ascertained, when particular cases are not comprised under any of the general rules, the answer is this : That which well-instructed Brahmans propound shall be held incontestable law"¹—is, to the Hindú, divine authority for deferring to precedent ; and it is perhaps solely on account of the metaphysical tendency of the Indian mind, which has always interfered with the mere practical record of mundane matters, that we do not possess collections of decisions by the more ancient lawyers, which would have been in most cases as conclusive, as they would be desirable in all. With regard to the Muhammadan law, one of its chief foundations, the Sunnah and Hadís, may be looked upon as one great body of precedent, a large portion consisting of decisions passed by the Prophet on questions relating to the religion and law which he promulgated. In addition to this, the numerous collections of the Fatwas of celebrated lawyers form a mass of precedent hardly surpassed, in bulk at least, in the legal literature of any nation, and constantly referred to as authoritative in all Muhammadan Courts of Justice.

I may be excused in thus insisting upon the use, and dwelling upon the application, of a Digest of Cases, inasmuch as no such work, so far as the law of India is concerned, exists at present ; and most probably many of the Judges, and a large majority of the practitioners, in the Courts where that law is administered, are unaware of the infinite utility and saving of time and labour which has resulted from the extensive introduction of works of the same nature in this country. I humbly hope that my imperfect attempt at supplying the deficiency in India may be partially productive of the same benefits, and render a similar prefatory description unnecessary on the future appearance of works of a like description.

In this Introduction to the Digest, in order that the reader may more fully understand the arrangement of the work, and the application of the cases, it will be necessary to give an account of the Courts of Judicature in India ; of the manner in which Appeals from those Courts are instituted and prosecuted to a hearing before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in England ; and of the different laws administered in the various Courts.

For this purpose I shall divide the subject matter of the following pages into six distinct sections, giving the history of the Courts of Judicature, and the systems for the administration of justice, from their origin down to the present time, and a detailed account of the actual constitution of the Courts, and their powers and jurisdictions as they now exist. The subject of Appeals to England, and the laws peculiar to India, will also be treated historically ; and, in addition, I shall, in the former case, enter fully into the mode of procedure in this country with regard to Appeals to Her Majesty in Council ; and in the latter, at the risk of prolixity, I shall describe at some length the sources whence the native laws are derived, and the works from which a knowledge of them may be most readily attained. I shall conclude by enumerating the different collections of Reports which have furnished the materials for the Digest, and describe the plan I have adopted in the general arrangement of the work.

Before entering upon the particular description of the Courts, it will be as well to premise that the inhabitants of India may, for judicial purposes, be classed into—

1. British-European subjects and their legitimate descendants.

2. Hindús.

3. Muhammadans.

4. Other proper natives of Asia, being neither Hindús, Muhammadans, nor Christians.

5. Portuguese, Armenian, and other Christians, of native or foreign extraction, together with half-casts, or illegitimate children of British subjects by native mothers.

The Courts in which civil and criminal justice is administered to these several classes are of two distinct descriptions, viz.—

1. The Courts established under, and by, the Statutes and Charters of Justice granted by Royal authority, and which are presided over by Judges appointed by Her Majesty. These are commonly called the Queen's Courts.

2. The Courts established by the authority of, and presided over by Judges appointed by, the Honourable East-India Company, and which are usually denominated the Sudder and Mofussil Courts, the Company's Courts, or the Courts for the Provinces.

I shall treat of these two descriptions of Courts respectively in separate sections.

I. HER MAJESTY'S COURTS OF JUDICATURE.

1. THE SUPREME COURTS OF JUDICATURE.

(1) HISTORY OF THE SUPREME COURTS, THEIR POWERS, AND JURISDICTION.

The earliest power emanating from the Crown for the administration of justice in India dates as far back as the reign of James I., who, by Charter granted in the year 1622, authorised the East-India Company to chastise and correct all English persons residing in the East Indies and committing any misdemeanour, either with martial law or otherwise.

The first authority, however, for the introduction of British law into India was granted by Charles II., who, by Royal Charter dated the 3d of April 1661, gave to the Governor and Council of the several places belonging to the Company in the East Indies power to exercise therein civil and criminal jurisdiction "according to the laws of the kingdom;" and in the subsequent grants to the Company of the islands of Bombay and St. Helena, in the years 1669 and 1674, the Company were empowered to make laws and constitutions for the good government of the islands and their inhabitants; and to impose punishments and penalties, extending to the taking away life or member when the quality of the offence should require it, so that the punishment and penalties were consonant to reason, and not repugnant to, but as near as might be agreeable to the laws of England. The Governor and Company, or Governor and Committees of the Company, were also empowered to appoint Governors and other agents for the said islands, to be invested with a power of ruling, correcting, and punishing His Majesty's subjects in the said islands, according to justice, by Courts, Sessions, and other forms of judicature, like those established in England, by such Judges and officers as should be delegated for that purpose.

An amended Charter was granted by Charles II. to the Company in 1683, which empowered the Governor and Council to establish Courts of Judicature at such places as they might appoint, to consist of one person learned in the civil laws, and two merchants, and to decide according to equity and good conscience, and according to the laws and customs of merchants.

These provisions were continued in the Charter granted by James II. in 1686; and a similar power was given to the new East-India Company by the Charter of the 10th William III., granted in Sept. 1698.

In the year 1726 the Court of Directors represented by petition to King George the First—"That there was great want at Madras, Fort William, and Bombay, of a proper and competent power and authority for the more speedy and effectual administering of justice in civil causes, and for the trying and punishing of capital and other criminal offences and misdemeanours." Accordingly, the then existing Courts were superseded, and the East-India Company were empowered by Royal Charter, granted in 1726 the 13th year of the reign of King George I., to establish at each of the three settlements a Court, consisting of a Mayor and nine Aldermen, to be a Court of Record, and to try, hear, and determine all civil suits, actions, and pleas between party and party. From these Courts an appeal lay to the Governors and Councils, and thence to the King in Council, in causes involving sums above the amount of 1000 pagodas.¹ This same Charter also constituted Courts of Oyer and Terminer at each settlement, consisting of the Governors and Councils, for the trial of all offences, except high treason, committed within the towns of Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta, or within any of the Factories subordinate thereto, or within ten miles of the same ; and the Governors and Councils were constituted Justices of the Peace, and were authorized to hold Quarter Sessions. Under this Charter all the common and statute law at that time extant in England was introduced into the Indian Presidencies.²

The Mayor's Court, which had been established at Madras, was abolished on the capture of that place by the French under Labourdonnais in the year 1746 ; but the town having been restored to the English in 1749 by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the Directors of the East-India Company represented to the King in Council that " it would be a great encouragement to persons to come and settle at that place, if a proper and competent judicial authority were established there ;" and further, that it had been found by experience that there were some defects in the Charter of 1726.

Under these circumstances, King George II. granted a new Charter in the year 1753, re-establishing the Mayors' Courts at Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta, with some not very material alterations. By this Charter these Courts were limited in their civil jurisdiction to suits between persons not Natives of the said several towns; and suits between Natives were directed not to be entertained by the Mayor's Courts, unless by consent of the parties. The jurisdiction of the Government Courts in criminal cases was also limited to offences committed within the several towns and the Factories or places subordinate thereto, omitting the words, "or within ten miles of the same," contained in the previous Charter. At the same time, and by the same Charter, Courts of Requests were established at Madras, Bombay, and Fort William, for the determination of suits involving small pecuniary amounts. These last Courts will be treated of separately.

The Seventh Report of the Committee of Secrecy, appointed to inquire into the state of the East-India Company, after a detailed description of the Courts of Judicature in Bengal, observes upon the constitution and defects of the Mayors' Court, and remarks, "that although it is bound to judge, at least where Europeans are concerned, according to the laws of England, yet the Judges are not required to be, and in fact have never been, persons educated in the knowledge of those laws by which they must decide; and that the Judges were justly sensible of their own deficiency; and that they had therefore frequently applied to the Court of Directors to lay particular points respecting their jurisdiction before counsel, and to transmit the opinion of such counsel to be the guide of their conduct."

Upon this Report the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, was passed. The Bill had met with considerable opposition on the part of the Company, but such opposition was fruitless: it was carried by an overwhelming majority in the House of Commons on the 10th of June 1773, and on the 20th of June it passed the Lords without opposition, and received the Royal Assent on the following day. The 13th section of this Statute empowered His Majesty to erect and establish a Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, to consist of a Chief Justice and three other Judges, being barristers of England or Ireland of not less than five years' standing, to be named and appointed from time to time by His Majesty, his heirs and successors. The same section declared that the said Supreme Court should have full power and authority to exercise and perform all Civil, Criminal, Admiralty, and Ecclesiastical jurisdiction ; and to form and establish such rules of practice, and such rules for the process of the said Court, and to do all such other things as should be found necessary for the administration of justice and the due execution of all or any of the powers which, by the said Charter, should or might be granted or committed to the said Court ; and also should be at all times a Court of Record, and should be a Court of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, in and for the said town of Calcutta and Factory of Fort William in Bengal aforesaid, and the limits thereof, and the Factories subordinate thereto. The Governor-General and Council, and the Judges of the Supreme Court, were, by the 38th section of the same Act, authorised to act as Justices of the Peace, and to hold Quarter Sessions.

The Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal was accordingly established under the above Statute, by Royal Charter dated the 26th of March 1774 ; and it is under this Charter that the Supreme Court is now held. The Bengal Charter of Justice will be found inserted in the second volume of this work ; but it will be useful here to state shortly some of its provisions. By the 13th section, the Supreme Court at Calcutta was empowered to try and determine all actions and suits arising in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and all pleas, real, personal, or mixed, arising against the United Company and the Mayor and Aldermen of Calcutta, and against any of the King's subjects resident in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, or who should have resided there, or should have debts, effects, or estates, real or personal, within the same; and against the executors and administrators of such subjects, and against any other person who should at the time of such action being brought, or when any action should have accrued, be or have been employed in the service of the said Company, or the said Mayor and Aldermen, or of any other of the King's subjects, and against all other persons, inhabitants of India, residing in Bengal, Behar, or Orissa, upon any contract or agreement in writing with any of the King's subjects, where the cause of action should exceed the sum of 500 current rupees, and when such inhabitants should have agreed in the said contract, that, in case of dispute, the matter should be determined in the said Supreme Court. The same section limited the jurisdiction thus given as follows ; viz. that the said Court should not try any suit against any person who should never have been resident in Bengal, Behar, or Orissa, or against any person who should, at the time of action brought, be resident in Great Britain or Ireland, unless such suit or action against such person so then resident in Great Britain or Ireland should be commenced within two years after the cause of action arose, and the sum to be recovered should not be of greater value than 30,000 rupees. By the 18th section of the Charter the Supreme Court was constituted a Court of Equity, as the Court of Chancery in England. The 19th section constituted it a Court of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, for Calcutta and Fort William, and the Factories subordinate thereto, with power to summon grand and petit juries, and to administer criminal justice as in the Courts of Oyer and Terminer in England, giving it jurisdiction over all offences committed in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, by any subject of His Majesty, or any person in the service of the United Company, or of any of the King's subjects. The 22d section empowered the Supreme Court to exercise Ecclesiastical jurisdiction in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, as the same was exercised in the diocese of London, and to grant probates and administrations to the estates of British subjects dying within the said provinces. The 25th section empowered the Court to appoint guardians of infants and of insane persons, and of their estates ; and by the 26th section the said Supreme Court was appointed to be a Court of Admiralty in and for the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and to hear and determine all causes and matters, civil and maritime, and to have jurisdiction in crimes maritime, according to the course of the Admiralty in England. An appeal lay, under sections 30—33, from the decisions of the Supreme Court at Fort William to the King in Council. This portion of the Charter will be more particularly noticed hereafter in the section treating of Appeals from the Courts in India to this country.

Shortly after the grant of this Charter arose those unfortunate contentions between the Governor-General and Council and the Judges of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, which, whoever may have been in the wrong, were certainly very discreditable to both parties. * The unanimity which existed, however, between the disputants in every measure throughout these unhappy disagreements, proves that the difference arose, not from personal feelings, or from a desire of an undue extension of their several powers, but from a defect in the law, arising from the obscurity of the Statute, of which it has been well remarked, "that the Legislature had passed the Act of the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, without fully investigating what it was that they were legislating about ; and that if the Act did not say more than was meant, it seemed at least to have said more than was well understood."¹

The Legislature accordingly intervened ; and, by the preamble to the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, and sections 2, 8, 9, and 10, of that Act, explained and defined the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, declaring that the said Court had no jurisdiction over the Governor-General and Council for any act or order made or done by them in their public capacity ; that if any Natives should be impleaded in the Supreme Court for any act done by order of the Governor and Council in writing, the said order might be given in evidence under the general issue, and should amount to a sufficient justification ; that the Supreme Court should have no jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue, or concerning any act or acts ordered or done in the collection thereof, according to the usage and practice of the country, or the Regulations of the Governor-General and Council ; that no person should be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court by reason of being a landowner, landholder, or farmer of land or of land-rent ; that no person should be so subject to the jurisdiction of the said Court, by reason of his being employed by the Company or by the Governor-General and Council, or on account of his being employed by a native of Great Britain, in any matter of dealing or contract between party or parties, except in actions for wrongs or trespasses, and also except in civil suits by agreement of parties, in writing, to submit the same to the decision of the said Court. Section 17 of this important Act also reserved their peculiar laws to Hindús and Muhammadans in certain civil matters, as hereafter will be noticed; and the 24th section provided that no action for wrong or injury should lie in the Supreme Court against any person whatsoever exercising a judicial office in the Country Courts, for any judgment, decree, or order of the said Court, nor against any person for any act done by or in virtue of the order of the said Court.

By the 29th section of the 26th Geo. III. c. 57, all servants of the East-India Company, and all His Majesty's subjects resident in India, were made subject to the Courts of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, for all criminal offences committed in any part of Asia, Africa, or America, beyond the Cape of Good Hope to the Straits of Magellan, within the limits of the Company's trade.

The 30th section of the same Act declared that the Governor or President and Council of Fort St. George, in their Courts of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, and also the Mayor's Court at Madras, according to their respective judicatures, should have jurisdiction, as well Civil as Criminal, over all British subjects whatsoever residing in the territories of the East-India Company on the Coast of Coromandel, or in any other part of the Carnatic or in the Northern Circars, or within the territories of the Soubah of the Deccan, the Nabob of Arcot, or the Rajah of Tanjore.

By the 33d Geo. III. c. 52. s. 67, all His Majesty's subjects, as well servants of the Company as others, were declared to be amenable to all Courts of Justice, both in India and Great Britain, of competent jurisdiction to try offences committed in India, for all criminal offences committed in the territories of any native prince or state, or against their persons or properties, or the persons or properties of any of their subjects or people, in the same manner as if the same had been committed within the territories directly subject to and under the British Government in India.¹

Section 156 of the latter Act extended the Admiralty jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Calcutta given under the Charter ; and the Court was empowered, by means of juries of British subjects², to try all offences committed on the high seas.

By the 37th Geo. III. c. 142. s. 1, the number of Judges of the Supreme Court at Calcutta was limited to three.

The Mayors' Courts at Madras and Bombay existed until the year 1797, when they were abolished and superseded by Recorders' Courts, established under the 37th Geo. III. c. 142. These Recorders' Courts consisted of the Mayor, three Aldermen, and a Recorder, who was to be appointed by His Majesty ; and their jurisdiction extended to Civil, Criminal, Ecclesiastical, and Admiralty cases. They were empowered to establish rules of practice, and they were to be Courts of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, for Fort St. George and Bombay ; and their jurisdiction was to extend over British subjects resident within the British territories subject to the Governments of Madras and Bombay respectively, as well as those residing in the territories of native princes in alliance with those Governments. Their jurisdiction was also brought within the restrictions of the 21st Geo. III. c. 70 ; the laws of the Hindús and Muhammadans were reserved to Natives ; and an appeal lay from their decisions to the King in Council.

The Recorder's Court at Madras was abolished by the 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79, and a Supreme Court of Judicature was erected in its place, consisting of a Chief Justice and two puisne Judges. The powers vested in the Recorder's Court were transferred to, and to be exercised by, the Supreme Court, which was also directed to have the like jurisdiction, and to be invested with the same powers, and subject to the same restrictions, as the Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

Letters patent, granting a Charter of Justice to the Supreme Court at Madras, were issued on the 26th of Dec. 1801.

By sections 99, 100, of the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, all persons whatsoever were authorised to prefer, prosecute, and maintain, in His Majesty's Courts at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, all manner of indictments, informations, and suits whatsoever for enforcing the laws and Regulations made by the Governor-General and Governors in Council, or for any matter or thing whatsoever arising out of the same. The Advocate-General at each of the several Presidencies was also empowered to exhibit informations in the said Courts against any person or persons whatsoever for any breach of the revenue-laws or Regulations of any of the said Governments, or for any fines, penalties, forfeitures, debts, or sums of money, committed, incurred, or due by any such person or persons in respect of any such laws or Regulations. Section 107 provided that where, by the Regulations, it would be competent to a party to prefer an appeal to the Court of highest appellate jurisdiction in the provinces, British subjects residing or trading, or occupying immoveable property within the provinces, should be entitled to prefer, instead of such appeal, an appeal to His Majesty's Courts of Judicature at the several Presidencies. This section, however, has been since repealed by Act XI. of 1836; and no such right of appeal to the Supreme Courts now exists. Section 110 of the same Statute, after stating that doubts had been entertained whether the Admiralty jurisdiction of His Majesty's Courts at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, extended to any persons but those amenable to their ordinary jurisdiction, empowered the said Courts to take cognizance of all crimes perpetrated on the high seas, by any person or persons whatsoever, in as full and ample a manner as any other Court of Admiralty jurisdiction established by His Majesty's authority in any colony or settlement whatsoever belonging to the Crown of the United Kingdom.

The 4th Geo. IV. c. 71, passed in 1823, authorised the abolition of the Recorder's Court at Bombay, and the establishment of a Supreme Court of Judicature in its stead, to consist of the like number of Judges as the Supreme Court at Fort William in Bengal, and to be invested with the same powers and authorities as the said Supreme Court, and to have a similar jurisdiction and the same powers, and to be subject to the same limitations, restrictions, and controul.

The powers of the Supreme Courts at Madras and Bombay were placed upon an equal footing with those of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, in an explicit manner, by the 17th section of this Act, which declared that it should be lawful for the Supreme Court of Judicature at Madras, within Fort St. George, and the town of Madras, and the limits thereof, and the Factories subordinate thereto, and the territories subject to or dependent upon the Government of Madras; and for the Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay, within the town and island of Bombay, and the limits thereof, and the Factories subordinate thereto, and the territories subject to or dependent upon the Government of Bombay, and the said Supreme Courts respectively were thereby required, within the same respectively, to do, execute, perform, and fulfil, all such acts, authorities, duties, matters, and things whatsoever, as the Supreme Court of Fort William was or might be authorised, empowered, or directed to do, execute, perform, and fulfil, within Fort William in Bengal, or the places subject to or dependent upon the Government thereof. Letters patent, granting a Charter of Justice to the Supreme Court at Bombay, were issued on the 8th of Dec. 1823.

It may be remarked, that although, by the 4th Geo. IV. c. 71, the Supreme Courts at Madras and Bombay are invested with the same powers as the Supreme Court at Fort William, there is no similar provision in any Statute in favour of the latter Court, that it shall exercise the same powers with the Supreme Courts at the other Presidencies.

It is unnecessary to enter more fully into the powers of the Supreme Courts at Madras and Bombay, as the Charters under which they are now held are founded upon that of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, and upon the provisions of the 21st Geo. III. c. 70; and the Charters themselves will be found printed in the Appendix to this work.

There are some variations, however, in these Charters, that give rise to considerable doubt and difficulty, and these may be shortly alluded to. In the first instance, there is a difficulty with regard to the powers which the Justices of the Courts were to possess in the provinces as conservators of the peace ; but this will more appropriately be noticed in another place. Again, the Supreme Court at Bombay is prohibited, by the 30th section of its Charter, from interfering in any matter concerning the revenue, even within the town of Bombay, which is in direct contradiction to the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. ss. 99, 100. Natives are also exempted from appearing in the Supreme Courts at Madras and Bombay, unless the circumstances be altogether such as that they might be compelled to appear in the same manner in a Native Court ; a provision which seems to place the jurisdiction of these Supreme Courts in such cases entirely at the discretion of the Government, who regulate the Company's Courts as they please. This appears to be inconsistent with the duties assigned to the Courts by the Statutes. Lastly, with regard to crimes maritime, the 54th section of the Bombay Charter of Justice restricts the powers of the Supreme Court to such persons as would be amenable to it in its ordinary jurisdiction ; which is again at variance with the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. s. 110, if the ordinary jurisdiction, as is to be inferred from the other portions of the Charter, be limited to British subjects.

By the Statute 9th Geo. IV. c. 74. ss. 7, 8, 9, 56, and 70, provisions are made, without any distinction between Native and British persons, for the trial by the Supreme Courts of accessories before or after the fact to any felony, and of any accessory before or after the fact, after conviction of the principal, though the principal be not attainted of such felony ; for the trial of murder or manslaughter, where the death, or the cause of death only, happens within the limits of the East-India Company's Charter ; and for the trial of bigamy, whenever the offender is apprehended or found within the jurisdiction of the Courts, although the offence may have been committed elsewhere.

An appeal lies from the decisions of the Supreme Courts of Judicature to Her Majesty in Council ; a subject which will be more especially treated of in a separate section.

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts of Judicature in India may be stated shortly to extend over the following classes :—

1. British subjects throughout India, in all matters civil and criminal.

2. The inhabitants of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, within fixed limits, whether Natives or others, in all matters civil and criminal; but Natives in some civil matters to have justice administered to them according to the Hindú or Muhamman law.

3. Native subjects, servants of the East-India Company, or of any British subject, for acts committed as such, with limitations in certain civil matters.

4. Native subjects, in civil matters, for transactions in which they have bound themselves by bond to be amenable to the Supreme Courts.

5. All persons whatsoever for crimes maritime.

The Supreme Courts are, by their Charters, vested with five distinct jurisdictions, Civil, Criminal, Equity, Ecclesiastical, and Admiralty; and they are enjoined to accommodate their process, rules, and orders, to the religion and manners of the Natives, so far as the same can be done without interfering with the due execution of the laws and the attainment of justice.

It would be a difficult task to define more exactly the powers and jurisdictions of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts in India, given by the Statutes and Charters above enumerated; and questions are constantly arising on these important subjects, which can only be reduced to certainty by the repeated decisions of the Courts, or by fresh enactments. I cannot more appropriately conclude the present remarks upon the Supreme Courts, than by quoting the observations made some years since by Sir Charles Grey and Sir Edward Ryan, animadverting upon the uncertainty of the legislation with respect to the powers and jurisdictions of those Courts, since many, if not most, of the difficulties and doubts they complained of still remain. "In one way or another," write the learned Judges, "sometimes by the mention of some qualification of the powers of the Court occurring in an Act or Charter, which has been afterwards insisted upon as a recognition; sometimes by a vague recognition of counter institutions, which have been already set on foot without any express authority, and which afterwards, upon the strength of the recognition, are amplified and extended; sometimes by the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court being stated in such a way as to leave it to be inferred that the expressio unius is the exclusio alterius; sometimes by provisions which, to persons unacquainted with India, may have appeared to be of little consequence, but which in reality involve a great deal; sometimes when Parliament has provided that new Courts should be established upon the same footing as the old one, by something finding its way into the constitution of the new Courts which is essentially different from the old, and would be destructive of their efficiency;—in some or all of these ways the Supreme Courts have come to stand at last in circumstances in which it is a very hard matter to say what are their rights, their duties, or their use.”¹

(2) LAW ADMINISTERED IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

The law which now obtains in the Supreme Courts at the three Presidencies may be classed under seven distinct heads—

1. The Common law, as it prevailed in England in the year 1726, and which has not subsequently been altered by Statutes especially extending to India, or by the Acts of the Legislative Council of India.

2. The Statute law which prevailed in England in 1726, and which has not subsequently been altered by Statutes especially extending to India, or by the Acts of the Legislative Council of India.

3. The Statute law expressly extending to India, which has been enacted since 1726, and has not been since repealed, and the Statutes which have been extended to India by the Acts of the Legislative Council of India.¹

4. The Civil law as it obtains in the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts in England.

5. Regulations made by the Governor-General in Council and the Governors in Council previously to the 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 85, and registered in the Supreme Courts, and the Acts of the Legislative Council of India made under the 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 85.

6. The Hindú law in actions regarding inheritance and succession to lands, rents, and goods, and all matters of contract and dealing between party and party in which a Hindú is a defendant.

7. The Muhammadan law in actions regarding inheritance and succession to lands, rents, and goods, and all matters of contract and dealing between party and party in which a Muhammadan is a defendant.

The three last species of law are peculiar to the Courts in India, and will be described in a subsequent section.

2. THE COURT OF THE RECORDER OF PRINCE OF WALES' ISLAND, SINGAPORE, AND MALACCA.

The island of Singapore, and the town and fort of Malacca,

The latest work on the subject, but which omits much that is important, is entitled, The Law relating to India and the East-India Company. 4to. Lond. 1842. (Third Edit.). This compilation extends to the 5th Vict. c. 5. The student will find a vast quantity of information regarding the Statute law affecting India in Auber's Analysis of the Constitution of the East-India Company, and of the Laws passed by Parliament for the government of their affairs both at home and abroad. Together with a Supplement. 8vo. Lond. 1826—1828. Auber's Analysis is a most valuable work both for study and reference, and should be in the hands of all who wish to acquire a knowledge of the law of India. were ceded to the British by His Majesty the King of the Netherlands, by treaty, on the 17th of March 1824, and were afterwards transferred to the Honourable East-India Company by the 5th Geo. IV. c. 8. The 6th Geo. IV. c. 85. s. 21, empowered the said Company to annex Prince of Wales' Island to those possessions; and the annexation was accordingly effected, and the whole formed into a Government, entitled "The Governor and Council of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore, and Malacca."

In pursuance of the 19th section of the last mentioned Act of Parliament, Letters patent were issued, dated the 27th of November 1826, by which a Court of Judicature was constituted; and it was directed that it should consist of the Governor and Resident Councillor, and one other Judge, to be styled the Recorder.

This Court was to be a Court of Record, and was empowered by its Charter to exercise Civil, Criminal, and Ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and to be a Court of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery. The Court was also empowered to reprieve execution of any capital sentence, and to substitute a lesser punishment; and the Judges were constituted Justices of the Peace, and were authorised to hold general and quarter sessions. They were also empowered to appoint by commission covenanted servants of the Company to act as Justices of the Peace within the said settlement.

In addition to the jurisdictions above mentioned, an Admiralty jurisdiction was granted to the Recorder's Court by the 6th and 7th Will. IV. c. 53 and the Letters patent issued in pursuance of that statute, similar to that exercised by the Supreme Court at Fort William in Bengal.²

² An abstract of the Admiralty Charter of the Recorder's Court is inserted in Smoult and Ryan's Rules and Orders of the Supreme Court at Fort William in Bengal, Vol. II. App. p. cvii. I have omitted the Charters of the Recorder's Court in the Appendix to this work, since the provisions they contain are materially the same as those of the Supreme Courts of Judicature, and the Court itself is comparatively of minor importance.

Prince of Wales' Island is now, with all the eastern settlements, under the Presidency of Bengal.

3. COURTS OF REQUESTS.

Courts of Requests were established at Madras, Bombay, and Fort William, by the Charter of George the Second, dated the 8th of Jan. 1753, by which they were empowered to determine suits where the debt, duty, or matter in dispute should not exceed 5 pagodas.

The jurisdiction of these Courts of Requests was extended by the 37th Geo. III. c. 142, by the 30th section of which Statute they were authorised to hear and determine all actions, plaints, and suits, in which the matter in dispute should not exceed the value of 80 current rupees, and to award execution thereupon for the debt or sum adjudged to be due. A further extent of the jurisdiction of the Courts of Requests at Calcutta and Madras took place under the 39th and 40th Geo. III. s. 17, which, after stating that great inconvenience had resulted from the manner in which the Courts of Requests for the recovery of small debts in the respective settlements of Fort William and Fort St. George were constituted, enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor-General and Council of Fort William, and the Governor and Council of Fort St. George, to extend the jurisdiction of the said Courts to an amount not exceeding 400 sicca rupees, and to frame new rules and orders, and to establish new forms of proceeding, for new modelling, altering, and reforming the constitution and practice of the said Courts; and by their Proclamation to declare and notify such new constitution, rules, orders, and forms of proceeding, and the time from whence they were to have force and effect.

The first Proclamation under this Act was made and published at Fort William on the 18th of March 1802, declaring and defining the jurisdiction, powers, and practice of the Court of Requests. This Proclamation appointed three Commissioners for the recovery of small debts, and extended the jurisdiction of the Court to the sum of 100 sicca rupees. Two other Proclamations were afterwards made, extending the jurisdiction of the Court of Commissioners successively to 250 and 400 sicca rupees. The latter, which also increased the number of Commissioners to four instead of three, was published on the 29th of Oct. 1819.¹

In the year 1839 the Legislative Council of India, by Act XXVII. of that year, authorised the Court of Requests for the town of Calcutta, in certain cases, to execute decrees passed by the Judge of the Dewanny Adawlut of the Zillah Twenty-four Pergunnahs.

In the year 1844 a draft Act was submitted to the Legislative Council for abolishing the Court of Requests at Calcutta, and for substituting in its place a Court for the exercise of civil jurisdiction in the city of Calcutta, to be called the Subordinate Civil Court for the city of Calcutta²; but the proposed Act never received the sanction of Government.

Doubts having arisen as to the powers of the Commissioners of the Court of Requests at Calcutta, Act XII. of 1848 was passed for the better defining the jurisdiction of the said Court. By this Act it was declared that all proceedings had, or to be had, in pursuance of the above-mentioned Proclamations, by the said Commissioners were valid; and all powers and authorities given to the said Commissioners by the first Proclamation were extended to all matters which they were authorised to determine by the other Proclamations. It was further enacted, that the said Commissioners might sit together or apart, and hold one, or two, or three separate Courts sitting at the same time, or at different times; that all rules, forms of procedure, and tables of fees, formerly and then used or established in the said Court, should be valid, notwithstanding the omission to procure the allowance of the Supreme Court, or the non-printing and non-publication of the same; and that all summonses and other process issued by the said Commissioners, or any of them, whether issued before or after the passing of the said Act, should be deemed to be valid and effectual in law, on whatsoever day the same should have been made returnable.

The Courts of Requests at the three Presidencies were, by the Charters of Justice, and by the said Proclamations, made subject to the order and controul of the Supreme Courts, in the same manner as the inferior Courts in England are, by law, subject to the order and controul of the Court of Queen's Bench.

Courts in the nature of Courts of Requests were directed to be established in the Settlement of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore, and Malacca, by the Charter of Justice under which the Recorder's Court was constituted at that Settlement. These Courts were to determine suits not exceeding in value thirty-two dollars, and were to be subject to the order and controul of the Recorder's Court.

4. INSOLVENT COURTS.

The Supreme Courts at Fort William and Madras, and the Recorder's Court at Bombay, were empowered, by the 23d section of the 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79, to make rules and orders, extending to insolvent debtors in India the relief intended by the 32d Geo. II. c. 28, commonly called the Lords' Act; and the 24th section of the same Statute ratified any rules and orders previously made by the said Courts in the three Presidencies for the relief of insolvent debtors, and confirmed the acts done under such rules and orders.

By the 1st and 2d Vict. c. 100. s. 119, it was, however, enacted, that no prisoner for debt should petition any Court for his discharge under the Lords' Act; nor is any creditor to petition any Court for the exercise of the compulsory powers of that Act against debtors.

Insolvent Courts, separate from the Supreme Courts of Judicature, were established at the three Presidencies by the 9th Geo. IV. c. 73, to be severally presided over by one of the Judges of the respective Supreme Courts. These Insolvent Courts were empowered by the said Statute to administer oaths, and to examine witnesses on oath or affirmation, to issue commissions to take evidence, or to force the attendance of witnesses, and to examine debtors and parties capable of giving information as to their debts and estates; they were also empowered to impose fines in a summary manner, and to commit to gaol for contempt of Court, but not to award costs except under the rules of the Supreme Courts. Under the 4th section of this Act an appeal lay from the Insolvent Courts to the Supreme Courts of Judicature. It was also provided, by the 80th section, that the Supreme Courts might make rules for facilitating the relief of insolvent debtors in cases for which sufficient provision had not been made; and the 81st section declared that the said Act should remain in force until the year 1833.

It was provided by the 2d Will. IV. c. 43, that the 9th Geo. IV. c. 73 should be continued and remain in force until the 1st of March 1836; and an extension of the same Statute, to the year 1839, was enacted by the Legislative Council of India by Act IV. of 1836. Certain amendments, which it will be unnecessary to specify, were made by the 4th and 5th Will. IV. c. 79, which also provided that the schedules of insolvent debtors in India should be transmitted to the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, and be open to the inspection of creditors.

The above-mentioned Acts were all further extended by the 6th and 7th Will. IV. c. 47, the 3d and 4th Vict. c. 80, and the 9th and 10th Vict. c. 14, the last Statute extending them to the 1st of March 1847, and thence to the end of the next session of Parliament.

In the month of June 1848 the 11th and 12th Vict. c. 21 was passed to consolidate and amend the laws relating to insolvent debtors in India. This Statute repealed the 9th Geo. IV. c. 73, and the 4th and 5th Will. IV. c. 79, save as to acts then done and pending under the subsequent Statutes above enumerated. By section 2, the Courts established under the 9th Geo. IV. c. 73, were continued with the same powers as theretofore; the 73d section enacted that an appeal should lie, as before, to the Supreme Courts; and the 76th section authorised the said Courts to make rules and regulations, and to alter and amend the same, subject to Her Majesty's approval. The schedules of insolvents were directed, by section 85, to be transmitted to England whenever it should appear that any creditors were resident out of the Company's Charter.

The 88th section of the above Statute enacted that a Court for the relief of insolvent debtors should be established at the Settlement of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore, and Malacca, and the several powers of the said Statute were extended, with certain exceptions, to that Settlement.

5. VICE-ADMIRALTY COURTS.

By section the 25th of the 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79, His Majesty was empowered to issue a Commission from His High Court of Admiralty in England for the trial and adjudication of prize causes and other maritime questions arising in India, and to nominate all or any of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, or of the Supreme Court of Judicature to be erected at Madras, or of the Court of the Recorder at Bombay, either alone or jointly with any other persons to be named in such Commission, to be Commissioners for the purpose of carrying such Commission into execution.

The 2d Will. IV. c. 51, which was passed for the regulation of the practice and the fees in the Vice-Admiralty Courts abroad, and to obviate doubts as to their jurisdiction, enacted that there should be an appeal from such Vice-Admiralty Courts to the High Court of Admiralty in cases of costs; and their jurisdiction was defined to extend to all cases where a ship or vessel, or the master thereof, should come within the local limits of any Vice-Admiralty Court; and that it should be lawful for any person to commence proceedings in any suits for seamen's wages, pilotage, bottomry, damage to a ship by collision, contempt in breach of the regulations and instructions relating to His Majesty's service at sea, salvage, and droits of Admiralty, in such Vice-Admiralty Court, notwithstanding the cause of action might have arisen out of the local limits of such Court, and to carry on the same in the same manner as if the cause of action had arisen within the said limits.

A separate Vice-Admiralty Court was established in Calcutta in 1822¹, but its functions are at present suspended, for no Marshal or Registrar are appointed by the High Court of Admiralty, and the Chief Justice has no authority to make any such appointments.² I am not aware that any Vice-Admiralty Court has ever been established at Madras or Bombay.

II. THE SUDDER AND MOFUSSIL COURTS.

THE systems for the administration of justice by the Honourable East-India Company now actually existing in the Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, are based upon the Regulations passed by the Governments of those Presidencies respectively in the years 1793, 1802, and 1827; the plan introduced into Bengal being the foundation of the other systems. Previously to 1793 Courts of Justice had been established in Bengal by the Governor-General and Council; and in Bombay similar Courts had been formed so early as 1799, adapted to the local circumstances from the Bengal system: at Madras, however, there were no Company's Courts until the year 1802.

In the following description of the Sudder and Mofussil Courts I purpose, though it will necessarily involve some repetition, to treat separately those of each Presidency. I shall, in the first place, after tracing shortly the rise and progress of the three Adawlut systems, describe the Courts of Civil and Criminal Judicature and the Police Establishments, as constituted respectively in the years 1793, 1802, and 1827; secondly, taking those years as starting-points, I shall enumerate the modifications and alterations that have since occurred, down to the present time, in a distinct order, under the heads of Civil and Criminal Judicature and Police. I shall then state concisely and generally the jurisdiction of the Courts, and the Laws administered therein; and finally, I shall set forth, by way of summary, the actual constitution of the Courts of Justice, and of the establishments of Police, as now existing in each Presidency.

The limits of this Introduction will not admit of entering into a full detail of the various modifications and alterations above alluded to. I shall therefore confine myself to those which are the most material, before proceeding to the summary account of the present systems.

1. BENGAL.

(1) RISE AND PROGRESS OF THE ADAWLUT SYSTEM.

The great Lord Clive, whose transcendant abilities brought the Empire of India within his grasp, secured that Empire to his country by obtaining the grant of the Dewanny for the East-India Company at the hands of the pageant Moghul Emperor. Previously to this the Nawáb Najm al Daulah, on his accession to the Masnad after the death of his father, Núr Jaafar Âlîy Khán, had entrusted the Súbahdârí to the management of a Náib, or deputy, to be appointed by the advice and recommendation of the English; but the Firmán which conferred in perpetuity the Dewanny authority over the Provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa on the East-India Company, constituted them the masters and virtual sovereigns of those Provinces; the office of Dewan implying not merely the collection of the revenue, but the administration of civil justice.

This Firmán was granted on the 12th of August 1765, and was accompanied by an imperial confirmation of all the territories previously held by the East-India Company under grants from Kásim Âlîy Khán and Jaafar Âlîy Khan, within the nominal limits of the Empire of the descendants of Tímúr. The Nizamut, or administration of criminal justice, was, at the same time, conferred upon the Nawáb Najm al Daulah. The Dewanny grant was further recognized, by an agreement dated the 30th of September in the same year, by the Nawáb, who formally accepted his dependent situation by consenting to receive a fixed stipend of fifty-three láks of rupees¹ for the support of the Nizamut, and for the maintenance of his household and his personal expenses.

In the month of April in the following year the Nawáb held his annual Darbár for the collection of the revenue. The Prince sate as Názim ; and Lord Clive, the President of the Council of Fort William officiated for the first time as Dewan. From this period the Nizamut, as well as the Dewanny, was exercised by the British Government in India through the influence possessed by the English over the Náib Názim ; the Nizamut comprising the right of arming and commanding troops, and the management of the whole of the Police of the country, as well as of the administration of criminal justice.

For some time subsequent to this assumption of power it was not, however, thought prudent, either by the authorities at home or in India, to entrust the administration of justice or the collection of the revenue to the European servants of the Company ; their ignorance of the civil institutions and internal arrangements of the country rendering them, with a few bright exceptions, totally unqualified for either task. Accordingly, the administration of the provinces included in the Dewanny grant was for the present left in the hands of the native officers, an imperfect controul being exercised over them by an English Resident at the Court of the Nawáb, and by the Chief of Patna, who superintended the collections of Behar. The Zamíndárá lands of Calcutta, and the districts of Burdwán, Midniapór, and Chittagong, as well as the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, which had been ceded to the East-India Company by previous grants from the Nawábs, and which had been confirmed to them by the

Emperor's Firmán in August 1765, had been placed under the management of the covenanted servants of the Company ever since their cession, and this was continued; but at the same time the internal administration was carried on without alteration, as in other parts.

In 1769, when Verelst was Governor of Bengal, Supervisors were appointed for the superintendence of the native officers; and they were furnished with detailed instructions to inquire into the history, existing state, produce, and capacity of the provinces, the amount of the revenues, the regulations of commerce, and the administration of justice; they were likewise directed to make reports thereon to the Resident at the Darbár and the Chief of Patna.

These inquiries furnished ample evidence of abuses of every kind. Extortion and oppression on the part of the public officers, and fraud and evasion of the payment of just dues on the part of the cultivators, prevailed throughout our provinces; and with respect to the administration of justice, it was remarked, in a Letter from the President in Council at Fort William, that "the regular course was everywhere suspended; but every man exercised it who had the power of compelling others to submit to his decision."¹ Councils with superior authority were established at Moorshedabad and Patna in the following year, to superintend the administration of justice and the collection of the revenue, and to exercise the powers before vested in the Resident and Chief.

The glaring abuses above mentioned had continued for seven years unremedied, when, in the year 1772, the Court of Directors announced to the Government of Bengal their intention "to stand forth as Dewan, and, by the agency of the Company's servants, to take upon themselves the entire care and management of the revenues."²

Warren Hastings, who had already acquired a considerable reputation by his talents, and who had served with great credit in Bengal during the administration of Vansittart, and since then on the coast of Coromandel, was now Governor, he having been appointed to that important office in the preceding year. In order to carry into effect their determination, the Court of Directors appointed a Committee, consisting of the Governor and four Members of Council; and Warren Hastings and his coadjutors drew up a Report, comprising plans for the more effective collection of the revenue and the administration of justice.

This Report, which bears witness throughout to the soundness of the views entertained by the illustrious statesman who presided, gave a detailed account of the Muhammadan Law Courts; and after animadverting strongly on their inefficiency, proceeded to set forth a plan for the more regular administration of civil and criminal justice, stated to have been framed so as to be adapted "to the manners and understandings of the people and exigencies of the country, adhering, as closely as possible, to their ancient usages and institutions."¹

This plan was adopted by the Government on the 21st of August 1772; and although the constitution of the Courts was shortly afterwards completely altered, many of the rules which it contained were, and are still, preserved in the Bengal Code of Regulations.

In pursuance of the plan of the Committee, the Exchequer and the Treasury were removed from Moorshedabad to Calcutta, and a "Board of Revenue," as it was styled, consisting of the Governor and Council, with an establishment of native officers, was constituted at the Presidency, for the management, not only of the collections, but many of the most important duties of municipal government. The Supervisors appointed under Verelst's system became "Collectors," one of whom presided over each considerable district, assisted by a native officer, and the lands were leased to the highest bidder who could produce the requisite security for rent, for a period of five years. In each Collectorate were established Mofussil Dewanny Adawlut, or Provincial Civil Courts for the administration of civil justice¹, which were presided over by the Collectors on the part of the Company, in their capacity of King's Dewans, attended by the provincial Dewans and the other officers of the Collector's Court. These took cognizance of "all disputes concerning property, real or personal, all causes of inheritance, marriage, and cast, and all claims of debt, disputed accounts, contracts, and demands of rent²;" excepting, however, questions relating to the succession to Zamíndarí and Talookdarí property, which were reserved for the decision of the Governor and Council.³ A Criminal Court, styled the Foujdary Adawlut, was also established in each district, for the trial of "murder, robbery, and theft, and all other felonies, forgery, perjury, and all sorts of frauds and misdemeanours, assaults, frays, quarrels, adultery, and every other breach of the peace or violent invasion of property."⁴ In these Criminal Courts the Kází or Muftí of each district was directed to sit to expound the law, and determine how far delinquents were guilty of any breach thereof; but it was also provided that the Collector should attend to the proceedings, and see that the decision was passed in a fair and impartial manner, according to the proofs exhibited.⁵ Two Superior Courts were established at the chief seat of Government, to be called the Dewanny Sudder Adawlut and the Nizamut Sudder Adawlut⁶: the former to be presided over by the President and Members of Council, assisted by native officers⁷, and to be a Court of Appeal in all cases where the disputed amount exceeded 500 rupees⁸; and the latter to be presided over by a chief officer, to be called the Dáróghah Adawlut, appointed on the part of the Názim, assisted by native Muhammadan law officers, with a similar controul to be exercised by the Chief and Council, with respect to the proceedings of the Court, as was vested in the Collectors of Districts.¹ The Nizamut Sudder Adawlut was to revise and confirm the sentences of the Foujdary Adawluts in capital cases and those involving fines exceeding 100 rupees², and to refer the former to the Názim for his sentence.³

In addition to these Courts, there were also subordinate ones of original jurisdiction placed at the chief points of the provincial divisions. The head farmers of each Pergunnah having a final judgment in all disputes not exceeding ten rupees⁴, and the Collectors and some of the subordinate officers being invested with certain powers as Magistrates for the regulation of the Police.⁵

One of the leading features of this plan was, that in the Civil Courts Muhammadans and Hindús were entitled to the benefit of their own laws in all suits regarding inheritance, marriage, cast, and other religious usages and institutions.⁶ I shall recur to this in the section treating of the Native Laws.

Such is the outline of the system first proposed by Warren Hastings, a system unavoidably imperfect, from the limited knowledge possessed at that period by the English of the habits and character of the Natives, and indeed of almost all that was requisite for rendering it effectual, but which must at the same time excite our admiration, when we call to mind the state of confusion into which the country had been plunged by a rapid succession of revolutions, and the consequent uprooting of society, that had scarcely left a vestige of the former institutions, and had most emphatically reduced the law to a dead letter; or when we remember the difficulties which must have surrounded any attempt to form a plan for the restoration of order, at a time when every public functionary had been long accustomed to fill his purse by the grossest extortion, and to convert the decision of disputed claims into an avowed means of self-aggrandisement.

Fifth Report, speaking of the Revenue and Judicial Regulations which were made under this system, observe, that they manifest “a diligence of research, and a desire to improve the condition of the inhabitants by abolishing many grievous imposts and prohibiting many injurious practices which had prevailed under the Native Government; and thus the first important step was made towards those principles of equitable government which it is presumed the Directors always had it in view to establish, and which, in subsequent institutions, have been more successfully accomplished.”¹

Soon after the adoption of this plan by Government, the Regulating Act of 1773 (the 13th Geo. III. c. 63) was passed: but this Statute, the first interference, strictly speaking, of the British Legislature in the administration of Indian affairs, did not materially affect the Government of India at large. The establishment of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, under this Act, created much dissatisfaction at the time, and was, as we have already seen, the cause subsequently of serious contentions; but the restriction and definition of its powers soon followed², and effectually did away with all cause of complaint. The most important part of the Regulating Act, however, is that in which it provided for the administration of the government of India by the appointment of a Governor-General and Council³, who were empowered to make Rules and Regulations for the good government of Bengal, and were thus invested for the first time, by Parliament, with a delegated power of legislation.⁴

In the year 1774 the European Collectors were re-called, and native Aámils appointed instead; and at the same time the superintendence of the collection of the revenue was vested in six Provincial Councils appointed for the respective divisions of Calcutta, Burdwan, Dacca, Moorsshedabad, Dinagepor, and Patna. The administration of civil justice was transferred from the Collectors to the Aámils, from whose decisions an appeal lay in every case to the Provincial Councils, and thence, under certain restrictions, to the Governor and Council as the Sudder Adawlut.

After Warren Hastings had presided in the chief Criminal Court established at Calcutta for about eleven months, he felt himself obliged, from the multiplicity of business, to resign the situation ; and accordingly, in October 1775, the Nizamut Adawlut was removed from Calcutta and established at Moorshedabad, under the superintendence of Muhammad Rizá Khán, who was invested with the office of Náib Názim, at the recommendation of the Governor-General, and Foujdars were appointed in the several districts for apprehending and bringing to trial all offenders against the public peace.¹

These arrangements for the administration of justice remained in force, with scarcely any change, until the year 1780, when the Calcutta Government passed Regulations which contained the following provisions : The jurisdiction of the Provincial Councils was confined exclusively to revenue matters²; and in each of the six great divisions above mentioned was established a Court of Dewanny Adawlut, presided over by a covenanted servant of the East-India Company, styled Superintendent of Dewanny Adawlut³, whose jurisdiction extended over all claims of inheritance to Zamíndáris, Talookdáris, and other real property or mercantile disputes⁴, and all matters of personal property, with the exception of what was reserved to the Provincial Courts, who were still to decide on all cases having relation to revenue, as well as on all demands of individuals for arrears of rent, and on all complaints from tenants and cultivators of undue exaction of revenue.⁵ The decision of the Superintendent was to be final in all cases where the sum in dispute did not exceed 1000 rupees, but above that sum an appeal lay to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.¹

At this time the many avocations of the Governor-General and Council compelled them to give up sitting in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and a separate Judge was accordingly appointed to preside in that Court. The person selected for this high office was Sir Elijah Impey, and his acceptance of it was one of the principal charges from which that much-calumniated Judge so triumphantly cleared himself. He has been accused, by an eminent writer, of having accepted the office as a bribe ; but whilst his legal attainments and position sufficiently account for his selection without having recourse to that odious supposition, the self-denial, so rare in India in those days, with which he “declined appropriating to himself any part of the salary annexed to the office of Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut until the pleasure of the Lord Chancellor should be known²,” of itself sufficiently refutes an accusation couched in terms as virulent and unfair, as the statements it contains are themselves partial and unfounded upon fact.

Sir Elijah, in fulfilment of the duties which devolved upon him by virtue of his new office, and without any remuneration, prepared a series of Regulations for the guidance of the Civil Courts, which he submitted to Government in November 1780. They were approved of by that body, and were afterwards incorporated, with additions and amendments, in a revised Code, passed in 1781, which was translated into the Persian and Bengálí languages.³ Under these Regulations, all civil causes were made cognizable by the Dewanny Adawluts, which had been increased from six to eighteen, for the sake of rendering the jurisdictions of the individual Judges less inconveniently extensive.⁴ The functions of the Judges of these Courts were entirely severed from the revenue department, four districts being, however, excepted, where, for local reasons, the functions of Civil Judge and Collector were exercised by the same persons, but expressly in distinct capacities, and, as Civil Judge, wholly independent of the Board of Revenue, and subject only to the authority of the Governor-General in Council and of the Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.¹ An appeal lay from the decisions of the Provincial Dewanny Adawluts, in cases where the amount in dispute exceeded 1000 rupees, to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.²

In the year 1781 the Foujdars, instituted in 1775, were abolished, and the Police jurisdiction was transferred to the Judges of the Dewanny Adawluts, or, in some cases, to the Zamíndár, by special permission of the Governor-General in Council. The Judges, however, were not empowered to punish, but merely to apprehend offenders, whom they were at once to forward to the Dáróghah of the nearest Foujdary Court; and the Judge of the Dewanny Adawlut, the Dáróghah of the Nizamut Adawlut, and the Zamíndár were to exercise a concurrent jurisdiction for the apprehension of robbers and disturbers of the public peace.³ A separate department was established at the Presidency, under the immediate controul of the Governor-General, to receive reports and returns of the proceedings of the Foujdary Courts, and lists of prisoners apprehended and convicted by the authorities in the provinces.⁴ To arrange these records, and to maintain a check on all persons entrusted with the administration of criminal justice, an officer was appointed, to act under the direction of the Governor-General, with the title of Remembrancer of the Criminal Courts.⁵ The ultimate decision still rested with the Náib Názim at Moorshedabad. In the same year the Provincial Councils were dissolved, and a Committee of Revenue established, to be entrusted with the charge and administration of all revenue matters, to be vested with the powers of the Provincial Councils, and to be under the controul of the Governor-General and Council.⁶ ●

In 1782 the Court of Directors sent out orders to the Governor-General in Council to resume the superintendence of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which Court had been constituted in the preceding year a Court of Record, by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 21; and it may be remarked, that thus, although it is generally looked upon as the principal Court of the Honourable East-India Company, it is in reality a Queen's Court. This Statute declared the judgments of the Governor-General and Council in appeal from the Provincial Courts in civil causes to be final, except in civil suits where the amount in dispute was of £5000 and upwards, when an appeal lay to the King in Council.¹

The progress of the judicial system cannot be traced for the next four years, but no material alteration seems to have taken place.²

In the mean time Parliament again interfered, and an Act was passed in 1784, viz. the 24th Geo. III. c. 25, to regulate the affairs of the East-India Company and of the British possessions in India. Section 39 of this Statute, which may be said to form the basis of the present constitution of British India, commanded the Company to institute inquiries into the complaints that had prevailed that divers Rajahs, Zamíndárs, Polygars, Talookdárs, and other native landholders within the British territories in India, had been unjustly deprived of, or compelled to abandon and relinquish, their respective lands, jurisdictions, rights, and privileges, or that the tributes, rents, and services required of them had become oppressive; and these grievances, if founded upon truth, were directed to be effectually redressed, in such manner as should be consistent with justice and the laws and customs of the country, and permanent rules to be settled and established upon principles of moderation and justice, according to the laws and constitution of India, by which their tributes, rents, and services should be rendered and paid.

² Leith's History of the Rise and Progress of the Adawlut System, p. 24. 8vo. Lond. 1822, 2d edit.

This Act also established the Board of Commissioners for the affairs of India; and the attention of that body, and of the Court of Directors, was immediately turned to the important objects comprised in the above requisition.

The Marquis Cornwallis was selected to superintend the measures determined upon, and in the year 1786 he proceeded to India as Governor-General, carrying with him detailed instructions from the Court of Directors, which were dictated by a wise and considerate spirit, stating "that they had been actuated by the necessity of accommodating their views and interests to the subsisting manners and usages of the people, rather than by any abstract theories drawn from other countries or applicable to a different state of things."

In compliance with these instructions, Lord Cornwallis directed the re-union of the functions of civil and criminal justice with those of the collection and management of the revenue; and the Dewanny Adawlut were accordingly, in the year 1787, placed under the superintendence of the Collectors.¹ District Courts were established in Moorshedabad, Dacca, and Patna, presided over by Judges and Magistrates who were not Collectors, that office being unnecessary, as their jurisdiction was circumscribed by the limits of those cities.² The proper Collectors' or Revenue Courts were kept distinct from the Dewanny Adawluts, although presided over by the same persons.³ From the latter, appeals were allowed, within certain limits, to the Governor-General and Council, in their capacity of Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut⁴; and the decisions of the Revenue Courts were appealable, first to the Board of Revenue, and thence to the Governor-General in Council.⁵ The Collectors also were appointed to act as Magistrates⁶ in apprehending offenders against the public peace; but with the exception of the chastisement of petty offences, they had no power of trial or punishment, and were directed to deliver up their prisoners for that purpose to the Muhammadan criminal officers¹, who were not to be interfered with² beyond the influence possessed by the British Government in recommending the mitigation of punishments of unnecessary cruelty.

The administration of criminal justice remained in the hands of the Náib Názim until the end of the year 1790, when the Governor-General, convinced of the inefficacy of the different plans which had been adopted and pursued from the year 1772, declared that, with a view to ensure a prompt and impartial administration of the criminal law, and in order that all ranks of people might enjoy security of person and property, he had resolved in Council to resume the superintendence of the administration of criminal justice throughout the provinces.³ Accordingly the Nizamut Adawlut was again removed from Moorshedabad to Calcutta, and was appointed to consist of the Governor-General and members of the Supreme Council, assisted by the Kází al Kuzát and two Muftís.⁴ This Court was at once a Court of Criminal Appeal and a Board of Police, as it took cognizance, not only of all judicial matters, but of the general state of the Police throughout the country.⁵ All persons charged with crimes and offences were to be apprehended by the Magistrates, and an inquiry instituted; when, if the charge proved groundless, they were to be acquitted and dismissed; but if the crime were proved, they were to be admitted to bail, except in cases of murder, theft, burglary, or robbery; and in all proved cases they were to be committed for trial by the Court of Circuit. Trivial cases of assault, abuse, or affray were punishable by the Magistrates by limited flagellation or imprisonment.⁶ Four Courts of Circuit, superintended respectively by two Judges, who were to be covenanted servants of the Company, assisted by Kázís and Muftís as Assessors, were at the same time established, for the trial of such crimes as were not punishable by the Magistrates.¹ These Judges were required to hold a general gaol delivery every six months², and, in capital cases, to report their proceedings to the Nizámut Adawlut at Calcutta for confirmation.³ In the Regulations for these Courts of Circuit we meet, for the first time, with the provision, that in trials for murder the doctrine of Abú Yúsuf and Muhammad, requiring the evidence of criminal intention alone, was to be applied in regulating the Fatwa of the law officers, in opposition to that of Abú Hanífeh⁴, which required the actual employment of an instrument of blood: the relations of a murdered person were also debarred from pardoning the offender.⁵

In 1791 the Judges of the Courts of Circuit were required to transmit to the Nizamut Adawlut all trials wherein they disapproved of the proceedings held on trial, or of the Fatwa of the law officers.⁶ In the same year imprisonment and hard labour were substituted for mutilation⁷, and the Court of Nizamut Adawlut was empowered to pass sentence of death, instead of granting Díyat to the heir.⁸

In 1792 the rule that the refusal to prosecute by the relatives of a murdered person was to bar the trial of the offender was abrogated.⁹ In the same year the Government took the management of the Police entirely out of the hands of the Zamín-dárs and farmers of land, who were no longer to be held responsible for robberies committed in their estates or farms, and placed it under the controul of the Magistrates, who were required to divide their respective Zillahs into Police jurisdictions of twenty miles square, to be superintended by a Dáróghah and a suite of Police officers, to be paid by the Government.¹⁰

The administration of civil justice appears to have remained materially the same from 1787 until 1793, when Lord Cornwallis introduced his celebrated system of judicature, and formed the Regulations into a regular Code, which is the basis of the Regulation Law prevalent throughout India at the present time.

The earliest alteration made by this system was the vesting the collection of revenue and the administration of justice in separate officers; and for this were assigned, amongst others, the following reasons: "It is obvious, that if the Regulations for assessing and collecting the public revenue are infringed, the revenue officers themselves must be the aggressors, and that individuals who have been aggrieved by them in one capacity can never hope to obtain redress from them in another. Their financial occupations equally disqualify them from administering the laws between the proprietors of land and their tenants."¹ The Mál Adawluts, or Revenue Courts, were accordingly abolished, the Revenue Board was divested of its powers as a Court of Appeal, and all causes hitherto tried by the revenue officers were transferred to the Dewanny Adawluts², which were now established in each provincial division, and presided over respectively by a covenanted servant, in whose person were united the powers of Judge and Magistrate, and who also had the management of the Police within the limits of his division.

The Courts of Civil Judicature established under Lord Cornwallis' system formed a regular gradation of Courts of Appeal. The lowest in the series were the Courts of the Native Commissioners, who were to hear and decide in the first instance, where the cause of action did not exceed fifty rupees.³ These Native Commissioners were of three denominations, termed Ameens or Referees, Sálisán or Arbitrators, and Munsifs or Native Justices⁴; and from their decisions an appeal lay to the Zillah or City Judge.¹ The second description of Courts were those of the Registers, who were covenanted servants attached to the Zillah and City Courts, and who, in order to prevent the time of such Courts being occupied by the trial of petty suits, were, when authorised by the Zillah and City Judges, empowered to try and decide causes for an amount not exceeding 200 rupees. The decrees passed by a Register were not valid unless revised and countersigned by the Judge.² Next in order were the Zillah and City Courts, twenty-six in number, which were each presided over by a single Judge, being a covenanted servant, assisted by Hindú and Muhammadan law officers and a Register, having cognizance of all civil suits in the first instance³: their decisions were not final, and were appealable in all cases to the Provincial Courts.⁴ The Provincial Courts of Appeal, which were four in number, were the fourth in the ascending scale, and were each presided over by three European Judges. These were established, one in the vicinity of Calcutta, one at the city of Patna, one at Dacca, and the fourth at Moorshedabad⁵: they were provided respectively with a Register, a Kází, a Muftí, and a Pandit, and with a competent number of native ministerial officers. The decision of the Provincial Courts was final in suits where the disputed amount did not exceed the sum of 1000 rupees: above that sum an appeal lay to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁶ The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was established at the Presidency, and consisted of the Governor-General and Members of the Supreme Council.⁷ This Court took cognizance of appeals from the Provincial Courts⁸, and its judgment was final in all civil suits whatever.⁹ The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was also authorised to admit appeals from the decisions of the Provincial Councils, or of the Committee or Board of Revenue.¹

Criminal justice was administered, under the new system introduced in 1793, in the following manner. The Zillah and City Judges were constituted Magistrates, their jurisdiction being co-extensive with their jurisdiction as Judges.² The Magistrates and their assistants were empowered to apprehend murderers, robbers, thieves, housebreakers, and persons charged with crimes and misdemeanours³; and in certain cases, as abusive language, calumny, assaults, and affrays, were authorised to pass final sentence, subject, however, to the controul of the Courts of Circuit and Nizamut Adawlut, and to punish such offenders, within certain limits, by corporal chastisement, fine not to exceed 200 rupees, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding fifteen days.⁴ British subjects charged with offences, and residing in the provinces, were to be apprehended and sent for trial to the Supreme Court at Calcutta.⁵ Four Courts of Circuit were established, to consist of the Judges of the Provincial Courts of Appeal, and the Kází and Muftí attached to those Courts.⁶ These were Courts of half-yearly Gaol Delivery for certain Zillahs, and monthly for the cities of Patna, Dacca, and Moorshedabad, and certain other Zillahs.⁷ These Courts were empowered to pass sentence of death or imprisonment for life, but were to transmit the proceedings to the Nizamut Adawlut⁸ to await the final sentence of that Court, which being sent back to the Judges, they were to issue an immediate warrant for execution.⁹ The Nizamut Adawlut, or chief Criminal Court, was held at Calcutta, and consisted of the Governor-General and Members of the Council, assisted by the Kází al Kuzát and two Muftís.¹⁰ This Court had cognizance of all matters relating to the administration of Criminal justice and the Police, and was authorised to exercise the same powers as were vested in it when it was superintended by the Náib Názim.¹ The sentences of the Nizamut Adawlut were in all cases to be final; but the Governor-General in Council had a power of pardoning or commuting the punishment awarded.² All these Courts administered the Muhamadan criminal law as modified by the Regulations.

The Police Regulations introduced in the year 1793 were a re-enactment, with some amendments, of those passed in 1792, already alluded to. The Police was declared to be under the exclusive charge of officers appointed by Government; and the landholders and farmers were prohibited from keeping up their establishments of Police, and exempted from responsibility for robberies committed within their estates, unless their connivance were proved³; the division into Police jurisdictions was retained, and they were each to be guarded as before by a Dárághah, who was directed to maintain a suite of Police-officers at the expense of Government, and to apprehend and send to the Magistrates all persons charged with crimes and misdemeanours, and vagrants.⁴ The Magistrates and Police-officers of the cities were invested with concurrent authority in their respective jurisdictions, and with those of the Zillahs⁵; and the cities were to be divided into wards, to be guarded by Dárághahs, who were to be under the immediate inspection and subject to the authority of the Kútwáls of each city.⁶

The reformed system of 1793, of which I have thus attempted a concise description, constitutes the main fabric of the actual administration of justice at the present day, not only in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, but throughout British India. Various modifications and improvements were gradually introduced; and nowhere has the humane policy of the Government been more distinctly shewn, or more thoroughly successful, than in the increased employment of the Natives in judicial offices, and the confidence placed in them by extending the jurisdiction of the Courts over which they are appointed to preside.

I shall now give a rapid sketch of the more material alterations that have taken place in the judicial system of Bengal since the year 1793; and for greater clearness I shall treat of the several departments of Civil and Criminal Judicature and the Police under distinct heads.

(3) ALTERATIONS SINCE 1793.

(a) Civil Judicature.

The first alteration of any importance was the giving a final power of decision to the Registers in suits not exceeding 25 rupees in value, above which amount an appeal lay to the Provincial Courts.¹ In the following year the Zillah and City Courts were also empowered to decide finally on all appeals from their Registers or the Native Commissioners.²

The jurisdiction of the Provincial Courts was extended in the year 1797, when they were authorised to take cognizance of, and decide finally, suits to the value of 5000 rupees, above which sum their decisions were appealable to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.³ In the same year⁴ rules were also enacted for the conduct of appeals to the King in Council from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which will be more particularly mentioned in a subsequent section treating of appeals to England.

A material alteration took place in the constitution of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut during the administration of the Marquis of Wellesley in the year 1801, when it was made to consist of three Judges, to be selected from the covenanted servants of the Company.⁵ The number of Judges was increased in the year 1811, and the Court declared thenceforth to consist of a Chief Judge and of as many Puisne Judges as the Governor-General in Council might deem necessary.¹ In the same year a summary appeal, whatever might be the value at issue, was directed to be cognizable by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the Provincial Courts, or the Courts of the Zillah and City Judges, where the Courts immediately below such Courts respectively had refused to admit a regular appeal on the ground of delay, informality, or other default in preferring it.²

In 1803 Head Native Commissioners were appointed in the cities and zillahs, for the trial of suits not exceeding 100 rupees³, and the jurisdiction of the Registers was increased to 500 rupees, but at the same time their power of final decision was abolished.⁴ The decisions of the Zillah and City Judges were declared to be final in all appeals from the Native Commissioners⁵; but an appeal was directed to lie to the Provincial Courts from all decisions of the Zillah and City Judges in causes tried by them in the first instance, viz. without a previous trial by their Registers or the Native Commissioners.⁶ The Provincial Courts were also empowered to admit a second or special appeal from all decrees of the Zillah and City Judges in appealed cases from the decisions of the Native Commissioners or Registers, in cases in which a regular appeal would not lie, if such decrees should appear to be erroneous or unjust, or the nature of the cause of sufficient importance to require further investigation.⁷ Assistant Zillah and City Judges were appointed in the same year.⁸

In the year 1805 the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was invested with a like power of receiving special appeals from the decrees of the Provincial Courts in similar cases not open to a regular appeal.⁹ In the same year the Provincial Courts were authorised to admit a summary appeal in cases where the Zillah and City Courts refused to admit or hear original suits on the ground of default, delay, or other informality.¹⁰

In 1808 the Zillah and City Courts were restricted in their original jurisdiction to suits of the value of 5000 rupees, over which sum they were to be originally cognizable in the Provincial Courts.¹

In the year 1813, by the Statute 53d Geo. III. c. 155. s. 107, British subjects residing, trading, or holding immoveable property in the provinces, were made amenable to the Company's Courts in civil suits brought against them by Natives, with, however, a right of appeal to the Supreme Court at Fort William in cases where an appeal otherwise lay to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

In 1814 the office of Assistant Judge was abolished²; and in the same year Moonsiffs and Sudder Amcens were appointed, the former to try causes not exceeding 64 rupees³, and the jurisdiction of the latter extending to 150 rupees.⁴ An appeal lay from their decisions to the Zillah or City Judge. The Registers were also in this year empowered to decide suits referred to them above the value of 500 rupees, but such suits were appealable to the Provincial Courts.⁵ In the same year more definite Rules were enacted with respect to the admission of special appeals, which were directed to lie to the Superior Courts only when the judgment should appear to be inconsistent with precedent, or some Regulation, or with the Hindú or Muhammadan law, or other law or usage which might be applicable, or unless it should involve some point of importance not before decided by the Superior Courts.⁶ Summary appeals were also directed to lie from the Provincial Courts to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, from the Zillah and City Courts to the Provincial Courts, and from the Registers or Sudder Amcens to the Zillah and City Courts, in cases where the lower Courts had respectively refused to admit or investigate any suit, original or in appeal, regularly cognizable by them on the ground of delay, informality, or other default.⁷

All decisions of the Provincial Courts, which had been increased from four to six in number¹, and which, as has already been mentioned, had been empowered to decide finally in cases of the value of 5000 rupees, whether original or in appeal from Zillah or City Judges, were, in 1814, declared to be appealable to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.² Early in this year the number of Judges in these Courts had been augmented from three to four.³ In the same year an original jurisdiction was given to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in suits for the value of 50,000 rupees, when such suits could not be conveniently heard in the Provincial Courts.⁴

In the year 1817 the original jurisdiction of the Zillah and City Courts was extended to 10,000 rupees⁵, and an appeal was directed to lie to the Provincial Courts from their decisions in all suits, whether original or appealed from the Courts of the Registers. In the same year it was directed that special appeals should be allowed where decrees passed by one or more Courts were inconsistent with each other.⁶

Several extensions and definitions of the grounds for the admission of special appeals, which it is unnecessary to specify, had been at various times enacted, when, in 1819, it was further declared to be competent to the Provincial Courts and to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to admit a second or special appeal whenever, on a perusal of the decree of a lower Court from whose decision the special appeal was desired, there might appear strong probable ground, from whatever cause, to presume a failure of justice.⁷ This provision was, however, subsequently rescinded, and the Courts were directed to conform to the former rules with regard to the admission of second or special appeals.⁸

In the year 1821 the number of Moonsiffs was increased, and their jurisdiction extended to suits of the value of 150 rupees.⁹

Sudder Ameens were at the same time empowered to take cognizance of claims up to the amount of 500 rupees¹.

Many important rules were enacted in the year 1831, most of which are now in force: the jurisdiction of the Moonsiffs was extended to 300 rupees², and Sudder Ameens were empowered to try suits referred to them by the Zillah and City Judges, to the amount of 1000 rupees³; an appeal lay to the Zillah or City Judge, whose decision was final.⁴ Principal Sudder Ameens were also appointed, with power to take cognizance of all suits, referred as above, of the value of 5000 rupees⁵; a regular appeal lay from their original decisions to the Zillah and City Judges, and a special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁶ Special and summary appeals from decrees and orders in original suits and appeals, tried by Principal Sudder Ameens, were directed to be governed by the Rules previously in force respecting the admission of such appeals.⁷ At the same time the Registers' Courts were abolished, and all suits pending therein were directed to be called in and referred, as the amount might be, to the Sudder Ameens or Principal Sudder Ameens.⁸ The Provincial Courts of Appeal were also gradually superseded, and the Zillah and City Judges were empowered instead to take cognizance of all suits exceeding in value 5000 rupees⁹. An appeal lay from their original decisions to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.¹⁰

In 1833 the Provincial Courts were finally abolished; all original suits then pending in such Courts were directed to be transferred to the Zillah and City Courts; and all appeals, regular, special, or summary, so pending, were to be transferred to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.¹¹ Additional Zillah and City Judges were also appointed in the same year.¹²

107, which gave to British subjects resident in the provinces a right of appeal from the Company's to the Supreme Courts, should cease to have effect in India; and it was also enacted that no person by reason of birth or descent should be exempt from the jurisdiction of the Company's Courts¹, or be incapable of being a Principal Sudder Ameen, Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff.²

In the year 1837 the powers of the last-named officers were further enlarged, and they were empowered to set aside summary judgments passed by Collectors.³ The Principal Sudder Ameens were authorised to take cognizance of suits of any amount referred to them by the Zillah or City Judges⁴; and also of all original suits so referred, preferred by Proprietors, Farmers, or Talookdárs, for the revenue of land held free from assessment, or claiming to hold lands exempt from revenue.⁵ In suits exceeding in amount 5000 rupees an appeal lay from their decisions direct to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut⁶; but in suits referred to Principal Sudder Ameens within the competency of a Moonsiff to decide, their decisions were appealable to the Zillah or City Judges, whose decision was to be final.⁷ The Zillah and City Judges were also, in the same year, authorised to transfer any civil proceeding to a Principal Sudder Ameen; and in such cases an appeal from his order lay in the first instance to the Zillah or City Judge, and specially to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁸

In the year 1843 it was enacted that special appeals should lie to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut from all decisions passed in regular appeals in all subordinate Civil Courts, when it should appear that such decisions were inconsistent with law or usage, or the practice of the Courts, or involved doubtful questions of law, usage, or practice.⁹

In the year 1844 it was enacted that all suits within the

The Zillah and City Judges were also empowered to admit summary appeals from the orders of Principal Sudder Ameens and Sudder Ameens rejecting suits cognizable by them.¹

(b) Criminal Judicature.

The alterations in the system of criminal judicature introduced by Lord Cornwallis in 1793 have kept pace with the improvements in the civil department. A fourth Court of Circuit was established for Benares in 1795², and subsequently a fifth for the ceded provinces.³

The Assistants to the Magistrates were granted a limited occasional exercise of judicial powers in the year 1797.⁴

In the year 1801 the constitution of the Nizamut Adawlut was altered; the Governor-General and Council no longer presided; and it was declared to consist of three Judges, assisted by the chief Kází and two Muftís.⁵ The number of Judges was afterwards increased, as in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁶

In 1807 Magistrates were given an extended jurisdiction, and were empowered to inflict imprisonment, not exceeding one year, in addition to fine or stripes⁷; but this power was not to be exercised by Assistant Magistrates.⁸

In 1808 it was declared that all trials of persons for robbery with open violence, and liable to transportation for life, should, on the conviction of the offender, be referred to the Nizamut Adawlut.⁹

⁸ Reg. IX. 1807, s. 20.

In the year 1810 an important alteration was made, enabling the Government to appoint other persons, not being Zillah or City Judges, to exercise with them the office of Joint Magistrates. Assistant Magistrates were also appointed, with limited powers, for Police and other purposes. The superintendence of the Police, however, remained with the Zillah and City Magistrates, when not placed under the immediate authority of the Joint or Assistant Magistrates.¹

In the year 1813 the Statute 53d Geo. III. c. 155. s. 105, made British subjects resident in the provinces punishable by the District and Zillah Magistrates for assaults and trespass against the Natives of India; but the convictions of such Magistrates were removable by Certiorari to the King's Courts.

In 1814 the Judges of the Courts of Circuit were increased to the number of four²; and afterwards, in 1826, the Governor-General in Council was empowered to appoint any number that might be deemed expedient.³

In 1817 all trials where persons were convicted in the Courts of Circuit of robbery or burglary not within the provisions for robbery by open violence, if accompanied by murder, attempt to commit murder, or wounding, were made referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut.⁴

In the year 1818 the jurisdiction of the Magistrates and Joint Magistrates was extended, and they were empowered to try offenders charged with burglary, or attempt to commit that crime, and theft: if not attended with murder or violence, they were authorised to sentence to flogging, not exceeding thirty stripes, and imprisonment with hard labour for a term not exceeding two years⁵; but otherwise they were to commit the prisoner for trial to the Court of Circuit: they also had authority to punish, in certain cases, persons convicted by them of buying or receiving stolen property, or of having escaped from gaol.⁶ In 1819 they were further empowered to try offenders for woman-stealing, and for desertion of their wives and families¹, and all sentences of Magistrates and Joint Magistrates were declared to be under the controul of the Courts of Circuit.²

In 1821 the jurisdiction of Assistant Magistrates was somewhat extended, and they, as well as the law officers of the Zillah and City Courts, were authorised to try and determine petty thefts and other trivial offences when referred to them by a Magistrate, and to inflict fines, flogging, and imprisonment, within certain limits; the Assistant Magistrates being empowered to imprison offenders for one year, and the law officers and Sudder Amceens for the space of one month.³

Corporal punishment by flogging was limited in the year 1825: females were entirely exempted⁴, and the ratan was substituted for the korah⁵, a heavy whip, which had been represented in some instances to have caused injurious effects. The Judges of Circuit were, in the same year, empowered to pass final sentences, and to carry them into execution, without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut on the ground of their want of authority to inflict sufficient punishment, in all cases of culpable homicide not amounting to wilful murder.⁶ This power of passing final sentences was extended in 1825 to persons convicted of robbery by open violence not attended with murder or attempt to murder; the punishment, however, being restricted to thirty-nine ratans, and imprisonment with hard labour for fourteen years.⁷

In 1829 Commissioners of Circuit were appointed, with the same powers as Judges of Circuit, to hold gaol deliveries twice a year, to perform all duties theretofore discharged by the Superintendents of Police, and to be under the authority of the Nizamut Adawlut.⁸ The Courts of Circuit were at the same time abolished.⁹

tion in criminal matters in 1831, when it was declared that Magistrates might refer any criminal case to a Sudder Ameen or Principal Sudder Ameen for investigation, though, they were not authorised to make any commitment.¹ In the same year the Zillah and City Judges, not being Magistrates, were empowered to conduct the duties of the Sessions, to try commitments made by Magistrates, and to hold monthly gaol deliveries, and to pass sentence or to refer the trials to the Nizamut Adawlut, under the same rules applicable to Commissioners of Circuit ; but they were not to interfere with the management of the Police, and all appeals from the orders of the Magistrates lay to the Commissioners of Circuit.²

In 1832 some important alterations took place. The Principal Sudder Ameen, Sudder Ameen, and law officers, were authorised to sentence persons convicted of theft to labour, in addition to corporal punishment and imprisonment.³ The Commissioners of Circuit and Sessions Judges were ordered not to try persons who did not profess the Muhammadan faith for offences cognizable under the general Regulations according to the provisions of the Muhammadan Criminal law ; and the Judges or Commissioners were at the same time instructed to refer cases to Panchayits, or to respectable Natives who should sit during trials as assessors, or more in the nature of a jury ; and they were authorised in such cases to dispense with a Fatwa, but the decision was to rest entirely with the Judge.⁴ The Nizamut Adawlut was also empowered to exercise an absolute discretion as to requiring a Fatwa from the law officers of the Court.⁵

Corporal punishment was absolutely abolished in 1834, excepting where moderate chastisement was necessary for the maintenance of gaol discipline, and imprisonment was ordered to be substituted⁶: labour was also made commutable to fine.⁷

The former provision was, however, afterwards modified, and Magistrates were empowered to inflict not exceeding thirty ratans for theft under 50 rupees, but in such case no other punishment was to be superadded.¹

In 1835 it was enacted that all or any part of the duties and powers of Commissioners of Circuit might be transferred by the Governors of Bengal and Agra respectively to the Sessions Judges.²

In the year 1841 it was enacted that crimes against the State should be tried by the ordinary tribunals, and that the Government might issue a commission to the Judges for their trial; their sentences and proceedings to be reported to the Nizamut Adawlut, who were to report their sentences to the Government for confirmation.³ In the same year it was enacted that from every sentence or order in criminal trials or proceedings within the limitations prescribed by Regulation IX. of 1793, passed by Assistants to Magistrates, Sudder Ameens, or law officers, one appeal should be permitted within one month to the Magistrates or Joint Magistrates; and from every sentence or order beyond such limitation, passed by a Magistrate or Joint Magistrate, or Assistant to a Magistrate vested with special powers, one appeal should be permitted within one month to the Sessions Judge; and from every such sentence or order of the latter, there should be permitted one appeal within three months to the Nizamut Adawlut, and that the sentences or orders passed on such appeals should be final.⁴ It was, however, also enacted⁵ (and re-enacted in 1848)⁶, that the Nizamut Adawlut might, whenever it should think fit, call for the whole record of any criminal trial in any subordinate Court, and pass such orders thereon as it should think fit, but not so as to enhance the punishment awarded, or punish any person acquitted, by the subordinate Court.

In 1843 it was enacted that in cases of conviction of British subjects by Justices of the Peace in the Mofussil or Magis-

The Police establishment in the Bengal Presidency remains at the present day nearly in the same state as when first established by Lord Cornwallis; but some few circumstances and modifications may be remarked.

In the year 1795 the Police of Benares was placed under the management of the Tahsildárs, landowners, and farmers, who were made responsible for robberies committed within the limits of their estates, excepting night robberies on the open roads or in woods.² In 1803 the same plan was extended to the ceded provinces³, and in 1804 to the conquered provinces.⁴

The Tahsildári system being found, however, to be objectionable, all the above places were, in the year 1807, divided into Police jurisdictions, nearly in the same way as had been already adopted throughout Bengal, Behar, and Orissa.⁵ In all these instances the cities and towns were placed under the guard of Dáróghahs and Kútwáls. Ameens of Police were appointed in the same year in all the Bengal provinces, for the apprehension of persons charged with heinous offences.⁶

A Superintendent of Police, being a covenanted servant of the Company, was established in 1808, for the provinces of Bengal and Orissa, but more especially for Calcutta, Moorshe-dabad, and Dacca.^{*} This Superintendent was to possess a concurrent jurisdiction with the Zillah and City Magistrates, and to be under the authority of the Nizamut Adawlut in Police matters.¹ In 1810 his jurisdiction was extended to Patna, and at the same time a second Superintendent was appointed for Benares and Bareilly.²

The duties of these Superintendents were defined and enlarged in 1816, when, in addition to the management of the whole system of Police being committed to their care, they were directed to submit to the Government annual reports of all Police occurrences and statements of the Police establishments in their respective districts.³

A general revision of the whole system of Police, not, however, effecting any material alteration in the previous establishment, took place in the following year, and a Regulation was passed⁴, which, as Harington observes, may be called "The Police Officers, Manual in the Provinces subject to the Presidency of Fort William."⁵ This Regulation still further defines the duties of the Superintendents, and the relative authorities and functions of the subordinate officers, who were to preserve the peace within the limits of their jurisdictions, to prevent, so far as possible, all criminal offences, to apprehend offenders, and to report all occurrences connected with the Police to the Magistrates. The Dáróghah was empowered to hold inquests in cases of suspicious death, to search for stolen property, to suppress riots and affrays, to apprehend persons resisting process, to report burglaries, and to direct particular attention to suppression of Dakoity and illegal Satí. He was to forward all persons apprehended by him, and charged with crimes or offences, to the Magistrate. The Muharrir, who was the second officer of the Thanah, was authorised to exercise the powers vested in the Dáróghah in the absence of that officer, as was also the Jamadár, or third officer, in the absence of the Muharrir and Dáróghah.⁶ The village watchmen were also enjoined to report to the Thanah all Police occurrences, and to apprehend offenders.⁷

No further alteration of importance took place until the year 1829, when the office of Superintendent of Police was abolished, and the duties of the Superintendents were assumed by the Commissioners of Circuit already described¹.

The Governor of Bengal, or the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, were empowered, in the year 1837, to appoint Superintendents of Police for the territories under their respective Governments, who were to be guided in the execution of their duties by the rules contained in Regulation X. of 1808; and on such appointment the Commissioners of Circuit were to cease to exercise the powers of Superintendents of the Police vested in them by Regulation I. of 1829², and the said Superintendents were empowered to exercise all the powers exercised by the Commissioners of Circuit.

2. MADRAS.

(1) ORIGIN OF THE ADALUT SYSTEM.

The present Madras system for the administration of justice is founded on that introduced during the Government of the son of the great Lord Clive in the year 1802, and which was framed upon that of Bengal. Following the plan I have already traced out, I shall describe shortly, in the first place, the system of 1802, and then proceed to mention succinctly the changes that have taken place up to the present time, treating separately of the three departments, Civil, Criminal, and Police.

(2) SYSTEM OF 1802.

The system of 1802 presents little or no variation from that of Lord Cornwallis. It was determined that the offices of Judge and Magistrate, and of Collector of the Revenue, should be held by distinct persons. Native Commissioners were appointed, with power to try suits not exceeding in value 80

rupees: an appeal lay to the Judge.¹ The Registers of the Zillah Courts had jurisdiction to try suits, original or on appeal from the Native Commissioners, referred to them by the Judge, when the property in dispute did not exceed 200 rupees: their decisions were final to the amount of 25 rupees: above that sum an appeal lay to the Zillah Judge.² A summary appeal also lay to the Zillah Judge in cases where the Registers refused to admit or investigate appeals from the decisions of the Native Commissioners on the ground of delay or informality.³ The Zillah Courts, presided over respectively by one Judge, assisted by native law officers, were established in the various districts in which the land revenue had been settled in perpetuity, for the decision of civil suits.⁴ The decisions of the Zillah Courts were final in suits under 1000 rupees in value⁵; but when above that amount an appeal lay to the Provincial Courts of Appeal.⁶ The Provincial Courts were four in number, and were to try appeals from the Zillah Courts, and original suits referred to them by the Sudder Adawlut: their decisions were final in suits where the amount in dispute did not exceed 5000 rupees, but above that sum, and in cases where they refused to admit regular appeals from the Zillah Courts for delay or other informality, a summary appeal lay to the Sudder Adawlut.⁷ The Provincial Courts were also empowered to take cognizance of appeals which the Zillah Courts had refused to admit, or dismissed without investigation on the ground of delay, informality, or other default.⁸ The Sudder Adawlut consisted of the Governor in Council⁹; and from its decisions in civil suits of the value of 45,000 rupees and upwards an appeal lay to the Governor-General in Council.¹⁰

The plan introduced for the administration of criminal justice, was much the same as that in Bengal: Magistrates and Assistant Magistrates were appointed, and were directed to apprehend persons charged with crimes or offences, and to bring them to trial; and they had powers of inflicting punishment in cases of abuse and assault, and petty theft, by imprisonment, corporal punishment, or fine, which was in no case to exceed 200 rupees.¹ British subjects residing in the provinces, and charged with criminal offences, were to be apprehended by the Magistrates, and sent for trial to the Supreme Court at Madras.² Four Courts of Circuit were established for the trial of crimes and offences³: the Judges were to hold half yearly gaol deliveries⁴, and they were empowered to pass sentence in capital cases, but such sentences were to be referred for confirmation to the Foujdary Adawlut.⁵ The Foujdary Adawlut, or Chief Criminal Court, consisted of the Governor and members of the Council⁶, and had cognizance of all matters relating to Criminal Justice and the Police⁷, and the power of passing final sentence in capital cases. The Governor in Council was empowered to pardon convicts, or commute their punishment.⁸ All these Criminal Courts administered the Muhammadan law as modified by the Regulations.

No general system of Police was introduced in the Madras Presidency by the Regulations of 1802. The Police establishments in the several provinces remained of much the same nature as under the Native Governments. In some districts, the Northern Circars for instance, little more than traces of a regular system were discoverable, though almost everywhere village watchers existed, who acted under the superintendence of the head men of the villages.

A Regulation was passed in 1802 for the establishment of a more efficient system in the Zillah of Chingleput (the Company's Jágír), one of the most ancient of the British Settlements on the Coromandel coast. By this Regulation, upon which was based the system in force throughout the Madras Presidency till altered in 1816, the Police of the Zillah of Chingleput, then called Carangooly, was taken out of the hands of the Poligars and Kavilgars, and assigned to officers nominated by the East-India Company's Government. Police Dáróghahs were appointed to superintend and controul entire divisions; Thanahdárs, under their orders, to superintend the stations in each division; and Watchers, who were to execute the duties of Police in the roads and villages of each division: the Officers of Police were to be subject to the authority of the Judge and Magistrate of the Zillah.¹ The Watchmen were to apprehend offenders, and deliver them to the Thanahdárs², who were also empowered to apprehend offenders and send them to the Dáróghahs³: these latter in their turn were likewise authorised to apprehend suspected persons, whom they were to convey before the Magistrate, but they were not to inflict any punishment.⁴

Such was the original constitution of the Courts of Justice and the Police in the Madras Presidency. I shall now separately enumerate the alterations that have been made in the various departments since the year 1802.

(3) ALTERATIONS SINCE 1802.

(a) Civil Judicature.

The first change worthy of notice in the department of Civil Judicature took place in the year 1806, when Zillah Courts were established in the districts to which the permanent settlement had not been extended.⁵ The constitution of the Sudder Adawlut was also altered and new Judges appointed⁶; and in the following year⁷ the Governor was declared no longer to be a Judge of the Court. The Court has been since modified, and made to consist, as in Bengal, of such number of Judges as the Governor in Council might deem requisite.⁸

⁸ Reg. III. 1825.

In 1809 a Regulation¹ was passed for the occasional appointment of Assistant Judges of the Zillah Courts, and for altering and extending the jurisdiction of the Registers of those Courts, whose power of final decision was, however, abolished.² The decision of a Zillah Judge, confirming on appeal the decree of the Register, was final; but if reversing the Register's decree, or disallowing a sum exceeding 100 rupees, a further appeal lay to the Provincial Court.³ The appointment of head Native Commissioners or Sudder Amceens was authorised, who were to try referred causes to the amount of 100 rupees.⁴ The decrees of the Zillah Judges were declared to be final in all appeals from decisions passed by the Native Commissioners; but an appeal was ordered to lie to the Provincial Courts, from the decisions of the Zillah Judges, in all suits tried by them in the first instance.⁵ In this year the Provincial Courts were also authorised to admit summary appeals from the orders of the Zillah Courts refusing to admit or investigate original suits on the ground of delay, informality, or other default⁶; and they were empowered to admit a special appeal in all cases where a regular appeal might not lie to them from the decrees of the Zillah Judges, if such decrees appeared erroneous or unjust, or if the cause appeared to be of sufficient importance to merit further investigation.⁷ These powers of admitting special appeals by the Provincial Courts were also made applicable to the Sudder Adawlut with respect to decrees passed by the Provincial Courts not open to the regular appeal.⁸ In the same year the Provincial Courts were given original jurisdiction in suits above 5000 rupees, which had been previously cognizable by the Zillah Courts.⁹

In 1816 the Heads of Villages were appointed to be Mooniffs, with a power to try and finally determine suits not exceeding 10 rupees in value¹⁰; and they were also authorised to assemble Village Pancháyits for the adjudication of civil suits of any amount within their village jurisdictions. On proof of partiality the Provincial Courts were empowered to annul the decisions of the Pancháyits; but if referred to a second Pancháyit, and the second decision should agree with the former one, such decision was final.¹ In the same year District Moonsiffs were empowered to take cognizance of suits to the amount of 200 rupees.² The decisions of the District Moonsiffs, in suits where the amount in dispute did not exceed 20 rupees, were final; but above that sum an appeal lay to the Zillah Courts.³ In cases of inheritance, or succession to landed property, between Hindú or Muhammadan parties, the District Moonsiffs were directed to obtain an exposition of the laws from the law officers of the Zillah Courts.⁴ The District Moonsiffs were also empowered to assemble District Pancháyits for the adjudication of civil suits of any amount, their decision to be appealable or final by similar rules to those above mentioned as applicable to Village Pancháyits.⁵ In this year the jurisdiction of Sudder Amcees was extended, in suits referred to them, to the amount of 300 rupees⁶, an appeal lying from their decisions to the Zillah Judge. The Sudder Adawlut was in the same year empowered to call up from the Provincial Courts, and try in the first instance, suits for 45,000 rupees and upwards,⁷ the then appealable amount to the Privy Council, but which has been since altered, as will be mentioned in a subsequent section. The Sudder Adawlut was also authorised to admit a summary appeal from the Provincial Courts in all cases where such Courts had refused to admit or investigate suits, original or in appeal, on the ground of delay, informality, or other default. The Provincial Courts and the Zillah Judges were in like manner, respectively, to be competent to admit summary appeals from the orders of the Zillah Judges or the Registers and Sudder Amcees.⁸ The Provincial Courts were also debarred from admitting regular appeals from decisions passed by Zillah Judges, on appeals from their Registers: it was provided, however, that they might admit special appeals from the decisions of the Zillah Judges in regular appeals from original judgments of Registers, Sudder Ameens, and Moonsiffs.¹ At the same time all original suits tried by Provincial Courts were made appealable to the Sudder Adawlut.²

In the year 1818 the Governor-General formally relinquished his right of hearing appeals from the Sudder Adawlut at Madras; and a Regulation was framed on Beng. Reg. XVI. of 1797, for the conduct of appeals to England from the Sudder Adawlut.³ This will be again noticed in another place.

In 1820 the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, was ordered to be in part promulgated at Madras, and translated into the country languages. Under this Statute the Company's Courts were given a jurisdiction in civil suits brought by Natives against British subjects residing, trading, or holding immoveable property in the interior. An appeal lay in such cases either to the Supreme Court, or to the Sudder Adawlut.⁴

The jurisdictions of Registers, Sudder Ameens, and District Moonsiffs were, in 1821, extended, respectively, to suits of the value of 1000, 750, and 500 rupees.⁵

In 1827 Auxiliary Zillah Courts were established, to be superintended by Assistant Judges, who, it may be here remarked, have been termed, in succeeding enactments, Subordinate Judges, and not Assistant Judges. Sudder Ameens, being Natives, were also appointed in such Courts, with the same powers as those given to Sudder Ameens by Regulation VIII. of 1816. The Assistant Judges had original jurisdiction to the amount of 5000 rupees; and they were also to try appeals from the decisions of the Moonsiffs. An appeal lay from the decisions of the Assistant Judges in suits exceeding 1000 rupees in value, to the Zillah Courts; but above that amount to the Provincial Courts. An appeal was also directed to lie from the original decisions of the Sudder Ameens, and a special appeal from their decisions in appeals from Moonsiffs, to the Assistant Judges.¹ Native Judges were appointed in the same year to try suits referred to them by the Assistant Judges, but not to have jurisdiction over Europeans or Americans.² Special appeals were also made admissible in 1827 as follows : viz. from the decrees of Assistant or Native Judges on appeals from Sudder Amcens, to the Zillah Courts; from decrees of Zillah Judges on appeals from Assistant or Native Judges, to the Provincial Courts; from decrees of the Provincial Courts on appeals from Assistant or Native Judges, to the Sudder Adawlut.³

In 1833 the jurisdiction of Registers was extended to 3000 rupees, of Sudder Ameens to 2500 rupees, and of District Moonsiffs to 1000 rupees.⁴

In 1836 it was enacted that the 107th section of the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, which gave to British subjects in the provinces a right of appeal from the Mofussil Courts to the Supreme Court, should cease to have effect in India; and it was also enacted that no person by reason of birth or descent should be exempted from the jurisdiction of the Company's Courts⁵, or be incapable of being a Principal Sudder Amcen (as the Native Judges were then directed to be entitled), Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff.⁶

Summary appeals were declared, in 1838, to be admissible from the orders of District Moonsiffs refusing to admit or investigate suits cognizable by them, on the ground of delay, informality, or other default, by the Zillah Judges, Assistant Judges of Auxiliary Courts, and Principal Sudder Amcens.⁷

In 1843 it was enacted that special appeals should lie to the Sudder Adawlut from all decisions passed on regular appeals in all Subordinate Civil Courts, when it should appear that such decisions were inconsistent with law or usage, or the practice of such Courts, or involved doubtful questions of law, usage, or practice.⁸ In the same year a most important Act was passed, which placed the administration of justice in Madras on its present footing. By this Act the Provincial Courts of Appeal were abolished, and new Zillah Courts were established, presided over by one Judge, to perform their functions, and to replace the Zillah Courts then existing.¹ The original jurisdiction vested in the Provincial Courts for amounts of less value than 10,000 rupees, was transferred to Subordinate Zillah Courts, constituted according to Regulations I. and VII. of 1827²; and such Courts were to have jurisdiction over Europeans and Americans as well as Natives.³ The new Zillah Courts were to entertain appeals from the decrees of the Subordinate Civil Courts, and of Sudder Ameens and District Moonsiffs⁴; and appeals from the new Zillah Courts lay to the Sudder Adawlut.⁵ No Registers were assigned to the new Zillah Courts, and consequently the Registers' Courts no longer exist. Summary appeals were directed to lie to the new Zillah Courts from the Subordinate Judges and Principal Sudder Ameens⁶, and from the new Zillah Courts to the Sudder Adawlut.⁷

In 1844 it was enacted that all suits within the competency of Principal Sudder Ameens and Sudder Ameens to decide, should be ordinarily instituted in their Courts; but that they might be withdrawn at the will of the Zillah Judges, who might try them themselves, or refer them to any other competent Subordinate Court. The Zillah Judges were also empowered to admit summary appeals from the orders of Principal Sudder Ameens and Sudder Ameens, rejecting suits cognizable by them on the ground of any default.⁸

The first alteration in the system of criminal judicature established at Madras in 1802, was in the constitution of the Foujdary Adawlut, which was changed in accordance with the provisions of the Bengal Regulations with respect to the Niza-mut Adawlut,¹ In the year 1811 Magistrates were given an extended jurisdiction, and were empowered to inflict punishment on persons convicted by them, by imprisonment not exceeding one year with corporal punishment not exceeding thirty ratans, or by fine of 200 rupees.² This power was not to be exercised by their Assistants.³

In 1816 the offices of Zillah Magistrate and Assistant Magistrate were transferred from the Judge to the Collectors of the Zillahs and the Assistants to the Collectors⁴; and the Magistrates were empowered to apprehend offenders, and in certain cases to pass judgment, to be referred to the Foujdary Adawlut.⁵ They were also authorised to punish persons guilty of petty thefts, and other minor offences, by stripes not exceeding eighteen ratans, imprisonment not exceeding fifteen days, or fine not exceeding 50 rupees⁶; in other cases to send them for trial to the Criminal Judge of the Zillah.⁷ In the same year the Judges of the Zillah Courts were appointed to be Criminal Judges of their respective Zillahs, with power to punish offenders, in some cases, with stripes not exceeding thirty ratans; and, in cases of theft, in addition, with imprisonment not exceeding six months; in other cases with fine not exceeding 200 rupees⁸; but prisoners charged with more serious offences, were to be committed for trial to the Courts of Circuit.⁹ The Criminal Judges were also invested with similar powers to those before exercised by the Zillah Magistrates.¹⁰

The Zillah Magistrates were, in 1818, empowered to delegate the whole or any part of their authority to their Assistants.¹¹

By the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 105, which was passed in 1813, and which was ordered to be in part promulgated at Madras in 1820, Zillah Magistrates were given a jurisdiction over British subjects residing in the interior, for assaults and trespasses against Natives; their convictions, however, in such cases were removeable by Certiorari to the Supreme Court.¹

In 1822 the Criminal Judges were authorised to take cognizance of burglary, and if not attended with violence to punish the offenders with thirty stripes and imprisonment with hard labour for two years; but if accompanied with violence, to commit them to the Court of Circuit. On such commitment the Court of Circuit was empowered to punish the offenders by thirty-nine stripes, and imprisonment in banishment for fourteen years, if the burglary were not attended with attempt to murder or wounding; but otherwise, on conviction, the trial was to be referred to the Foujdary Adawlut.² The Criminal Judges were likewise empowered to punish for theft exceeding 50 rupees, and not attended with attempt to murder or with wounding, by imprisonment with hard labour for two years and thirty ratans; but otherwise, to refer the trial to the Circuit Judge.³ The Criminal Judges were also authorised in certain cases to try and punish offenders for receiving or purchasing stolen goods⁴, and convicts escaping from gaol.⁵

Thefts exceeding 300 rupees were, in 1825, declared not to be cognizable by the Criminal Judge, who was to commit offenders in such cases to the Court of Circuit.⁶

The Assistant Judges appointed under Regulation I. of 1827, were constituted Joint Criminal Judges of their Zillahs; and Subordinate Collectors exercising the powers of Magistrates were directed to be called Joint Magistrates.⁷ The Native Judges appointed under Regulation VII. of 1827 were constituted Native Criminal Judges in the same year, and were ordered to be guided by the same rules as Criminal Judges, and invested with the same powers as Magistrates, but without jurisdiction over any Europeans or Americans⁸; they were afterwards, in 1836, designated Principal Sudder Ameens.⁹ In 1827

a Regulation was also passed¹ for the gradual introduction of the trial by jury into the criminal judicature, and it was declared to be unnecessary for either the Judge of Circuit, or the Foujdary Adawlut, to require a Fatwa from their law officers as to the guilt of the prisoner, that being established by the verdict of the jury.²

In the year 1828 the use of the ratan was abolished, and the cat-of-nine-tails substituted³; and in 1830 the korah was also discontinued, and a like substitution ordered.⁴ Females were exempted from punishment by flogging in 1833.⁵

Magistrates, Criminal, Joint Criminal, and Native Criminal Judges were, in 1832, respectively empowered to adjudge solitary imprisonment in all cases cognizable by them.⁶

In the year 1833 Criminal, Joint Criminal, and Native Criminal Judges were authorised to employ the Sudder Ameens in the investigation and decision of criminal cases, except in cases committable for trial before the Court of Circuit; such Judges to have power to overrule the decisions of the Sudder Ameens, who were, moreover, not to have any jurisdiction over Europeans or Americans.⁷

In 1837 the Magistrates were authorised to send persons, not being Europeans or Americans, for trial, commitment, or confinement, to the Principal Sudder Ameens.⁸

The Foujdary Adawlut was empowered in 1840 to dispense altogether with the Fatwa, but not with the Muhammadan law.⁹

In the year 1841 it was enacted that state offences should be triable by the ordinary criminal tribunals, but the sentences and proceedings in such cases were directed to be reported to the Foujdary Adawlut, who were again to refer their sentences to the Government for confirmation.¹⁰

The power of the Magistrates was also extended in this year, and they were authorised to exercise the powers vested in Criminal Judges by Regulation X. of 1816 concurrently with the Subordinate Criminal Courts⁷: an appeal however was directed to lie from their sentences within one month to the Sessions Judge.⁸

zation of a general system of Police throughout the territories subject to the Government of Fort St. George. The establishments of Dáróghahs and Thanahdárs were abolished; and the duties of Police were directed to be discharged by the Heads of Villages, aided by Karnams or Village Registers, and Talliards and other Village Watchers; the Tahsildárs or Native Collectors, with the assistance of Pêshkárs, Gumáshtahs, and establishments of Peons; Zamíndárs; Ameens of Police; Kút-wáls and their Peons; and the Magistrates of Zillahs and their Assistants.¹ The Heads of Villages were to apprehend offenders, and forward them to the Police Officer of the district², except in trivial cases of abuse and assault, when they had a limited power of punishment by confinement not exceeding twelve hours.³ The Tahsildárs were to be Heads of the Police of their districts; they were to apprehend persons charged with heinous offences, and after investigation to forward the prisoners and a report of their proceedings to the Criminal Judge⁴, and in cases of trivial abuse or assault to inflict slight punishment, extending to a fine of one rupee or confinement for twenty-four hours.⁵ Magistrates were in certain cases to invest Zamíndárs with police authority⁶, and to appoint Ameens of Police in large towns, to be under their immediate authority or that of the Tahsildárs, and to be invested with the same powers, either as Heads of Villages or Tahsildárs, as might be expedient.⁷ The Magistrates and their Assistants were charged generally with the maintenance of the peace in their respective Zillahs.⁸

In the year 1821 Police Ameens were given a jurisdiction beyond the limits of the towns for which they were appointed⁹; and the Magistrates were empowered to select subordinate officers to make inquiry into offences, hold inquests, and perform the duties before assigned to Tahsildárs and other head officers of Police, but without any power of inflicting punishment.¹⁰

The Heads of District Police were authorised to hear and determine cases of petty theft, and to inflict moderate punishment, extending to six stripes, on conviction, or to forward the offenders to the Magistrate.¹ The power of fining possessed by Tahsildárs was increased to three rupees.² The Heads of Villages were also empowered to punish petty thefts, as well as other trivial offences, by imprisonment for twelve hours.³

In 1832 the powers of Heads of District Police were extended to imprisonment for ten days, with labour, but they were no longer to inflict corporal punishment.⁴ And in 1837 they were also empowered to forward to the Magistrate, for punishment, offenders convicted of any offence cognizable by them, as well as petty thefts.⁵

3. BOMBAY.

(1) RISE AND PROGRESS OF THE ADAWLUT SYSTEM.

On the acquisition by conquest in the year 1774 of the islands of Salsette and Caranja, and their dependencies of Hog and Elephanta, provision was made for the government of the former by the appointment of a Resident or Chief and Factors, and for the latter by that of a single Resident, with instructions from the Presidency of Bombay that disputes should be decided by arbitration, until the introduction of a more detailed regulation.

In the year 1794 the Court of Directors transmitted to the Presidency of Bombay a copy of the Regulations proposed by Lord Cornwallis for the internal Government of the Bengal Provinces. To this communication the Government of Bombay replied, in the following year, that they were clearly of opinion it would contribute greatly to the ease and happiness of the Natives if Courts of Adawlut were established in Bombay, Salsette, and Caranja.

Previously, however, to the introduction of these Adawlut Courts it appeared necessary to consult the best legal opinions, and also to have the sanction of the Supreme Government in respect to the competency of that of Bombay to establish rules for the administration of justice in the above-named places, under the same independence, as to the interposition of His Majesty's Court, as the Judicial Regulations of the Governor-General in Council were with regard to the controul of the Supreme Court at Fort William.

The Advocate-General of Bengal having been consulted, gave his opinion that there was no objection to the establishment of the Courts of Justice for the islands above named by the concurring Authorities of the Supreme Government and that of Bombay; and accordingly in the year 1797 the Governor-General in Council recommended and authorised the Bombay Government to constitute Courts of Civil and Criminal Judicature, on principles similar to those on which the Courts in the Presidency of Bengal had been established.

In the year 1799, during the Government of Mr. Duncan, a regular Code of Regulations was framed in compliance with these instructions, and in that year, and subsequently, a series of Courts were established on the system introduced by Lord Cornwallis into Bengal, as nearly as local circumstances would admit, with this important distinction, however, in the administration of criminal justice, that whereas in Bengal the Muhammadan criminal law was alone applicable, in the Bombay Presidency Hindús were tried according to their own laws, and Christians and Pársís had the benefit of the English laws in all criminal cases.¹ Judges' and Magistrates' Courts and Courts of Sessions were constituted at Tannah² and Surat³; the Magistrates were authorised to inflict imprisonment not exceeding fifteen days, or fine extending to 100 rupees, in trivial cases of abuse, assault, or affray, and to inflict thirty ratans, or one month's imprisonment in cases of petty theft.¹ The Registers of the Civil and Criminal Courts were invested with limited judicial powers to the extent of 200 rupees, but their decisions were not valid unless countersigned by the Judge²; and Native Commissioners were appointed for the trial of referred cases not exceeding 50 rupees in value, and to act as Arbitrators: an appeal lay from their decisions to the Judge.³ Over all these Courts the Governor in Council, in the separate department of Sudder Adawlut and as Head of Criminal Judicature, had a right of supervision and controul, an appellate jurisdiction⁴, and a power of exercising pardon or mitigation of punishment.⁵

The decisions of the Register at Surat were, in 1802, made final in suits not exceeding 25 rupees in value, above which sum an appeal lay to the Judge.⁶

In 1805 a Provincial Court of Appeal and Circuit was established at Baróch, consisting of three Judges and a Register, and the Court of Session at Surat was abolished.⁷ Judges and Magistrates were also appointed for the Zillahs of Baróch and Kaira in the same year.⁸

The great number of civil causes pending in the Adawluts at Surat and Baróch rendered it expedient, in 1807, to appoint an Assistant Judge at the former place, and to allow of reference to the Registers, both at Surat and Baróch, of suits not exceeding 500 rupees in value. The Judges of the same Adawluts were also authorised to appoint Sudder Ameens, with a jurisdiction to try referred causes of the value of 100 rupees.⁹ An Assistant Register was appointed in the same year at Surat, with a jurisdiction extending to suits of the value of 200 rupees, as well as Inferior Ameens, to whom petty suits under 50 rupees were to be committed.¹⁰

The Provincial Court at Baróch was empowered in 1808 to hear appeals from the decisions of the Zillah Courts of Surat, Baróch, and Kaira, in suits of the value of 400 rupees, that being the appealable amount from decisions of the Tannah Adawlut to the Sudder Adawlut. Parties dissatisfied with the decisions of the Court of Appeal at Baróch were allowed to appeal again to the Sudder Adawlut, in suits of not less than 800 rupees in value.¹ It was also provided in the same year that appeals from the decisions of the Registers should lie in the first instance to the Zillah Judges, and thence to the Baróch Court of Appeal, in the event of the Judges' decree reversing the decision of the Register to the ordinary appealable amount from the Zillah Courts.²

In 1810 the Court of Session at Salsette was abolished, and the jurisdiction of the Provincial Court of Circuit and Appeal extended; at the same time this latter Court was removed from Baróch to Surat, and the office of Assistant Judge at the latter place abolished.³

A special Court for the trial of state offences, consisting of three Judges and two Muhammadan law officers, was constituted in 1812, to be under the controul of the Governor in Council.⁴ An Assistant Register and Inferior Ameens were also appointed at Baróch and Kaira, and an Assistant Judge at the latter place, all with the same powers as those exercised by the like officers at Surat.⁵ Subsequently in 1812 the powers of the Provincial Court of Appeal were more fully defined, and it was declared to extend in its jurisdiction over the Zillahs of Salsette, Surat, Baróch, and Kaira.⁶ In the same year the powers and duties of the Sudder Adawlut, particularly as regarded its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal from the decisions of the Provincial Court were fully defined.⁷ This, and a previous Regulation passed in this year⁸, enacted rules for appeals from the Sudder Adawlut to England, which will be hereafter noticed. In 1812 the Provincial Court was authorised to admit a summary appeal, whatever might be the amount at issue, in all cases in which the Zillah Court might have refused to admit, or have dismissed without investigation, on the ground of delay, informality, or other default, appeals from the decisions of the Registers' Assistants, Registers, or Native Commissioners.¹ The Sudder Adawlut was also in this year empowered to receive any appeal, whatever might be the amount in dispute, from the decrees of the Provincial Court, in appealed cases, refused or dismissed without investigation on the like grounds, by such Courts.² At the same period the rules for the Provincial Court of Circuit, and for the Superior Criminal Tribunal of the Governor in Council, were made more comprehensive and definite.³

In the year 1813 the Statute 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 105, made British subjects resident in the provinces punishable for assaults and trespass against the Natives of India by the District and Zillah Magistrates; but the convictions of such Magistrates were made removeable to the Recorder's Court by writ of Certiorari.⁴ The same Statute, by section 107, rendered British subjects, residing, trading, or holding immoveable property in the provinces, amenable to the Company's Civil Courts in suits brought against them by Natives. A right of appeal, however, to the Recorder's Court was reserved to them in cases which otherwise would be appealable to the Sudder Adawlut.

In 1815 Assistant Zillah and City Judges were appointed, and the jurisdiction of the Assistant Registers and Native Commissioners somewhat extended.⁴

An alteration deserving of notice took place in the year 1818, when the powers of the Magistrates were modified and defined: the office of Zillah Magistrate was transferred from the Zillah Judge to the Collector, the Assistant Collectors to be Assistant Magistrates⁵, and the Judges of the Zillah Courts were constituted Criminal Judges of their Zillahs¹, with charge of the Police at the chief stations. The Magistrates were to apprehend all persons charged with crimes or offences², and were empowered to punish offenders convicted by them of petty offences of abuse, assault, or affrays, by imprisonment not exceeding fifteen days, or fine not exceeding 200 rupees, and to inflict corporal punishment not exceeding eighteen ratans, or imprisonment extending to one month, in cases of petty thefts.³ The Criminal Judges were to take cognizance of charges brought before them by the Magistrates or their Police-officers, and to pass sentence of fine not exceeding 200 rupees, and, in cases of theft, of imprisonment not exceeding six months, and corporal punishment of thirty ratans; in cases deserving of more severe punishment they were to commit the prisoners for trial to the Court of Circuit.⁴ The Superior tribunal had a controul over both Criminal Judges and the Court of Circuit⁵, and the sentences of the Superior tribunal were to be final in all cases of fine, imprisonment, or corporal punishment.⁶ Assistants to the Criminal Judges were also appointed.⁷

A general system of Police was established throughout the territories subject to the Bombay Government in the same year⁸, by which the Police, which had theretofore been confided to Foudjars and Thanahdárs, was transferred to the Heads of Villages, aided by the Village Registers and Watchers; Kamavis-lárs or native district officers, with an establishment of Police-officers; Zamíndárs; Ameens of Police; Kútwáls and their Peons; Magistrates and their Assistants; and Criminal Judges at the Sudder stations of the Zillah Courts, with their Assistants. This Police system was framed on the same plan as that enacted by Regulation XI. of 1816 of the Madras code already noticed.

In 1819 Hindús were granted the benefit of their own law in trials for state offences, the Special Court having previously only administered Muhammadan law.¹

In the year 1820 several important changes took place: the Provincial Court of Appeal was abolished², and the Sudder Adawlut was transferred from Bombay to Surat, and was made to consist of four Judges³, a Register, and an Assistant Register, and law officers, and confirmed in all its former powers. It was directed that a special appeal should lie to the Sudder Adawlut from the decisions of the Zillah Courts, in all cases where such decisions were inconsistent with the laws or usages, or with judicial precedent, or where it might appear that there was a want of jurisdiction, or that there was a failure of justice.⁴ The Sudder Adawlut was also empowered to receive summary appeals from the Zillah Courts in all cases in which the latter might have refused to admit an original suit or regular appeal, or dismissed it without investigation, on the ground of delay, informality, or other default.⁵ The office of Assistant Zillah Judge was also done away with⁶, and appeals were ordered to lie to the Zillah Courts from all decisions of their Registers.⁷ The Registers were empowered to try and determine appeals from Sudder Ameens or Native Commissioners, and to try and decide any suits above 500 rupees and not exceeding 1000 in value, referred to them by the Zillah Judges: an appeal lay in such referred suits to the Sudder Adawlut. The Registers were also authorised to try appeals, referred as above from other Registers, in suits under 500 rupees.⁸ In certain cases additional Registers were appointed to the Zillah Courts, who were also to be additional senior Assistants to the Criminal Judges.⁹ In the same year the powers and functions of the Provincial Court of Circuit and the Superior tribunal were united in a Court to be called the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut, to be established at Surat, to consist of four Judges¹⁰ assisted by law and ministerial officers, and to be empowered to take cognizance of all matters relating to Criminal Justice and the Police, and to call for the proceedings of the Criminal Judges or Zillah Magistrates.¹ The Judges were to go Circuit, and to hold two general gaol deliveries annually, one Judge to go the Circuit of all the Zillahs²; and their sentences were to be final, excepting in sentences of death or imprisonment for life, when they were to be referred to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut.³ The Criminal Judges were authorised to pass sentence of imprisonment, with or without labour, for a term not exceeding seven years; but all sentences of imprisonment for more than two years were to be referred to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut.⁴

All the Bombay Regulations passed previously to the year 1827, with the exception of a few relating to customs and duties, were rescinded in that year, and the system of Judicature was entirely re-modelled in the code by which they were superseded: the groundwork, however, still remained the same, the new code being based upon the Bengal Regulations of 1793. The plan for the administration of justice which existed before 1827 had been formed under many difficulties, arising from local circumstances, and was found to be both complicated and insufficient: the new code, therefore, which was introduced by the Honourable Mountstuart Elphinstone, and was almost the closing act of his talented and efficient Government, must be regarded as forming an important era in the history of the Bombay Presidency.

The system of 1827, which, with some few alterations, exists at the present time, was substantially as follows:—

Native Commissioners were appointed in each Zillah for trying and deciding civil suits, between 500 and 5000 rupees, where the parties were neither Europeans nor Americans.⁵

In all cases an appeal lay to the Judge, whose decision was final¹; but he might refer the appeal to a Senior Assistant Judge, in which case the latter's decision was final if affirming the decision of the Court below; but if otherwise, an appeal lay to the Zillah Judge.² Zillah Courts were established, each to be presided over by one Judge.³ An appeal lay from all their decisions in original suits to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut⁴; but if the suit in the Zillah Court were against a British-born subject, residing, trading, or occupying immoveable property in the Zillah, he might appeal to the Supreme Court, instead of to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as provided by the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 107.⁵ Special appeals were allowed from the decrees of the Zillah Courts to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut when such decrees were contrary to the Regulations, or inconsistent with usage, or the Hindú or Muhammadan laws, or when they involved points of general interest not previously decided in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was authorised to admit summary appeals from the decrees of the Zillah Judges, or any inferior Court, which might have been rejected by the Zillah Judge on account of having been presented after the limited period, or on any other ground.⁶ Assistant Zillah Judges were appointed; and where more than one, they were specified as Senior and Junior. The Senior Assistant Judges were to try suits original or in appeal, referred to them by the Zillah Judge, not exceeding 5000 rupees in amount; and the Junior Assistant Judges, suits within the limit of 500 rupees.⁷ Appeals from the decisions of Junior and Senior Assistant Judges lay in all cases to the Zillah Judge, whose decision was final, with the exception that in case of appeals from original decisions of Senior Assistant Judges, if the Zillah Judge differed in opinion, a further appeal within certain restrictions, lay to the Sudder Dewanny

Adawlut.¹ Where the Senior Assistant Judge affirmed a decision in appeal from a lower Court, referred to him by the Judge, his decision was final; otherwise an appeal lay to the Judge, whose decision was final²; the Zillah Judge was also competent to admit special appeals from decrees passed in appeal by Senior Assistant Judges.³ The Chief Civil Court of Appeal, styled the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and consisting of three or more Judges, a Registrar, Assistant Registrars, and law officers⁴, was to hear appeals from the Zillah Courts; and was also competent to call for all proceedings of the lower Civil Courts.⁵ From the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut an appeal lay to the King in Council⁶, as will be hereafter noticed. It was also enacted, that in any Court in which an European presided, he might derive assistance from respectable natives, who should be employed as a Pancháyit, or sit as assessors, or more nearly as a jury, the decision being, however, vested in the presiding authority.⁷

The system of criminal judicature introduced at Bombay in the year 1827 comprises the establishment for the administration of Police; and the two branches are so interwoven one with another, that it becomes difficult to draw a line of separation between them. The apprehension of offenders, and the punishment of trivial offences, was given exclusively to the Magistrates and Officers of Police.⁸ The Zillah Judges were made Criminal Judges in their respective Zillahs, for the trial of persons committed for that purpose by the Police Magistrates, charged with crimes or offences of a less heinous nature than those reserved for the Court of Circuit.⁹ The Assistant Zillah Judges were made Assistant Criminal Judges.¹⁰ The Criminal Judges were empowered to inflict solitary imprisonment for six months, or to imprison with hard labour for seven years, and to inflict fifty stripes, or disgrace, fine, or personal restraint: sentences of imprisonment for more than two years were, however, to be referred to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut. Senior Assistant Criminal Judges were limited in their powers to sentencing to imprisonment with labour for two years, and the infliction of thirty stripes, fines, disgrace, and personal restraint: Senior Assistants were sometimes to be vested with the same powers as Criminal Judges. Junior Assistant Criminal Judges were only empowered to imprison, without labour, for two months, and to inflict fines, and personal restraint.¹ A Court of Circuit was established, to be held by one of the Judges of the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut in rotation, at the Sudder station of each Zillah, for the trial of heinous offences not being committed against the State: this Court was to hold half-yearly sessions², and was to pass final sentences, excepting those of death, transportation, or perpetual imprisonment, in which cases the sentences required the confirmation of the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut.³ A Special Court was also established for the trial of political offences, to consist of three Judges, to be selected from those of the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut and the Zillah Courts: their proceedings were to be forwarded to the Governor in Council.⁴ The Sudder Foujdary Adawlut, or Court of Supreme Criminal Jurisdiction, consisted of the same Judges as the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut⁵, and was empowered to superintend the administration of Criminal Justice and Police, to revise trials⁶, and to pass final sentences of death, transportation, and perpetual imprisonment. The Governor in Council had a power reserved of granting pardons or mitigation of punishment.⁷ All these Criminal Courts were authorised to call in the assistance of Natives, as in the Civil Courts⁸; and the law which they administered was set forth in a Regulation defining crimes and offences, and specifying the punishments to be inflicted for the same.⁹

be conducted by the Judge and Collector of each Zillah, under the respective designations of Criminal Judge and Zillah Magistrate; the District Police-officers; and the Heads of Villages.¹ The Heads of Villages with their Police establishments, were to be under the controul of the District Police-officers and Magistrates²; and they were empowered to apprehend offenders, and send them to the District Police-officers³, to hold inquests⁴, and, in cases of abuse or assault, to inflict imprisonment not exceeding twenty-four hours.⁵ The District Police-officers were under the immediate controul of the Zillah Magistrates: they were enjoined to apprehend offenders and forward them to the Magistrate⁶, to investigate serious offences, and to hold inquests⁷; and they also had the power of punishing trivial cases of theft, abuse, assault, or resistance to public officers, by fine not exceeding five rupees, or confinement for eight days.⁸ The Magistrates and their Assistants were empowered to apprehend all persons charged with crimes or offences. If such persons were British subjects residing in the Provinces, they were to be sent for trial to the Bombay Court of Judicature; and if offenders against the State, they were to be kept in custody, and the case reported to the Governor in Council⁹: all other persons they were authorised to try, and to punish by fine, imprisonment without labour for two months, to be enforced by the Criminal Judge, or flogging not exceeding thirty stripes, or to forward them to the Criminal Judge.¹⁰ The Police Jurisdiction of the Criminal Judge extended over the town in which the Adawlut was situated, and a certain space around; and to him was given the exclusive superintendence of the Police throughout the Zillah.¹¹

(3) ALTERATIONS SINCE 1827.

(a) Civil Judicature.

The first change of any importance in the system above described was the establishment in 1828 of a Court of Appeal for the Guzerat Zillahs¹, subordinate to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; and the removal of the latter Court from Surat to the Presidency.² This Court of Appeal consisted of three Judges, and took the place of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in respect of Appeals from the Zillah Courts at Guzerat.³ A regular appeal lay from its decisions to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, when the decisions of the Zillah Courts were altered or reversed; and where such decisions were confirmed, when the amount at issue, or damages claimed, exceeded 5000 rupees.⁴ Special appeals were to be open from the decrees of the Provincial Court to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under the rules previously in force respecting special appeals.⁵

This Court of Appeal was abolished in 1830, and the jurisdiction of the Native Commissioners was extended to the cognizance of all original suits, and suits referred to them by the Judge or Assistant Judge at a detached station, excepting where public officers or Europeans or Americans were parties, in which case they were to be tried in the first instance by the Judge, or referred by him to his Assistants.⁶ Senior Assistant Judges at detached stations were empowered to hear appeals from their decisions in suits not exceeding 5000 rupees in value⁷; and an appeal was directed to lie from such Judge, and from the Judge at a detached station, or the Assistant

Judge at a Sudder station, confirming their decisions in suits above 3000 rupees, or reversing in suits above 1000, to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut¹; a special appeal was also declared to be open to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in all cases under the rules previously in force with regard to special appeals.²

In the following year, some important alterations were made with regard to appeals. The decisions of Assistant Judges at Sudder stations in appeal from those of the Native Commissioners were declared appealable to the Zillah Judge if confirming such decisions in suits up to the value of 2000 rupees, and altering or reversing them in suits not exceeding 1000 rupees; but above those sums the appeal lay to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. The decision of an Assistant Judge at a detached station, if confirming that of the Native Commissioner, was final in suits not exceeding 1000 rupees; but if reversing such decision, it was final only to the amount of 500 rupees. A special appeal to the Zillah Judge was reserved in suits below those amounts: suits above such Assistant Judge's final jurisdiction, but not exceeding 5000 rupees, were re-appealable to the Zillah Judge: if above 5000 rupees, to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. The Zillah Judge's decision on cases appealed to him was final, except by means of special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.³ Suits tried in the first instance by Assistant Judges, as coming within the exceptions already mentioned respecting the jurisdiction of the Native Commissioners, were made appealable to the Zillah Judge, whose decision was final if confirmatory and in suits not exceeding 5000 rupees; but if otherwise, an appeal lay instead to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁴ In the same year the office of Native Commissioner was ordered to comprise three gradations, and the officers holding them were directed to be styled respectively Native Judges, Principal Native Commissioners, and Junior Native Commissioners.⁵ The Native Judges were to have cognizance, in addition to original suits of any amount, of appeals referred to them from original decisions of the two classes of Native Commissioners, in suits not exceeding 100 rupees; and the jurisdiction of the Principal and Junior Native Commissioners was limited to the cognizance by them of suits original, or referred to them, to the amounts, respectively of 10,000 and 5000 rupees.¹

The right of appeal from the Mofussil Courts to the Supreme Courts, vested in British subjects by the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 107, was abolished in 1836; and it was also enacted that no person, by reason of birth or descent, should be exempt from the jurisdiction of the Company's Courts², or be incapable of being a Principal Sudder Ameen, Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff, as the Native Judges and Principal and Junior Native Commissioners were then ordered to be designated.³

All suits in regard to tenures, and the interest connected therewith, and all suits respecting the right to possession of lands, or of the Watans of hereditary district or village officers, were, in the year 1838, directed to be brought in the Courts of Adawlut, and not in the Revenue Courts; and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was empowered to refer to the proper Court proceedings which might have been taken in any Court not having jurisdiction.⁴

It was enacted in 1843 that special appeals should lie to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut from all decisions passed in regular appeals by the subordinate Civil Courts, when inconsistent with law or usage, or the practice of such Courts, or involving doubtful questions of law, usage, or practice.⁵

In 1844 it was enacted that all suits within the competency of a Principal Sudder Ameen or Sudder Ameen to decide should ordinarily be instituted in the Courts of those officers; but that they might be withdrawn at the discretion of the Zillah Judges, who might try them themselves, or refer them to any competent subordinate Court. The Zillah Judges were also authorised to admit summary appeals from the orders of Principal Sudder Ameens and Sudder Ameens rejecting suits cognizable by them.¹

Joint Zillah Judges were appointed in 1845, to have the same powers and concurrent jurisdiction with the Zillah Judges.²

(b) Criminal Judicature.

In 1828 a Provincial Court of Circuit was established for the Zillahs in the Province of Guzerat, to have the same powers and duties as, but to be subject to, the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut³, which was removed to the Presidency. Sentences of death, transportation, or imprisonment for life, passed by the Court of Circuit, were to be referred to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut.⁴

This Provincial Court of Circuit was abolished in 1830, and the powers of Sessions Judges and Court of Circuit were given to the Criminal Judges⁵, and the Assistant Criminal Judges were appointed Assistant Sessions Judges.⁶ Visiting Commissioners of Circuit were at the same time appointed, for holding State trials, and trials of a peculiar and aggravated nature⁷, with all the powers of the Court of Circuit and of the Special Court.⁸ In the same year the Criminal Judges were directed to be styled Sessions Judges.⁹

An additional Judicial Commissioner of Circuit was appointed in 1833.¹⁰

Appeals from the Special Court for the trial of political offences, which formerly lay to the Governor in Council, were, in 1837, transferred to the Foujdary Adawlut, whose sentence was, however, required to be confirmed by the Government.¹¹

In 1839 all sentences passed by Assistant Sessions Judges, whereby convicts became liable to imprisonment for more than

In the year 1841 it was enacted that crimes against the State should be cognizable by the ordinary tribunals; but that the sentences and proceedings of the Courts in such trials should be reported to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut, who again were to refer their sentences to the Government for confirmation.²

In 1845 it was enacted that any person convicted of adultery by any of the East-India Company's Courts in the Bombay Presidency should be sentenced to fine or imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of such Courts: no woman to be prosecuted for such offence but by her husband; and no person to be admitted to prosecute any man but the husband of the woman with whom such man was alleged to have committed adultery.³

Joint Sessions Judges were appointed in 1845, to have the same powers and concurrent jurisdiction with the Zillah Sessions Judges.⁴

In the year 1828 the Assistant Criminal Judges stationed elsewhere than at Sudder stations were invested with Police powers, and the Zillah Magistrates were directed to refer cases to them, instead of to the Criminal Judge.⁵

Several important changes took place in 1830. The Criminal Judges were divested of their Police powers, which were transferred to the Magistrates, with an exception, however, of the Judge of the City and Sudder station of Surat⁶; the penal jurisdiction of the Magistrates and their Assistants was extended to fine and imprisonment with hard labour for one year; all sentences of Assistant Magistrates of imprisonment above three months were, however, to be confirmed by the Magistrate, who was also to have a power of revision of all their sentences.¹ District Police-officers were empowered to punish petty offenders by fine not exceeding fifteen rupees, and confinement not exceeding twenty days.² Subsequently Sub-Collectors were given the same Magisterial powers and penal jurisdiction as Collectors³; and they were afterwards, in 1831, directed to be entitled in such capacity Joint Magistrates.⁴ In the same year Zillah Magistrates were authorised to punish by solitary imprisonment for one month⁵; and the Visiting Judicial Commissioners were empowered to annul any sentence passed by a Zillah Magistrate.⁶

Joint Police-officers were appointed in the year 1833 in certain large towns, who were invested with a similar authority and jurisdiction to that of the District Police-officers, and were made subordinate to the Native Collectors.⁷

In 1843 sentences passed by Magistrates on British subjects residing in the provinces for assaults and trespasses against Natives of India were made appealable, in the same manner as sentences passed by them in their ordinary jurisdiction; and when so appealed, they were no longer to be removable by Certiorari to the Queen's Court.⁸

In the year 1846 the Police jurisdiction of the City and Sudder station of Surat was vested in the Magistrate of the Zillah, in the place of being under the controul of the Judge and his Assistants.⁹

Having thus traced the progress of the Judicial systems at the three several Presidencies, from their origin to the present time, I shall, in the following division of this Section, describe shortly the past and present jurisdiction of the Sudder and Mofussil Courts, and enumerate the various laws therein administered, concluding the account of these Courts by a summary statement of their actual constitution.

4. JURISDICTION OF THE SUDDER AND MOFUSSIL COURTS, AND THE LAWS ADMINISTERED THEREIN.

(1) CIVIL JURISDICTION.

The civil jurisdiction of the Courts established by the Honourable East-India Company originally extended over Natives only, British subjects never then residing in the provinces, except in their official capacities.

In the year 1787, however, it was declared, that whenever British subjects and others, "not being amenable to the jurisdiction of the Dewanny Courts," should institute a suit in such Courts against any person duly amenable to them, they should enter into a bond declaring themselves to be subject to their jurisdiction in respect of such suits, and binding themselves to abide by their award or decree.¹

By Regulations subsequently passed, it was enacted that the jurisdiction of the Company's Courts should extend over all Natives and other persons not British subjects², and also over such British subjects (excepting King's officers, and the covenanted civil servants of the Company and their military officers) as were suffered to reside at a distance from the seat of Government, on entering into a bond rendering themselves amenable to the Company's Courts in civil suits instituted against them by Natives or others, not British subjects, in which the amount claimed did not exceed 500 rupees.³

In the year 1813 it was enacted by Act of Parliament⁴ that British subjects residing, or trading, or holding immoveable property at a distance of more than ten miles from the Presidencies, should be subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts of the East-India Company in civil suits and matters of revenue, in like manner as the Natives of India, except that, in cases where an appeal would lie to the Company's Court exercising the highest appellate jurisdiction, such British subjects were to be allowed to appeal instead to the King's Courts at the Presidencies. The same Statute also gave a jurisdiction to Magistrates in cases of small debts not exceeding 50 rupees due from British subjects to Natives, and contracted without the jurisdiction of the several Courts of Requests established at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay respectively.¹

The Native Judicial Officers at all the Presidencies, previously to the year 1836, had no jurisdiction over Europeans or Americans in any civil suits, such persons being amenable only to the Courts presided over by European Judges.²

In the year 1836 Principal Sudder Ameens, Sudder Ameens, and Moonsiffs, who might be British-born subjects or their descendants, were declared to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Company's Courts for all acts done by them as such, and to be liable to the same proceeding as though they were not of British birth or descent.³

In the same year, and afterwards in 1839 and 1843, Acts were passed which caused great dissatisfaction at the time, but the justice and good policy of which will hardly be questioned by any but those actuated by interested motives. The right of appeal to the Supreme Courts of Judicature, which had been

IV. 1827, s. 2, Sudder Ameens had been given a jurisdiction over European subjects, European foreigners, and Americans, in suits in which they might be parties, when such suits were referred to them by the Zillah or City Judges; but this section was rescinded by Reg. V. 1831, s. 15. Mad. Reg. VII. 1827, s. 7. Bomb. Reg. II. 1827, s. 43; Bomb. Reg. I. 1830, s. 5.

previously reserved to British subjects under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 107, was abolished¹, and it was enacted, in comprehensive terms, that thenceforth no person whatever should, by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, be, in any civil proceeding whatever, excepted from the jurisdiction of any of the Company's Civil Courts.²

(2) CRIMINAL JURISDICTION.

The criminal jurisdiction of the Company's Courts was originally limited to Natives and Europeans not British subjects; and when British subjects committed, or were charged with committing, any acts, at a distance from the King's Courts, which rendered them liable to prosecution in those Courts, the Magistrates were enjoined to apprehend them, and having made inquiries into the circumstances, to despatch them to the Presidency for trial.³

The 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 105, which was passed in the year 1813, enacted, however, that it should be lawful for any Native of India resident within the British territories without the towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, in case of any assault, forcible entry, or other injury accompanied with force, not being a felony, alleged to have been done against his person or property by a British subject, to complain to the Magistrate of the Zillah or district where the alleged offender resided, or

It may be here remarked, that, by a Construction of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal relative to Act XI. of 1836, it was declared that the said Act did not take away any exemption to which any person might be entitled by virtue of his office, and that consequently judicial functionaries who were not liable to civil actions in the Courts specified in the Act on account of alleged injuries committed by them in their official capacities before the passing of the Act, were not thereby rendered liable. the offence had been committed; and that the Magistrate should have power to take cognizance of such complaint, and to acquit or convict the person accused, and in case of a conviction, to punish the offender by fine not exceeding 500 rupees; but all such convictions were declared to be removable by writ of Certiorari into the King's Courts of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol delivery.

Native Criminal Judges at Madras have no jurisdiction over Europeans or Americans, such persons being amenable only to those Courts which are presided over by European Judges.¹

In 1836 British-born subjects or their descendants, who might hold the appointment of Principal Sudder Ameen, Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff, were made liable for acts committed by them as such to the same proceedings, and amenable to the same tribunals, as though they were not of British birth or descent.²

By a late Act of the Government of India, the removal by Certiorari of the convictions of British subjects in the provinces by the Zillah Magistrates under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155 was restricted to cases in which no appeal had been made against the sentences of the Magistrates to the Superior Courts of the East-India Company.³

The criminal jurisdiction of the Courts of the East-India Company extends also over native subjects of the British Government in India, charged with crimes committed in places out of the limits of the British territories.⁴

(3) LAWS ADMINISTERED IN THE SUDDER AND MOFUSSIL COURTS.

The law administered in the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company may be classed under five distinct heads.

1. The Regulations enacted by the Governments at the three Presidencies previously to the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 85, and the Acts of the Legislative Council of India passed subsequently to that Statute.

2. The Hindú Civil Law in all suits between Hindú parties regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and cast, and all religious usages and institutions.

3. The Muhammadan Civil Law in similar suits between Muhammadan parties.

4. The Laws and Customs, so far as the same can be ascertained, of other Natives of India not being Hindús or Muhammadans, in similar suits where such other Natives are parties.

5. The Muhammadan Criminal Law as modified by the Regulations. It must be remembered, however, that this law is confined to the Criminal Courts in the Bengal and Madras Presidencies, being superseded at Bombay by a regular code. In Bengal, too, persons of non-Muhammadan faith are, on and others, it is to be feared, by that arrogant assumption of superiority founded on prejudice and ignorance, which even at the present time prevails amongst a large class of the Anglo-Indians, and induces them to consider it a disgrace to be made amenable to the same laws by which their native fellow-subjects are governed. The opposition, however, seems to have been almost entirely confined to the Presidency towns, if not to Calcutta alone, and is quite inconsiderable when compared with the clamour that was raised against the previous so-called Black Acts, passed for extending the civil jurisdiction of the Company's Courts over all persons, without distinction of birth or descent. Whilst these pages have been passing through the press, the first of these new Black Acts has, I believe, become law, and we may soon expect to see all unfair and invidious distinctions between the European and Native inhabitants of India finally abolished. The day has gone by when Hindús and Muhammadans were looked upon as no farther advanced in developement than the Natives of the Gold Coast; and a very slight study of the criminal law enacted by the Regulations will suffice to expose the absurdity of the outcry, that free-born Britons are about to be delivered over to the "barbarous and sanguinary law" of the Arabian Legislature.

claiming exemption, excepted from trial under the Muhammadan law for offences cognizable under the general Regulations.

These laws will be severally treated of in a subsequent Section.

From the above account of the Courts of Judicature established by the Honourable East-India Company, it will be seen that the gradual changes which have taken place from the earliest period up to the end of 1848 have tended in almost every instance to improve and simplify the constitution of the Courts; to extend our confidence in the Natives by admitting them to a considerable share in the executive department; and to reduce, so far as possible under the circumstances, the plans for the administration of justice adopted at the three Presidencies to one uniform system.

The following summary will exhibit at one view the actual constitution of the several Company's Courts in each Presidency, and will at once present to the reader the slight differences which exist between the three systems.

The Sudder Adawlut, which is the Chief Civil Court of Appeal, has a power of calling up from the Zillah Courts, and trying in the first instance, suits in which the disputed amount exceeds 10,000 rupees.³ The decisions of the Sudder Adawlut are final, except in suits where the disputed amount exceeds 10,000 rupees, when an appeal lies to Her Majesty in Council.⁴

1. Magistrates, and Joint and Assistant Magistrates, are directed to apprehend persons charged with petty thefts and trivial offences and send them for trial to the subordinate Courts⁵: they have a limited criminal jurisdiction, and are empowered to inflict corporal punishment, fines not exceeding 50 rupees, and to imprison for a term not exceeding fifteen days.⁶ Magistrates are also authorised to send offenders for trial, commitment, or confinement, to the Principal Sudder Ameens.⁷

2. Sudder Ameens have a limited criminal jurisdiction when granted to them by the Subordinate Judges and Principal Sudder Ameens, but are not empowered to take cognizance of cases committable for trial by the Sessions Judge, who is authorised to overrule all sentences passed by Sudder Ameens.⁸

3. The Subordinate Judges, Magistrates exercising their

But as the new Zillah Courts have been substituted for the Provincial Courts, and the appeal and the appealable amount have been altered, the original jurisdiction of the Sudder Adawlut is as above stated.

4. The Sessions Judges are empowered to hold permanent sessions for the trial of persons committed for trial by the Subordinate Judges or Principal Sudder Ameens.⁴ Cases in which the Sessions Judges differ from the Fatwa of the law officers are to be referred to the Foujdary Adawlut⁵; as are also all sentences in capital cases⁶, and in trials for offences against the State.⁷

5. The Foujdary Adawlut is the Chief Criminal Court, and has cognizance of all matters relating to criminal justice and the Police⁸; it has alone the power of passing final sentences in capital and other referrible cases⁹; but its sentences for offences against the State are to be reported to the Government, whose orders are to be awaited for three months before such sentences are carried into execution.¹⁰ It has also the power of revising, annulling, or mitigating the sentence of the lower Courts, and of calling for the whole record of any criminal trial in any subordinate Court.¹¹

3. Principal Sudder Ameens are empowered to try and determine original suits, whatever may be the amount in dispute ; and also appealed suits referred to them by the Zillah Judges from the decisions of Sudder Ameens and Moonsiffs, where the disputed amount does not exceed 100 rupees.⁴ An appeal lies from all their decisions to the Zillah Judges.⁵ A summary appeal also lies to the Zillah Courts from their orders dismissing original suits⁶ ; and a second or special appeal lies to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut from their decisions in regular appeals, when inconsistent with law or usage or the practice of the Courts.⁷

4. Assistant Judges at Sudder stations try such original suits as are excluded from the jurisdiction of the Native Judges when referred to them by the Zillah Judges. They also, when specially empowered by the Government, hear appeals from the decisions of the Principal Sudder Ameens, Sudder Ameens, and Moonsiffs, referred to them by the Zillah Judges, when the amount in dispute does not exceed 5000 rupees. it, and it should not exceed 1000 rupees; above which sums respectively the appeal lies to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.¹ Senior Assistant Judges at detached stations try such original suits as are excepted from the jurisdiction of the Native Judges, and hear such appeals from their decisions as do not exceed 5000 rupees in value. If their decision in such appeals confirm the decree of the lower Court, and the amount in dispute should not exceed 1000 rupees, or if it alter or reverse it, and it should not exceed 500 rupees, it is final; above which respective sums the suit may be re-appealed to the Zillah Judges, if the disputed amount do not exceed 5000 rupees; but if above that sum, the appeal lies to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.² Summary appeals, from their orders rejecting suits, lie to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut³; and second or special appeals lie to the same Court, where their decisions are inconsistent with law or usage or the practice of the Courts.⁴

5. The Courts of the Zillah Judges, and Joint Zillah Judges, have jurisdiction in original suits of unlimited amount. Appeals lie from their original decisions to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁵ Summary appeals from their orders rejecting suits, and second or special appeals, also lie to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.⁶

6. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or Chief Court of Appeal in civil suits, has no original jurisdiction. The decisions of this Court are final, except in suits where the amount in dispute exceeds 10,000 rupees, when an appeal lies to Her Majesty in Council.⁷

the Magistrates or their Assistants when the cases are referred to them by the Sessions Judges¹, to inflict fines, disgrace, and personal restraint, corporal punishment not exceeding thirty stripes (for theft only), and ordinary imprisonment for a period not exceeding two years.² Their powers, however, may be enlarged by Government to the extent of adjudging imprisonment for seven years, solitary imprisonment for six months, or flogging with fifty stripes³; but when a sentence is passed extending the ordinary limit, the confirmation of the Sessions Judge is necessary before execution.⁴ Senior Assistant Judges at detached stations have like powers with Assistants at the Sudder stations⁵, which may be similarly extended by Government, in which case their sentences also require the confirmation of the Sessions Judges; but they proceed at once to the trial of all cases occurring within their local jurisdiction that are committed to the Sessions by the Magistrates or their Assistants⁶, without needing that they be referred specially by the Sessions Judges, reserving only such for trial at the half-yearly Sessions held by the Sessions Judges at the detached stations as require a graver punishment than they themselves are authorised to adjudge.

The Sessions Judges are empowered to try all persons, committed for trial by the Magistrates or their Assistants for any offence, and to pass sentences for the same; but sentences of death, transportation, ordinary imprisonment exceeding seven years, or solitary imprisonment exceeding six months, or sentences in cases of perjury committed before themselves, and in trials for offences against the State, are to be referred for confirmation to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut before execution.⁷ They are also empowered, when the Judicial Commissioner is not on circuit within their Zillahs, to call for and amend the

The Judicial Commissioners of Circuit are empowered to hold trials of a peculiar or aggravated nature, which from any circumstance Government may wish to be reserved for that purpose; and they are vested with powers of controul, inquiry, and general supervision, over the judicial administration of the Zillahs comprised in their tours.³ They are also authorised to annul any sentence passed by Magistrates or their Assistants.⁴ Their sentences of death, transportation, or perpetual imprisonment, and in trials for offences against the State, are to be referred to the Sudder Foujdary Adawlut.⁵

4. The Sudder Foujdary Adawlut is the Chief Criminal Court, and is vested with the chief superintendence of criminal justice and Police, and with power to revise all trials in the lower Courts. It has alone the power of passing final sentences of death, transportation, or perpetual imprisonment, and in other referrible cases.⁶ Its sentences, however, in trials for offences against the State, are to be reported to the Government, whose orders are to be awaited for three months before such sentences are carried into execution.⁷ It is also empowered to call for and inspect the records of the lower Courts, and to mitigate or annul the sentences of such Courts, when brought before it in the course of any official proceeding.⁸

4. The Zillah Magistrates, Magistrates⁶, and Joint Magistrates are empowered to apprehend persons charged with crimes and offences, and to punish them on conviction by fine, imprisonment, and stripes, the power of imprisonment to extend to one year with hard labour, or solitary imprisonment for one month⁷; but for offences against the Post-Office Act they can punish to the extent of two years ordinary imprisonment and fine.⁸ In cases worthy of heavier punishment, the offender is to be committed for trial to the Sessions Judge.⁹

III. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The Justices of the Peace in India are of two descriptions, viz. those who, virtute officii, are empowered to act in that capacity by the immediate authority of Parliament, and those who are appointed by the local Government under Commissions issued in the name of Her Majesty.

I shall here state shortly the law relating to the Justices of the Peace, and describe their jurisdiction and functions.

Justices of the Peace were first established at Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta, by the Charter of Geo. I., in the year 1726, which appointed the Governors and Councils at those places to be Justices of the Peace, with power to hold Quarter Sessions.

The 38th section of the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, enacted, that the Governor-General and Council, and the Judges of the Supreme Court, should be Justices of the Peace for the Settlement of Fort William, and the Settlements and Factories subordinate thereto; and the Governor-General and Council were directed to hold Quarter Sessions at Fort William.

The Charter of Justice establishing the Supreme Court at Calcutta, which followed the Statute, authorised such Court to have controul over the Court of Quarter Sessions and the Justices, for any thing done by them while sitting as a Court of Quarter Sessions, or in their capacity as Justices, in the same manner and form as the inferior Courts and Magistrates in England are by law subject to the order and controul of the Court of King's Bench; and the Supreme Court was empowered to issue to them writs of Mandamus, Certiorari, Proceudo, and Error. By the 4th section of the same Charter it was ordained that the Judges of the Supreme Court at Fort William should respectively be Justices and Conservators of the Peace, and Coroners, within and throughout the provinces, districts, and countries of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and every part thereof; and should have such jurisdiction and authority as Justices of the Court of King's Bench have within England by the Common Law thereof. *

The 33d Geo. III. c. 52, s. 151, after stating that the Governor-General of Fort William, and the Judges of the Supreme Court at Fort William, and the Governor and Council of Fort St. George on the coast of Coremandel, and the Governor and Council of Bombay, were the only persons authorised by law to act as Justices of the Peace in and for Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, the Presidency of Fort St. George, and the Presidency, Island, Town, and Factory of Bombay, and the places belonging and subordinate to the two last-mentioned Presidencies respectively, enacted, that it should be lawful for the Governor-General and Council of Fort William to appoint Justices of the Peace from the covenanted servants of the East-India Company, or other British inhabitants, to act within and for the said Provinces and Presidencies, and places thereto subordinate respectively, by commissions to be issued by the said Supreme Court on warrant from the said Governor-General in Council; with a proviso, however, that such Justices should not hold or sit in any Court of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, unless called upon by the Justices of the said Court, and specially authorised by Order in Council. The 153d section of the same Statute provided that all convictions, judgments, orders, and other proceedings before Justices of the Peace should be removable by Certiorari into the Court of Oyer and Terminer, which should have power to hear and determine the matter of such proceedings, in like manner as the Court of King's Bench at Westminster.

Section 155 also empowered the Governor-General and Governors in Council to call in the Justices of the Peace to sit in Council to hear appeals from the Provincial Courts; but such appeals have been since abolished.

The 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79, s. 2, and the 8th section of the Charter which followed that Statute, establishing the Supreme Court of Judicature at Madras, appointed the Judges of that Court to be Justices of the Peace, and Coroners, within and for the settlement of Fort St. George, and the town of Madras, and the Factories subordinate thereto, and all the territories subject to, or dependent upon, the Government of Madras. The 19th section of the same Statute provided that the Justices of the Peace in India might convict offenders for breach of the Rules or Régulations made under the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, and order corporal punishment thereon; and that no such conviction should be reviewed, or brought into any Superior Court by Certiorari or appeal.

The Madras Charter of Justice gave the Supreme Court at that Presidency the same controul over the Court of Quarter Sessions and the Justices at Madras, as that exercised by the Supreme Court at Fort William in Bengal.

The 47th Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 68, s. 4, empowered the Governors and Members of Council of Madras and Bombay, to act as Justices of the Peace for those towns, and the settlements and Factories subordinate thereto respectively, and to hold Quarter Sessions; and they were further authorised, by the 5th section of the same Statute, to issue Commissions under the seals of the Supreme Court at Madras and the Court of the Recorder at Bombay respectively, to appoint covenanted servants of the East-India Company, or other British subjects, to be Justices of the Peace within the said Provinces and the places subordinate thereto respectively; and the said Justices of the Peace were made liable and subject to the rules and restrictions enacted with respect to the Justices of the Peace appointed by the Governor-General of Fort William, whose power of appointing Justices of the Peace for the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay was annulled by the next following section of the same Act.

Section 105 of the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, authorised the Magistrates in the Provinces to act as Justices of the Peace, and to have jurisdiction in cases of assault and trespass committed by British subjects on the Natives of India: the convictions by such Magistrates were, however, made removeable by Certiorari into the Courts of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery. And by the next section the said Magistrates were given a jurisdiction in cases of small debts due to Natives from British subjects.

The 4th Geo. IV. c. 71, s. 7, and the 10th section of the Charter of Justice which followed that Statute, establishing the Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay, appointed the Judges of the said Supreme Court to be Justices and Conservators of the Peace, and Coroners, within and throughout the settlement of Bombay, and the town and island of Bombay, and the Factories subordinate thereto, and the territories subject to, or dependent upon, the Government of Bombay.

The Bombay Charter of Justice gave the Supreme Court at that Presidency the same controul over the Court of Quarter Sessions and Justices at Bombay as that exercised by the Supreme Court at Calcutta.

It may be here remarked, that the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts, both at Madras and Bombay, is generally restricted to British subjects, and this would seem to limit the power of the Judges to act in the Provinces as Conservators of the Peace.

The first Charter of Justice granted in the year 1826 to the Court of the Recorder at Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore, and Malacca, constituted the Judges of the said Court Justices and Conservators of the Peace within and throughout that settlement, and the places subordinate thereto.

By the 2d & 3d Will. IV. c. 117, the Governor-General in Council at Fort William, and the Governors in Council at Madras and Bombay respectively, were empowered to nominate and appoint, in the name of the King's Majesty, any persons resident within the territories of the East-India Company, and not being subjects of any foreign state, to act within and for the towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay respectively, as Justices of the Peace.

It was provided by Act IV. of 1843, that an appeal should lie from all sentences passed by any Justice of the Peace acting without the local limits of the Supreme Courts, and from all sentences passed by any Magistrates exercising jurisdiction under the provisions of the 53d Geo. III. c. 155, to the same authority, and subject to the same rules, as are provided by the Regulations; and that cases so made the subject of an appeal should not be liable to a revision by Certiorari.

Act VI. of 1845 empowered the Supreme Courts at each of the Presidencies, upon the order or warrant of the executive Government, to issue separate Commissions to any persons not named in the then last general Commission of the Peace, to be nominated Justices of the Peace for each respective Presidency. Such commissions were directed to be issued in the Queen's name, and tested by the Chief Justice of the respective Supreme Courts.

The jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace in India extends over the whole Presidency for which they are appointed, and they can exercise their functions in any part of it: it also extends over the following classes:—

1. All persons whatever, whether British or Native subjects, in respect of offences committed within the limits of the ordinary jurisdiction of the respective Supreme Courts of Judicature.

2. All British subjects resident in any part of the Presidency, except that, as regards crimes and offences triable by jury, and committed by British officers or soldiers at places more than 120 miles from the seat of Government, they are not called upon to interfere, such crimes being cognizable by a Court Martial.¹

3. All persons, who may have committed crimes or offences at sea.

The functions of a Justice of the Peace are threefold. First, the trial and punishment of offences by summary conviction, and without a jury; Secondly, the investigation of charges in view to the committal or discharge of the accused person; and, Thirdly, the prevention of crime, and breaches of the peace.

IV. ON APPEALS TO HER MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

The right of appeal from the decisions of the Courts of highest jurisdiction in India to the Sovereign of this country in Council was originally and expressly reserved by the earlier Statutes and Regulations enacted for the administration of justice in India: this right of appeal exists equally from the decisions of the Supreme Courts of Judicature, established by the Acts of Parliament and Charters of Justice, and from the Adawlut Courts constituted by the East-India Company.¹

It is most desirable that the native suitor should be enabled to comprehend the progress of such appeals; that he should understand the best means of availing himself of the advantage of laying his grievance for the purpose of final decision, before the most learned persons in Great Britain; and that he should know how best to insure due attention to his interests, separated as he is from his Judges, Advocates, and Agents, by a distance of so many thousand miles. It is also of much importance, that before embarking in what has been, until very lately, so tedious and often so ruinous a proceeding, he should be taught in what manner his cause can be best conducted and brought to a result; and that he should be able to form some idea of the probable expenditure, both of time and money, in the event of his submitting his claims to the decision of Her Majesty in Council.

With a view to affording information on these points, I shall proceed, in the first place, to treat the subject of appeals to England historically; secondly, to describe the method of instituting such appeals in India; and lastly, I shall give, at considerable length, the course to be adopted in the procedure in this country.

1. HISTORY.

The first right of appeal to the Sovereign in Council from the judgments of the Courts in India was granted by the Charter of Geo. I. in the year 1726, establishing the Mayor's Courts, from the decisions of which Courts, as we have seen, an appeal lay, first to the Governors in Council at the respective Presidencies, and thence to England, where the amount in dispute exceeded the sum of 1000 pagodas.

The right of appeal from the decisions of the Supreme Courts was first granted in the year 1773, by the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, the 18th section of which Statute enacted, that any person thinking himself aggrieved by any judgment or determination of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Bengal, should and might appeal from such judgment or determination to his Majesty in Council.

In the following year the Charter of Justice establishing the Supreme Court at Bengal was issued, and by its 30th section a right of appeal was reserved to suitors in civil causes, on their petition to the said Court: this right of appeal was regulated by certain rules hereafter to be noticed.

No appeal was allowed under the Charter in suits where the value of the matter in dispute was under the sum of 1000 pagodas. This amount has since been altered, as will presently be noticed.

The 37th Geo. III. c. 142, empowering the King to establish the Recorders' Courts at Madras and Bombay, and being generally for the better administration of justice at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, by section 16 provided that an appeal should lie to the King in Council from such Recorders' Courts.

By the Charter of the Supreme Court at Madras, a right of appeal was reserved from its decisions to dissatisfied litigants; and the provisions regulating such appeal were similar to those contained in the Charter of the Supreme Court at Bengal. The value of the matter in dispute was required to be in excess of 1000 pagodas, for an appeal to be allowable.

The Charter of the Supreme Court at Bombay also reserved a right of appeal to the Sovereign in Council; with the difference, however, that the value of the disputed matter was to exceed 3000 Bombay rupees.

In all cases, by the provisions of each Charter of Justice of the Supreme Courts, a reservation is made of the power of the Sovereign in Council, upon the petition of any person aggrieved by any decision of the Supreme Courts, to refuse or admit the appeal, and to reform, correct, or vary¹ such decision, according to the royal pleasure.

An appeal from the decisions of the Courts of the East-India Company to the Sovereign in Council was first allowed to suitors in such Courts in the year 1781, by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, s. 21, under the provisions of which Act the Governor-General and Council, or some Committee thereof, or appointed thereby, were authorised to determine on appeals and references from the Country or Provincial Courts in civil causes. This Statute enacted, that the said Court might hold all such pleas and appeals, in the manner, and with such powers, as it theretofore had held the same, and should be deemed in law a Court of Record; and that the judgments therein given should be final and conclusive, except upon appeal to His Majesty, in civil suits only, the value of which should be of £5000 and upwards.

The limitation as to amount being the only restriction imposed by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, and no rules having been made by His Majesty in Council for the conduct of the Indian Courts in dealing with the applications of appellants, it became necessary to declare by Regulation the time within which the petition of appeal was to be presented, to require security for costs, and to make divers other rules, by which suitors were to be bound. Regulation XVI. of 1797 of the Bengal code was accordingly passed, enacting that the previous Regulation¹, which declared that the decrees of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut were final, had no reference to the appeal to His Majesty in Council allowed by the 21st section of the Statute 21st Geo. III. c. 70: the same Regulation proceeded to enact certain rules for the conduct of appeals, which rules, so far as they are now applicable, will be found in the following pages. The amount of the judgment appealed against was to exceed £5000 sterling, exclusive of costs, ten current rupees to be considered equivalent to £1 sterling. This amount has since been altered, as will be seen in the sequel.

In 1801² the constitution of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Bengal was entirely changed, and the Governor-General was declared no longer to be a Judge of the Court, as has already been mentioned. Although, however, the Governor-General had thus divested himself of the power of administering justice in Bengal, he for some time exercised an appellate jurisdiction in cases decided by the Sudder Adawlut at Madras, such appeal having been expressly reserved by the Regulations of 1802.¹

In the year 1818 the Governor-General relinquished the authority, theretofore exercised by him, of receiving appeals from the decisions of the Sudder Adawlut at Madras; and all the rules relating to such appeals to the Supreme Government were rescinded. At the same time a provision was made that an appeal should lie from such decisions to the King in Council, and rules were framed for the conduct of the appeals, similar to those contained in Regulation XVI. of 1797 of the Bengal code.² No restriction, however, as to the appealable amount was fixed; and accordingly, in many instances, the appeals from Madras were for sums below £5000.

At Bombay, by the Regulations passed previously to the year 1812 for the establishment of the general Courts of Justice at Salsette, Surat, Baróch, and Kaira, for the trial of civil suits, an appeal from the decisions of either of those Courts, and from that of the Provincial Court of Appeal, was allowed to the Sudder Adawlut at Bombay, but to no other ultimate tribunal.³ No reservation had been in any instance made of an appeal to the Governor-General and Council, or to the King in Council under the provisions of the Statute 21st Geo. III. c. 70, s. 21. By a Regulation passed in the above year, however, rules were enacted for regulating appeals from the Court of Sudder Adawlut to His Majesty in Council, in suits of the value of £5000, exclusive of costs.¹

² Mad. Reg. VIII. 1818. This Regulation, declaratory that appeals should in future be transmitted from the Madras Sudder Adawlut to the King in Council, arose from the recognition that the Governor-General had no power to decide appeals in the last resort. An appeal from the decision of the Sudder Adawlut seemed of right to lie to the King in Council. A question on this subject was referred to the Advocates-General of the three Presidencies, who were of opinion that the appeal would lie of right to the King in Council, from Madras and Bombay, from any final decision, for any amount. The reference, it appears, arose on a case of some magnitude, which had been appealed to the Governor-General in Council; and the result was, that his Lordship in Council declared that the appeal was no longer to be made to him, and directed the Madras Government to publish the above Regulation.—See Mr. R. Clarke's Evidence before the House of Lords in 1830, No. 1543, p. 180, 4to Edit.

In the same year a Regulation was also passed for defining the powers and duties of the Sudder Adawlut, and the rules contained in the previous Regulations were re-enacted²; in the year following, however, all these rules were rescinded, doubts having arisen as to the legal competency of the Government of Bombay to admit of appeals from the Sudder Adawlut to the King in Council under the Statutes of the realm.³

Regulation V. of 1818 of the Bombay code was passed to remedy the defect in the legislature caused by the improvident rescission of the rules above mentioned. This Regulation provided for the reception and transmission of appeals from the Court of Sudder Adawlut to His Majesty in Council, and certain rules, similar to those already noticed, were enacted, regulating the same: the restrictive clause as to the appealable amount was, however, omitted.

The Governor of Bombay relinquished the judicial authority in 1820⁴, and the Sudder Adawlut was reconstituted as in the other Presidencies: the right of appeal to the Sovereign in Council, established by Regulation V. of 1818, however, remained untouched.

In the year 1827, when the new code of Bombay Regulations was promulgated, fresh provisions were made for appeals from the judgments of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; the provisions, however, were, in fact, the same as those already in force, and the restriction as to the value of the matter in dispute was again most unaccountably omitted.⁵ Thus, from the year 1818, there was no restriction in this particular, and the consequence was, that a large number of appeals were forwarded to this country from Bombay, involving such trivial amounts as to become a source of great grievance to the respondents.

In all the Presidencies reservation was made, by the respective Regulations, of the Sovereign's right to reject or receive all appeals, notwithstanding any provisions in the said Regulations.

Having thus far considered historically the several provisions of the Statutes, Charters, and Regulations, it becomes requisite to inquire into their efficiency when brought into operation. At the very outset we find that these enactments, especially as applied to the appeals from the Adawlut Courts, were almost totally useless: not that they were unskilfully framed, or that they were inapplicable to the furtherance of justice; but the ignorance of the Natives of the steps necessary to be taken to bring an appeal before the Privy Council, and the very slight intercourse with Europeans enjoyed by many of the appellants, prevented the enactments relating to appeals from being either profitably or extensively applied.

The appellants from the decisions of the Supreme Courts, never laboured under the disadvantages which pressed upon the suitor considering himself aggrieved by the decree of a Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. Rules for appeals were laid down in the Charters of Justice, and in the Rules and Orders of the Courts themselves, which had received the sanction of his Majesty in Council. The native suitors were, almost in every case, in the habit of close intercourse with Europeans; the proceedings of the Supreme Courts resembled those in England; and the suits were carried on in those Courts by English Counsel and Attornies, the latter of whom, in a case of appeal, appointed a Solicitor in this country, under whose management the appeal was conducted. On the other hand, the appellants from the Sudder Dewanny Adawluts, who were generally Natives of rank and wealth, living in the Mofussil, and who, having but little intercourse with Europeans, were conversant more or less only with their own respective laws, and the Regulations enacted by the Company's Government, entertained but vague notions of the laws and constitution of this country; and, until lately, their legal advisers, and the practitioners in the Courts, were Natives equally ignorant with themselves. The papers in an appeal from the Supreme Courts were obtained by the Attorney who conducted the case in India, and forwarded by him to an agent in England: the Supreme Court Attorney was thus a link of connexion between the appellant and the Privy Council. No such connecting link existed in the case of the appellants from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut: the transcript records were prepared by the Government, and transmitted to England; and when once placed in the hands of Government, the Vakeels of the appellants were of no further use; and they themselves being ignorant that agents were requisite in England, or that any other steps were necessary to be taken, the appeals in consequence stood still. The parties in India having conformed, to the utmost of their ability, to the Regulations of the Government, concluded, that when the documents under the seal of the Court were transmitted through the Indian Government to this country, the Court of the Sovereign in Council would take the case into consideration, and return a decision thereon. Such expectation was clearly in conformity with the practice¹ that obtained, as regarded Madras, up to the year 1818, before which time as we have seen, an appeal was admitted from the Madras Sudder Adawlut to the Governor-General in Council at Calcutta. When the documents, properly attested &c., were sent to Calcutta, a decree was in due time returned, confirming or reversing that of the Sudder Adawlut at Madras, without any thing being required to be done by the parties. Thus, when appeal cases were transmitted to England, the parties patiently waited for a decision, but in vain; and in many instances the property in dispute became eaten up by public and private debts, and the litigants were either ruined or greatly impoverished.¹

Whilst things remained in this state, the right of appeal was in fact productive of harm instead of benefit, inasmuch as the parties made deposits, which were not released, even in cases where the suits had been compromised. Mr. R. Clarke, in his Evidence before the House of Lords in 1830¹, mentions four cases in which the parties had compromised their suits in India: they sent notice of their compromise to England, through the same channel by which they had forwarded their appeals. In one case the total amount litigated was held in deposit, and in the others the sum deposited for fees, which amounted to about £1000 was held in deposit. The restoration of the deposits was refused to the parties in India, because the Courts there had no knowledge of what had been done by the Court appealed to in England with regard to the suits.

From the year 1773, when, as we have seen, the power of appeal from the Supreme Courts in India was originally allowed, until the year 1833, when the Statute 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 41, was passed, about fifty appeals were instituted, the first being in 1799.

It was about the year 1826 that the late Sir Alexander Johnston, while engaged in some antiquarian researches², discovered that there were a large number of cases involving questions of native law of great importance, which had been in appeal from the Courts in India before the Privy Council for a great many years, and that they had not been heard in consequence of the ignorance of the parties as to the proceedings necessary to be taken in this country. Subsequently to this an application was made by the Court of Directors to the Privy Council for permission to bring forward appeals on behalf of suitors; and the transcripts of the proceedings in India, accumulated in the Privy Council Office, were sent to the East-India House, for the purpose of being examined, and a report drawn up. The East-India Company's Solicitor accordingly sent in a report to the Honourable Court, stating the cause of action, the names of the parties, the amount sued for, and all other requisite particulars respecting each appeal, of which the records had been received at the office of the Privy Council: the report was forwarded to the Board of Controul for the purpose of being laid before the Privy Council.

It appeared, on examination of this report, that the earliest appeal from Bengal was on a decision that was pronounced in the year 1799. Twenty-one appeals in all were pending from Bengal, ten from Madras, and seventeen from Bombay. None of those from Madras and Bombay were of earlier date than the year 1818, according to the provisions of the Regulations¹; no appeals having been instituted from Bombay whilst the Regulations of 1812 allowing the right were in force.

The Honourable Court of Directors, having thus taken the first step in the right direction towards remedying the failure of justice, several learned persons were consulted as to the best means of forwarding the appeals. Accordingly, in the year 1832, Sir James Macintosh, Sir Edward Hyde East, and Sir Alexander Johnston, were requested by the Board of Controul to report on the best course to be adopted in order to cause all the old appeals to be put in train for decision, and Mr. Richard Clarke, formerly of the Madras Civil Service, was engaged to arrange all the papers connected with the different appeals; and a report was drawn up, and submitted to the Court of Directors, of all the appeals which were then lying in the Privy Council Office, and in which no proceedings were being taken by the parties.

The attention of the legislature had now been called to the subject, and the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 41, was passed on the 14th August 1833. This important Act established the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and laid down certain rules of procedure, which will be recurred to in the proper place; parties in appeals from India, were insured a certain and speedy hearing; and efficiency was given to the pre-existing Laws and Regulations, which had, by long experience, been found wholly ineffective, and indeed, as we have seen, productive of something more than a mere failure of justice. The appointment of retired Indian Judges under this Act as Assessors of the Court brought an amount of knowledge and experience to bear upon most of the questions arising in Indian appeals, which could not by any other means have been rendered so readily available.¹ The East-India Company were also authorised to appoint Agents and Counsel, to conduct the appeals from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and bring them to a hearing, and to watch over the interests of the parties. All the long-standing appeals, and those admitted by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut before the 1st of January 1846, were affected by this Act, and the orders made in pursuance of it: in the year 1845, however, the enactment of the 8th & 9th Vict. c. 30, took the management of all appeals from such Courts, admitted after that date, out of the hands of the East-India Company.

¹ It is surprising the Government of this country should never have thought it necessary to appoint any of the retired Judges of the East-India Company's Service to sit in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as Assessors in Indian appeal cases, since, in appeals from the decisions of the Company's Courts, the peculiar experience of the Judges of the Queen's Courts is necessarily applicable to such cases only as involve points of Hindú or Muhammadan law. A large proportion of the suits in the Courts of the East-India Company, including almost all those which relate to landed property in the Mofussil, are connected with the revenue; but the Statute 21st Geo. III. c. 70, s. 8, expressly forbids the Supreme Court at Calcutta from having jurisdiction "in any matter concerning the revenue, or concerning any act or acts ordered or done in the collection thereof, according to the usage and practice of the country, or the Regulations;" and the Charters of the Supreme Courts at Madras and Bombay contain similar prohibitory clauses (Mad. Chart. s. 23; Bomb. Chart. s. 30). Again, all other questions, which turn upon the Regulation law applying to persons and things without the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts can obviously only be determined by the Courts of the East-India Company. It follows then, of course, that in every one of these instances the subject matter of an appeal from the decision of a Company's Court is necessarily as foreign to the present Assessors as to the other members of the Judicial Committee, whilst a Judge of the Chief Courts of the East-India Company would at once be able to remove the doubts and difficulties by which such questions are usually surrounded.

2. INSTITUTION OF APPEALS IN INDIA.

It now becomes necessary to say a few words respecting the mode in which appeals are instituted in India, and of the necessary proceedings in that country.

The appeals from the Supreme Courts are under the authority of the Statutes and Charters, and are regulated by the practice of such Courts.

By the Bengal Charter of Justice, in section 30 et seq., certain rules are laid down regulating the admission of appeals from the Supreme Court of that Presidency: these rules are still in force, excepting that the amount of the matter in dispute for which an appeal might be instituted has been altered, for all the Courts in India, to the minimum sum of 10,000 Company's rupees.

The rules now in operation are as follows:—The person aggrieved by any judgment, decree, or decretal order, must present his petition of appeal to the Supreme Court, stating the cause of appeal; and the Supreme Court is empowered to award that the said judgment, decree, rule, or order, shall be carried into execution, or that sufficient security shall be given for the performance of the said judgment, decree, rule, or order; and if the Court shall think fit to order the execution of the same, security shall be taken from the other party for the performance of the order or decree of Her Majesty in Council; and in all cases security is to be given for costs, and for the performance of the judgment or order on appeal. The appeal having then been admitted, the Supreme Court is to certify and transmit, under the seal of the Court, to the Privy Council, a copy of all the evidence, proceedings, judgments, decrees, and orders, in the cause appealed; and no appeals are to be allowed by the Court, unless the petition of appeal be presented within six months from the day of pronouncing the judgment, decree, or decretal order complained of.

The Charters of Madras and Bombay contain similar rules, excepting that, in both, the words "judgment or determination" are used, instead of "judgment, decree, or decretal order," and "judgment, decree, rule, or order." It has been held, however, that the word "determination" in the Charters of Madras and Bombay, is equivalent to the "decree, or decretal order;" and it was decided that the right of appeal from all the Supreme Courts is not confined to cases where a right or duty is finally decided, but includes interlocutory judgments, decrees, or decretal orders.¹ It seems that no appeal from a final judgment will open prior interlocutory decrees or orders in respect of which the time for appealing has elapsed.²

No appeal will be allowed against a verdict: the appeal is directed to be by persons aggrieved by any judgment, decree, order, or rule of the Court; words which clearly do not comprehend the mere finding of a verdict, whether it be on the Common-law side of the Court, and afterwards to be carried into effect by a judgment, or upon an issue directed to inform the Court sitting in Equity what decree or order it is to pronounce. It is not certain that the judgment, decree, or order, will correspond with the finding; but if it should do so, the effect of an appeal against the verdict is obtained by an appeal against the judgment or order founded upon it.³ In one case, where an issue at law had been directed from the Equity side of the Court, and a verdict had been found for the defendant, the plaintiff, having first applied (on the Equity side) for a new trial which was refused, obtained an order nisi that her petition of appeal against the order refusing a new trial should be allowed; but this was expressly granted as a liberal construction of the power of appeal, and not in any way as favouring the doctrine that an appeal can lie against a verdict.⁴

An order or judgment on consent cannot be appealed from, not coming within the class of orders by which the party against whom it is made may be said to be aggrieved.⁵

⁵ Rogober Dyal v. The East-India Company, 1 Fulton, 146.

An order by the Supreme Court at Madras, made at its own instance, for the dismissal of the Master of the Court for alleged official misconduct in the taxation of a bill of costs, was held not to be an appealable grievance within the Madras Charter of Justice; and although the Supreme Court had allowed the appeal, special leave to appeal was granted by the Queen in Council.¹

By all the Charters of the Supreme Courts, those Courts possess absolute power to allow or deny an appeal in criminal cases.²

Appeals from the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to the Privy Council are instituted, and the procedure in India is governed, by the provisions of the Regulations as modified by the Statutes, the Orders in Council, and the Acts of the Government of India.

Regulation XVI. of 1797 of the Bengal code, after stating that no Rules had been prescribed by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, respecting the admission of appeals thereby authorised, established, as I have already mentioned, certain rules for that purpose. The Madras Regulation VIII. of 1818, and section 100 of the Bombay Regulation IV. of 1827, subsequently enacted similar rules to those promulgated by the Bengal Regulation. The minimum value of the subject-matter in dispute, in all appeals from every Court in India, has been since fixed, by the Order in Council of the 10th April 1838, at the sum of 10,000 Company's rupees; and the Act of Government XI. of 1839 has abolished institution fees and stamps on the petitions of appeals and transcripts of proceedings; with these exceptions (as the Bengal Regulation fixed an appealable sum, and all the Regulations required transcripts to be written on stamped paper), the general rules of procedure enacted by the Regulations above mentioned remain in force. By these Rules, so far as they are now in operation, the petition of appeal must be presented to the Chief Civil Court within six months from the date on which the judgment appealed against may have been passed. The Court may order their judgment to be carried into execution, taking security from the party in whose favour the decree may have been passed to abide the event of the appeal; or suspend the execution, taking the like security from the party left in possession; but in all cases security is to be given by the appellants to the satisfaction of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, for the payment of all costs likely to be incurred by the appeal, and for the performance of the final order or judgment on the appeal; the appeal to be declared admitted on receiving such security, and notice to be given to the parties to prosecute and defend the same, according to the established mode of proceeding. It is also provided by these Regulations, that, in all cases wherein the Chief Civil Court may admit an appeal to the Sovereign in Council, the Court is to cause two copies of the whole of the proceedings and evidence to be prepared in English, at the expense of the appellant, and transmitted under the official seal and signature of the Register to the Governor-General in Council, to be forwarded to Her Majesty in Council: the parties are also to be furnished with other copies of the proceedings on application, provided they agree to pay the expense of preparing the same; and copies of any local Regulations under which the judgment may have been passed, or which may have been referred to, are to accompany the proceedings. It is also lastly provided, by the same rules, that nothing contained therein shall be understood to bar the exercise of Her Majesty's pleasure upon all appeals to her, either in rejecting or admitting such as she may think proper under the Statute.

By the Regulations and practice of the Chief Courts of Civil Judicature, heavy institution fees and stamp duties on petitions of appeals, and the transcripts of the proceedings and evidence to be forwarded to the Privy Council, were formerly imposed: these were abolished, as above mentioned, by Act XI. of 1832, which enacts that no stamp duty or institution fee shall be payable in respect of any proceeding in any appeal, or in respect of any paper, or copy of any paper, necessary for any appeal from any Court of the East-India Company to Her Majesty in Council. This Act gives a most effective and beneficial relief to the Indian appellant, the institution fees and the high stamp on the petitions of appeal, and the transcripts of proceedings and evidence, having been felt to be an exorbitant tax upon justice. Another useful enactment respecting the preparation of copies and translations of proceedings in appeals was passed in 1844. This Act, No. II. of that year, provides, that in all cases of appeals to the Queen in Council from judgments delivered by the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Fort William, Fort St. George, Bombay, and Allahabad¹, the expense of preparing two copies of all the proceedings held, and judgments or orders given in the case appealed, including the whole of the evidence and documents, and of translating into the English language such of the aforesaid proceedings as may have been originally drawn out in the country languages, shall be defrayed by the parties prosecuting the appeal; and it is further enacted, that the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are empowered and required to cause the deposit by the appellant, within the time allowed for the furnishing security for costs of appeal, of such a sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expense of making the two aforesaid copies; and when such deposit shall have been made, and not till then, to declare the appeal admitted, and to give notice thereof to the appellant and respondent respectively.

It has, I believe, always been the practice of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to give great latitude in the admission of appeals to England, but of course, in all cases, a salutary controlling power has been exercised by the Judges. By Construction No. 1102, dated the 18th August 1837, no appeal can lie to Her Majesty in Council from the orders passed by the Court in Miscellaneous cases; and it was held² that no appeal to England can lie from an interlocutory order; the words "judgment, decree, or decretal order," in the Order in Council of the 10th April 1838, clearly referring to decisions or judgments passed by the Court in regular cases, and not in any way to interlocutory orders.

By a Rule issued by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in accordance with the 7th and 8th Vict. c. 69, s. 11, on the 12th February 1845, it was ordered, that when any appeal should be prosecuted from any judgment of any Court in the Colonies or Foreign Settlements of the Crown, the reasons given by the Judges of such Court, or by any of such Judges, for or against such judgment, should be, by the Judge or Judges of such Court, communicated in writing to the Registrar of such Court, or other officer, whose duty it is to prepare and certify the transcript record of the proceedings in the cause; and that the same should be by him transmitted to the Clerk of Her Majesty's Privy Council at the same time when the documents and proceedings proper to be laid before Her Majesty in Council upon the hearing of the appeal are transmitted.¹

Such are the Rules established by the Charters and Regulations. And, to sum up, the method of proceeding in an appeal in India is as follows:—Within six months from the date of the judgment, decree, or decretal order complained of, a petition is to be presented to the Court for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council; and the matter in dispute being of the amount of 10,000 Company's rupees at least, the appeal will be granted as a matter of right, the proper security for costs being perfected as provided by the Charters and Regulations. The securities being perfected, and the appeal admitted, no further proceeding is of necessity taken by the parties; the selection and arrangement of the documents to form the transcript record to be sent to England is made by the proper officer of the Court whose judgment is appealed against, it being directed that the Court appealed from shall, at the cost of the appellant, certify and transmit to Her Majesty two copies, in the English language, of all proceedings, evidence, judgments, decrees, and orders, had or made in such causes so appealed so far as the same relate to the matter of appeal: such copies to be certified by the seal of the Court. These copies, along with the appeal, are transmitted to the Privy Council, and to the appellant's agent in England: another copy is usually furnished to the respondent, for the purposes of the appeal. It seems that when once the appeal has been presented in the Courts in India it cannot be withdrawn, nor the securities for costs vacated even by consent, without an order to that effect from the Queen in Council. Nor can the sentence be executed, or other proceedings be had in the cause, without security being given for the judgment to be pronounced on the appeal.¹

All questions relative to the amount, sufficiency, and reception of securities for costs on appeals, are to be decided upon by the Court in India.² The mere permission to appeal, though no appeal be actually tendered, appears to put a stop to the jurisdiction of the Courts below; and the parties cannot adjust their differences without a positive order obtained on petition from Her Majesty in Council to suspend further proceedings and dismiss the appeal.

It would be difficult, if not impossible, for one who has not had the advantage of practising in the Indian Courts, to enter more fully into the details of the practice of such Courts respecting the institution, admission, and transmission of appeals from their decisions to the Privy Council³; these details are of course well known to the practitioner in India, and I therefore pass at once to the procedure in this country, trusting that the information contained in the following pages may prove both interesting and useful to the Indian appellant.

3. PROCEDURE IN ENGLAND.

The first establishment of any definite Rules of practice strictly applicable to Indian appeals in this country, dates from the passing of the 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 41, in August 1833, intituled "An Act for the better Administration of Justice in His Majesty's Privy Council." I shall proceed to give an abstract of its contents, and then pass in review the Orders in Council, made in pursuance of the said Act, and the subsequent Statutes bearing upon the subject in consideration. All these Statutes and Orders relate mainly to the procedure in this country, though in some instances they are merely confirmatory of the Charters and Regulations (as for instance in fixing the time in which an appeal may be preferred in India). Where they actually rescind the Rules contained in the Charters and Regulations (as by fixing a different value of the matter in dispute necessary for the admission of an appeal) such rescission has been already noticed.

The 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 41, s. 1, provided that the President for the time of His Majesty's Privy Council, the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain for the time being, and such of the members of His Majesty's Privy Council as should from time to time hold any of the Offices following, that is to say, the Office of Lord Keeper or First Lord Commissioner of the Great Seal of Great Britain, Lord Chief Justice or Judge of the Court of King's Bench, Master of the Rolls, Vice-Chancellor of England, Lord Chief Justice or Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Lord Chief Baron or Baron of the Court of Exchequer, Judge of the Prerogative Court of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, and Chief Judge of the Court in Bankruptcy, and also all persons members of His Majesty's Privy Council, who should have been President thereof, or held the Office of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, or should have held any of the other Offices above mentioned, should form a Committee of His Majesty's said Privy Council, and should be styled "The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council:" provided, nevertheless, that it should be lawful for His Majesty from time to time, as and when he should think fit, by his Sign Manual to appoint any two other persons, being Privy Councillors, to be members of the said Committee. It was also enacted by the 3d section of the same Act, that all appeals, or complaints in the nature of appeals, which, by virtue of any law, statute, or custom, might be brought before His Majesty in Council, from or in respect of the determination, sentence, rule, or order, of any Court, Judge, or Judicial Officer, and that all such appeals then pending or unheard, should be referred by His Majesty to the said Judicial Committee, and a report or recommendation thereon should be made to His Majesty in Council for his decision thereon, as theretofore had been the custom in references of a like nature.

The succeeding sections of the Act successively provided, amongst other things, that evidence might be taken virâ voce or upon written depositions; that the Committee might order any particular witnesses to be examined as to any particular facts, and might remit causes for rehearing, and direct additional or rejected evidence to be taken, and that on such remitting the King might direct feigned issues to be taken in any Courts in His Majesty's dominions abroad; that every witness should be examined on oath, and be liable to punishment for perjury, and that the said Judicial Committee might direct new trials of issues; that certain powers given to certain Courts, and provisions made by the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, and the 1st Will. IV. c. 22, for the examination of witnesses by commission upon interrogatories or otherwise, should extend to and be exercised by the said Judicial Committee; that the costs of any appeal, or matter, or issue referred to or directed by the Judicial Committee, should be in the discretion of the said Committee, and taxed by the Registrar; that the orders or decrees made by His Majesty in pursuance of the direction of the said Judicial Committee should be enrolled; that a Registrar should be appointed by the King, to whom matters should be referred in the same manner as they are referred by the Court of Chancery to a Master; that the attendance of witnesses and production of any deeds, evidences, or writings, should be compelled by subpœna; that the time for appealing should be the same as then existing by any law or usage, or, subject to any chartered or constitutional right of any Colony or Plantation in the absence of such law or usage, within such time as His Majesty in Council should order; and that the decrees for Courts abroad should be carried into effect as directed by His Majesty in Council. By the 22d section of the same Act it was provided, that as various appeals had been admitted by the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at the three Presidencies, and the transcripts of the proceedings had been from time to time transmitted to the Privy Council Office, but the suitors had not taken the necessary measures to bring on the same to a hearing, His Majesty in Council might direct the East-India Company to bring appeals from the Sudder Dewanny Adawluts of the three Presidencies to a hearing, and to appoint Agents and Counsel for the different parties in such appeals, and make such orders for the security and payment of costs as His Majesty in Council should think fit; and that such appeals should be heard and reported to His Majesty in Council, and determined in the same manner, and the decrees of His Majesty in Council were to have the same force and effect, as though the same had been brought to a hearing by the direction of the parties appealing in the usual course of proceeding. It was, however, provided, that such last-mentioned powers should not extend to any appeals from the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, other than appeals in which no proceedings had been or should thereafter be taken in England, on either side, for a period of two years subsequent to the admission of the appeal by such Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. This 22d section was repealed by the 8th and 9th Vict. c. 30, as will be presently seen. By the 23d section, the death of any of the parties interested in any appeal was not to affect any order made; but in all cases where any such appeal had been withdrawn or discontinued, or any compromise made before the hearing thereof, the determination of the Committee was declared to be of no effect. The 24th section empowered His Majesty in Council to make rules and orders for regulating the mode, form, and time of appeal to be made from the decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawluts, and any other Courts of Judicature in India, and for the prevention of delays in making or hearing such appeals, and as to the expenses and the amount of the property in respect of which the appeal might be made. By the 30th section it was enacted that two members of the Privy Council, who should have held the office of Judge in the East Indies or any of His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, might attend the sittings of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as Assessors, but without votes, at a salary of 400*l.* a year. These appointments are at present vacant.

Three Orders in Council were made in the year 1833, under the 24th section of the preceding Act. By the first, dated the 4th September, it was ordered that the East-India Company should bring to a hearing before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council all the cases of appeal mentioned in a list appended to the said Order, the same being appeals from Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in the East Indies, in which no proceedings had been taken in England, on either side, for a period of two years subsequent to the admission of the said appeals respectively. The list referred to contained eighteen cases from Bengal, ten from Madras, and fifteen from Bombay. The second Order, dated the 18th November, gave further directions in pursuance of the said Act, and ordered that the said East-India Company should appoint Agents and Counsel, when necessary, for the different parties in the appeals mentioned in the said list, to transact and do all things as had been usual by Agents and Counsel for parties in appeals to His Majesty in Council, from the colonies or plantations abroad. The third Order, of the same date as the preceding one, directed that the said Company should be entitled to demand payment of their reasonable costs of bringing appeals to hearing by virtue of the said Act, to such an amount and from such parties, and should have such lien for the said costs upon all monies, lands, goods, and property whatsoever, and upon all deposits which might have been made, and all securities which might have been given in respect of such appeals, as the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council should direct.

Under the same Act His Majesty did, by his Order in Council, dated the 16th January 1836, approve certain Rules for the regulation and conduct of appeals, and amended a portion thereof by another Order of the 10th August in the same year; the Rules contained in these Orders were, however, never acted upon, and they were cancelled and rescinded by Her present Majesty in Council, by an Order dated the 10th April 1838, which substituted other Rules and Regulations applicable to Indian appeals.

By this last-mentioned Order it was provided—

“1. That from and after the 31st day of December next, no appeal to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors in Council, shall be allowed by any of Her Majesty’s Supreme Courts of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Fort St. George, Bombay, or the Court of Judicature of Prince of Wales’ Island, Singapore, and Malacca, or by any of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or by any other Courts of Judicature in the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, unless the petition for that purpose be presented within six calendar months from the day of the date of the judgment, decree, or decretal order complained of, and unless the value of the matter in dispute in such appeal shall amount to the sum of 10,000 Company’s rupees at least; and that, from and after the said 31st day of December next, the limitation of £5000 sterling heretofore existing in respect of appeals from the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, shall wholly cease and determine.

“2. That in all cases in which any of such Courts shall admit an appeal to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors in Council, it shall specially certify on the proceedings that the value of the matter in dispute in such appeal amounts to the sum of 10,000 Company’s rupees or upwards, which certificate shall be deemed conclusive of the fact, and not be liable to be questioned on such appeal by any party to the suit appealed.

“3. Provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to take away, diminish, or derogate from the undoubted power and authority of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors in Council, upon the petition at any time of any party aggrieved by any judgment, decree, or decretal order of any of the aforesaid Courts, to admit an appeal therefrom upon such other terms, and upon and subject to such other limitations, restrictions, and regulations, as Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, shall in any such special case think fit to prescribe.

“4. That on the arrival of the transcripts of proceedings in an appeal to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors in Council, from any of the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any other Courts in the East Indies constituted by the East-India Company or any of their Governments from which an appeal lies to Her Majesty in Council, such officer of the East-India Company as the Court of Directors of the said Company shall from time to time appoint, shall forthwith give notice to the Clerk of the Council thereof, stating, at the same time, the names of the parties to the appeal, and the date of the decree appealed from, and that such notice shall be duly registered in the Council Office.

“5. That the said transcripts and proceedings shall be kept at the East-India House, or at such other convenient place within the cities of London or Westminster as the said Court of Directors shall from time to time appoint; the agents respectively conducting and defending such appeals in this country, being at liberty to take all the necessary copies and extracts from the said proceedings, and to examine the same from time to time; and it shall be the duty of such Officer, by himself or his sufficient deputy, to produce the original transcripts before the Judicial Committee, upon the hearing of such appeal, upon due notice for that purpose previously given, and upon all other occasions when thereunto required by the Privy Council or the Judicial Committee.

“6. That in default of the petition of appeal of the appellants being lodged in the Council Office within three calendar months from the Registration of the arrival of such transcripts, or in default of the appellant's case being carried in within one year from the time of such Registration, the respondent shall be entitled in either case to move to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution; and in the event of the respondent's not bringing in his case within one year from the time of such Registration, the appellant shall be entitled to apply to have the case heard ex-parte."

In the month of July 1843 was passed the 6th and 7th Vict. c. 38, intituled "An Act to make further Regulations for the facilitating the hearing Appeals and other matters by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council." This Act relates principally to appeals from the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts; but it also enacted generally as regards appeals, that they might be heard by not less than three members of the Judicial Committee, and that they should be conducted with reference to manner and form, subject, however, to the Rules from time to time made by the Judicial Committee, as if appeals in the same causes had been made to the Queen in Chancery, the High Court of Admiralty, or the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Causes. The 12th section of this Act provided, that all costs, as well of defending any decree or sentence appealed from as of prosecuting any appeal, or in any manner intervening in any cause of appeal, and all costs in the Court below, and the costs of opposing any matter referred to the Judicial Committee, and the costs of all such issues as should be tried by direction of the said Judicial Committee respecting any appeal, should be awarded by the Judicial Committee, and taxed as provided by the 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 41. The 15th section empowered the Judicial Committee to make rules, orders, and regulations, respecting the practice and mode of proceeding in all appeals, and from time to time to repeal or alter such rules, orders, or regulations; provided always that no such rules, orders, or regulations, should be enforced, until approved of by Her Majesty in Council.

The 7th and 8th Vict. c. 69, was passed in the year 1844, for the purpose of amending the 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 41, and extending the jurisdiction and powers of the Judicial Committee. This Act made but little alteration as regards Indian appeals; among other things, it enacted that Her Majesty by Order in Council, might provide for the admission of an appeal from any British Colony or Possession abroad, although there should not be a Court of Error or Appeal in such Colony or Possession, and might amend, alter, or revoke such Orders. By the 9th section of this Act the Judicial Committee were empowered to proceed to the hearing and reporting of appeals, the petition of which should be presented and duly lodged with the Clerk of the Privy Council, without any special order of reference. By the 10th section the Judicial Committee were empowered to require notes of evidence to be taken in the Courts of any Colony, or Foreign Settlement, or Foreign Dominion of the Crown; and the 11th section provided that the Judicial Committee might make rules, to be binding upon such Courts, requiring the Judges' notes of evidence, and of the reasons given by the Judges of such Courts, for or against the judgment pronounced.¹

Nothing was specially provided in these two last Acts for the regulation of Indian appeals, and all the earlier proceedings were taken according to the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 41, and the Order in Council of the 16th April 1838; but when the old appeals had been for the most part heard, it was determined to take the matter out of the hands of the East-India Company, and, in appeals from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, admitted by such Courts after the 1st January 1846, to leave the appellants in India to appoint Agents and Counsel in England to conduct their causes. For this purpose the 8th & 9th Vict. c. 30, was passed in 1845, and it is under this Act that appeals are now instituted, reserving of course with regard to their admission and the procedure, such portions of the previous Statutes and orders as are not repealed², and relate generally or specifically to appeals from India.

I give this Act verbatim, as it is important and of no great length.

² The 8th & 9th Vict. c. 30, specially repeals the 22d section of the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 41, and, virtually, Rules 4, 5, and 6, of the Order in Council of the 10th April 1838.

“An Act to amend an Act passed in the Third and Fourth Years of the Reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled An Act for the better Administration of Justice in His Majesty's Privy Council.

“WHEREAS by an Act passed in the Session held in the third and fourth years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled An Act for the better Administration of Justice in His Majesty's Privy Council, after reciting that various appeals to His Majesty in Council from the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at the several Presidencies of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, in the East Indies, had been admitted by the said Courts, and the transcripts of the proceedings in appeal had been from time to time transmitted under the seal of the said Courts through the East-India Company, then called the United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies, to the Office of His Majesty's Privy Council, but that the suitors in the causes so appealed had not taken the necessary measures to bring the same to a hearing, it was enacted that it should be lawful for His Majesty in Council to give such directions to the said Company and other persons, for the purpose of bringing to a hearing before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council the several cases appealed or thereafter to be appealed to His Majesty in Council, from the several Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in the East Indies, and for appointing Agents and Counsel for the different parties in such appeals, and to make such Orders for the security and payment of the costs thereof as His said Majesty in Council should think fit, and thereupon such appeals should be heard and reported on to His Majesty in Council, and should be by His Majesty in Council determined, in the same manner, and the Judgments, Orders, and Decrees of His Majesty in Council thereon should be of the same force and effect, as if the same had been brought to a hearing by the direction of the parties appealing, in the usual course of proceeding: provided always, that such last-mentioned powers should not extend to any appeals from the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, other than appeals in which no proceedings then had been or should thereafter be taken in England on either side for a period of two years subsequent to the admission of the appeal by such Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut: And whereas by certain Orders in Council made under certain powers contained in the said Act, provision is made for registering in the Council Office the arrival in this country of the transcripts of the proceedings in appeals from the said Courts: And whereas it is considered advisable that the said Act should be amended in manner hereinafter mentioned: Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the hereinbefore recited provisions of the said Act shall not apply to the case of an appeal which shall be admitted by any of the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

"II. And be it enacted, that any appeal to be admitted by any of the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut after the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and forty-six shall be considered and be held to be abandoned and withdrawn by consent of the parties thereto, unless some proceedings shall be taken in England in the same by one or more of the parties thereto within two years after Registration at the Council Office of the arrival of the transcript; and any such appeal as aforesaid shall be held to be abandoned and withdrawn in like manner under any other circumstances which Her Majesty in Council may from time to time by any Orders or Rules in that behalf direct to be taken and considered as a withdrawal thereof; and the East-India Company are hereby required from time to time to ascertain and certify to the proper Courts in the East Indies all appeals which may from time to time become abandoned and dropped under the provisions of this clause."

Under these Statutes and Orders, passed since the establishment of the Judicial Committee by the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 41, the ordinary course of proceeding is as follows: the general rules relating to appeals from the Plantations, Colonies, and Settlements abroad, being applicable to Indian appeals when they are not specially otherwise regulated.¹

As a matter of course, no appeal will be admitted by the Judicial Committee which does not come within the restrictions of the Statutes and Orders. With regard to the amount in dispute, no consolidation of suits will be allowed; and in one instance, where two suits had been brought for sums due on the same account, each of which was under the legal appealable amount, it was held, in opposition to the opinion of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that such suits could not be consolidated for the purpose of appeal, though the original severance of them was contrary to the plaintiff's instructions, and the aggregate amount exceeded the requisite sum.²

On the arrival of the transcript it is to be duly registered in the Privy Council Office; and, by a recent direction of the Judicial Committee, the original transcript is to be deposited in the custody of the Clerk of Appeals in that department, where copies of these documents may be obtained by the Solicitors conducting these appeals, on payment of the stationer's charges for copying. This having been done, the Agent of the appellant has first to prepare and lodge the petition of appeal in the Privy Council Office, and a memorandum of the lodgment will be made by the proper Officer. This petition may be engrossed on paper, and need not be signed either by Counsel or Solicitor, the mere endorsement of the Solicitor's name on the back of the appeal being considered sufficient without any signature. The Solicitor of an appeal before the Judicial Committee cannot be changed without a direct application from the party, or from his Attorney duly authorised.

Although the Courts in India should have admitted a party to appeal in England, in formâ pauperis, it seems that the appellant ought to make a special application to the Queen in Council for leave to prosecute such appeal in formâ pauperis.¹

The time limited by the 8th and 9th Vict. c. 30 for presenting appeals from the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in the Privy Council Office, is, as we have seen, two years from the date of the registration at the Council Office of the arrival of the transcript, after which time, if no proceedings have been taken by any of the parties, the appeal shall be held to be abandoned. Under especial circumstances, however, the Judicial Committee will permit an appeal not entered within the limited period, to be entered, upon a statement by petition to the Queen of the cause of delay, verified by an affidavit; and where an appeal had been dismissed for want of prosecution, no step having been taken in it for ten years, it was restored, upon petition to the King in Council, the appellant paying the costs of dismissal and restoration, it appearing that the appellant was ignorant of the proceedings necessary to be taken in this country, and that, though after a lapse of years, he had instructed a commercial house in Calcutta to prosecute the appeal, but whose agent in England having become insolvent, no proceedings had been taken to bring the case to a hearing.²

It seems that according to the Statutes and Orders in Council, when once an appeal from a decision of the Supreme Courts in India has been admitted and transmitted to this country, no lapse of time is sufficient to entitle the respondent to have the appeal dismissed. But if no petition of appeal have been lodged within a year and a day from the date of the judgment of a Supreme Court appealed from, the respondent may move to dismiss the appeal for non-prosecution.

On the respondent appearing to answer, the Clerk of Appeals enters a memorandum of his appearance in the Privy Council Office. Both parties then, supposing the respondent's appearance be voluntary, proceed to prepare printed cases stating their claims, and setting out the circumstances of the case, together with their reasons why the decision of the Court below should be affirmed or reversed. These printed cases are signed by Counsel, and forty copies are required to be lodged under seal in the Privy Council Office. Extra copies are of course required by the Counsel and Solicitors, and for reference.

In all appeals from India it has been usual, and indeed has been found necessary, to print an Appendix containing all the pleadings in the Courts below, together with the evidence and such documents and explanatory matter as are thought requisite for the elucidation of the case. The Appendix should be accompanied by an Index, shewing what papers transmitted to England in the transcript have been printed in the Appendix, and pointing out such as have been omitted as unimportant.

These Appendices are now required to be joint by the following Order in Council, issued by the Judicial Committee on the 3d July 1838:—

“The Lords of the Judicial Committee were this day pleased to order, that all printed cases of appeals lodged at the Council Office which have an Appendix appended, shall be accompanied with a joint Appendix of the documents, or other papers referred to in the cases of the parties; and that no party shall be entitled to set down his cause for hearing upon lodging a separate Appendix, unless it be accompanied by an affidavit of the refusal of the opposite party to unite in a joint Appendix.”

There is no stipulated time for lodging the printed cases; but it is a rule that the party (whether appellant or respondent) who first deposits his printed case in the Council Office, is entitled to obtain an order requiring his opponent to lodge his printed case within one month from the date of service of the order.

At the end of the month a peremptory order may be obtained, on affidavit of service of the first order and the non-compliance therewith, requiring the delivery of the printed case peremptorily within a fortnight from the service of such peremptory order; and this last order not having been attended to, the party who has lodged his case and obtained and served the peremptory order, may, on application for that purpose, have the cause set down for hearing ex-parte. This enables the party obtaining and serving such peremptory order to be heard ex-parte in his turn, according as the appeal is set down in the cause list.

By an Order in Council dated the 23d February 1828, appeals are ordered to take precedence according to the order in which they are ready for hearing, and not according to the order in which the first printed case is lodged upon each appeal.

An appeal having been set down to be heard ex-parte does not foreclose the other party, for should he lodge his printed case within a reasonable time before the day appointed for hearing the appeal, he will not be excluded; in the event, however, of his delaying to lodge his printed case so long as to interfere with the proper distribution of the copies among the members of the Court, the hearing will be postponed to the next sitting of the Judicial Committee.

If the printed cases be deposited on both sides within the usual time, the appeal will be set down for hearing: a certain number of copies of the cases are usually exchanged between the Solicitors of the respective parties on either side.

All that has been as yet stated relates to an appeal in which the respondent makes a voluntary appearance; in the event of his not appearing, the Court will issue orders requiring his appearance; but the appellant, to be entitled to such orders, must not only have exhibited his appeal, but also have lodged his printed case. Having done this, he may obtain, on petition, from the Lords of the Judicial Committee, an order of summons requiring the respondent to appear within two months. Personal service of this order on the respondent is not requisite, it is sufficient to affix it on the Royal Exchange and Lloyd's Coffee-house in the City of London.

The time limited by this order having elapsed without the respondent appearing, the appellant, upon affidavit of due publication, will be entitled to a peremptory order requiring peremptorily his appearance within six weeks, which peremptory order must be affixed at the places above mentioned.

If before or at the end of six weeks the respondent appear, the appellant may take out an order requiring him to lodge his printed case within a month; and on his failing so to do, the respondent may then be required by a peremptory order to put in his case peremptorily within a fortnight, subject to a hearing ex-parte in case of default.

Should the respondent not comply with the peremptory order requiring his appearance, the appellant, is entitled on affidavit of publication, to make an application at the end of the time limited by such order, to have the cause set down for hearing ex-parte.

The Judicial Committee, however, in a late case, would not hear an appeal ex-parte, without evidence that the respondent had been served personally with notice that the appeal was pending, and ordered the appeal to stand over, with leave to the appellant to proceed in the Court below, to render the service of such notice effectual.¹ And in another and more recent case, where no appearance had been entered by the respondent to an appeal, and the appellant was ready to lodge his printed case for hearing, the Judicial Committee, on the application of the appellant, made an order, in the month of July 1846, that the respondent should be served with notice that unless he brought in his case without delay the appeal would be heard ex-parte, and gave the appellant liberty to proceed in the Court below to render such service effectual; and the Court was ordered to certify to the Judicial Committee what had been done with respect to the same. The notice was accordingly personally served in India upon the representatives of the respondent, he having died pending the appeal; and no appearance being entered by the respondents, the appeal came on for hearing ex-parte in the month of February 1847.² But in these cases it must be remarked, that the Court ordered personal service on the respondents of the notice to appear, because it was supposed they might have relied on the appeals being presented for them by the East-India Company.

In the case of an appeal being set down for hearing ex-parte for non-appearance, as in that of default being made in lodging the printed cases, the defaulter may be let in on lodging his printed case before the hearing.

The cause having been set down in the list, comes on in its turn to be argued by Counsel at the bar of the Judicial Committee; and notice of the day fixed for such hearing is sent to the respective Agents from the Privy Council Office.

Two Counsel only are heard on each side by the Judicial Committee when the appeal is argued; but when there are separate interests, such may be represented by separate Counsel. When cross appeals have been put in, two replies have been heard.

The Report made by the Judicial Committee is the judgment of the whole Court or of the majority; where a difference of opinion arises the sentiments of the minority are not divulged.

When the Lords agree to recommend that the decree appealed from should be varied, or that another decree should be made instead, it is usual to direct the parties to draw up the minutes of the proposed decree on the principles laid down by their Lordships; and these minutes being agreed to and signed by the Counsel or Agents of the parties, are incorporated in the Report of the Committee, and form the basis of the Order in Council which finally decides the appeal.

The reasons on which the Report is founded are always stated at length, and are generally embodied in a written judgment, which is submitted to all the members of the Judicial Committee who have heard the appeal. These reasons, however, though read in the Council Chamber, are not inserted in their Lordships' Report to the Queen.

At the first Council after the Report has been read in Court, it is submitted to the Queen for approval, and an Order is drawn up reciting and approving the Report, and giving judgment accordingly, which the Court below is directed to carry into execution. This Order is afterwards given to the Agent of the successful party.

A decree may be occasionally taken by consent, in which case no argument is necessary; but the Report to the Queen states that the decree is by consent.

When costs are awarded they are taxed by the Clerk of Appeals of the Judicial Committee.

An appeal may be sometimes dismissed with costs, on the ground of irregularity; but on the payment of such costs and amending the irregularity, the party in default may be re-admitted to appeal.

It may occasionally happen that the appellant having duly lodged his petition of appeal in the Privy Council Office, may neglect to deliver in his printed case: in such case the respondent may petition the Queen in Council, praying the dismissal of the appeal with costs. It is said, however, though it has never been established by judicial authority, that the respondent, to have the benefit of such petition, must first deposit his own printed case in the Council Office.

If such petition to dismiss be lodged and the appeal be shortly after presented, both parties are entitled to be heard before the Court; and if the appellant prove to their Lordships a reasonable cause for delay, the appeal will be allowed on payment to the petitioner of the costs of the petition.

When the Court below has refused to admit an appeal to the Queen in Council, the complainant may prefer his petition, and, shewing good cause, may obtain leave to appeal, upon entering into security, in England, to prosecute the appeal.

Affidavits are in this instance required, and some statement as regards merits.

If an application for the re-admission of an appeal dismissed for non-prosecution, or for the admission of one refused to be admitted by the Court below, be granted, and no opposition be tendered by the other party at the time, such other party coming in subsequently, and shewing that the Court had been induced so to re-admit or admit such appeal by misrepresentation, the Judicial Committee may recommend the Queen to revoke her order on that ground, or the objection to the right of appeal may be taken at the hearing.

If an appeal be allowed by the Court below, and referred by Her Majesty to the Judicial Committee for adjudication in the ordinary way, their Lordships, though of opinion that there existed no right of appeal, may, if they should think the case fitted for the allowance of a special appeal, and having heard the case on its merits, direct a petition for special leave to appeal to be presented to Her Majesty, and on its being referred to them, may recommend the allowance thereof, and that the appeal be placed in the same plight and condition as that originally referred to them.¹

Applications for re-hearings will not be entertained after the Report of the Judicial Committee has been approved by Her Majesty in Council.

The reference to the Queen having once been made, petitions on all interlocutory matters, such as orders for appearance, for cases, for taxation, for payment of costs &c., must be addressed to the Judicial Committee, and not to the Queen in Council, who in such matters proceed by making a Committee Order or Minute, without reporting to Her Majesty.

The expense of an appeal to England of course varies most materially, according to the circumstances of the case, the extent of the proceedings in the lower Courts, and the bulk of the documentary and other evidence. The fees to Counsel are proportionate to the magnitude of the case, but those of Solicitors, and the usual fees in the Privy Council Office, are fixed by an Order in Council.²

‘The Lords of the Judicial Committee having taken into consideration the scale on which the costs of appeals, and other matters referred by your Majesty to this Committee, are usually taxed by the Masters of the Court of Queen’s Bench, or other persons to whom their Lordships have, from time to time, referred the same, their Lordships agree humbly to represent to your Majesty, that it is expedient that the scale of costs hitherto allowed in the said proceedings before this Committee should be reduced; and their Lordships recommend that, provisionally, and until further consideration, such costs in all appeals or matters, not being appeals from the Courts of Ecclesiastical or Admiralty Jurisdiction, should be taxed and allowed by all such taxing officers as shall hereafter be directed to ascertain and report the same to the Board, according to the Schedule hereunto annexed; and that this rate of charges should be observed by Solicitors conducting business before this Committee.’

3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 85, and the Acts of the Legislative Council of India passed subsequently to that Statute. This Law is the existing general law of all the British territories in India, excepting such portions as are subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts, and is administered in the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company, both to Natives and Europeans; British subjects being, however, excepted so far as relates to the criminal law. The Supreme Courts also take judicial notice of such of the Regulations as have been registered in such Courts, and alter the Common Law of England, together with such Acts of Government as alter the same Law, or are specially applicable to the same Courts, or to matters within their jurisdiction.¹

2. The Native Laws. These may be divided into:—

(1.) The Hindú Civil Law so far as the same is reserved to the Hindú inhabitants of India, by the Statutes, Charters, and Regulations. This law is administered both in the Supreme Courts, and in those of the Honourable East-India Company.

(2.) The Muhammadan Civil Law as reserved by the same Statutes, Charters, and Regulations, which is administered to Muhammadan inhabitants of India in both the Queen's Courts and the Sudder and Mofussil Courts; and the Muhammadan Criminal Law, which is administered, under certain restrictions, in the Company's Courts of Criminal Judicature in the Presidencies of Bengal and Madras, but has been superseded by a written code in the Criminal Courts of the Bombay Presidency.

(3.) The Laws and Customs of those Natives of India who are neither Hindús nor Muhammadans. These laws and customs so far as they can be ascertained, are administered in some civil matters in the Sudder and Mofussil Courts, in suits between such native parties, by a liberal construction of the wording of the Regulations.

1. THE LAW ENACTED BY THE REGULATIONS AND ACTS OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

Sir James Mackintosh says, "There is but one way of forming a civil code, either consistent with common sense, or that has been ever practised in any country; namely, that of gradually building up the law, in proportion as the facts arise which it is to regulate."¹ This remark is especially applicable to British India, where it would at any time have been utterly impossible at once to have formed or adapted a code which would have been suited to its requirements.

From the date of the battle of Plassey in 1757, down to the subjugation of the Panjáb in our own times, new provinces and new nations have constantly and successively been brought under British rule, either by cession or conquest. They have been found to possess different laws and customs, and distinct and various rights of property; and they have consequently presented new facts requiring the introduction of fresh laws into our Codes for their government. These fresh laws were in many instances rendered inapplicable by the gradual introduction of civilization and the amelioration of the condition of the natives, and they were in such cases abolished accordingly; and this is one of the principal causes why the Codes of Regulation Law seem, at first sight, to be an incongruous and indigested mass.

The apparent defects of the Regulation Law will, however, in a great measure disappear on a closer examination; and, if we except some sweeping enactments of the earlier Indian legislators, who cut the Gordian knot instead of solving the riddle, the Regulations will be found to have been formed, modified, and abrogated, according to the peculiar circumstances of time and place, with an ability and moderation which reflects equal honour on the lawgivers themselves and the country which gave them birth.

The gradual building up of the law which has taken place in India, together with the variety of rights to be provided for, the diversity of the people to be governed, and of the laws to be administered, has unavoidably rendered the study of the Regulations both intricate and difficult; and on this account some hasty and thoughtless persons have been induced to pass an indiscriminate censure upon a system which they, possibly, wanted time or industry to acquire, or capacity to understand. It is nowhere pretended that the Codes enacted by the Governments of India are perfect; but the candid inquirer will pause and examine before he condemns them for obscurity or insufficiency, and will rather admire how, under such a complication of difficulties, a system of laws could have been formed providing so admirably for contingencies which apparently no human forethought could have anticipated, that has worked so well in practice, and that has resulted in the prosperity and good government so eminently conspicuous throughout the vast territories of our Indian Empire.

Many years ago that great statesman the Marquis of Wellesley spoke of the code of Bengal Regulations, upon which those of Madras and Bombay are based, in the following words:—"Subject to the common imperfection of every human institution, this system of laws is approved by practical experience, (the surest test of human legislation,) and contains an active principle of continual revision, which affords the best security for progressive amendment. It is not the effusion of vain theory, issuing from speculative principles, and directed to visionary objects of impracticable perfection; but the solid work of plain, deliberate, practical benevolence; the legitimate offspring of genuine wisdom and pure virtue. The excellence of the general spirit of these laws is attested by the noblest proof of just, wise, and honest government; by the restoration of happiness, tranquillity, and security, to an oppressed and suffering people; and by the revival of agriculture, commerce, manufacture, and general opulence, in a declining and impoverished country."¹

This is high praise. It is true that it was bestowed comparatively but a few years after the foundation of the Bengal Code by Lord Cornwallis; but an opinion from so great an authority must always command our respect; and it has been fully justified by a lengthened application of the test alluded to by the noble orator: practical experience has shewn us that the system was well conceived and well applied: through a long series of years it has been marked by progressive improvements; and British India exhibits at the present day, though on a far grander scale, the same prosperous results that called forth Lord Wellesley's admiration nearly half a century ago.

I shall now give a short statement of the Statutes under which the Regulation law generally, was founded and formed.

Until the year 1793 no general Code of Regulations was enacted for the government of India, though long previously to that time, and as early as 1772, when Warren Hastings was appointed Governor of Bengal, many rules and orders had been made by the Government of that Presidency.

The Regulating Act, the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, which was passed in 1773, first laid down specific laws for the Government of Indian affairs, and for the appointment of a Governor-General and Council. Sections 36 and 37 of that Statute empowered the said Governor-General and Council to make and issue such Rules, Ordinances, and Regulations, for the good order and civil government of the United Company's Settlement at Fort William in Bengal, and all places subordinate thereto, as should be deemed just and reasonable, and not repugnant to the laws of the realm; and to enforce them by reasonable fines and forfeitures: with a proviso, however, that such Regulations should not be valid unless registered in the Supreme Court of Judicature to be established under the said Statute.

An appeal lay from these Regulations to the King in Council; and even without an appeal His Majesty was empowered to set them aside by his sign manual.

By a subsequent Statute, the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, s. 23, passed in 1781, the Governor-General and Council were empowered to frame Regulations for the Provincial Courts, and Councils, subject to revision by the executive Government of England.

Several Regulations were accordingly passed, under the authority of these Statutes, for the administration of justice and the collection of the revenue; the first receiving the sanction of the Bengal Government on the 17th of April 1780. Many of these, however, existed only in manuscript; and although others were printed, and some translated into the native languages, still these were chiefly on detached papers not easy of reference even to the officers of Government, and of course difficult to be obtained in a collected form; whilst such as were not translated into the languages of the country were quite inaccessible to the natives.

The present systems of Regulation law which are now current throughout India may be said to owe their origin to the political wisdom of the Marquis Cornwallis, during whose first government¹ was passed the celebrated Regulation XII. of ¹ The Members of the Bengal Council at this period deserve to be honourably recorded; these were Peter Speke, Esq., William Cowper, Esq., and Thomas Graham, Esq.

1793¹, entitled, "A Regulation for forming into a regular Code all Regulations that may be enacted for the Internal Government of the British Territories in Bengal." The preamble to this Regulation states, that "It is essential to the future prosperity of the British territories in Bengal, that all Regulations which may be passed by Government, affecting in any respect the rights, persons, or property of their subjects, should be formed into a regular Code, and printed, with translations in the country languages; that the grounds on which each Regulation may be enacted should be prefixed to it; and that the Courts of Justice should be bound to regulate their decisions by the rules and ordinances which those Regulations may contain. A Code of Regulations framed upon the above principles, will enable individuals to render themselves acquainted with the laws upon which the security of the many inestimable privileges and immunities granted to them by the British Government depends, and the mode of obtaining speedy redress against every infringement of them; the Courts of Justice will be able to apply the Regulations according to their intent and import; future administrations will have the means of judging how far Regulations have been productive of the desired effect, and, when necessary, to modify or alter them as from experience may be found advisable; new Regulations will not be made, nor those which may exist be repealed, without due deliberation; and the causes of the future decline or prosperity of these provinces will always be traceable in the Code to their source."

The tenour, and for the most part the very terms of this important Regulation, were afterwards adopted into a Statute, which was passed in 1797, confirming the power of making local laws already vested in the Governor-General in Council. This Statute, the 37th Geo. III. c. 142, by section 8 enacted that all Regulations which should be issued and framed by the Governor-General in Council at Fort William in Bengal, affecting the rights, persons, or property of the natives, or of any other individuals who might be amenable to the Provincial Courts of Justice, should be registered in the Judicial Department, and formed into a regular Code, and printed, with translations in the country languages; and that the grounds of each Regulation should be prefixed to it; and all the Provincial Courts of Judicature should be bound by, and regulate their decisions by, such rules and ordinances as should be contained in the said Regulations. The same section also enacted, that the said Governor-General in Council should annually transmit to the Court of Directors of the East-India Company ten copies of such Regulations as might be passed in each year, and the same number to the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India.

The 18th and 19th sections of the 39th & 40th Geo. III. c. 79, passed in 1800, empowered the Governor-General and Council to order corporal punishment for breach of the Rules and Regulations made under the 13th Geo. III. c. 63; and the 20th section of the same Statute rendered the Province of Benares, and all provinces or districts thereafter to be annexed or made subject to the Bengal Presidency, subject to such Regulations as the Governor-General and Council of Fort William had framed or might thereafter frame.

At Madras, Regulations were made under the authority of the 39th & 40th Geo. III. c. 79, the 11th section empowering the Governor in Council at Fort St. George to frame Regulations for the Provincial Courts and Councils at that Presidency; and Regulation I. of 1802, ordering the formation of a regular Code according to the plan adopted in Bengal, was framed upon the Bengal Regulation XLI. of 1793.

The right of the Bombay Government to make Regulations had been held to stand inferred from, and to be recognized by, the 11th section of the 37th Geo. III. c. 142¹; but it was more formally conferred by the 47th Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 68, s. 3, passed in 1807. Under the inference above mentioned, and by the recommendation of the Governor-General and Council, Regulations were made at Bombay, commencing in the year 1799; Regulation I. of which year provided for the formation of a Code, and was taken with but little alteration from Regulation XLI. of the Bengal Code.

Section I. of the 47th Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 68, empowered the Governors in Council to make Regulations for the good order and government of the towns of Madras, Bombay, and their dependencies.

The 53d Geo. III. c. 155, s. 66, enacted that copies of all Regulations made under the 37th Geo. III. c. 142; the 39th & 40th Geo. III. c. 79; and the 47th Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 68, should be laid annually before Parliament; and sections 98, 99, 100, empowered the Governor-General and Governors in Council, in their respective Presidencies, with the sanction of the Court of Directors and the Board of Controul, to impose duties and taxes within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay; for the enforcing of which taxes Regulations were to be made by the Governor-General and Governors in Council in the same manner as other Regulations were made; and all such Regulations were directed to be taken notice of, without being specially pleaded, in His Majesty's Courts at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay; and all persons were empowered to proceed in such Courts for the enforcement of such Regulations.

The powers given by the above Statutes are not very well defined. To use the words of Sir Charles Grey, C. J.—“The exercise of one of them has been extensive beyond what seems to have been at first foreseen by the Legislature; and it is not that which in 1773 was designed to be the only one, which has in fact been the most considerable. That which was established by the 13th Geo. III. c. 63 has been almost a barren branch; and that which was given in 1781, expressly for the purpose of making limited rules of practice for Provincial Courts, has produced a new and extensive system of Laws, for a large portion of the human race.”¹

With regard to the translations of the Regulations into the country languages, the principle of which was actually opposed in sober seriousness by the notorious Francis, in his recommendation to oblige the natives of India to *learn English*¹, it would be unnecessary to point out the wisdom or utility. Justinian himself published in Greek because it was the most generally understood language.² No reasonable person will refuse to admit the absolute necessity of such translations, previously to the enforcement of the laws which were framed for the government of the natives in the earlier stages of our administration, whatever may be the case at the present time.

According to the provisions above recapitulated, Regulations were successively enacted at the three Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, from the years 1780, 1802, and 1799 respectively.

These Regulations, where not repealed, are still in force, and form three separate Codes ; First, that of Bengal, commencing in 1793 ; Secondly, that of Madras, first formed in 1802, before which time no Regulations were passed in that Presidency ; and Thirdly, the Bombay Code, which dates its origin, as it now stands, from the year 1827, when all the previous Regulations passed for the Bombay Presidency, from 1799 up to that period, were rescinded, and the present Code originated. Since the month of August in the year 1834, when Regulation II. of the Madras Code of that year received the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, no further Regulations were passed, their place being supplied by the Acts of the Legislative Council of India, under the requirements of the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 85 : these Acts apply to the whole of the British territories in India, unless otherwise specified. It must, however, be remembered that they do not supersede or abolish the old Codes of law, except in specified instances, and that they are expressly passed in continuation of the Regulations of the Supreme Government.

By the 39th section of the 3d & 4th Will. IV. c. 85, the superintendence, direction, and controul, of the whole civil and military Government of the British territories and revenues in India became vested in the Governor-General and Councillors, to be styled "the Governor-General of India in Council;" and by the next following section it was provided that the said Council should consist of four ordinary members, instead of three as formerly; and that of such four, three should be, or have been, servants of, or appointed by, the East-India Company; and that the fourth should be appointed, from amongst persons who should not be servants of the said Company, by the Court of Directors, subject to the approbation of His Majesty; and that such member should not sit or vote in the said Council, except at meetings thereof for making Laws and Regulations.¹ The 43d section of the same Statute empowered the said Governor-General in Council to legislate for India, by repealing, amending, or altering, former or future Laws and Regulations, and by making Laws and Regulations "for all persons, whether British or Native, foreigners or others, and for all Courts of Justice, whether established by His Majesty's Charters or otherwise, and the jurisdictions thereof, and for all places and things whatsoever, within and throughout the whole and every part of the British territories in India, and for all servants of the said Company within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with the said Company." The next section enacted that such Laws and Regulations should be repealed, if disallowed by the Court of Directors at home. The 45th section provided, that until such Laws should be repealed by the home authorities, they should be operative; so that Laws for taxation no longer require the previous sanction of the Court of Directors. It was also declared by the last-mentioned section, that such Laws and Regulations should have the force of Acts of Parliament, and that their registration and publication in any Court of Justice should be unnecessary. By the 51st section it was enacted that nothing in the said Statute should affect the right of Parliament to legislate for India; and all Laws and Regulations made by the Legislative Council were required to be transmitted to England, and laid before both Houses of Parliament.

The restriction of the legislative power to a Council at the chief Presidency is undoubtedly a great improvement on the former plan, inasmuch as it secures uniformity in the system of legislation, and renders unnecessary the constant re-enactment of different Laws at the several Presidencies, when such Laws are applicable to the whole of British India. The principle which governs the present system is, however, essentially the same that has prevailed throughout the formation of the three Codes of Regulations.

A further alteration was made in the legislative system of India by the 53d section of the last-mentioned Statute; and as it is connected in a great measure with the Acts of the Legislative Council, it may properly be noticed in this place. This section enacted, that a Law Commission should be appointed by the Governor-General in Council to inquire into the jurisdiction, powers, and rules, of the existing Courts of Justice and Police establishments, and into the nature and operation of all Laws prevailing in any part of the British territories in India; and to make reports thereon, and suggest alterations, due regard being had to the distinction of casts, difference of religion, and the manners and opinions prevailing among different races and in different parts of the said territories.

Upon these inquiries, reports, and suggestions, the Acts of the Legislative Council of India have been in many instances based; and there is no doubt but that, if fully carried out, no plan could well have been devised more suited to prepare the way for salutary reform, and to lighten the labour of the legislative department of Government. The Reports of the Indian-Law Commissioners are printed periodically, by order of the House of Commons, and fill several large folio volumes; their perusal will, however, amply repay the student for the trouble of wading through some thousands of pages, since they comprise numerous communications from the most learned and experienced persons in India in every department, embodying their opinions on many topics of the highest interest, which probably would otherwise never have been recorded. These Reports, of necessity, offer all the inconveniences attendant upon the textual reproduction of official correspondence; but the recent appearance of a comprehensive Index, published by order of the House of Commons, has obviated, in a great measure, the difficulty of reference.

In conclusion of the present division of this section, I shall enumerate those works which tend to facilitate the study of the Law enacted by the Regulations and the Acts of the Legislative Council; the unrevoked Regulations of the three Presidencies remaining in force, as has been already mentioned, within the limits of the respective Presidencies, and forming, together with the Acts of the Legislative Council, the general subsisting Law throughout the British territories in India.

The Regulations themselves have been published at different times, and in various forms, both in India and in this country; those passed at each Presidency having been printed separately, by order of the Governments in India or of the Honourable Court of Directors. From the year 1814, the Regulations of all the three Presidencies, passed in, and subsequently to, that year, appeared concurrently, printed by order of the House of Commons. Various translations of the Regulations in the native languages were from time to time published by order of the Governments in India, but these it will be unnecessary in this place to mention more particularly.

In 1807 Sir James E. Colebrooke published a Digest of the Civil Regulations of the Presidency of Bengal from the years 1793 to 1806, in two folio volumes, together with a Supplement forming a third volume.

In 1807—1809 appeared the admirable analysis of the Bengal Regulations by Mr. John Herbert Harington, formerly Chief Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta ; and in the year 1821 a second edition of the first volume, comprising the first and second parts of the work, and enriched with copious Notes and additions, was published in London under the patronage of the Court of Directors. It is scarcely possible to speak too highly of this analysis, and it justly occupies the very first place as an authority. The arrangement throughout the work is clear and simple, and the Notes which are added afford, in every instance, the greatest assistance to the student in the elucidation of the subject-matter of the text. In no instance, probably, has the patronage of the East-India Company been more worthily bestowed than upon Mr. Harington's work ; and it is only to be regretted that the second and revised edition of the two latter volumes was never published. Imperfect though it be, however, and though it extends no later than the year 1821, no one who is desirous of obtaining a knowledge of the law of Bengal should omit to peruse it with the utmost attention. A Persian translation of Mr. Harington's analysis was made by Major Ouseley, and published at Calcutta in the year 1840¹: it is a most useful publication so far as it goes, as it affords to those natives who are ignorant of our language the means of gaining a perfect insight into the history and constitution of our system of legislation for India, and a knowledge of a large body of the Laws themselves.

An Abstract of the Regulations enacted for the Provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, in four 4to. volumes, originally compiled by Mr. Blunt, and continued by Mr. H. Shakespear, was printed at Calcutta in 1824—1828.

Mr. Dale's Alphabetical Index to the Regulations of Government for the territories under the Presidency of Bengal was published, with an Appendix, in 1830: it is a useful work, but has been superseded by Mr. Fenwick's more recent publication of the same nature, mentioned below.

Mr. Richard Clarke is the author of a concise Abstract of the Bengal Regulations from 1793 to 1831, which forms the sixth Appendix to the Minutes of Evidence taken before the Judicial Subcommittee of the House of Commons in the year 1832. The same gentleman also published, in 1840, a collection of the Bengal Regulations respecting Zamíndarí and Lákhiráj property. This collection, which was printed by the authority of the Honourable Court of Directors, is of the highest interest, as it brings together, arranged under separate heads, such of the enactments of the Bengal Government as affect the possession and transfer of revenue property, or, as it is ordinarily termed in the Regulations which established the permanent settlement, property in land. Mr. Clarke published the present work chiefly for reference upon appeals to the Queen in Council, the right to Zamíndarí property forming the subject of many of the most important appeals from the Courts of the East-India Company, especially those from Bengal.

An Abstract of the Bengal Civil Regulations was published by Mr. Augustus Prinsep. I have never met with a copy of this work, but it is stated to be a very valuable and well-executed compilation.¹ A Hindí translation of Mr. Prinsep's Abstract was published at Dehli in 1843.²

In the year 1840 Mr. Marshman produced his Guide to the Civil Law of the Presidency of Fort William, which contains all the unrepealed Regulations, Acts, Constructions, and Circular Orders of Government relating to the subject. This is a most useful and comprehensive work, but it is to be regretted that it has not the advantage of an Index. A Hindí translation of this work, by the Professors of the Dehli College, was published in 1843, comprising all the Regulations, abstracts of Constructions, and Circular Government Orders, contained in Mr. Marshman's work, and continued to November 1843; abstracts of some of the Acts of the Legislative Council, and of the Regulations relative to the resumption of rent-free tenures ; together with an Epitome of the Hindú and Muhammadan Laws, from the works of Sir W. II. Macnaghten.¹ Mr. Marshman also published a Guide to the Revenue Regulations in the year 1835.

Mr. Fulwar Skipwith's Magistrates' Guide, which is an abridgement of the Criminal Regulations and Acts, and contains the Circular Orders and Constructions of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut in Bengal up to August 1843, is a most useful book in the criminal department.

In the year 1840 Mr. A. D. Campbell published at Madras a collection of the Regulations of the Madras Presidency from the year 1802, with a Synopsis and Notes on the Code, and mentioning all those Regulations that have been partially or wholly rescinded. This collection was republished in 1843, together with an enlarged Synopsis and a copious Index.

A Digest of the Criminal Law of the Presidency of Fort William, by Mr. Beaufort, of the Bengal Civil Service, was published at Calcutta in the year 1846: it is spoken of in the highest terms by several writers, but I have not been able to discover any copy of it in this country.

In the year 1848 Mr. Baynes, the Civil and Sessions Judge of Madura, published a treatise on the Criminal Law of the Madras Presidency, as contained in the existing Regulations and Acts. This work is preceded by a concise tabular statement of crimes and punishments; and contains, in addition, the Circular Orders of the Foujdary Adawlut from 1805 to February 1848.

Mr. Richard Clarke, whose works on the Regulation Law have been already mentioned, published, in 1848, an edition in 4to. of the Regulations of the Government of Fort St. George, in force at the end of the year 1847, together with the Acts of Government in force at that Presidency. In this edition Mr. Clarke has omitted all enactments which are no longer in operation, "except in a very few instances, where a section or clause, though rescinded or superseded, has been referred to in a subsequent Regulation, or where a provision in force during a certain period might occasionally require to be consulted in order to establish the admissibility of evidence."¹ Mr. Clarke has added a classified list of Titles, and a copious Index. This edition of the Madras Regulations, which is published by the authority of the Honourable Court of Directors, will be followed by new editions of the Regulations and Acts in force at the other Presidencies; and the entire work, when completed, will offer an uniform and compact edition of the whole body of the Laws enacted in India. The addition of the Indices, so generally wanting, or imperfect, in former editions, will render easy of access, in a commodious form, the contents of a number of bulky volumes, many of which are not easily to be procured. Mr. Clarke is entitled to the best thanks of the Indian community for his useful and important labours: the difficulties of the task, and the utility of the result, can only be appreciated by those whose duty or inclination has led them to study the Regulation Law of India.

In 1849 Mr. Fenwick published, at Calcutta, an Index to the Civil Law of the Presidency of Fort William, from 1793 to 1849 inclusive: it is formed on the plan of Dale's Index, already mentioned, which it may be said to have superseded.

The latest work on the Regulation Law is an Edition in 8vo. of the Code of Bombay Regulations, published in London in 1849, by Mr. Harrison of the Bombay Civil Service: the Editor has added Notes shewing the alterations made by the enactments subsequent to 1827, together with a number of valuable Interpretations, and an Epitome of the Acts of Government: he has also given a very full Index. The arrangement of Mr. Harrison's work renders it peculiarly convenient of reference. He has retained the original division of the Code into five branches, and has entered the Supplements to each Regulation immediately after it; so that the whole Bombay Law on any given subject, as it now stands, is presented to the reader in a connected form.

The Acts of the Legislative Council of India are printed in India so soon as they are passed, and every publicity is given to them: they are also printed in England by order of the House of Commons.

Mr. Theobald has published at Calcutta a collection of the Acts of the Legislative Council of India, together with an Analytical Abstract prefixed to each Act, and copious Indices. This collection first appeared in 1844, and the learned Editor has since continued his work, which now comprises all the Acts from 1834 to the end of the year 1848.

Mr. Clarke's edition of the Regulations, as has already been stated, will contain the Acts in force in the respective Presidencies.

2. NATIVE LAWS.

The earliest trace which we find of the reservation to the natives resident in our territories in India of their own laws and customs is in the Charter of George II., granted in 1753, in which there was introduced an express exception from the jurisdiction of the Mayors' Courts of all suits and actions between the Indian natives only, such suits and actions being directed to be determined among themselves, unless both parties should submit the same to the determination of the Mayors' Courts. This, however, was merely an exception to the jurisdiction; nor indeed does it appear that the native inhabitants of Bombay were ever actually exempted from the jurisdiction of the Mayors' Court, or that any peculiar Laws were administered to them in that Court.¹

In Warren Hastings' celebrated plan for the administration of justice, proposed and adopted in 1772, when the East-India Company first took upon themselves the entire management of their territories in India, the 23d Rule especially reserved their own laws to the natives, and provided that "Moulavies or Brahmins" should respectively attend the Courts, to expound the law, and assist in passing the decree.

Subsequently, when the Governor-General and Council were invested by Parliament with the power of making Regulations, the provisions and exact words of the 23d Rule above mentioned were introduced into the first Regulation enacted by the Bengal Government for the administration of justice. This Regulation was passed on the 17th of April 1780.

By section 27 of this Regulation it was enacted, "That in all suits regarding inheritance, marriage, and caste, and other religious usages or institutions, the laws of the Koran with respect to Mahomedans, and those of the Shaster with respect to Gentoos, shall be invariably adhered to." This section was re-enacted in the following year, in the revised Code, with the addition of the word "succession."¹

In the Statute Law relating to India no such express privilege was granted until the year 1781; the 13th Geo. III. c. 63, passed in 1773, which established the Supreme Court at Fort William, and the Charter of Justice of that Court, containing no clause specially denoting the law to be administered to the natives.

In the former year, however, the declaratory Act of the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, which was passed for explaining and defining the powers and jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Fort William in Bengal, expressly enacted, by section 17, that, in disputes between the native inhabitants of Calcutta, "their inheritance and succession to lands, rents, and goods, and all matters of contract and dealing between party and party, shall be determined, in the case of Mahomedans by the laws and usages of Mahomedans, and in the case of Gentoos by the laws and usages of Gentoos; and where only one of the parties shall be a Mahomedan or Gento, by the laws and usages of the defendant." Section 18 of the same Statute emphatically preserved to the natives their laws and customs, enacting that, "in order that regard should be had to the civil and religious usages of the said natives, the rights and authorities of fathers of families and masters of families, according as the same might have been exercised by the Gentû or Mahomedan law, shall be preserved to them respectively within their said families; nor shall any acts done in consequence of the rule and law of caste, respecting the members of the said families only, be held and adjudged a crime, although the same may not be held justifiable by the laws of England." The next following section provided that the said Court might frame such process, and make such Rules and Orders for the execution thereof in suits Civil or Criminal against the natives of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, as might accommodate the same to the religion and manners of such natives, so far as the same might consist with the due execution of the laws and the attainment of justice.

This reservation of the native laws to Hindûs and Muhammadans was extended to Madras and Bombay by sections 12 and 13 of the 37th Geo. III. c. 142, passed in 1797, under which Statute the Recorders' Courts at those Presidencies were established. Section 12 of this Statute re-enacted the 18th section of the 21st Geo. III. c. 70; and section 13 repeated verbatim the 17th section of the same Statute already quoted, with the addition, however, of "or by such laws and usages as the same would have been determined by if the suit had been brought and the action commenced in a native Court; and where one of the parties shall be a Mahomedan or Gentoo, by the laws and usages of the defendant: and in all suits so to be determined by the laws and usages of the natives, the said Courts shall make such rules and orders for the conduct of the same, and frame such process for the execution of their judgments, sentences, or decrees, as shall be most consonant to the religions and manners of the said natives, and to the said laws and usages respectively, and the easy attainment of the ends of justice; and such means shall be adopted for compelling the appearance of witnesses, and taking their examination, as shall be consistent with the said laws and usages, so that the suits shall be conducted with as much ease, and at as little expense, as is consistent with the attainment of substantial justice."

By the 39th & 40th Geo. III. c. 79, s. 5, and the 4th Geo.

IV. c. 71, s. 9, all powers and authorities granted to the said Recorders' Courts at Madras and Bombay were transferred to the Supreme Courts at those Presidencies to be established respectively under the said Statutes. The 22d section of the Charter of Justice of the Supreme Court at Madras, and the 29th section of the Charter of Justice of the Supreme Court at Bombay, contain the 13th section of the 37th Geo. III. c. 142, nearly word for word, and without any material addition or alteration.

Such is the Statute Law relating to this subject, and applying to the Supreme Courts of Judicature, and those natives within their jurisdiction. Of the Regulations passed for the direction of the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company, the first, as taking the lead in the enactment of this wise and just measure, has been already noticed. In 1793, section 15 of Regulation IV. of the Bengal Code enacted, that "in suits regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and caste, and all religious usages and institutions, the Mahomedan laws with respect to Mahomedans, and the Hindoo laws with regard to Hindoos, are to be considered as the general rules by which the Judges are to form their decision." This section was extended to Benares and the Upper Provinces by section 3 of Regulation VIII. of 1795, and section 16 of Regulation III. of 1803 of the Bengal Code. The former of these last-mentioned Regulations by section 3, also enacted, in addition to the provisions of section 15 of Reg. IV. of 1793, that "in causes in which the plaintiff shall be of a different religious persuasion from the defendant, the decision is to be regulated by the law of the religion of the latter; excepting where Europeans, or other persons, not being either Mahomedans or Hindoos, shall be defendants, in which cases the law of the plaintiff is to be made the rule of decision in all plaints and actions of a civil nature."

In the year 1831 Moonsiffs generally throughout Bengal were directed to administer the Muhammadan laws with respect to Muhammadans, and the Hindú laws with regard to Hindús, in all cases of inheritance of, or succession to, landed property, and the law administered in such cases was to be the law of the defendant: where any doubts existed, they were enjoined to obtain an exposition of the law from the Law-officers of the Zillah Courts.¹

In the year 1832 a Regulation was passed for the Bengal Presidency, entitled, "A Regulation for modifying certain of the provisions of Regulation V. 1831, and for providing supplementary rules to that enactment." This Regulation² attracted but little notice at the time, partly by reason of its title, and partly because it was principally devoted to the enactment of rules for appeals, pleadings, and the practice of the Courts: a most important innovation upon the rights of the natives was, however, unobservedly introduced. The 8th section of this Regulation rescinded the portion of section 3 of Regulation VIII. of 1795 above quoted, and enacted that the rules contained in section 15 of Regulation IV. of 1793, and section 16 of Regulation III. of 1803, should be "the rule of guidance in all suits regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and cast, and all religious usages and institutions that may arise between persons professing the Hindoo and Mahomedan persuasions respectively." The 9th section proceeded to declare "that the above rules are intended, and shall be held to apply to such persons only as shall be bond fide professors of those religions at the time of the application of the Law to the case, and were designed for the protection of the rights of such persons, not for the deprivation of the rights of others. Whenever, therefore, in any civil suit, the parties to such suit may be of different persuasions, when one party shall be of the Hindoo and the other of the Mahomedan persuasion, or where one or more of the parties to such suit shall not be either of the Mahomedan or Hindoo persuasion, the laws of those religions shall not be permitted to operate to deprive such party or parties of any property to which, but for the operation of such laws, they would have been entitled. In all such cases the decision shall be governed by the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience; it being clearly understood, however, that this provision shall not be considered as justifying the introduction of the English or any foreign law, or the application to such cases of any rules not sanctioned by those principles.”

This innovation was confined to the Bengal Presidency, and did not excite much attention until a later period, being, as it were, smuggled into an enactment relating to the technicalities of practice, and being, moreover, very obscure in its wording.

When Courts of Judicature were first established by the East-India Company in the Madras Presidency, in the year 1802, Regulation III. of the new Code was formed on the Bengal Reg. IV. of 1793, nearly the same words being used with regard to the reservation of the Hindú and Muhammadan laws as those employed in the latter Regulation.

In the Bombay Presidency, in the year 1799, the Governor and Council also passed a Regulation to the like effect, but more explicit and extensive in its application. This Regulation, the fourth of the above year, by its fourteenth section, secured to Hindú and Muhammadan defendants the benefit of their own laws in civil suits respecting “the succession to, and inheritance of, landed and other property, mortgages, loans, bonds, securities, hire, wages, marriage, and cast, and every other claim to personal or real right and property, so far as shall depend upon the point of law.” It also provided that, in the case of Portuguese and Pársi inhabitants, the Judge was to be guided by a view to equity in his decisions, making due allowance for their respective customs, as far as he could ascertain the same. Regulation II. of 1800 re-enacted the same provisions.

In 1827, when all the Judicial Regulations previously passed by the Bombay Government were rescinded, it was enacted that “the law to be observed in the trial of suits shall be Acts of Parliament and Regulations of Government applicable to the case; in the absence of such Acts and Regulations, the usage of the country in which the suit arose; if none such appears, the law of the defendant; and, in the absence of specific law and usage, justice, equity, and good conscience alone.”¹ Hindú and Muhammadan law officers were appointed to the Courts, and enjoined to return answers, conformable to their respective laws, to such questions as should be put to them by the Courts.¹

Early in the present year an Act was passed by the Government of India, extending the principle of section 9 of Reg. VII. of 1832 of the Bengal code throughout the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company. By this Act it was declared, that "So much of any law or usage now in force within the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company as inflicts on any person forfeiture of rights or property, or may be held in any way to impair or affect any right of inheritance, by reason of his or her renouncing, or having been excluded from the communion of any religion, or being deprived of cast, shall cease to be enforced as law in the Courts of the East-India Company, and in the Courts established by Royal Charter within the said territories."²

Thus far as regards the native Civil Laws. I now proceed to notice the Regulations respecting the reservation of the native Criminal Laws.

By Warren Hastings' plan in 1772, the Muhammadan Criminal Law was retained in the Criminal Courts, subject to the interposition of Government, or of the subordinate English functionaries, where its provisions were manifestly unjust. In 1790, when the Governor-General accepted the Nizám of Bengal, the Criminal Courts then established were directed to pronounce sentence according to the Muhammadan law; and in cases of murder according to the doctrines of Yúsuf and Muhammad³, as has been already noticed. The Muhammadan law was further ordered to be continued in the like manner in the Criminal Courts established in 1793.⁴

In 1832 it was enacted in Bengal that all persons, not professing the Muhammadan faith, might claim to be exempt from trial under the provisions of the Muhammadan Criminal Code for offences cognizable under the general Regulations.⁵

At Madras, in the year 1802, provisions were made respecting the administration of the Muhammadan Criminal Law in the Courts of the East-India Company, similar to those enacted in Bengal by Regulation IX. of 1793.¹

The Criminal Law administered in the Company's Courts at Bombay previously to 1827, was ordered to be regulated by the law of the accused party: Christians and Pársís to be judged on the principles of the English law, and Muhammadans and Hindús according to their own particular laws.² The Muhammadan law was to be regulated by the Fatwa of the law officers, which was directed to be given according to the doctrine of Yúsuf and Muhammad; respecting which, and the law of the Hindús, the Judges were enjoined to refer to the translation of the Hidáyah by Hamilton, and of the Hindú laws by Halhed and Sir William Jones; as likewise to a tract entitled "Observations," which then constituted part of the Criminal Code for the province of Malabar and Salsette, &c.³ In 1819 the Hindú Criminal Law was directed to be administered to Hindús in the Special Court.⁴ The Native Criminal Laws were abolished in the Bombay Presidency in 1827, and a regular Code substituted in their place.

The Muhammadan Criminal Law, even when first reserved to the natives of the British territories in India, was subjected to many important restrictions in its application; and it has been so modified by the subsequent Regulations in the Presidencies of Bengal and Madras, as to present no vestiges of its sanguinary character, and but few of its original imperfections.⁵

The above are the Laws and Regulations now in force. It will be observed that, if we except the Bombay Regulations IV. of 1799, II. of 1800, and IV. of 1827, the reservation of the Native Civil Laws, both in the Statutes and Charters, and by the Regulations, was confined to *Gentûs*¹, or Hindûs, and Muhammadans; a broad distinction of the natives of India into two classes, which most probably arose from the ignorance of our ancestors, and not from any intention of excluding other nations or sects from the benefit of their own laws. There are, however, as is well known, many other natives of India, who are neither Hindûs nor Muhammadans. These form a large class, consisting of the Portuguese and Armenian Christians; the Pársîs; the Sikhs; the Jains; the Burmese, and Avanese, who, together with the Chinese, many of whom have become naturalized in India, are Buddhists; and some few originally from Java and the Eastern Archipelago: to this class may be added the usual complement of that cosmopolitan parasite, the Jew. All these have their peculiar laws and usages, many of which are more or less connected with their religious belief: they seem, however, to be excluded from the benefit of such laws in the Queen's Courts. In the Supreme Court at Calcutta a case appears to have been once decided according to the Sikh law², but this was by reference to the Pandits; and thus, to use Sir Edward H. East's own words, he being Chief Justice at the time, "The difficulty was gotten over, President and Council in Select Committee;" because it was then before the Legislature that the President and Council had interposed, and altered the Criminal Law of the province in 1772. Such alterations, and all future necessary amendments thereof, appear, by the above clause, to be legally sanctioned. See Fifth Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons, 1812. p. 40.

The late Sir Edward Hyde East, in his evidence before the Committee of the House of Lords in 1830, speaking of the term "Gentûs," used in the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, observes, "Whether that was intended to comprehend all other descriptions of Asiatics who happened to be located within the British bounds of India is perhaps very difficult to be told at this time of day."—Minutes of Evidence, p. 118. 4to. by considering the Sikhs as a sect of Gentoos or Hindoos, of whom they were a dissenting branch.”¹ At any rate, it has been more than once held at Calcutta, that, with the exception of Hindús and Muhampadans, no suitor of the Supreme Courts is entitled to have any special law applied to his case.² In an old case it was decided by the Supreme Court at Bombay³, that the Portuguese laws, in all points of succession, and of all personal rights, as those of husband and wife, remained in full force as regards the Portuguese in Bombay⁴; but it was also held in the same case that the law of Portugal could not of its own force operate at Bombay, and that the Portuguese were subject to the law of England alone, with the reservation of certain customs. Questions between Pársí litigants in the Supreme Court at Bombay appear to have been formerly adjudicated according to the provisions of the Hindú law, where there was no custom adduced to the contrary.⁵ A recent case⁶, also decided in the Supreme Court at Bombay, has determined that the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Court extends to Pársís, and that for such purpose they are included in the words “British subjects,” contained in the clause of the Bombay Charter conferring such jurisdiction.

Questions of Hindú law, which come within the specification of the Statutes and Charters, are adjudicated in the Supreme Courts according to the doctrines of each particular school of law entertained by the parties, or according to any particular custom clearly proved to exist among such parties. With respect to Muhammadans, however, it is stated by Baillie, in the preface to his Treatise on Inheritance, that no other than the Sunnîy law has ever been administered in the Supreme Court at Bengal.¹ It may be true that no case may have as yet occurred in that Court, in which the parties held other than the Sunnîy doctrines; but there can be little doubt that, in the event of a case arising between Muhammadans not being Sunnîys, the law administered would be according to the religious persuasion of the litigants. In a case recently decided in the Supreme Court at Bombay, where the parties held particular tenets scarcely compatible with the Muhammadan law, Sir E. Perry, C. J., in delivering judgment, remarked — “I am clearly, therefore, of opinion, that the effect of this clause in the Charter is, not to adopt the text of the Korán as law, any further than it has been adopted in the laws and usages of the Muhammadans who came under our sway; and if any class of Muhammadans, Muhammadan dissenters as they may be called, are found to be in possession of any usage which is otherwise valid as a legal custom, and which does not conflict with any express law of the English Government, they are just as much entitled to the protection of this clause as the most orthodox Sunnîy who can come before the Court.”² This language would of course apply to the Imámîyah doctrine; and indeed the learned Chief Justice seems inclined to a much more liberal interpretation of the Law than has prevailed in the Supreme Court at Calcutta; for he goes on to say, “How far the peculiar laws of non-Christian aliens would be recognized, it may not be very easy, nor is it necessary, to define beforehand. On each occasion it would afford matter for judicial discussion and determination when the question arose. But on very many questions, such as marriage, divorce, succession, and, possibly, adoption, there seems no reason to doubt that the proper law to be referred to for the decision of any controversy, would not be the law of the Christian community, but the law and usage of the peculiar non-Christian class." And again, "The conclusion I draw is, that if a custom, otherwise valid, is found to prevail amongst a race of eastern origin, and non-Christian faith, a British Court of Justice will give effect to it, if it does not conflict with any express Act of the Legislature."¹

In the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company an extended and liberal interpretation of the wording of the Regulations has always existed²; and we find, accordingly, numerous cases that have been decided according to the laws of the Portuguese, Armenians, Jains, and Pársís, so far as such laws could be ascertained, and the tenets of the Shíâh sect of Muhammadans.³ The native law of contracts, which is not included in the specific words of the Regulations, is also frequently administered in the Honourable Company's Courts according to native law.⁴

It does not appear that any appeal has been presented to the Privy Council against any decision of the Courts below founded on other native laws than those of the Hindús and Muhammadans. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, however, receive the Shíâh law, and have so construed the Bengal Reg. IV. of 1793, in a case which was decided in 1841.⁵ In ¹ Vol. II. of this work, pp. 446, 447.

² The Advocate-General recommended, in a case submitted to him by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal in Feb. 1799, that foreign laws and customs not Hindú or Muhammadan should be ascertained by evidence. It may be observed, that the intention of the Regulations does not seem to have been to confine the reservation of the native laws to the Hindú and Muhammadan Codes. For instance, we find in the rules regulating special appeals, that such appeals were to be allowed when the judgment should appear to be inconsistent with the Regulations, or with the Hindú and Muhammadan laws, in cases which were required to be decided by those laws, or with any other law or usage which might be applicable to the case.

another case, also, they decided, in general terms, that they were bound to take notice of the law of the country from which the appeal came, and to decide according to it, even although it had not been noticed in the Court below.¹

Such is the present state of the Law, and the practice of the Courts, with respect to the administration of the native laws in India; and whatever may be the ultimate effect of the recent innovations, it cannot be denied that the preservation of such laws is in conformity with the doctrines of the ablest writers on jurisprudence, and is founded on "the wisdom of experience and the dictates of humanity."²

Warren Hastings, in pursuance of that enlightened and liberal policy which so eminently distinguished his government in India in all that regarded the conciliation and welfare of its native inhabitants³, was, as we have seen, the first to recommend and adopt the preservation of their laws. In furtherance of his plan for the administration of justice, he stated, in a letter addressed to the Court of Directors, in March 1773, "That in order to render more complete the Judicial Regulations, to preclude arbitrary and partial judgments, and to guide the decisions of the several Courts, a well-digested Code of Laws, compiled agreeably to the laws and tenets of the Mahometans and Gentoos, and according to the established customs and usages, in cases of the revenue, would prove of the greatest public utility⁴;" and in a subsequent letter, with which he transmitted to England a specimen of a

Hindú Code drawn up by his order, occurs the following remarkable passage:—"From the labours of a people, however intelligent, whose studies have been confined to the narrow circle of their own religion, and the decrees founded upon its superstitions, and whose discussions in the search of truth have wanted that lively aid which it can only derive from a free exertion of the understanding, and an opposition of opinions, a perfect system of jurisprudence is not to be expected. Yet if it shall be found to contain nothing hurtful to the authority of Government, or to the interests of society, and is consonant to the ideas, manners, and inclinations of the people for whose use it is intended, I presume that, on these grounds, it will be preferable to any which even a superior wisdom could substitute in its room."¹

Nor must the opinion of Sir William Jones on this subject be omitted; an opinion, it is true, given some time after the measure which he recommended had been adopted by the Government, in accordance with the views of Hastings, but which loses none of its authority on that account, gaining, on the contrary, additional weight, as being not merely the theoretical idea of an able man, but the well-considered result of a five years' residence in India, devoted, with unprecedented success, to the intimate study of those very laws and institutions, the preservation of which he so warmly advocates. "Nothing," says Sir William Jones², "could be more obviously just than to determine private contests according to those laws which the parties themselves had ever considered as the rules of their conduct and engagements in civil life; nor could any thing be wiser than, by a legislative act, to assure the Hindu and Muselman subjects of Great Britain that the private laws which they severally hold sacred, and a violation of which they would have thought the most grievous oppression, should not be superseded by a new system, of which they could have no knowledge, and which they must have considered as imposed on them by a spirit of rigour and intolerance."

Such, then, was the opinion of these great men; and although they wrote more than half a century ago, it is still entitled to our respect at the present day. The laws of the Hindús and Muhammadans are part and parcel of their religion, and believed by them to be of divine revelation; little or no change has taken place in the religious opinions of the natives since the days of Hastings and Jones; the Hindú still venerates the Institutes that have served to regulate the conduct of his forefathers for centuries; and the Muhammadan looks with undiminished respect on the precepts transmitted to him in the Korán by one whom he deems to be the last and the chief of the prophets of God.

A host of other writers, capable from long experience of forming a just estimate, might be quoted, upholding the same views: amongst them we find Verelst, Teignmouth, Strange, Harrington, and William Macnaghten; whose names alone are sufficient in themselves to guarantee the value of their opinions on all questions connected with the welfare of the natives of India.

The Regulation VII. of 1832 of the Bengal Code, passed, at the time, for reasons which I have already alluded to, without attracting any particular attention, although the object of the Regulation was, in effect, to abrogate so much of the Hindú law as provided that a convert to Muhammadanism or Christianity should forfeit all claim to his share of any heritable property: a most serious innovation upon the Hindú law, affecting the system in one of its most important branches, and interfering in a powerful degree with the most vital doctrines of the Hindú religion.

It was not until a more formal proposition was made in 1842, and again subsequently in 1845 when the Lex loci was taken into consideration, to alter the native laws as regards inheritance and exclusion from cast, that any opposition was raised.¹ A Draft Act was prepared and submitted to the Government by the Indian-Law Commissioners, in the former year, and again in 1845, containing a provision, that so much of the Hindú and Muhammadan law as inflicted forfeiture of rights or property upon any party renouncing, or excluded from, the communion of the Hindú or Muhammadan religion, should cease to be enforced as law in any of the Courts in India.¹ The Hindús presented memorials to the Governor-General, strongly expressive of their dissatisfaction at the proposed enactment, which they regarded as a violation of a solemn pledge, founded upon the Act of a superior and supreme legislature, confirmed by the local Government, and acted upon from the very period of British connexion with the Eastern Empire. They further intimated a fear that the security in person, property, and religion, hitherto ensured to them, thus undermined in one instance, might eventually be denied them altogether.² The proposed enactment was not sanctioned by the Government; but the recent Act XXI. of 1850, passed by the Legislative Council of India, extending the provisions of the 8th and 9th sections of the Bengal Regulation VII. of 1832, is to nearly the same effect, and has again called forth the remonstrance and roused the jealous suspicions of the Hindús. It is stated that they have already petitioned against the Act, and that it is their intention to appeal to Parliament on the subject.

The policy of the enactment of this Law is perhaps questionable: the beneficial results expected from its operation are at least doubtful. I allude, of course, to its anticipated effect in increasing the number of converts to Christianity. If it be true that the disinheritorship, which, by the Hindú law, follows apostacy, militates against conversion to the truth,—that is, in other words, that many Hindús would become Christians were it not for the prospect of the loss they would thereby sustain,—the question arises, in the first place, whether it be desirable to receive such lukewarm believers into our Church? As well might we offer bounty-money to recruit the ranks of Christianity from the multitudes who would be willing to make a traffic of their consciences. Again, it is not reasonable to suppose that any great accession will be made to the number of converted Hindús by the operation of this new Law. The converts from the Hindú creed to Muhammadanism have of late years been very numerous; indeed, it is to be feared, far more numerous than those who have rewarded the labours of our Missionaries by embracing the Christian religion; and this, be it observed, notwithstanding the Hindú law of forfeiture which has been denounced as holding so chief a place amongst the preventives of conversion. From this it may fairly be inferred that the comparative ill success of the Missionaries arises, not from the disabilities under which apostates and outcasts labour according to the Hindú law, but rather from the fact that the Muhammadan priest, however inferior in general education, has a much greater knowledge of the people with whom he has to deal, and consequently a stronger hold upon their minds and imaginations, than that possessed by the Christian pastor. If such be the case, let our Missionaries strive to attain the same legitimate power of convincing the heathen. Every day they are acquiring a deeper insight into the manners and customs of the natives, and a more complete acquaintance with their languages; education, too, is advancing with rapid strides, thanks to the effectual measures that have been adopted by the Government; and as the approximative instruction of the teachers and the taught proceeds, we may hope to see the dark superstitions of the natives triumphantly superseded by the light of Christianity; then, and then only, will the time have arrived for extending to the mass of our Indian fellow-subjects the benefit of laws which they now can neither understand nor appreciate, and for effacing those institutions upon which their present social happiness so largely depends. The day has gone by when conversion was enforced by a mandate of the ruling power.

The Act of 1850 has been termed an Act for the promotion of religious liberty; but surely such a name can scarcely be applied with propriety to a law which not only implies a violation of the rights of property, but, in the case of a Hindú, forbids him to hope for happiness in another world, whenever his heir shall choose to forsake the faith of his forefathers.¹

In considering the propriety of altering or abrogating the Hindú or Muhammadan laws, all pre-conceived notions of the relative excellence of the English and native systems of jurisprudence should be taken as secondary considerations; nor should it be called in question whether such systems are in themselves good or bad; for it should never be forgotten, that, in the present state of society in India, they are undoubtedly the best adapted to the wants and prejudices of the people who form the great bulk of the population of the country; that they are an integral part of the faith of that people; and that, though we may not be bound by absolute treaty, we have virtually pledged ourselves to preserve them by repeated proclamations and enactments.

The laws of the remaining class of natives, viz. those who are neither Hindús nor Muhammadans, are placed in a very different position. In some instances these laws are irrespective of religion; in almost all they depend more upon local customs than on written Codes; they never appear to have been admitted into the Queen's Courts; and whenever they have been administered in those of the East-India Company, with the exception of the Bombay Presidency, it has been done by a liberal extension by the Judges of the wording of the Regulations: added to this, the Government has never pledged itself in any way to preserve or administer such laws. The class itself, although collectively numerous, is composed of different sects and nations, which, taken separately, are of small extent and few in numbers, and mostly either foreign to the country, or but recently established there; and, finally, many of this class are anxious to be ranged under the protection of the British laws, instead of being subjected to the arbitrary rules of ill-ascertained usage.

The Armenians of Bengal, so long since as the year 1836, presented a petition to the Governor-General, in which, after setting forth the destitution of their legal condition, they add, "As Armenians have ceased to be a nation since the year of our Lord 1375, and no trace of their own law is now to be discovered, your petitioners humbly submit that the Law of England is the only one that can, upon any sound principles, be permitted to prevail; and that it is moreover the law which was promised to Armenians at the time of their settlement in the country." This alleged promise is contained in an agreement between the Honourable East-India Company and Cogee Phanoos Calendar, an eminent Armenian merchant, which agreement is dated the 22d of June 1688.¹ It is unnecessary to discuss either the validity or the meaning of the agreement, as it is the desire only, and not the rights of the Armenian people, with which we are concerned in the present instance, and this desire is explicit.

The Pársís, who, if not the most numerous, are certainly the most wealthy and most influential of this class of natives on the Bombay side of India, are anxious to have a written Law framed for their sect, though they do not exactly want the English law, for instance, in respect to their widows and daughters, in regard to their share of the inheritance on a man's dying intestate.²

It would seem, therefore, that, as relates to this class of natives, the enactment of a Lex loci would not only be justifiable, but productive of benefit; and it would doubtless put an end to much uncertainty and many of the difficulties which at present encompass the administration of justice in the Mofussil.

I shall now proceed to give a succinct account of the different native laws administered in our Courts in India; of the various doctrines entertained by the native lawyers; in what districts, and amongst what sects, they prevail; and of the works in which such laws are written, and on which such doctrines are founded.

(1) HINDÚ LAW.

(a) Of the Sources of the Law.

The civil and religious laws of the Hindús are believed by them to be of divine origin; one portion called Sruti, or "That which is heard," and which constitutes the Védas, being supposed to be in the very words revealed by Brahma himself; and another denominated Smriti, or "That which is remembered," comprising the Dharma Shashtra, and imagined to have been communicated to mankind through the medium of inspired writers.

The Dharma Shashtra comprehends not only Law in its usual sense, but rules for religious observances, and ancient and modern rituals. It is, however, generally understood as meaning exclusively Forensic Law and Civil duties, which are considered by the Hindú lawyers under the distinct heads of Private contests and Forensic practice; the former head comprehending Law, private and criminal, whilst the latter includes the forms of procedure, the rules of pleading, the law of evidence, adverse titles, oaths, and ordeal.¹

Both the Sruti and the Smriti are interpreted by the same rules, which are collected in the Mímánsás, or disquisitions on proof and authority of precepts, and considered to be a branch of philosophy. The Mímánsás are described by Colebrooke as “properly the logic of the law.”¹

(b) On the various Schools of Hindú Law.

In eastern India the Védas and the Mímánsás are less studied than in the south, and the lawyers of Bengal and Behar take the Nyáya², or dialectic philosophy, for rules of reasoning and interpretation of the Law.³ Hence arose the two principal schools, which deduced different inferences from the same maxims, and from which other schools again have diverged, each interpreting the Law according to the dicta of some favourite author.

Five Schools of Law may be said to exist at the present day; viz. the Gauriya (Bengal), Mithila (North Behar), Benáres, Maháráshtra (the Mahratta country), and Drávida (the south of the peninsula)

It would be almost impossible to define with accuracy the limits of these several schools; nor, indeed, is there that great distinction between them which by some writers has been supposed to exist. The Bengal School, it is true, stands nearly alone, particularly with regard to the Law of Inheritance, in which there is a wide difference in doctrine between the northern and the other schools, the latter receiving some treatises in common, which are totally rejected by the Gauriya lawyers. The Bengal school assimilates in some points with that of Mithila; inheritance, however, being still excepted.

² The Nyáya, of which Gautama is the acknowledged author, furnishes a philosophical arrangement, with strict rules of reasoning, not unaptly compared to the Dialectics of the Aristotelian school.—Colebrooke on the Philosophy of the Hindus. Essays, Vol. I. p. 227.

Looking to the west and south of India, we find that the main distinction between the Benáres, Mahárashttra, and Drávida schools, is, in fact, rather a preference shewn by each respectively for some particular work as their authority of Law, than any real or important difference of doctrine. It is very probable that this preference for particular treatises arose originally, not so much from their actual, or even fancied, superiority over other works, as from the ignorance of the lawyers, practically, of the existence of authorities not generally current in their respective provinces, and from the fact that such law-books were, in most cases, first promulgated in the very districts in which they are now pre-eminent.

In all the western and southern schools the prevailing authority is the nearly-universal Mitákshará; and although the Mahrattas may prefer the Mayúkha to the Mádhavíya, and the contrary may be the case in the Karnáta country, whilst in other districts other treatises are referred to, still the Law itself, even in regard to inheritance, is essentially the same throughout southern India.

However, as there does exist this distinction between the Bengal school and those of the west and south, and this preference with respect to the books referred to, it becomes advisable to give some idea of the extent and situation of the districts where the doctrines of the several schools are current.

The Gauriya, or Bengal school of Law, prevails over the whole province of Bengal Proper, and apparently is co-extensive with the Bengálí language, or, at least, is of authority wherever the Bengálí is spoken by the inhabitants of the country.

The Mithila school is that of north Behar, or Tírhút, the ancient kingdom of Mithila, which, though not often mentioned in history, is famous for having been the residence of Síta, Ráma's wife.

The doctrine of the school of Benáres is followed in the city and province of that name, and is the prevailing school of middle India. This doctrine is also current in Orissa, and extends from Midnapur to the mouth of the Hooghly, and thence to Cicacole.

The Mahárashttra is the school which governs the law in the country of the Mahrattas. The south limit of the Mahratta country may be loosely stated as passing from Goa through Kolapur and Bidr to Chandra; the eastern line follows the Warda river to the Injádri, or Satpúra hills, south of the Nerbudda, and which form its northern limit, as far west as Nandód; and the western boundary may be marked by a line drawn from Nandód to Dahmán, and thence following the sea-coast as far as Goa: in other words, the Maháráshtra school prevails wherever the Mahratta language is spoken by the natives.

The Drávida school is that of the whole of the southern portion of the peninsula; but it may be subdivided into three districts, in each of which some particular law treatises have more weight than others: these districts are, Drávida, properly so called, Karnátaka, and Andra. Drávida Proper is the country where the Tamil language is spoken, and occupies the extreme south of the peninsula: its boundaries may be traced by a line drawn from Pulicat to the gháts between Pulicat and Bangalur, and then following the gháts westward, and along the boundary between Malabar and Kanara to the sea, including Malabar. The Karnátaka country is bounded on the west by the sea-coast as far as Goa, thence by the western gháts up to Kolapur, to the north by a line drawn from Kolapur to Bidr, and on the east by a line from Bidr through Adóni, Anandpur, and Nandidrúg, to the gháts between Pulicat and Bangalur: this is the country where the Karnátaka language is now spoken. The third district, the Andra, where the Telinga or Telugu is now the spoken language, extends from the boundary line last mentioned, and which, prolonged to Chandra, will form its western limit; on the north it is bounded indistinctly by a line running eastwards to Sohnpur on the Mahanaddí river; and on the east by a line drawn from Sohnpur to Cicacole, and thence to Pulicat, where the Tamil country begins. Mr. Ellis imagines that there are laws existing in the southern provinces which are of higher antiquity than those introduced from the north, although not all derived from the same source¹: this supposition is favoured by the fact, that Professor Wilson thinks it probable that the civilization of the south of India may date as far back as ten centuries before Christ.

These are the limits of the various schools of Law, so far as they can be approximately defined. It must, however, be borne in mind, that though some works have especial weight respectively in the several schools, it seems that most of them, if known, would be respected in all, excepting Bengal; the broad division of doctrine being between the Law of Bengal and that of Benáres, to which all the remaining schools more or less assimilate.

I shall now consider the law-books of the Hindús generally; and then proceed to describe them seriatim, specifying such as are of chief authority, or more generally referred to by the lawyers in the respective schools and districts.

(c) On the Hindú Law-Books.

The Dharma Shastra may be conveniently divided into three classes—

I. The Smritis, or Text-books, which are the foundation of all Hindú law, and which are attributed to various ancient Rishis, or sages, who are supposed to have been inspired. These Smritis are all, with slight variation, in form and doctrine the same with the Institutes of Menu.

II. The Vyákhyána, or Glosses and Commentaries upon these Smritis, many of which partake of the nature of Digests.

III. The Nibandhana Grantha, or Digests properly so called, either of the whole body of the Law or of particular portions thereof, collected from the text-books and their commentators.

A fourth class of works may be added as an authority of Hindú law, viz. the works on the subject by European authors. These I shall mention separately.

I. The Smritis, Text-books, Institutes, or Collections (Sanhitá), attributed to various Rishis, are all divided into three Kándas, or sections; the first, Áchára, treating of religious ceremonies and daily observances; the second, Vyavahára, of law and the administration of justice; and the third, Práyaschitta, relating to penance and expiation.

The Smritis, are enumerated differently by various writers: the Padma Purána gives the names of thirty-six Rishis; whilst Yájñavalkya, and Parásara mention only twenty. Yájñavalkya gives the following list:—Manu, Atri, Vishnu, Háríta, Yájñavalkya, Usanas, Angiras, Yama, Ápastamba, Samvarta, Kátyáyana, Vrihaspati, Parásara, Vyása, Sankha and Likhita (who were brothers, and wrote each a Smriti separately, and one jointly, the three being now considered as one work), Daksha, Gautama, Sátátapa, and Vasishttha. Parásara, whose name appears in the above list, enumerates also twenty select authors; but instead of Yama, Vrihaspati, and Vyása, he gives the names of Kasyapa, Gárgya, and Prachétas.¹ The Padma Purána, omitting the name of Atri in Yájñavalkya's list, completes the number of thirty-six above-mentioned by adding Maríchi, Pulastya, Prachétas, Bhrigu, Nárada, Kasyapa, Viswámitra, Devala, Rishyasringa, Gárgya, Baudháyana, Paithínasi, Jábáli, Sumantu, Paráskara, Lókákshi, and Kuthumi. Of these writers four have been respectively considered as the principal authorities in each of the four ages of the world; viz. Manu in the Krita Yuga; Gautama in the Treta Yuga; Sankha and Likhita in the Dwápara Yuga; and Parásara in the Kali Yuga, or present age. Several Smritis are sometimes ascribed to the same author: his greater or lesser Institutes (Vrihat or Laghu), or a later work of the author when old (Vridha).²

It appears from internal evidence to be probable that treatises attributed to these Rishis are extant, which, like the Puránas, all of which are said to have been written by Vyása, are by different authors; and indeed, as the reputed authors are mentioned in the texts in the third person, it is likely, as explained by the commentators, that the text-books were compiled by the pupils from the oral instructions of their master.

Whatever may be the authenticity or antiquity of these books, they are all venerated by the Hindús as next in sanctity to the Védas themselves, their authority being, moreover, confirmed by a text from the same holy writings, thus translated by Sir William Jones, according to the gloss of Sankara :— “God having created the four classes, had not yet completed his work: but in addition to it, lest the royal and military class should become insupportable through their power and ferocity, he produced the transcendent body of law; since law is the king of kings, far more powerful and rigid than they. Nothing can be mightier than law, by whose aid, as by that of the highest monarch, even the weak may prevail over the strong.”

It must be observed that many Smritis are quoted or referred to by legal writers which are no longer extant; and it is even said to be the opinion of the Brahmans, that, with the exception of Menu, the entire work of no one of these sages has come down to the present time.¹

The Mánava Dharma Shástra, or Institutes of Menu, the highest authority of memorial law², is universally allowed by the Hindús not only to be the oldest work, but also the most holy after the Védas; and as, in addition to this, the other text-books are, as it were, formed on the same model, it may be fairly considered as the basis of the whole present system of Hindú jurisprudence. Besides the usual matters treated of in a Code of Laws, the Mánava Dharma Shástra, which is divided into twelve books, comprehends a system of cosmogony, the doctrines of metaphysics, precepts regulating the conduct, rules for religious and ceremonial duties, pious observances, and expiation, the laws of purification and abstinence, moral maxims, regulations concerning things political, military, and commercial, the doctrine of rewards and punishments after death, and of the transmigration of souls, together with the means of attaining eternal beatitude.

The author of the Institutes is supposed to be Menu, surnamed Swáyambhuva, i.e. issuing from the self-existent, and who was the first of the seven Menus who governed the world. Brahma himself is related to have revealed them to his offspring; the Rishi Bhrigu subsequently promulgating the laws thus communicated by Divine revelation.

Disregarding the fabulous statements of the Hindús, the authorship and antiquity of the Mánava Dharma Shástra still remain surrounded with considerable obscurity. The arguments of Sir William Jones, who endeavoured to fix the date of the actual text at about the year 1280 before Christ, are almost as inconclusive as the traditions of the Brahmans; and the various epochs fixed by different authors seem to leave the question still undetermined. Chézy¹ and Deslongchamps, the latter of whom professes to have formed his opinion from an examination of the Code itself², conceive that it was composed in the thirteenth century previous to our æra. Schlegel gives it as his decided and well-considered opinion, "quod multorum annorum meditatio me docuit," that the laws of Menu were promulgated in India at least as early as the seventh century before Alexander the Great, or about a thousand years before Christ³: he places the Rámáyana of Valmíki at about the same date, and doubts as to which is the older of the two. Elphinstone, who is inclined to attribute great antiquity to the Institutes of Menu, on the ground of the difference between the law and manners therein recorded and those of modern times, and from the proportion of the changes which took place before the invasion of Alexander, infers that a considerable period had elapsed between the promulgation of the Code and the latter epoch; and he fixes the probable date of Menu to use his own words, "very loosely, at some time about half way between Alexander (in the fourth century before Christ) and the Védas (in the fourteenth)."⁴

Professor Wilson, however, thinks that the work of Menu, as we now possess it, is not of so ancient a date as the Rámá- yana, and that it was most probably composed about the end of the third or the commencement of the second century before Christ. This opinion of the highest living authority on the subject must be considered as decisive, so far as present materials can enable us to approximate the truth.¹

“9 Park Place, Oxford, July 29, 1849.

“MY DEAR MORLEY—I have been looking again at the Law-literature, in order to write you a note on the sources of Manu. I have treated the subject fully in my introduction to the Véda, where I have given an outline of the different periods of Vaidik literature, and analyzed the peculiarities in the style and language of each class of Vaidik works. What I consider to be the sources of the Mánava-dharma-sástra, are the Sútras. These are works which presuppose the development of the prose literature of the Bráhmaṇas (like the Aitaréya-Bráhmaṇa, Taittiríya-Bráhmaṇa, etc.). These Bráhmaṇas, again, presuppose, not only the existence, but the collection and arrangement of the old hymns of the four Sanhitás. The Sútras are therefore later than both these classes of Vaidik works, but they must be considered as belonging to the Vaidik period of literature, not only on account of their intimate connection with Vaidik subjects, but also because they still exhibit the irregularities of the old Vaidik language. They form, indeed, the last branch of Vaidik literature; and it will perhaps be possible to fix some of these works chronologically, as they are contemporary with the first spreading of Buddhism in India.

“Again, in the whole Vaidik literature there is no work written (like the Mánava-dharma-sástra) in the regular epic Sloka, and the continual employment of this metre is a characteristic mark of post-Vaidik writings.

“One of the principal classes of Sútras is known by the name of Kalpa-sútras, or rules on ceremonies. These are avowedly composed by human authors; while, according to Indian orthodox theology, both the hymns and Bráhmaṇas are to be considered as revelation. The Sútras generally bear the name of their authors, like Āsvaláyana, Kátyáyana, etc., or the name of the family to which the Sútras belonged. The great number of these writings is to be accounted for by the fact that there was not one body of Kalpa-sútras binding for all Brahmanic communities, but that different old families had each their own Kalpa-sútras. These works are still very frequent in our libraries, yet there is no doubt that many of them have been lost. Sútras are quoted which do not exist in Europe, and the loss of some is acknowledged by the Brahmins themselves. There are, however, lists of the old Brahmanic families which were in possession of their own redaction of Vaidik hymns (Sanhitás), of Bráhmaṇas and of

Whatever may be the exact period at which the Mánava Dharma Shástra was composed or collected, it is undoubtedly Sútras. Some of these families followed the Rig-véda, some the Yajur-véda, the Sáma-véda and Átharva-véda; and thus the whole Vaidik literature becomes divided into four great classes of Bráhmanas and Sútras, belonging to one or the other of the four principal Védas.

"Now, one of the families following the Yajur-véda were the Mánavas (cf. Charanavyúha). There can be no doubt that this family, too, had its own Sútras. Quotations from Mánava-sútras are to be met with in Commentaries on other Sútras; and I have found, not long ago, a MS. which contains the text of the Mánava-srauta-sútra, though in a very fragmentary state. But these Sútras, the Srauta-sútras, treat only of a certain branch of ceremonies connected with the great sacrifices. Complete Sútra works are divided into three parts; the first (Srauta) treating on the great sacrifices, the second (Grihya) treating on the Sanskáras, or the purificatory sacraments; the third (Sánayáchárika or Dharma-sútras) treating on temporal duties, customs, and punishments. The two last classes of Sútras seem to be lost in the Mánava-sútra. This loss is, however, not so great with regard to tracing the sources of the Mánava-dharma-sástra; because, whenever we have an opportunity of comparing Sútras belonging to different families, but following the same Véda, and treating on the same subjects, the differences appear to be very slight, and only refer to less important niceties of the ceremonial. In the absence, therefore, of the Mánava-sámayáchárika-sútras, I have taken another collection of Sútras, equally belonging to the Yajur-véda, the Sútras of Ápastamba. In his family we have not only a Bráhmaṇa, but also Ápastamba-Srauta, Grihya, and Sámayáchárika-sútras. Now it is, of course, the third class of Sútras on temporal duties which are most likely to contain the sources of the later metrical Codes of Law, written in the classical Sloka. On a comparison of different subjects, such as the duties of a Brahmachári, a Grihastha, laws of inheritance, duties of a king, forbidden food, etc., I find that the Sútras contain generally almost the same words which have been brought into verse by the compiler of the Mánava-dharma-sástra. I consider, therefore, the Sútras as the principal source of the metrical Smritis, such as the Mánava-dharma-sástra, Yājñavalkya-dharma-sástra, etc., though there are also many other verses in these works which may again be traced to different sources. They are paraphrases of verses of the Sanhitás, or of passages of the Bráhmanas, often retaining the same old words and archaic constructions which were in the original. This is, indeed acknowledged by the author of the Mánava-dharma-sástra, when he says (B. II. v. 6), "The roots of the Law are the whole Véda (Sanhitás and Bráhmanas), the customs and traditions of those who knew the Véda, (as laid down in the Sútras), the conduct of good men, and one's own satisfaction." The Mánava-dharma-sástra may thus be considered as the last redaction of the laws of the Mánavas. Quite different is the question as to of very great antiquity, and is eminently worthy of the attention of the scholar, whether on account of its classic beauty, and proving, as it does, that, even at the remote epoch of its composition, the Hindús had attained to a high degree of civilization; or whether we regard it as held to be a divine revelation, and consequently the chief guide of moral and religious duties, by nearly an hundred millions of human beings whom Providence has placed under our protection.

The Code of Menu is divided into twelve books, and comprises in all 2685 Slokas or couplets.

Various editions of the text of Menu have been published, as also translations by Sir William Jones, Sir Graves Haughton, and an anonymous writer; and in French by M. Loiseleur Deslongchamps.¹ The version by Jones has been generally the old Manu, from whom the family probably derived its origin, and who is said to have been the author of some very characteristic hymns in the Rig-véda-sanhita. He certainly cannot be considered as the author of the Mánava-dharma-sástra, nor is there even any reason to suppose the author of this work to have had the same name. It is evident that the author of the metrical Code of Law speaks of the old Manu as of a person different from himself, when he says (B. X. v. 63), "Not to kill, not to lie, not to steal, to keep the body clean, and to restrain the senses; this was the short law which Manu proclaimed amongst the four casts."

considered the masterpiece of that learned and elegant writer: those by Haughton and Deslongchamps vary from it but slightly, and nowhere importantly. All these three translations are according to the gloss of Kullúka Bhatta, which will be presently noticed when we come to treat of the Commentaries and Digests.

Atri, the second writer of a text-book according to Yájñavalkya, but who is not mentioned in the Padma Purána, composed a law treatise in verse, which is still extant. Vishnu is also said to have written an excellent treatise in verse, and Háríta one in prose: these have both come down to us in an abridged metrical form. Yájñavalkya, the grandson of Visvámitra, appears, from the Introduction to his own Institutes, to have delivered his precepts to an audience of philosophers at Benáres.

The Yájñavalkya Dharma Shástra, or Institutes of Yájñavalkya, comprises three books, containing 1023 couplets. The age of this Code cannot be fixed with any certainty; but it is of considerable antiquity, as indeed is proved by passages from it being found on inscriptions in every part of India, dated in the tenth and eleventh centuries. "To have been so widely diffused," says Professor Wilson, "and to have then attained a general character as an authority, a considerable time must have elapsed; and the work must date, therefore, long prior to those inscriptions."¹ In addition to this, passages from Yájñavalkya are found in the Pancha Tantra², which will throw the date of the composition of his work at least as far back as the fifth century, and it is probable even that it may have originated at a much more remote period. It seems, however, that it is not earlier than the second century of our era, since Professor Wilson supposes that the name of a certain money, Nanaka, which name is found in Yājñavalkya's Institutes, originated about that time.¹

The Institutes of Yājñavalkya were published in the original at Calcutta.² An edition of the text, together with a German translation, has also lately appeared³; this edition, which we owe to Dr. Stenzler of Breslau, is further enriched with marginal notes, pointing out the parallel passages in the Mánava Dharma Shástra, an addition which is extremely useful in comparing the doctrines of the two great lawgivers.

The other Smritis now extant, according to Colebrooke⁴, are as follows:—The Institutes of Usanas, in verse, with an abridgement; a short treatise, containing about seventy couplets, by Angiras, who is supposed to have lived in the reign of the second Menu; a short tract of a hundred couplets by Yama, brother of the seventh Menu; a work in prose, by Ápastamba, and an abridgement of it in verse; a metrical abridgement of the Institutes of Samvarta; a clear and full treatise by Kátyáyana; an abridgement of the Institutes of Vrihaspati, if not the Code at large; a work by Parásara, who is the highest authority for the fourth age of the world; some works connected with law, by Vyása, the reputed author of the Puránas; the joint work of Saukha and Likhita, which has been abridged in verse, and their separate tracts, also in verse; a treatise in verse by Daksha; an elegant treatise in prose by Gautama; an abridgement in verse of a treatise on pénance and expiation by Satátapa; and the elegant work in prose, mixed with verse, by Vasishta, the preceptor of the inferior gods, who is the last of twenty legislators mentioned by Yājñavalkya. Besides these Smritis, Steele gives, in his list of Hindú law-books, an additional one, the Wamun Smriti, which he says was written by Wamun, a Brahman Rishi of Hindustán.⁵

An edition of the text of the Smritis, comprising those of Angiras, Atri, Ápastamba, Usanas, Kátyáyana, Daksha, Parásara, Yama, Yájnavalkya, Likhita, Vishnu, Vrihaspati, Vyása, Sankha, Samvarta, Háríta, Gautama, Sátátapa, and Vasishtha, has been published in Calcutta.¹

Before concluding this short notice of the text-books, it must be remarked that the Smritis are, for the most part, of small extent, and relate almost exclusively to daily observances and religious ceremonies, touching upon law only incidentally; and that the Smritis themselves, which are received in common by all the schools, are no longer final authorities, even where they do treat of law. Vrihaspati says, "A decision must not be made by having recourse to the letter of written Codes; since, if no decision were made according to the reason of the Law (or immemorial usage), there might be a failure of justice."² The Mánava Dharma Shástra itself is, indeed, now regarded "as a work to be respected, rather than, in modern times, to be implicitly followed."³ For final authority, then, in deciding questions of law, recourse must be had to the Commentaries and Digests.

II. The Commentaries, which form the second great authority of Hindú law, are tolerably numerous. Some are merely explanatory of the text, but others are regarded as final authorities; and these latter, together with the Digests, the third class of law-books, are the immediate authorities for the opinions of lawyers in the respective schools where the doctrines they uphold may prevail. Many of the Commentaries on the Smritis,—such, for instance, as those on Menu's Institutes, which are merely explanatory of the text,—are not considered to be final authorities, any more than the Smritis themselves; but others again, which, by the introduction of quotations from other writers, and by interpreting and enlarging on the meaning of the author, partake so far of the nature of general Digests, are referred to for the final decision of questions. The Mitákshará is a remarkable instance of this; since, though professedly only a Commentary on the Smṛiti of Yājñavalkya, it is consulted as a final authority over the whole of India, with the exception of Bengal alone.

The Mánava Dharma Śástra has, as may be imagined, been the subject of several Commentaries; indeed, independently of its celebrity, and its supposed pre-eminence in antiquity and sanctity, its extreme conciseness has rendered it peculiarly attractive to the subtle-minded Hindú lawyers, and adapted to those ingenious refinements of reasoning, with which their works abound.

Amongst these Commentaries the most celebrated are, the one by Médhátithi, son of Víraswámi Bhatta, which, being partially lost, has been completed by other hands; the Comment by Govinda Raja; another by Dharanídharma; and the more famous gloss by Kullúka Bhatta, entitled the Manvartha Muktváli.

These Commentaries are all in considerable repute. Sir William Jones, however, characterizes the first as prolix and unequal; the second as concise but obscure; and the third as often erroneous; reserving for the Manvartha Muktváli that unqualified praise, in which he occasionally indulged when predilection somewhat warped his judgment. The period when Kullúka Bhatta flourished is not known; but he tells us himself that he was of a good family in Bengal, and that he resided on the banks of the Ganges at Benáres. It may be remarked that some ancient commentators speak of the Mánava Dharma Śástra as only adapted to the good ages, and not applicable to the time in which they wrote; a qualification nowhere expressed in the gloss of Kullúka Bhatta, and therefore arguing the superior antiquity of the latter: at the same time it is evident, from Kullúka's work itself, that opinions had already begun to change, and therefore that it must have been composed a considerable period subsequently to the promulgation of Menu's Institutes.

In addition to these Commentaries, M. Deslongchamps mentions, that, in preparing his edition of the Institutes, he made use of one by Rāghavānanda, entitled Manvarta Chandrikā, which he states to be in many instances more precise and clear than the gloss of Īśullūka.¹ Bhāguri is also said to have written a Commentary on the Mānava Dharma Śāstra. Steele mentions two other glosses on Menu as known among the Mahrattas—the Mādhava, by Śāyanāchārya, which is stated to be of general authority, especially in the Carnatic; and the Nandarajkrit, by Nandarāja: both of these works are spoken of as ancient; but as their authors are said to have been natives of Anagundi or Vijayanagar, the date of which is the middle of the fourteenth century, they cannot be very old.² Lastly, Colebrooke mentions a Commentary on Menu, which, however, he had never seen: it is called the Kāmadhēnu, and is cited by Śrīdharāchārya in his Smritisāra.

All the above mentioned Commentaries are merely explanatory of the text, and must not be considered as final authorities.

An excellent Commentary on the Institutes of Vishnu, entitled the Vaijayanti, was written by Nanda Pandita.

The copious gloss of Aparārka, of the royal house of Selāra, is supposed to be the most ancient Commentary on the Institutes of Yājñavalkya, and to be, therefore, earlier than the more celebrated Comment on the same text, the Mitāksharā of Vijnānēswara, who is understood for the most part to refer to the work of Aparārka, when citing opinions without naming the source from which he derives them.³

The Mitāksharā of Vijnānēswara, a celebrated ascetic, who is supposed to have resided in the north of India⁴, is a gloss on

The former of the two works above mentioned is probably the Parāsara Mādhaviya, which will be presently noticed; at any rate the Mādhava and Śāyana, spoken of by Steele, are the learned minister of Bukka Raya, king of Vijayanagar, and his brother the Commentator on the Vēdas.

the Yájnavalkya Dharma Shástra. It abounds, however, with apposite quotations from other legislators, and expositions of these quotations, as well as of the text it professes to illustrate: thus it combines the utility of a regular Digest with its original character; and it is referred to, and used for the same purposes as the professed Digests. Vijnánéswara, in his important work, follows the arrangement of the Yájnavalkya Dharma Shástra, and has divided his Comment into three parts: the first treats of duties, established rules, or ordinances; the second, of the laws and customs of the people, that is, of private contests and administrative law; and the third, of purification, the orders of devotion, penance, &c.¹

The Mitákshará of Vijnánéswara is one of the greatest, and, indeed, if we take into consideration the extent of its influence, the greatest of all the Hindú law authorities; "for it is received," as Colebrooke observes, "in all the schools of Hindu law, from Benares to the southern extremity of the peninsula of India, as the chief groundwork of the doctrines which they follow, and as an authority from which they rarely dissent. The works of other eminent writers have, concurrently with the Mitákshará, considerable weight in the schools of law which have respectively adopted them; as the Smriti Chandricá in the south of India; the Chintámani, Retnácará, and Viváda Chandra in Mithilá; the Víramitródaya and Camalá-cara at Benares; and the Mayúcha among the Mahrattas. But all agree in generally deferring to the authority of the Mitákshará, in frequently appealing to its text, and in rarely, and at the same modestly, dissenting from its doctrines on particular questions."² The Mitákshará must thus be considered as the main authority for all the schools of Law, with the *sole exception of that of Bengal.*¹ The actual time when Vijnánésvara composed his great work is not precisely ascertained; but, according to Colebrooke, its antiquity exceeds five hundred, and falls short of a thousand years.

The Mitákshará is, as has been already observed, a Comment on the text-book of Yájñavalkya; but it, in its turn, has been commented upon by various writers, and it will be most convenient to notice these Commentaries along with the work which they profess to illustrate. Colebrooke² mentions four Commentaries on the Mitákshará, but describes only two; one entitled the Subódhiní by Visvéśvara Bhatta, and another by a modern author, Bálam Bhatta. The Subódhiní is a collection of notes illustrating the obscure passages concisely but perspicuously: Bálam Bhatta's work is in the form of a perpetual comment, expounding the original word by word: he in general follows the Subódhiní so far as it extends. Nanda Pandita is mentioned by Sutherland as the author of a Commentary on the Mitákshará, entitled Pratitákshara.³

of the chapter on inheritance was published at the same place in 1832.¹ Its most important portion, viz. the sixth chapter which treats of inheritance, has been translated by Colebrooke²; it is impossible to rate too highly the utility of this translation, the learned author having accompanied it by elucidatory annotations and glosses from his own pen, and drawn from those numerous sources to which his peculiar opportunities and immense erudition gave him a ready access; every page bears testimony to his diligence in collecting materials, to his judgment in their selection, and to his learning in their interpretation. M. Orianne has also translated the chapter on inheritance from the Mitákshará.³

Sir William Hay Macnaghten, whose melancholy and violent death is fresh in the memory of all as being one of the earliest of the series of disastrous events that occurred during our first campaign in Afghanistan, devoted a large portion of his time to the successful cultivation of the native laws. Amongst other valuable works on this subject, he has left a translation of the Vyavahára Mātrika Prakṛana, treating of the administration of justice, and including the Law of Evidence and Pleading: this forms the first portion of the second book of Vijñānēśvara's work.⁴

In addition to the Commentaries on the Yājñavalkya Dharma Śāstra by Aparārka and Vijñānēśvara above noticed, there are extant Comments by Dēvabódha and Visvarūpa, and one by Sūlapāni, entitled the Dīpakalikā, a modern and succinct gloss, which is in deserved repute with the Gauriya school.¹

The text-book in verse attributed to Yama, brother of the seventh Menu, has been illustrated by a commentary from the pen of Kullúka Bhatta, the author of the celebrated gloss on the Mánava Dharma Shástra.

Nanda Pandita is the author of a Comment on the Parásara Smriti.

The MádHAVÍYA of Vidyáranyasvámi, named after MádHava Áchárya, the brother of its author, is very generally received as an authority with the southern schools, but especially in the Karnátaka country. It is formed on the basis of the Parásara Smriti, on which it is professedly a Comment: but as in this Smriti the second book, which ought to comprise the legal Institutes, is wanting, Vidyáranyasvámi has been forced to select a verse of the general import that princes are enjoined to conform to the dictates of justice, upon which to raise his superstructure, explaining what that justice is. Thus in fact, though not in name, the MádHAVÍYA becomes a digest of the law prevalent in the southern portion of the peninsula. Vidyáranyasvámi was the virtual founder of the Vidyánagara empire, and his work became the standard of its law, as well as being of some authority in the Benáres school. It is ascertained that the author of the MádHAVÍYA wrote about the middle of the fourteenth century.

The text book of Gautama was commented upon by Haradattáchárya, who resided in Dravida, and who is famous for his other compositions: his work, in which he occasionally quotes from other Smritis, is called Mitákshará, and must not be confounded with the treatise of Vijnánésvara.

The Varadarájya, by Varadarája, who also resided in the south of India, and was a native of the Súbah of Arcot, is in fact a general Digest; but it may be placed among the Commentaries, since it is framed principally on the Nárada Smriti. It is a work of great authority in the southern schools, and especially in the Dravida country.

There is a general and concise Commentary and Abridgement of the Smritis which is entitled the Chatur Vinsati Smriti Vyākhyā.

III. The Nibandhana Grantha, or Digests properly so called, are the third chief authority of Hīndū law. These Digests are either general or treat of particular and distinct portions of the Law, and consist of texts taken from the Smritis, with explanatory glosses, reconciling their apparent contradictions, in order to fulfil the precept of Menu—"When there are two sacred texts apparently inconsistent, both are held to be law, for both are pronounced by the wise to be valid and reconcileable."¹

The following account of the Digests might perhaps have included the names of other treatises; but it has been my object, whilst endeavouring to make it as complete as possible, to exclude all those works which do not relate to Vyavahāra or jurisprudence: they have been arranged, where practicable, with relation to the schools of law in which they chiefly obtain; but it must be borne in mind that many of them, in common with several of the glosses and commentaries above mentioned, are of less authority than others, and that in many cases their names even may not often be heard in an Indian Court of Justice.

The Dharma Ratna of Jīmūta Vāhana is a digest of the law according to the Gauriya school; the chapter on Inheritance, the celebrated Dāya Bhāga is extant, and is the standard authority of the law in Bengal. This treatise is on almost every disputed point opposed to the Mitāksharā; and it is, indeed, in this very branch of the law, viz. Inheritance, that we find the greatest difference in doctrine in the various schools. Jīmūta Vāhana probably lived and wrote between the age of Vijnānēsvara and that of Raghunandana, the latter of whom is known to have flourished at the beginning of the

Two editions of the text of the Dāya Bhāga, together with the commentary of Śrīkrishna Tarkálankára have appeared at Calcutta, the former in the year 1813 and the latter in 1829:¹ a translation in Prakrit was published at Calcutta in 1816.²

The translation of Jímúta Váhana's chapter on Inheritance by Colebrooke is the first of the two treatises on Inheritance published by that eminent scholar and lawyer, the Mitákshará being the second. This version of the Dāya Bhāga is annotated, commented upon, and illustrated with equal ability and learning.

The earliest Commentary upon the Dāya Bhāga is that of Śrínátha Áchárya Chúdámáni, which is characterised by Colebrooke as, in general, a very excellent exposition of the text.³ The next in order of time is the gloss of Achyuta Chakravartí (author also of a Commentary of the Sraddha Vivéka): it cites frequently the gloss of Chúdámáni, and is itself quoted by Mahésvara: this last is posterior in date to the Commentaries by Chúdámáni and Achyuta, and probably anterior to that of Śrīkrishna Tarkálankára, which will be presently noticed, though the two seem to be nearly contemporary. The Commentary of Mahésvara differs greatly from the interpretation furnished by Śrīkrishna, both in meaning and in the manner of deducing the sense; but neither author seems to have been acquainted with the other's work.

The Commentary by Śrīkrishna Tarkálankára is the most celebrated of all the treatises explanatory of the text of the Dāya Bhāga. Colebrooke says: "It is the work of a very acute logician, who interprets his author and reasons on his arguments with great accuracy and precision, and who always illustrates the text, generally confirms its positions, but not unfrequently modifies or amends them. Its authority has been long gaining ground in the schools of law throughout Bengal, and it has almost banished from them the other expositions of the Dāya Bhāga, being ranked in general estimation next after the treatises of Jīmúta Váhana and of Raghunandana.¹ This Commentary has been chiefly and preferably used by Colebrooke in his translation. Another gloss of the text is mentioned by Colebrooke as bearing the name of Raghunandana, but he does not consider it as genuine. Rámanátha Vidyá Váchaspati is also said to have written a Commentary on the Dāya Bhāga.

Śrīkrishna Tarkálankára has written a good epitome of the Law of Inheritance entitled Dāya Krama Saṅgraha, which, though professedly an original work, agrees throughout with the learned writer's commentary on the Dāya Bhāga.

The text of the Dāya Krama Sangraha has been edited, with an English translation, by Mr. Wynch², and was also published separately at Calcutta in the year 1828.³

The Smṛiti Tatwa of Raghunandana Vandyaghatīya, the greatest authority of law in the Gauriya school, is a complete Digest, in twenty-seven volumes, and is described by Goverdhen Kál as "the grandest repository of all that can be known on a subject so curious in itself, and so interesting to the British Government."⁴ This great writer, who, as I have already mentioned, lived in the beginning of the sixteenth century, was a pupil of Vásudéva Sárvaabhauma: he is often cited by the name of Smárta Bhattachárya.

The Dáya Tatwa, or that portion of the Smṛiti Tatwa of Raghunandana which relates to Inheritance, is highly spoken of by Colebrooke, who says: "It is indeed an excellent compendium of the law, in which Jímúta Váhana's doctrines are in general strictly followed, but are commonly delivered in his own words, in brief extracts from his text. On a few points, however, Raghunandana has differed from his master, and in some instances he has supplied deficiencies."¹

Káshirāma has written a Commentary on the Dáya Tatwa of Raghunandana which is useful, and nearly agrees with the views taken by Śríkrishna in his interpretation of the work of Jímúta Váhana.

The whole work of Raghunandana was published in the original at Serampore in the years 1834—35, and again at Calcutta about the year 1840.² The text of the Dáya Tatwa was also published at Calcutta in the year 1828³; and the text of the Vyavahára Tatwa of the same author appeared at the same place in the same year.⁴

The Dáya Rahasya or Smṛiti Ratnávalí, by Rámanátha Vidya, is of considerable authority in some districts of Bengal; but though a work of merit, it differs both from Jímúta Váhana and Raghunandana, and thus tends to create uncertainty.

abridgment of the Dāya Bhāga and Dāya Tatwa, are also Bengal authorities.

Késava Misra, a native of Mithila, is the author of the Chhandóga Parisishta and the Dvāita Parisishta: the former, together with its commentary, the Parisishta Prakāsa, are works of great authority, and treat of the duties of priests: the latter is a more general treatise.

The Vivāda Ratnākara, a general digest compiled under the superintendence of Chandésvara, Minister of Harasinhadéva, King of Mithila, and who was himself the author of other law tracts; the Vivāda Chintamani, the text of which was published at Calcutta in the year 1837¹; the Vyavahāra Chintamani; and the other works of Vachespāti Misra, commonly cited by the name of Misra, are all considered as great authorities in Mithila; as are likewise the Vivāda Chandra, and other treatises by the learned lady Lachinádévī, who wrote under the name of her nephew, Misaru Misra. Sri Karáchārya, and his son Srínáthachārya, were also celebrated in the Mithila school of law; the former as the author of a treatise on inheritance; the latter, of the Áchárya Chandriká, a tract on the duties of the fourth class.

The Smritisāra, or Smrityarthasara, by Sridharáchārya, a treatise on religious duties, but mentioning civil matters incidentally, is according to the Mithila school: it quotes the Pradipa, Kalpadruma, and Kalpalatá, works otherwise unknown. There seem to be several Smritisāras. Sir. W. Macnaghten mentions one by Harináthopadhyaya, which is of authority in Mithila²; and there is another by Yadavendra. The Smriti Samuchchaya, or Smriti Sāra Samuchchaya, is also a Mithila authority, and is known amongst the Mahrattas: it is apparently a short work.

The Madana Pārijāta, a treatise on civil and religious duties, by Visvésvara Bhatta, but containing a chapter on inheritance, is likewise a Mithila work, and prevails also in the Mahratta country: it quotes the Sāparārka, the Smriti Chandrika, and the Hémadri. This work was composed by order of Madana Pála, a prince of the Játh race, and is sometimes cited in his name. Sir W. Macnaghten calls the author Madanopadhyáya.

Súlapáni, a native of Mithila, who wrote a commentary on the Mitákshará, already noticed, is also the author of a treatise on penance and expiation, which is consulted as an authority both in Bengal and Mithila.

The Víramitrodaya of Mitra Misra is a treatise on Vyavahára in general according to the doctrines of the Benáres school, and systematically examines and refutes the opinions laid down by Jímúta Váhana and Raghunandana.¹

The Sanskrit text of the Víramitrodaya was printed at Calcutta in 1815.²

The Viváda Tándava of Kamalákara, younger brother of Dinakara Bhatta, and son of Ramakrishna Bhatta, is on the same side of the argument, and defends the doctrines of Vij-nánésvara in opposition to the writers of the Gauriya school.

The Nirnaya Sindhu is a modern work, but of considerable authority at Benares, as well as amongst the Mahrattas: it treats principally of rites and ceremonies, touching incidentally only on questions of a legal nature. The author is Kamalákara.

The original text of the Nirnaya Sindhu was published at Calcutta in the year 1833.³

Neither Mitra Misra nor Kamalákara differ from the Mitákshará on any important point.

The Vyavahára Mayúkha of Nílakantha is the greatest authority, after the Mitákshará, in the Maharashtra school, and is one of the twelve treatises by the same author, all bearing the same title of Mayúkha, and treating of religious duties, rules

An edition of the text of the Vyavahára Mayúkha was published at Bombay in the year 1826, by order of the Government.¹

Mr. Borradaile, late of the Bombay Civil Service, and a Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the author of the valuable Bombay Reports, has published a translation of the Vyavahára Mayúkha, to which he has affixed annotations referring to passages of other works on Hindú law, and rendering his version of peculiar utility to the student of the law of that side of India.²

The Smṛiti Kustubha, by Ananda Déva Kasikar, a Koku-nust Chitpawani Brahman, was compiled by desire of Baj Bahádur, otherwise called Chandra Déva. It is one of twelve works bearing the title of Kustubha, all of which are to be met with at Benáres: it is known at Poona, and treats of Áchára, Vyavahára, and Práyaschitta.

The Hémádri, by Hémádri Bhatta Kasikar, is a general Digest of some antiquity, containing twelve divisions, and is of authority on the Bombay side of India.

The following works are mentioned by Steele as of authority in the Mahratta country.

The Dyot, by Gaga Bhatta Kasikar, a Deshast Brahman, was written about a century ago: it comprises twelve divisions, and treats of all subjects.

The Pursuram Prutap was composed by order of Sabají

Pratap, Raja of the eastern Telinga country, about five hundred years ago. It is a general Digest.

The Prithí Chandród is also a general Digest treating of Áchára, Vyavahára, and Práyaschitta.

The Vyavahára Sekar, by Nagojee Bhatta, a Deshast Brahman of Benáres, is a work of general notoriety.

The Sar Sangraha is a work treating of Práyaschitta Smárta, Vyavahára, &c.; but not fully.

The Madana Ratna, by Madana Singh, a Brahman of Hindústán, is a treatise on Áchára, Vyavahára, and Práyaschitta of notoriety.

The Achararka, by Sunkur Bhatta Kasikar, is a work on Áchára and Vyavahára of general notoriety.

The Sarasvati Vilása, a general Digest, attributed to the King Pratáparúdra Déva, of the Kakateya family, but most likely compiled under his direction, is one of the chief authorities, after the Mitákshará, in the whole of the southern portion of India. It was the standard law-book of his dominions, which comprehended the entire Andra country, and is still a book of great authority to the northward of the Pennar, where many customs exist, particularly regarding land tenures, which are derived from it; but it is even there, in some measure, subordinate to the authority of the Mitákshará.

The Smriti Chandriká, by Devanda Bhatta, and which has been supposed by Colebrooke, who mentions it in terms of great praise, to have been the basis upon which the Mádhavíya was formed by Vidyáranyasvámi, is a general and excellent treatise according to the doctrine of the Dravida school. This, as well as the preceding work, is of high authority in the Andra country.

The Dhárésvariya is mentioned by Ellis as a general Digest, which, though written by an author supposed to have lived in the north of India, yet is received as an authority in the south.

Several writers have composed treatises especially devoted to the Law of Adoption; of these the Dattaka Mīmāṃsā of Nanda Pandita, the author of the Vaijayanti, and the Pratitākshara, already noticed, is the most esteemed Sutherland, in describing this work, says: "The Dattaka Mīmāṃsā, as its name denotes, is an argumentative treatise, or disquisition, on the subject of Adoption; and though, from the author's extravagant affectation of logic, the work is always tedious, and his arguments often weak and superfluous; and though the style is frequently obscure, and not unrarely inaccurate, it is, on the whole, compiled with ability and minute attention to the subject, and seems not unworthy of the celebrity it has attained."¹

The Dattaka Chandrikā by Devanda Bhatta, the author of the Smṛiti Chandrikā, is a concise treatise on Adoption of great authority, and is supposed to have been the basis of Nanda Pandita's more elaborate work.

An edition of the text of the Dattaka Mīmāṃsā, and the Dattaka Chandrikā appeared at Calcutta in 1817.²

The Dattaka Mīmāṃsā, and the Dattaka Chandrikā, have been admirably translated by Sutherland; and the synopsis of the Law of Adoption, which he has appended to his work, though succinct, is eminently useful.³ A French translation of the Dattaka Chandrikā, by M. Orianne, also appeared in the year 1844.⁴

In addition to these treatises, Ellis mentions the Datta Mīmāṃsā by Vidyāranyasvāmi, the Datta Chandrikā by Gan-gadéva Vazhey, the Datta Dīpaka by Vyásachārya, the Datta

Kustabha by Nagóji Bhatta, and the Datta Bháshana by Krishna Misra, as general Digests of the Law of Adoption.¹ He however gives no description of these works, and I do not find them spoken of by other writers on the subject. Sir Francis Macnaghten also speaks of a treatise on Adoption called the Dattaka Nirnaya, as the compilation of a celebrated Pandit of the name of Sri Natha Bhatta.²

The Law of Adoption does not exhibit much conflict of doctrine between the several schools, although some differences of opinion may be observed amongst the individual writers. It must be remarked, however, as an important distinction, that although the Dattaka Mímánsá and Dattaka Chandrika are equally respected all over India, yet where they differ, the doctrine of the latter is adhered to in Bengal, and by the southern Jurists; while the former is held to be the infallible guide in the provinces of Mithila and Benáres.³

Heláyudha, who is supposed to have flourished more than seven hundred years since, is the author of the Nyáyá Sarvaswa, the Brahmana Sarvaswa, and the Pandita Sarvaswa, as well as of other tracts on the administration of justice and the duties of cast.

Lakshmídhara wrote a treatise on the administration of justice, and also a Digest entitled Kalpataru, which is often cited.

Narasinha, son of Ramachandra, is the author of the Góvin-dárnava and other law tracts.

Jítendriya is often cited in the Mitákshará, and in the Digest of Jagannátha Terkapanchánana.

Since the establishment of the British empire in India, three several Digests of the Hindú law have been composed by native authors. The first, the Vivádárnava Sétu, was compiled by order of Warren Hastings; the second, the Viváda Sárárnava was written, at the request of Sir William Jones, by Serváru Trivédī, a Mithila lawyer; and the third and most celebrated, is the Viváda Bhagárnava of Jagannátha Terkapanchánana, which has become generally known by the translation of the learned Colebrooke.

The first of these works was proposed as early as the 18th of March 1773, at the opening of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal¹; and in December in the same year it was reported to the President that the Digest was nearly completed in the Sanskrit language, and that a translation was being made into Persian for the purpose of being again translated into English. Early in the following year Warren Hastings transmitted a specimen of the English version² to the Court of Directors; and in the same year Mr. Halhed published the entire work in English, under the title of "A Code of Gentoo Laws."

The letter from Sir William Jones to the Supreme Council of Bengal, already quoted, at once describes and condemns this Code. "It consists," says the learned Judge, "like the Roman Digest, of authentic texts, with the names of their several authors regularly prefixed to them, and explained where an explanation is requisite, in short notes, taken from Commentaries of high authority. It is, as far as it goes, a very excellent work; but though it appears extremely diffuse on subjects rather curious than useful, and though the chapter on Inheritance be copious and exact, yet the other important branch of jurisprudence, the Law of Contracts, is very succinctly and superficially discussed, and bears an inconsiderable proportion to the rest of the work. But whatever may be the merit of the original, the translation of it has no authority, and is of no other use than to suggest inquiries on the many dark passages we find in it. Properly speaking, indeed, we cannot call it a translation; for though Mr. Halhed performed his part with fidelity, yet the Persian interpreter had supplied him only with a loose, injudicious epitome of the original

Sanscrit, in which abstract many essential passages are omitted; though several notes of little consequence are interpolated, from a vain idea of elucidating or improving the text.”¹

The letter from which the above extract is taken proposed to the Government the compilation of a new Digest, which was to be confined to the Laws of Contracts and Inheritances, and to be based upon the great work of Raghunandana. The result of this proposition, which was gladly accepted by the Governor-General and the Members of Council, was the composition of the Viváda Sáránava and the Viváda Bhangárnava. Sir W. Jones had himself undertaken a translation of these works, together with an introductory discourse, for which he had prepared “a mass of extremely curious materials²,” when the hand of death arrested his labours.

The Viváda Bhangárnava, by Jagannátha Tarkapanchánana³, was, as above stated, compiled by its author at the suggestion of Sir W. Jones, and after his death was translated by Colebrooke.⁴ Like the Viváda Sáránava, it treats only of the Law of Contracts and Successions, omitting altogether the Law of Evidence, the Rules of Pleading, the Rights of Landlord and Tenant, and other topics, which, to render a Digest more generally useful in those Courts where the English law does not prevail, might have been advantageously inserted.

mentary by Jagannátha, generally taken from former ones, and frequently containing frivolous disquisitions. The arrangement of the work renders its use inconvenient in the extreme; and it has been not inaptly characterised as “the best book for a counsel and the worst for a judge.” Colebrooke himself almost disclaims it. In the Preface to the translation of the treatises on Inheritance he says: “And, indeed, the author’s method of discussing together the discordant opinions maintained by the lawyers of the several schools, without distinguishing, in an intelligible manner, which of them is the received doctrine of each school, but, on the contrary, leaving it uncertain whether any of the opinions stated by him do actually prevail, or which doctrine must now be considered in force, and which obsolete, renders his work of little utility to persons conversant with the law, and of still less service to those who are not versed in Indian jurisprudence, especially to the English reader, for whose use, through the medium of a translation, the work was particularly intended.”¹

The doctrines maintained by Jagannátha are taken commonly from the Bengal school, and sometimes originate with himself; in which latter case, of course, they are not to be considered as of paramount authority: but at the same time he ought not to be held responsible when his work is cited, as, it seems, was frequently done in former times by the southern Pandits, in opposition to the opinions maintained by the abler authors of the Mitákshará, the Smriti Chandriká, and the Mádhavíya. Colebrooke’s regret, that the Pandits of the south of India had thus been furnished with means of adopting, in their answers, whatever doctrine might happen to be in accordance with the bias they might have contracted², cannot be received as a condemnation of Jagannátha’s work, but only of a venal practice of the law-officers of the southern Courts, which should have been discountenanced at the outset. Notwithstanding the unfavourable opinion of the Viváda Bhargánava pronounced by its learned translator, and although this opinion is certainly, in a great measure, justified by the work itself, there is no doubt but that it contains an immense mass of most valuable information, more especially on the Law of Contracts, and will be found eminently useful by those who will take the trouble of familiarizing themselves with the author's style and method of arrangement.

In addition to these three general Digests may be mentioned the Vyavasthâratnamâlâ by Srî Lakshmi Nârâyana Nyâyânkâra. It is a modern work, modelled after the European plan of a Catechism, written in the form of questions and answers, in the vernacular language of Bengal, with quotations in Sanskrit from books of established authority, adduced in support of the principles advanced. The work of Srî Lakshmi Nârâyana contains a succinct view of the law of inheritance according to the doctrines of Jîmûtâ Vâhana contrasted with those of the Mitâksharâ, together with a short treatise on Adoption. This work was published at Calcutta in 1830.¹

I have now, I think, described, if not the whole of the Hindú law-books now extant, all those which treat of Vyavahâra, and which are alone applicable to the Hindú law as administered in British India. It remains to recapitulate the names of such works as are usually referred to as final authorities in the different schools, excluding the text-books and mere explanatory comments. They are as follows:—

1. Gauriya, or Bengal school.—Dharma Ratna. Dâya Bhâga, and its Commentaries by Srîkrishna Tarkâlankâra, and Srînâtha Âchârya Chûdâmani. Dâya Krama Sangraha. Smriti Tatwa. Dâya Tatwa. Vivâdârnava Sêtu. Vivâda Sârârnava. Vivâda Bhangârnava.
2. Mithila school.—Mitâksharâ. Vivâda Ratnâkara. Vivâda Chintâmani. Vyavahâra Chintâmani. Dwaita Parisishta. Vivâda Chandra. Smriti Sâra. Samuchchaya. Madana Parijâta.
3. Benâres school.—Mitâksharâ. Vîramitrodaya. Mâdhavîya. Vivâda Tandava. Nirnaya Sindhu.

4. Maharashtra School.—Mitāksharā. Mayúkha. Nirnaya Sindhu. Hémadri. Smriti Kustubha. Mádhavíya.
5. Drávida School.—
 - (a) Drávida division.—Mitāksharā. Mádhavíya. Sarasvati Vilása. Varadarájya.
 - (b) Karnátaka division.—Mitāksharā. Mádhavíya. Sarasvati Vilása.
 - (c) Andra division.—Mitāksharā. Mádhavíya. Smriti Chandriká. Sarasvati Vilása.

In questions of Adoption the Dattaka Mimánsá is preferred in Bengal and in the south; the Dattaka Chandriká in Mithila and Benáres.

It must not be inferred that these are all the works cited by the lawyers of the several schools, but that they are those quoted most frequently: nor, again, must it be concluded that they are all constantly referred to in the Law Courts. Borradaile says, that on the Bombay side of India, three books alone were mentioned by the Shastrís as authorities in his time; viz. Menu, the Mitāksharā, and the Mayúkha¹; and Colebrooke states that in Benáres the ordinary phraseology of references for law opinions of Pandits from the native Judges of Courts established there, previous to the institution of Adawlut superintended by English Judges and Magistrates, required the Pandit, to whom the reference was addressed, “to consult the Mitāksharā,” and report the exposition of the law there found applicable to the case propounded.²

Lastly, It must be distinctly remembered, that no work of the Bengal school can be considered to be concurrent or interchangeable with the writings which prevail in the other schools, or of any authority out of the limits where the Bengálí is the language of the people, with the exception however, already noticed, regarding the Law of Adoption: and that, although the works above enumerated, not being according to the Bengal school, are, for the most part, only quoted in those schools under which they are arranged, there seems to be no reason why such works might not be received as authorities indiscriminately in Mithila, Benáres, and the Mahratta and Drávida countries, but of course being of greater or less weight according to the custom of the countries.

Before I proceed to the description of the fourth class of works on Hindú law, which I have already alluded to, viz. those by European authors, I may mention two modern native compilations which cannot with propriety be ranged under any of the preceding heads. They are collections of opinions compiled from the Dáya Bhága and other works, and seem to correspond with the books of Fatwas, which form so considerable a portion of the Muhammiadan legal literature: the authors of these collections are Ramjeeyn Tarkálankára, and Lakshmí Náráyana Nyáyálankára.¹ I have never seen these compilations, but they are mentioned in a Letter from the Bengal Government to the Court of Directors, dated the 22d of Feb. 1827, as being among the works encouraged or patronised by the Government.²

It must be acknowledged that the method pursued by the Hindú writers on jurisprudence is often very obscure, and always highly uncongenial to European taste; the student will therefore turn with pleasure to the elegant work of Sir Thomas Strange, the sound, though often too severe, criticism of Sir Francis Macnaghten, and the concise and explicit Principles of Hindú Law by his son.

Sir Francis Macnaghten, who was the first writer of an original treatise on Hindú Law, was promoted to the Bench of the Supreme Court at Madras in May 1809, having previously acted as Advocate-General at Calcutta, where, it is said, he had little or no employment except in his official capacity³: he was afterwards, in July 1815, removed to the Supreme Court at Bengal. In the year 1824 he published his *Considerations on the Hindú Law*¹, which he himself states he commenced and completed in that year. It is a valuable work consisting of an enunciation of principles, illustrated copiously by arguments and decided cases, which are, in most instances, given in extenso: the last two chapters are translations from the Mitákshará, and have been already mentioned. The Preface to the Considerations speaks in the most disparaging terms of the Hindú Law, and yet, at the same time, advocates its preservation: it is to be regretted that the whole work is pervaded by a spirit of exaggerated self-estimation and unjust depreciation of every thing not consonant with the author's professional prejudices.

Sir Thomas Strange, who filled successively at Madras the offices of Recorder and first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Judicature, published the first edition of his admirable work on Hindú Law in 1825, after several years spent in the collection of materials; and a second and revised edition appeared in 1830.² Sir Thomas Strange seems to have possessed most of the qualities which are requisite for an Indian Judge: his disposition was mild, and his manners courteous: and although he had not attained any knowledge of the languages of India, he was imbued with a strong predilection in favour of the natives, and spared no pains, and omitted no opportunity of gaining information on the subject of their laws and institutions. The amiability of his temper is peculiarly evinced by the manner in which he speaks³ of Sir Francis Macnaghten's severe remarks upon one of his judgments⁴, affording a marked contrast to the caustic and arrogant style in which Sir Francis too frequently indulged. The excellent work of Sir Thomas Strange leaves little to desire, so far as regards the Hindú Law of the south of India; whilst the clearness of arrangement, the aptness of the illustrations, and the elegance of its diction, well entitle it to a place by the side of the Commentaries of Blackstone. The cases which the learned author has appended to his work, under the title of "Responsa Prudentum," are very valuable, and they are rendered still more so by the numerous notes and illustrations which are constantly added by Colebrooke, Sutherland, and Ellis.

The Principles and Precedents of Hindú Law¹, by Sir William Hay Macnaghten, merit the attentive study of all who desire to attain a knowledge of that law: they are clear, concise, and lucid in their order, and the cases given under the title of "Precedents," are of a most important nature. The latter are entitled to great weight, as having been selected, as we are told by the learned author himself, with the utmost care and attention. The whole work was composed, as appears from the Preface, after collecting all the information that could be procured from every quarter, and after a careful examination of all the original authorities, and of all the opinions of the Pandits recorded in the Supreme Court at Calcutta for a series of years. In a late judgment delivered by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, Sir W. Macnaghten's work is mentioned as by far the most important authority amongst the Hindú law-books by European authors; and it is stated, on the information of Sir Edward Ryan, to be constantly referred to in the Supreme Court at Calcutta as all but decisive of any point of Hindú law contained in it; and that more respect would be paid to it by the Judges there, than to the opinions of the Pandits.²

the Governor in Council of Bombay, is inconvenient of reference, on account of its want of arrangement; but it contains a mass of useful information, and may always be consulted with advantage. He divides his work into three parts, Law, Casts, and Existing Customs; the two latter divisions being especially useful, as containing a quantity of matter not to be met with elsewhere. The same remark applies to the two Appendices, one on the customs of particular Casts of Poona, the other on the customs of the Gosayins. Mr. Steele has prefaced his work by what is designated a List of Sanskrit Law-books; but it is encumbered with the titles of a number of works which are foreign to the subject, and the names of all are so disfigured by an uncouth rendering of the Mahratta pronunciation as to be scarcely intelligible.

A treatise on the Hindú Law of Inheritance, Gift, &c., has recently appeared at Calcutta, by Mr. Eberling¹; but, so far as I have been able to ascertain, no copy of it has as yet reached this country.

Colebrooke's treatise on Obligations and Contracts² hardly comes within the class of works treating of Hindú law, inasmuch as it relates to the subject of contracts generally; he has, however, illustrated the law of contract throughout by reference to the Hindú system; and the student will find much that is valuable regarding that system under those titles which Colebrooke has completed. Unfortunately the work was never finished, and the Preface, together with the preliminary and introductory matter, promised by the author in the first and only published part, never saw the light.

The last mentioned treatise completes the list of works relating to the Hindú law by Europeans. It is to be regretted that they are so few in number; but when taken in conjunction with the translations from the original works, they are sufficient to enable the student to acquire a very considerable knowledge of the Hindú system of jurisprudence.

(2) THE MUHAMMADAN LAW.

(a) On the Sources of the Law.

The Muhammadan law, like that of the Hindús, is professedly founded upon revelation; and the Korán, though variously interpreted, is regarded, by the Musulmán's of every denomination, as the fountain-head and first authority of all law, religious, civil, and criminal.

Whenever the Korán was not found applicable to any particular case, which soon happened as the social relations and wants of the Arabs became more extended, recourse was had to the Sunnah (precept and example), or Hadís (sayings, tradition), that is, the oral law, which was, and is at the present day, held to be only second in authority to the Korán itself. Thus the Korán and the Sunnah stand in the same relation to each other, as the Mikrah and Mishnah of the Jews: and it may be remarked, that the words in both the Arabic and Hebrew languages are derived from similar roots, and have the same significations.

The Sunnah or Hadís¹, the second authority of Muhammadan law, comprises the actual precepts, actions, and sayings of the Prophet himself, not written down during his life time,

¹ The word Sunnah is used generally, to signify all the traditions both of the sayings and doings of the Prophet, and the term Hadís is employed in the same comprehensive sense. M. De Slane says, "The distinction between the Hadíth (sayings), and the Sunan (doings), is not attended to by doctors of the Moslim law: both are equally authoritative." كتاب وفيات الاعيان

M'Guckin de Slane, Vol. I. Introduction, p. xviii. note. 3 Vols. 4to.
London, printed for the Oriental Translation Fund in 1842—45. M. De Slane's translation is a most valuable work to those who wish to gain a knowledge of the legal literature of the Muhammadans, as he has added to the text numerous learned notes, replete with curious and interesting information relating to the Muhammadan law and lawyers. It is to this translation that all the references to Ibn Khallikan, made in the notes to the following pages, must be understood to apply.

but preserved by tradition, and handed down by authorised persons. These precepts and traditions are divided into two classes, viz. the Kads (holy), which are supposed to have been directly communicated to Muḥammad by the angel Gabriel; and the Nabawí (prophetic), or those which are from the Prophet's own mouth, and are not considered as inspired¹; both these, however, have the force of law, and, with the Korán, constituted the whole body of the law at the time of Muhammad's death. "I leave with you," said the Prophet, "two things, which, so long as you adhere thereto, will preserve you from error: these are, the Book of God, and my practice."

In addition to the Korán and the Sunnah or Hadís, there are two other great sources of Muhammadan law, viz. the Ijmáa (concurrence), and the Kiyás (ratiocination).

The Ijmáa is composed of the decisions of the companions of Muhammad (Sahábah), the disciples of the companions (Tábiúún), and the pupils of the disciples: these decisions are said to have been unanimous, and are next in authority to the Korán and the Sunnah.

Both the Sunnah and the Ijmáa were originally preserved by tradition, and were transmitted through successive generations by learned men, who made the study of the Korán and the traditions, and their memorial preservation, an especial object. These learned men were called Háfiz (preserver)²; and in communicating their narratives to their disciples, they invariably mentioned, as a kind of preface, the series of persons through whom they had successively passed before they came into their possession: this preface is called the Isnád (support), and according to the credibility attached to the narrators whose names are enumerated as the Isnáds, depends the authenticity and authority of the tradition related; some sects absolutely rejecting traditions which are received as authoritative by others. The Isnáds were retained in the books after the Sunnah and the Ijmáa had become reduced to writing, and collected together in the works which will presently be noticed.

The Kiyás, which is the fourth source of the Muhammadan law, consists of analogical deductions derived from a comparison of the Korán, the Sunnah, and the Ijmáa, when these do not apply either collectively or individually to any particular case. This exercise of private judgment is allowed, with a greater or less extension of limit, by the different Muhammadan sects; some, however, refusing its authority altogether.

Since it appears, then, that although the sources of the law are the same throughout the Muhammadan world, there is a variety in the manner of their reception, and in the laws derived from them, it becomes necessary to describe shortly the principal sects, and to state the chief points of difference in their opinions as to the sources of the law.

(b) On the Principal Muhammadan Sects, and their Legal Doctrines.

The dissensions which arose on the death of the Prophet, with regard to the succession to the Khiláfat, were revived with renewed fury when, on the murder of Othmán, the noble and unfortunate Âlí succeeded to the dignity of Amír al-Múminín; and they eventually caused the division of Islám into two great parties or sects, called respectively the Sunnís, and the Shíâhs¹, who differ materially in the interpretation of the Korán, and in admitting or rejecting various portions of the oral law. The hatred entertained between these rival sects has been the cause of constant religious wars and persecutions scarcely to be surpassed in the history of any nation or creed, and still separates the followers of Muhammad into two classes, by a barrier more insurmountable than that which divides the Roman Catholic from the Protestant.

The Sunnís, who assume to themselves the appellation of orthodox, uphold the succession of the Khalífahs Abú Bakr, Omar, and Othmán, and deny the right of supremacy, either spiritual or temporal to the posterity of Álí. They are divided into an infinity of sects; but of these it will be sufficient in this place to notice the four principal only, which agree one with another in matters of faith, but differ slightly in the form of prayer, and more especially with regard to the exercise of the Kiyás, and the legal interpretation of the Korán where the latter relates to property.¹

These four principal sects, which are called after their founders, originated with certain eminent Mujtahid Imáms, named respectively Abú Hanífeh, Málík Ben Anas, Muhammad Ash Sháfí, and Ahmad Ben Hanbal. Two other Imáms were also the founders of Sunní sects: these were Abú Ábd Allah Sufyán as-Sauri², and Abú Dáwúd Sulaimán az-Záhirí³,

² As-Saurí was born at Kúfah in A.H. 95 (A.D. 713), and died at Basrah, where he had concealed himself in order to avoid accepting the office of Kází, in A.H. 161 (A.D. 777).—Ibn Khall. Vol. II. p. 577; An-Nawawí, p. ٢٨٦ but they had but few followers; and a seventh sect, which had for its chief the celebrated historian At-Tabarí¹, did not long survive the death of its author.

Abú Hanífah Nuamán Ben Sábit al-Kúfí, the founder of the first of the four chief sects of Sunnís, and the principal of the Mujtahid Imáms who looked to the Kiyás as a main authority upon which to base decisions, was born at Kúfah in A.H. 80 (A.D. 699), at which time four, or, as some authors say, six of the companions of the Prophet, were still living. Abú Hanífah died in prison at Baghdád in A.H. 150 (A.D. 767)², having been placed in confinement by the Khalífah Al-Mansúr, on account of his having refused to accept of the office of Káží, from a consciousness of his own inefficiency; a refinement of modesty of which the Arabian lawyers may well be proud, since it is doubtful whether the biography of the jurisconsults of all nations and ages would present another instance of the same self-denial and suffering from similar motives. Unluckily, however, for Abú Hanífah's character, his consistency does not seem to have equalled his conscientious self-depreciation; for we find that he was originally a strong partisan of the house of Âlí; and it is even hinted that the cause of his subsequent change of opinion was to be traced to interested motives. The doctrine of Abú Hanífah, at first, prevailed chiefly in Írák; but afterwards became spread over Assyria, Africa, and Máwará an-Nahar. It is at present very generally received throughout Turkey and Tátary, and, together with that of his two disciples, Abú Yúsuf and Muhammad, jecting the Kiyás. He was born at Kúfah in A.H. 202 (A.D. 817), and died at Baghdád in A.H. 270 (A.D. 883). He was a great partisan of Ash-Sháfií.—Ibn Khall. Vol. I. p. 501. is the chief, and, with but rare exceptions, the only authority which governs the Sunnī law in India.

Abú Âbd Allah Málík Ben Anas, the founder of the second Sunnī sect, was born at Madínah in A.H. 95 (A.D. 713), and died at the same place in A.H. 179 (A.D. 795). From the circumstance of his birth and death occurring at that city, he is sometimes called the Imám Dár al-Hijrah. Málík, in his youth, had the advantage of the society of Sihl Ben Saad, almost the sole surviving companion of the Prophet; and it is supposed that from him he derived his extreme veneration for the traditions. He was also intimate with Abú Hanífah, but he never imbibed that doctor's excessive partiality for the Kiyás.¹ The tenets of Málík Ben Anas are principally respected in Barbary and the northern states of Africa: they are not known to prevail in any portion of India.

Abú Âbd Allah Muhammad Ben Idrís ash-Sháfi'î was born at Âskalán in A.H. 150 (A.D. 767), and eventually became the founder of the third of the chief Sunnī sects. Ash-Sháfi'î had the distinguished honour of belonging to the same stock as the Prophet himself, being descended from Âbd al-Mutallib, the son of Âbd Manáf, the ancestor of Muhammad. For this reason he is known by the surname of Al-Kuraishí al-Mutallibí. In his youth he was a pupil of Málík Ben Anas: he died at Cairo in A.H. 204 (A.D. 819).² Ash-Sháfi'î's doctrine has a limited range amongst the Musulmán inhabitants of the sea-coast of the peninsula of India³; but the chief seats of its authority are Egypt and Arabia. It is also said to be in some repute amongst the Malays and the Muhammadans of the Eastern Archipelago. His followers were at one time very numerous in Khurásán; but at present his opinions are rarely quoted, either in Persia or India.

Abú Âbd Allah Ahmad ash-Shaibání al-Marwazí, generally known by the name of Ibn Hanbal, the founder of the fourth Sunní sect, was born at Baghdád in A.H. 164 (A.D. 780), and died in A.H. 241 (A.D. 855). This learned doctor, who was a pupil of Ash-Sháfi, strenuously upheld the opinion that the Korán was uncreated, and that it had existed from all eternity. Since, however, it happened unfortunately that the Khálifah Al-Mustásim maintained the contrary doctrine, Ibn Hanbal was greatly persecuted for his persistent opposition to that monarch's favourite belief. It is related in history that no fewer than 800,000 men and 60,000 women were present at this doctor's funeral; and that 20,000 Christians, Jews, and Magians became Muhammadans on the day of his death.¹ Whatever degree of credit may be attached to this extraordinary statement, its mere existence sufficiently attests the astonishing reputation which Ibn Hanbal had acquired during his lifetime, and the veneration in which he was held after his death. Persecution, however, soon thinned the ranks of his followers; and though at one time they were very numerous, the Hanbalís are now seldom to be met with out of the confines of Arabia.

Of these four chief sects of the Sunnís, the followers of Málík and Ibn Hanbal may be considered as the most rigid; whilst those of Ash-Sháfi may be characterized as holding doctrines most conformable to the spirit of Islám, and the sectaries of Abú Hanífab, as maintaining the mildest and most philosophical tenets of all.²

The second great Muhammadan sect, the Shíáh, uphold the supremacy of Âlî Ben Abí Tálib, the first convert to Islám, the cousin and son-in-law of Muhammad, and one of the ablest and bravest of all the Arabian chieftains. The Shíáh assert that Âlî was the only lawful successor of the Prophet, and that both the Imámat and Khiláfat, that is, the supreme spiritual and temporal authority, devolved of right upon him and his posterity, notwithstanding that they were actually and unjustly ousted by the Khalífahs of the Bení Umayyah and Bení Ábbás. The Shíáh's are divided into five principal sects¹, which differ in points of faith and religious doctrine; and these again are subdivided into many distinct classes: the Shíáh sects, however, with a few trifling exceptions, never held any variety of opinion in matters of law.²

The Shíáh doctrines were adopted by the Persians at the foundation of the Safaví dynasty in A.H. 905 (A.D. 1499), and, from that period until the present time, have prevailed as the national religion and law of Persia, notwithstanding the violent efforts to substitute the Sunní creed made by the Afghán usurper Ashraf, and the great Nádir Sháh. There are, also, numerous Shíâhs in India, though but few when compared to the Sunnís; and a small number are to be found in the eastern portion of Arabia. During the Muhammadan period of Indian history, the Shíâhs were chiefly confined to the kingdoms of Bījápúr and Golconda,¹ their sect never having been suffered to make any progress in Hindústán², where the religion of the state was according to the tenets of the Sunnís. Since the British rule, however, those who profess the Shíâh faith are no longer persecuted, or forced to conceal their opinions: and although the majority of the Musulmáns in India still adhere to the doctrines of Abú Hanífah, the Shíâh is allowed to celebrate unmolested the tenth of Muharram, and to mourn the untimely fate of the virtuous Husain, and the martyrs of the plain of Karbalá.

² Some account of the tenets of the Shíáh's will be found in the following works:—كتاب الملل والنحل, p. 108, et seq.; Haarbrücker's Schahrastani, p. 164, et seq.; Pococke, Specimen Historiæ Arabum, pp. 23 and 257; Maracci, Prodromus, p. 80; Sale, Koran, Preliminary Discourse, sect. 8; Von Hammer, Geschichte der Assassinen, p. 25 et seq.; Malcolm, History of Persia, Vol. II. p. 346, et seq. In order, however, to obtain an accurate knowledge on the subject, the native authorities must be consulted. Amongst these, the Hakk al-Yakín, by Muhammad Bákir Ben Muhammad Takí, who dedicated his work to Sháh Sultán Husain, is deservedly one of the most celebrated. It contains a body of the theology of the Shíáh's, and quotes and refutes the arguments opposed to the opinions advanced, illustrating the whole with evidences of the truth of the Shíáh doctrines, and with numerous traditions. There is also a very interesting little work by Abú al-Fatúh Rází Makkí, entitled the Risálat-i, or Kitáb-i Hasaníyah, which has a great reputation amongst the Shíáh's, particularly in Persia. It consists of an imaginary disputation between a Shíáh slave-girl and a learned Sunní jurisconsult, on the merits of their respective doctrines, in which, as a matter of course, the girl utterly discomfits her opponent. The argument is very ingenuously managed, and the treatise, taken altogether, furnishes a good and concise exposition of the tenets of the Shíáh's, and the texts on which their belief is founded. The Risálat-i Hasaníyah was translated from the Arabic into Persian, by Ibráhím Astarábádí, in A.H. 958 (A.D. 1551). Both of these works have been printed in Persia, with great accuracy and elegance. كتاب حسنيّه fol. Tehran, A.H. 1239 (A.D. 1823). كتاب حق اليقين fol. Tehran, A.H. 1241. (A.D. 1825).

These are the principal sects of the Muhammadans who differ in opinion with regard to legal doctrine. I have already stated that the Korán is universal in its authority; but this must be understood with the reservation that such authority depends upon its interpretation, and that the latter differs according to the views of the principal commentators of the various sects, the Shíâhs more especially rendering the meaning of many texts in a manner totally opposed to their acceptation by the sects of the Sunnís.

The traditions and the Ijmáa are, in like manner, looked upon by all Musulmáns as authoritative in the second degree; but, as I have mentioned above, their value varies, and depends upon their Isnáds. Many writers on the religion and laws of the Muhammadans have asserted that the Shíâhs reject entirely the authority of tradition. Nothing, however, can be more erroneous than this assertion, since all Shíâhs admit the legality of the Sunnah, when verified by any of the Twelve Imáms³; and all equally venerate the precepts and examples,

both of the Prophet and the Twelve Imáms themselves, and the traditions that have been handed down by the friends and partisans of Âlí¹, rejecting only such portions of the Sunnah as are derived from persons contaminated by crime or disobedience to God. In the latter class they range all the traditions recorded on the authority of the three first Khalífahs, and of such of the companions, the Tábiúún, and their disciples, as were not included amongst the supporters of Âlí Ben Abí Tálib. The error with regard to the Shíáh doctrine in matters of tradition seems to have arisen from the fact, that our knowledge of their tenets has been almost entirely taken from Sunní sources, in which the word Sunnah is used to signify exclusively the traditions of the Sunnís; and also that the Shíáhs themselves almost invariably employ that word when speaking of the Sunní traditions, calling their own Hadís, and even referring to the Sunnís as the Ahl-i Sunnah (people of the Sunnah), in contradistinction to themselves, whom they generally call the Ahl-i Bait (people of the house of the Prophet). When, therefore, it is asserted that the Shíáhs reject the authority of tradition, it must only be understood to mean that they pay no regard to the Sunnah recorded by the enemies of Âlí: they of course repudiate the doctrines of the founders of the principal Sunní sects, holding their names even in abhorrence.² What has been said with criminate use by the Sunní sects, who applied it to a large number of eminent doctors. The Shíáhs consider the title of Imám as a sacred appellation, and restrict it entirely to Âlí and his descendants; holding that the office of Imám is not a matter depending upon the choice of the people, but a fundamental article of religion. The names of the Twelve Imáms are, Âlí Ben Abí Tálib al-Murtaza, Hasan Ben Âlí al-Mujtaba, Husain Ben Âlí ash-Shahíd, Âlí Ben Husain Zain al-Âábidín as-Sajjád, Muhammad al-Bákir, Jaafar as-Sálik, Músa al-Kásim, Âli ar-Rizá, Muhammad al-Jawád, Âlí al-Hadí, Hasan al-Askarí, and Muhammad Abú al-Kásim al-Mahdí. The last of these is supposed to be concealed, and not dead; and it is believed by the Shíáhs that he will re-appear at the last day; whilst, in the mean time, it is unlawful and impious to give the title of Imám to any other.

regard to the traditions as received by the Shíâhs, applies equally to the Ijmáa, the authority of which depends upon the source from whence it is derived.

The Kiyás, as I have mentioned in a former page, is variously received by the different sects. It seems pretty clear, from a tradition recorded in the Mishkát al-Masábih¹, that the exercise of private judgment was acknowledged and authorised by the Prophet himself. In the first, second, and third centuries of the Hijrah, the principal juriconsults appear to have founded their practice upon that of their predecessors; but some, venturing to rely upon analogical deduction from the first three sources of the law, were called Mujtahids, because they employed the utmost efforts of their minds to attain the right solution of such questions of law as were submitted to their judgment.²

Amongst the Sunní sects, Mujtahids are classed under three principal divisions, according to the degree of Ijtihád which they may have attained. The word Ijtihád signifies, in its most common acceptation, the striving to accomplish a thing, the making a great effort; but in speaking of a law-doctor, it denotes the bringing into operation the whole capacity of forming a private judgment relative to a legal proposition.³

The chief degree of Ijtihád conferred on its possessor a total independence in legislative matters, and he became, as it were, a connecting link between the law and his own disciples, who had no right to question his exposition of the Korán, the Sunnah, and the Ijmáa, even when apparently at variance with those elements or sources of jurisprudence. The Mujtahids of this first class were very frequent in the three first centuries of the Hijrah; but in later times, the doctrines of the law becoming more fixed, the exercise of private judgment, to an unlimited extent, soon ceased to be recognized. Some later doctors, At-Tabarí and As-Suyútí for instance, claimed the right, but it was refused to them by public opinion.¹ The Mujtahids of the first class, who lived in the first century of the Hijrah, are esteemed as of higher authority than those who flourished in the second and third.

³ This definition is quoted from the Kitáb Taarífât, by Silvestre De Sacy, in his Chrestomathie Arabe, Tome I. p. 169.

Those Mujtahids, who had arrived at the second degree of Ijtihád, possessed the authority of resolving questions not provided for by the authors of the chief sects, and were the immediate disciples of the acknowledged Mujtahids of the first class, who, in some instances, allowed their pupils to follow and teach opinions contrary to their own doctrines, and occasionally even adopted their views.

Those who had attained the third degree of Ijtihád were empowered to pronounce, of their own proper authority, sentences in all cases not provided for by the founders of the sects or their disciples. Their sentences were, however, to be derived from a comparison of the Korán, the Sunnah, and the Ijmáa, taken conjointly with the opinions of the Mujtahids of the first and second classes; and they were not authorised to controvert their published doctrines, either respecting the elements of the laws, or the principles derived therefrom. Mujtahids of the third class were required to possess a perfect knowledge of all the branches of jurisprudence, according to the doctrines of all the schools; and the class comprises a large number of doctors, of greater or less celebrity, some of whom were raised to the rank during their lifetime, but the greater portion subsequently to their decease.

As a title, the term Mujtahid has long since fallen into disuse amongst the Sunnis.²

Ibn Khaldún says, speaking of the exercise of the Kiyás, as allowed by the chief Sunní sects—"The science of jurisprudence forms two systems, that of the followers of private judgment and analogy (Ahl ar-Rái wa al-Kiyás), who were natives of Írák, and that of the followers of tradition, who were natives of Hijáz. As the people of Írák possessed but few traditions, they had recourse to analogical deductions, and attained great proficiency therein, for which reason they were called 'the followers of private judgment': the Imám Abú Hanífa, who was their chief, and had acquired a perfect knowledge of this system, taught it to his disciples. The people of Hijáz had for Imám, Málik Ben Anas, and then Ash-Sháfí. Some time after, a portion of learned men disapproved of analogical deductions, and rejected that mode of proceeding: these were the Zálirites (followers of Abú Dáwúd Sulaimán), and they laid it down as a principle, that all points of law should be taken from the Nusús (text of the Korán and traditions), and the Ijmáa (universal accord of the ancient Imáms)."¹

The respective weight allowed to the Kiyás by Málik, Ash-Sháfí, and Ibn Hanbal, is not easily to be ascertained, nor is it important in the present view of the question: their disciples were, however, termed "the followers of tradition" (Ahl as-Sunnat), in contradistinction to those of Abú Hanífa; and Abú al-Faraj says that these three doctors seldom resorted to analogical argument, whether manifest or recon-dite, when they could apply either a positive rule or a tradition. He adds that Abú Dáwúd Sulaimán rejected the exercise of reason altogether.²

Of all the Sunní sectarians, those who adhere to the doctrines taught by Abú Hanífa, as being the most numerous in India, claim our almost undivided attention. That juris-consult himself, according to Abú al-Faraj, was so much inclined to the exercise of reason, that he frequently preferred it, in manifest cases, to traditions of single authority¹; and his disciples in India have constantly upheld the exercise of the Kiyás in an extended form, as is sufficiently notorious, and amply proved by certain passages relating to the guidance of Magistrates quoted in the Fatáwa al-Áálamgírí. The first passage alluded to is from the Muhít of Rází ad-Dín Níshápúrí, and is as follows:—"If the concurrent opinion of the companions be not found in any case which their contemporaries may have agreed upon, the Kází must be guided by the latter. Should there be a difference of opinion between the contemporaries, let the Kází compare their arguments, and adopt the judgment he deems preferable. If, however, none of the authorities referred to be forthcoming, and the Kází be a person capable of disquisition (Ijtihád), he may consider in his own mind what is consonant to the principles of right and justice, and, applying the result with a pure intention to the facts and circumstances of the case, let him pass judgment accordingly." The second is taken from the Badá'ia of Abú Bakr Ben Masúúd al-Káshání, who died in A. H. 587 (A.D. 1191)²:—"When there is neither written law, nor concurrence of opinions, for the guidance of the Kází, if he be capable of legal disquisition, and have formed a decisive judgment on the case, he should carry such judgment into effect by his sentence, although other scientific lawyers may differ in opinion from him; for that which, upon deliberate investigation, appears to be right and just, is accepted as such in the sight of God." And again, a third passage is quoted from the last-mentioned work:—"If in any case the Kází be perplexed by opposite proofs, let him reflect upon the case, and determine as he shall judge right; or, for greater certainty, let him consult other able lawyers; and if they differ, after weighing the arguments, let him decide as appears just. Let him not fear or hesitate to act upon the result of his judgment, after a full and deliberate examination." Passages from other law-books to the same effect are also quoted in the Fatáwa al-Áálamgírí, and the compilers of the latter work concur entirely in the opinions which they cite. In all such cases, however, it is pre-supposed that the Magistrate so exercising his private judgment, should possess the qualifications of a Mujtahid of the third class. I have not been able to ascertain whether or not the Shíâhs classed their Mujtahids according to the degree they had attained in Ijtihád, as with the Sunnís; but in former times the title seems to have implied in its possessor infallibility, both in doctrine and in conduct.¹ In Persia the title of Mujtahid exists at the present day, and is assumed by the chief priests and jurisconsults, who are elected to the dignity by the suffrage of the inhabitants of the provinces in which they live, and as such they exercise a great controul over the Law Courts, and are even superior in authority to the Judges themselves.²

(c) On the Muhammadan Law-books.

It was not until a considerable time after the foundation of Islám that the traditions and interpretations of the law were reduced to writing. "The articles of law," says Ibn Khaldún³, "or, in other terms, the commandments and prohibitions of God, were then borne (not in books), but in the hearts of men, who knew that these maxims drew their origin from the Book of God, and from the practice (Sunnah) of the Prophet himself. The people at that time consisted of Arabs, wholly ignorant of the mode by which learning is taught, of the art of composing works, and of the means by which knowledge is enregistered; for to these points they had not hitherto directed their attention. Under the companions of Muhammad, and their immediate successors, things continued in the same state; and, during that period, the designation of Kurrá (readers) was applied to those who, being not totally devoid of learning, knew by heart and communicated information. Such were the persons who could repeat the Korán, relate the sayings of the Prophet, and cite the example of his conduct in different circumstances. (This was a necessary duty), inasmuch as the articles of the law could only be known from the Korán, and from the traditions which serve to explain it." Learned doctors even presided over schools of law, delivered lectures, and actually composed works which were not committed to writing.

Under these circumstances, the traditions very soon increased to such an extent, that it became not only advisable, but necessary, to make collections of them, and to separate those which were authentic from those of doubtful authority.

The first attempt of this kind appears to have been made by Ibn Shiháb az-Zuhrí, during the Khiláfat of Omar Ibn Âbd al-Âzíz.¹ About the same time, or soon after, more particularly between the years 140 and 150 of the Hijrah, other learned men compiled and arranged collections of the traditions, and composed divers commentaries and treatises on jurisprudence, and the interpretation of the Korán in regard to legal matters.

In process of time, works on these subjects became accumulated to an almost incredible extent; so that the bare enumeration of their titles would fill an ordinary volume; and a reference to the biographical works of Ibn Khallikan² and An-Nawawí, or the Bibliographical Dictionary of Hájí Khalfah³, will shew the name of a traditionist or writer on jurisprudence, or the title of a legal work, on almost every page.

The biographical and bibliographical dictionaries, which are very numerous, are of the greatest service in guiding the researches of the student, into the legal literature of the Musulmáns. In addition to the general dictionaries of authors, and their works, there are many biographical collections especially devoted to the lives of celebrated doctors of law¹, under the title of Tabakát al-Fukahá, and there are a variety of similar compositions which are otherwise designated. The most celebrated of the Tabakát al-Fukahá was composed by Abú Ishak ash-Shírází², who died in A.H. 476 (A.D. 1083). A modern history of jurisprudence, or rather of jurists, has been compiled in Hindí, from the works of Ibn Khallikán and As-Suyútí, by Maulaví Subhán Bakhsh, and was published at Dehlí in the year 1848.³

Special biographical treatises have also been written, recording the histories of learned doctors of each particular sect. Among the Sunnís, the most remarkable works which give an account of the Hanafí lawyers are the Jawáhir al-Muzíyat fí Tabakát al-Hanafíyat⁴, by the Shaikh Muhi ad-Dín Âbd al-Kádir Ben Abí al-Wafá al-Misrí, who died in A.H. 775 (A.D. 1373), and the Tabakát as-Saníyat fí Tarájim al-Hanafíyat⁵, by Takí ad-Dín Tamíní, who died in A.H. 1005 (A.D. 1596); in both of which works the lives are arranged in alphabetical order. The chief biographer of the Málikí lawyers was Burhán ad-Dín Ibrahím Ben Âlî Ben Farhún, who died in A.H. 799 (A.D. 1396): his work is entitled the Díbáj al-Muzahhib.⁶ There are numerous biographical collections treating of the lives of the principal followers of Ash-Sháfi, several of which are entitled Tabakát ash-Sháfiyat: the most noted is by Táj ad-Din Âbd al-Wahháb Ben as-Subkí, who died in A. H. 771 (A. D. 1369).¹ The Tabakát al-Hanbaliyat comprises the lives of the most famous doctors of the sect of Ibn Hanbal: it was commenced by the Kází Abú al-Husain Ben Abú Yaali al-Farrá, continued by the Shaikh Zain ad-Dín Âbd ar-Rahman Ben Ahmad, commonly called Ibn Rajab, and concluded by Yúsuf Ben Hasan al-Mukaddasí: these three writers died respectively in A. H. 526, 795, and 871 (A. D. 1131, 1392, and 1466).²

The great biographical work of Núr Allah Ben Sharíf al-Husainí ash-Shústarí, entitled the Majális al-Múminín, is a mine of valuable information respecting the most notable persons who professed the Shíáh faith. The author has given an entire book or section (the fifth Majlis) to the lives of the traditionists and lawyers, and he has specified the principal works composed by each learned doctor at the end of their respective histories. Núr Allah does not mention the period when he wrote the Majális al-Múminín, nor have I been able to ascertain when he died. The fact, however, of his not giving the life of the celebrated lawyer Bahá ad-Din al-Âámilí, who died in A. H. 1031 (A. D. 1621), whilst the latest lawyer named in his collection is stated to have died in A. H. 996 (A. D. 1587), fixes the composition of the work in the early part of the eleventh century of the Hijrah. It is from this work that I have principally derived the account of the Shíáh law-books and their authors which will be found in the following pages.

In addition to the Majális al-Múminín of Núr Allah, there are several other biographies of eminent Shíáhs. The most celebrated works of this nature, and which are constantly quoted by Núr Allah, are the writings of Muhammad Ben Âmrú at-Tamímí; the great biographical work of Abú al-Hunain Ahmad Ben Âlí an-Najáshí³ on the lives of the traditionists, which is generally quoted by the name of the Kitáb-i Rijál; and the Khulásat al-Akwál, by the famous Shaikh al-Âllamah Jamál ad-Dín Hasan Ben Yúsuf al-Mutahhir Hillí, commonly known as Shaikh Âllamah Hillí. An-Najáshí died in A.H. 405 (A.D. 1014), and the Shaikh Âllamah in A.H. 726 (A.D. 1325). An author of equal reputation, the Shaikh Abú Jaafar Muhammad Ben al-Hasan at-Tusí, who was one of the chief Mujtahids of the Imámíyah sect, and died in A.H. 460, (A.D. 1067), also wrote a work, which is frequently referred to in the Majális al-Múminín: it is a bibliographical dictionary of Shíáh works, together with the names of the authors, and is entitled Fihrist-i Kutb ash-Shíáh wa Asmá al-Musannifín.¹ Abú Yahya Ahmad Ben Dáwúd al-Farází al-Jurjání, who was originally a Sunní, but became a convert to the Imámíyah faith, was also the author of a biographical work called Kitáb fí Maarifat ar-Rijal.²

It will be readily conceived, from the details above given, that any attempt to give even a tolerably complete list of the Muhammadan law-books would far exceed the limits of this Introduction. I have endeavoured, however, in the following pages, to make such a selection from the mass as may prove useful to the student, and to enumerate and describe all such as have been printed, as well as some of the works still in MS. which are of chief authority amongst the different sects, and more especially those which are in the greatest repute, and most frequently referred to in India. I may add, that I have examined the originals of the works described, whenever they were procurable; and that, where the works themselves were not to

I have adopted the orthography which seems to be favoured by the majority of the MSS.

Al Ūlūm ash-Sharīfiyat, one of the great classes into which the Muhammadan encyclopædists divide the whole circle of the sciences,² comprehends all those which have relation to religion and law, which are divided into seven sections :—1. Īlm al-Karāt, the Science of Reading the Korán ; 2. Īlm at-Tafsír, the Science of the Interpretation of the Korán ; 3. Īlm al-Hadís, the Science of the Traditions ; 4. Īlm ad-Diráyat al-Hadís, the Science of Critical Discrimination in matters of Tradition ; 5. Īlm Usúl ad-Din, or Īlm al-Kalám, the Science of Scholastic Theology ; 6. Īlm Usúl al-Fikh, the Science of the Elements or Principles of Jurisprudence. 7. Īlm al-Fikh, the Science of Practical Jurisprudence. These sections are again subdivided into a multitude of inferior classes.³

It will not be necessary, in this Introduction, to enter more fully into the distinction, distribution, and definition of the Īlms, or sciences, connected with religion and law, under which the Muhammadan legal writings might be ranged in the order of their subjects, as I have adopted an arbitrary classification, comprising five great divisions under which the law-books of the Musulmáns, so far as they apply in India, seem naturally to fall.

² These classes will be found detailed by Hájí Khalfah in the Introduction to the Kashf az-Zunún, Tom. I. p. 24, et seq. The whole system of the Muhammadan encyclopædists is also admirably displayed by the learned Von Hammer, in his Encyklopädische Uebersicht der Wissenschaften des Orients. 8vo. Leipzig, 1804.

These are—

I. The Korán itself, and the Tafsírs or Commentaries which serve to interpret and illustrate the difficult passages, and to expound the meaning of the sacred text.

II. The works which treat of Traditions, and the Commentaries thereon.

III. The general treatises on the fundamental principles of law, spiritual and temporal, and practical jurisprudence, together with the Digests of general or special law, and their Commentaries.

IV. The separate Treatises on the law of inheritance, or Ílm al-Faráiz, a branch of the Ílm al-Fikh, which exist in considerable numbers, although the subject is almost always included in the general treatises.

V. The books of decisions, comprehended by the Musulmán lawyers under the Ílm al-Fatáwa, or Science of Decisions, which is also a branch of the Ílm al-Fikh: these consist simply of the recital of the decisions of eminent lawyers in particular cases, and form a body of precedent, having various authority, and serving for the guidance of lawyers in subsequent decisions, much in the same manner as our Reports of decided cases in England.

A sixth class may be now added to the books on Muhammadan law having authority in India. I allude to the original works on the subject by European authors, which will be severally noticed after the native treatises.

It is advisable to treat separately of those works which are of authority respectively amongst the Sunnís and Shíâhs, inasmuch as they are never interchangeable; with the exceptions, however, already noticed, that the Korán itself is of paramount authority with both sects, and that the Shíâhs receive such traditions of the Sunnís as are proved by their Isnáds to have been transmitted through, or verified by, the descendants, friends, or partisans of Álî Ben Abí Tálib.

It is not an easy matter to obtain information respecting the Shíâh authorities of law, since that sect contributed but little to the literature of Arabia, more especially in the earlier ages of Islám, when law was regarded as the chief and most worthy of the sciences. But though the Shíâh writers on tradition and law are few in number when compared to those of the Sunní sects, yet some of the very greatest names in Oriental literature appear in the list; and the illustrious Jámí the poet, Al Masúdí the historian, and Husain Wáiz Káshifí the moralist, are numbered in the ranks of Shíáh lawyers and divines.

I. The Korán is believed by all orthodox Musulmán's to be uncreated and eternal, subsisting in the very essence of God¹, and revealed to Muhammad by the angel Gabriel, at different times during a space of twenty-three years. Wherever its texts are applicable, and not subsequently abrogated by others, they are held to be unquestionable and decisive, as the word of God transmitted to man by the last, or, as he is emphatically called, the Seal of the Prophets, Muhammad the messenger of God.

The Korán, as we now possess it, originated after the Prophet's death, when the revelations left by him, existing either in manuscript or preserved in the memory of his companions, were digested and put in order by his successor Abú Bakr. This Digest, when transcribed and arranged, was put into the hands of Omar's daughter, Hafsah, who was one of the Prophet's widows.

In the 30th year of the Hijrah the Khalifah Othmán, finding great discrepancies in the copies of the Korán, which were spread abroad in the different provinces, caused a number of transcripts to be made, under the inspection of four supervisors, from the copy in the possession of Hafsah; and these transcripts were dispersed throughout the empire, whilst all those previously extant were suppressed and destroyed.

Thus arose the present text of the Korán, which is considered as authentic, though some few various readings still occur, proceeding, for the most part, from the omission of the vowel points, which were not supplied in the earlier copies. The text of the Korán has been so often printed, that to specify the editions would be supererogatory.

The first interpreters of the text of the Korán were the Companions of the Prophet; and it may be imagined that the subtle-minded Musulmáns soon flocked in numbers to undertake the sacred and delicate task of interpreting and explaining the holy text, upon which their entire rule of conduct in this world, and hope of salvation in the next, were believed to depend. The commentaries on the Korán are accordingly almost countless, and are divided into classes according to their mode of treating the subject, but which it will not be necessary here to dwell upon. One or two Commentaries having the greatest authority may be noticed.

The historian Abú Jaafar Muhammad Ben Jarír at-Tabarí, who died in A.H. 310 (A.D. 922), wrote a Commentary, which has great reputation, and is mentioned in terms of high praise, both by As-Suyútí and An-Nawawí.¹ The most famous of all the Commentaries amongst the Sunnís are, however, the Kashsháf² and the Anwár at-Tanzíl.³ The former is by Abú al-Kásim Jár Allah Mahmúd Ben Ūmr az-Zamakhsharí, who died in A.H. 538 (A.D. 1143)⁴; and the latter by Násir ad-Dín Ábd Allah Ben Ūmr al-Baizáwí, who died at Tabríz in A.H. 685 (A.D. 1286)⁵: he is said to have made great use of the work of Az-Zamakhsharí. Both these works are of almost universal authority amongst the Sunnís.

Extracts from them were published in the original Arabic, with a French translation by De Sacy, in the year 1829.⁶ Dr.

The Tafsír al-Ghazálí, as it is generally called, but which is entitled the Yákút at-Táwíl by its author, Abú Hámid Muhammad al-Ghazálí, who died in A.H. 504 (A.D. 1110)², and the Durr al Mansúr of Jalál ad-Dín Âbd ar-Rahman Ben Abí Bakr as-Suyútí, who died in A.H. 911 (A.D. 1505), are also commentaries on the Korán of established reputation among the Sunnis. The latter work is founded upon the traditions.³

The Tafsír al-Jalálain, which is a concise but good commentary on the Korán, is the joint work of Jalál ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Ahmad al-Mahallí, who died in A.H. 864 (A.D. 1459), and the celebrated Jalál ad-Dín Âbd ar-Rahman Ben Abí Bakr as-Suyútí.⁴ It has been recently printed at Calcutta.⁵

A Persian commentary on the Korán, entitled Tafsír Fath al-Âzíz, was printed at Calcutta, in the year 1843. It is by Sháh Âbd al-Âzíz Dahlawí.⁶

The Tafsírát Ahmadiyah is a commentary on the Korán of some extent, composed in the reign of the Emperor Aurangzéb Âlámگیر, by Mulla Jain Júnfúrí. It was published at Calcutta, in the year 1847.⁷

A commentary on the Korán, by Ismaíl Hakkí, entitled Rúh al-Bayán, was published at Búlák in the year 1840.⁸ I have not seen this work.

One of the earliest of the many writers of commentaries on the Korán among the Shíâhs is Abú Jaafar Muhammad Ben Âlí Ben Bábwíyah, surnamed As-Sadúk, who lived in the fourth century of the Hijrah, and was a contemporary of Rukn ad-Daulah Dílamí. He was one of the greatest of the collectors of Shíâh traditions, and the most celebrated of all the Imáníyah lawyers of Kum. This writer composed a large and a small Tafsír. There is considerable uncertainty as to the exact time when he lived; Shaikh Túsí says, in the Fihrist, that Abú Jaafar died at Ray, in A.H. 331 (A.D. 942), but this appears to be erroneous. Shaikh Najáshí, who died in A.H. 405 (A.D. 1014), states that Abú Jaafar visited Baghdád, whilst yet in the prime of life, in A.H. 355 (A.D. 965), which might well have been the case, since Abú al-Hasan Âlí Ben Bábwíyah, the father of Abú Jaafar, did not die until A.H. 329 (A.D. 940). In addition to this, and which confirms the opinion that Shaikh Túsí is in error, Núr Allah relates, on the authority of the Shaikh ad-Dúryastí (or Dúrbastí) ar-Rází¹, that Abú Jaafar lived in the time of Rukn ad-Daulah Dílamí, and had repeated interviews with that prince, who, as is well known, reigned from A.H. 338 to A.H. 366 (A.D. 949—976).

A very extensive comment on the Korán, in twenty volumes, also proceeded from the pen of Abú Jaafar at-Túsí, already spoken of as the writer of a dictionary of Shíâh books and authors. This comment is generally called the Tafsír at-Túsí, but it was entitled by its author the Mujmia al-Bayán li Úlúm al-Korán.²

Abú al-Fatúh Rázi, the author of the Kitáb-i Hasaníyah, already mentioned, devoted the same number of volumes to a similar work, and likewise composed a Persian Tafsír in four volumes.

The great poet Núr ad-Din Âbd ar-Rahman Jámí, who died in A.H. 898 (A.D. 1492)¹, is also the author of a Tafsír of some note. But the most celebrated of all the Shíáh commentaries on the Korán is that by the famous moral writer Kamál ad-Dín Husain al-Wáiz al-Káshifí as-Sabzawárá, the well-known author of the Anwár-i Suhailí and the Akhlák-i Muhsinín, who died about A.H. 910 (A.D. 1504), and who entitled his work the Mawáhib al-Âlíyat²: it is, however, generally known as the Tafsír-i Husainí. The Tafsír-i Husainí is now in course of publication, in lithography, at Calcutta. It is accompanied by the Arabic text of the Korán, with an interlinear Hindí translation, and another Persian comment entitled the Tafsír-i Âbbásí: two volumes of this edition have already appeared.³

II. The first collections of traditions said to have been written down, are those of Abú Bakr Ben Shiháb az-Zuhrí; Âbd al-Málik Ben Juraij; Málik Ben Anas, the founder of the second sect of Sunnís, in his work called the Muwatta; and Ar-Rabía Ben Subaih. It has not been ascertained which author is entitled to priority. Az-Zuhrí is considered to have been the first by As-Suyútí⁴ and Al-Makrízí⁵; whilst others give the preference to the Muwatta⁶, or to the compilations of Ibn Juraij or of Ar-Rabía. The preponderance seems, however, to be in favour of Âbd al-Málik Ben Juraij.

Two others of the founders of the chief Sunní sects are mentioned as the authors of some of the earliest works on the traditions: Ash-Shafíi being reputed to have composed two collections, namely, the Masnad and the Sunan, and Ibn Hanbal to have compiled a work called the Masnad, containing a larger number of traditions than had been previously brought together.¹

Whichever of the collections above mentioned may be entitled to precedence, the chief authorities in matters of tradition among the Sunnís are now the books which are known by the name of the Six Sahíhs, or Six Books of the Sunnah; whilst the Shíáh's have their own four books of Hadís, which, though less generally known, are by them equally venerated, and esteemed above all others on the same subject.

The Six Sahíhs, or genuine collections of traditions, are the chief authorities, after the Korán², among the Sunnís; and as they serve to illustrate points of doctrine not clearly explained in that sacred work, they are by them considered as its indispensable supplement.

The first of these, which is the most celebrated, and held in the most general estimation by all the Sunní sects, is the Jámia as-Sahíh, or, as it is sometimes called, the Sahíh al-Bukhárí³, from the surname of its author, Abú Âbd Allah Muhammad Ibn Ismaíl al-Bukhárí. It is generally considered to surpass the Sahíh of Muslim, the next in authority, although the two are reckoned to be only second in truthfulness to the Korán itself. Al-Bukhárí, "the chief Imám in the science of traditions," was born at Bukhárá, from which city he took his surname, in A.H. 194 (A.D. 809), and died at the village of Khartank, in the district of Samarkand, in A.H. 256 (A.D. 869). He was a pupil of the Mujtahid Imám Ibn Hanbal. His compilation is stated to comprise upwards of seven thousand traditions, which he himself affirmed he had selected from a mass of six hundred thousand, after a labour of sixteen years.⁴

The Jámia as-Sahíh, called by its author the Masnad as-Sahíh, but most generally known as the Sahíh Muslim, by Abú al-Husain Muslim Ben al-Hajáj Ben Muslim al-Kushairí, surnamed An-Níshápúrí, who was a pupil of Ibn Hanbal, is considered as almost of equal authority with the Sahíh al-Bukhárí, and indeed by some, especially by the African doctors, is preferred to that work.¹ The two collections are constantly quoted together under the name of the Sahíhain, or two Sahíhs. Muslim is said to have composed his work from three hundred thousand traditions. He died at Níshápúr in A.H. 261 (A.D. 874), aged 55 years.²

The third collection of traditions in point of authority is the Jámia wa al-Ilal, by Abú Ísa Muhammad Ben Ísa at-Tirmizí: this work is more generally known by the name of the Jámia at-Tirmizí, and is also called the Sunan at-Tirmizí. At-Tirmizí was a pupil of Al-Bukhárí: he died in A.H. 279 (A.D. 892).³

Abú Dáwúd Sulaimán Ben al-Ashâs, surnamed As-Sajistání, wrote a Kitáb as-Sunan which contains four thousand eight hundred traditions selected from a collection made by him of five hundred thousand. It is considered as the fourth book of the Sunnah. Abú Dáwúd was born in A.H.

Nawawí, p. 87. A most interesting notice of the Sahíh al-Bukhárí, by Dr. Ludolf Krehl, has lately appeared in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft. Band. IV. p. 1 et seq.

Abú Âbd ar-Rahman Ahmad Ben Âlî Ben Shuâib an-Nasâî compiled a large work on the traditions which he entitled the Sunan al-Kabîr; but as he himself acknowledged that many of the traditions which he had inserted, were of doubtful authority, he afterwards wrote an abridgement of his great work, omitting all those of questionable authenticity: and this abridgement, which he entitled Al-Mujtaba, takes its rank as one of the six books of the Sunnah. An-Nasâî was born at Nasá, a city in Khurásán, in A. H. 215 (A. D. 830), and died at Makkah in A. H. 303 (A. D. 915).²

The Kitáb as-Sunan by Abú Âbd Allah Muhammad Ben Yazîd Ben Májah al-Kazwínî, is the sixth book of the Sunnah, and is commonly called the Sunan Ibn Májah. Ibn Májah was born in A. H. 209 (A. D. 824), and died in A. H. 273 (A. D. 886).³

These six books are generally known by the name of *Al-Kutub as-Sittat fî al-Hadîs*⁴, or the six books on the traditions; but the two first, which are of by far the greatest authority, are, as we have already seen, denoted the Sahîhain, or the two authentic collections.⁵ The remaining four are commonly called Al-Kutub al-Arbâa, or the four books. Traditions extracted from these six books are accordingly distinguished by authors who make use of them; those taken from the Sahîhain being called Sahîh, or authentic; whilst those from the four books are called Hasan, or delivered on respectable authority, having, however, greater weight than if they were derived from any other compilations on the Sunnah. Some authors arrange the six Sahíhs in a different order from that above given.

The style of these six great works is concise and elliptic, but they are generally considered as pure and elegant: they are not easily to be understood without the aid of commentaries; and accordingly a host of learned doctors have undertaken the task of expounding them. Háji Khalfah enumerates upwards of eighty on the Sahíh al-Bukhári alone.

In addition to the above-mentioned works, there are an immense number of collections of traditions, of greater or less extent, and which are of various authority, according to the reputation of their authors. Some of these are original; but they consist, for the most part, of selections and epitomes, or condensed abridgements of one or more of the principal works, explaining in many instances the difficult words and passages, and illustrating the traditions severally by the opinions and decisions of jurisconsults. These exist in such numbers, that Háji Khalfah himself, in that great monument of industry and research, the Kashf az-Zunún, admits that it would be impossible to enumerate them; it will therefore be sufficient to mention a very few of the most important and the more recent.

The Muwatta of Málík Ben Anas, already mentioned, and a collection of traditions called after the name of its author, Abú Muhammad Âbd Allah ad-Dárimí, who died in A. H. 255 (A. D. 868)¹, are by some considered to be respectively entitled to be placed among the six Sahíhs, in the place of the Sunan of Ibn Májah. At any rate the Muwatta is always looked upon as the next in point of authority to the six Sahíhs.²

kutní who died in A. H. 385 (A. D. 995)¹, and of Abú Bakr Ahmad Ben al-Husain al-Baihakí, who died in A. H. 458 (A. D. 1065)², are also of the highest authority.

One of the most celebrated compilations after the Six Sahíhs, is the Masábíh as-Sunnat by Abú Muhammad Husain Ben Masúúd al-Farrá al-Baghawí³, who died in A. H. 516 (A. D. 1122).⁴ This work is principally extracted from the Six Sahíhs, embodying all the authentic traditions, and omitting those which are in any way doubtful: the author, however, has neglected to insert the Isnáds. Al-Baghawí also wrote a Jama bain al-Sahíhain, or Conjunction of the Two Sahís. A work, bearing the same title, by Abú Âbd Allah Muhammad al-Humaidí, who died in A. H. 488 (A. D. 1095)⁵, comprehends the collections of Al-Bukhárí and Muslim, and has a great reputation; as is also the case with the copious compilation of Abú al-Hasan Razín Ben Muâáwiyah al-Âbdarí, who died in A. H. 520 (A. D. 1126), and which comprises the works of Al-Bukhárí and Muslim, the Muwatta of Málik, the Jámia at-Tirmizí, and the Sunans of Abú Dáwúd, and An-Nasáí.⁶

Next may be noticed the Jámia al-Usúl by Abú as-Saadat Mubárik Ben Asír al-Jazarí, commonly called Ibn Asír, who died in A. H. 606 (A. D. 1209), a work having great authority⁷; and the Jámia al-Jawámia⁸ of the celebrated doctor Jalál ad-Dín Âbd ar-Rahman Ben Abí Bakr as-Suyútí. The latter author omits the Isnáds, but, by the use of abbreviations, designates those traditions which are extracted from the six books of the Sunnat. All the works of As-Suyútí are held in great estimation by the Sunnis. The Rev. Canon Cureton is preparing for publication the text of the Jámia as-Saghír of As-Suyútí, which is an abridgment of the Jámia al-Jawámia, arranged in alphabetical order: it will be most acceptable to those Orientalists who wish to study this important and hitherto-neglected branch of Arabic literature.

A commentary on the Hadís al-Arbaín of Shaikh Ismaíl Hakkí, entitled the Sharh al-Arbaín, or Hadís Arbaín Sharhí, by Mulla Âlí al-Háfiz al-Kastánúmí, was printed and published at Constantinople in the year 1837.¹ Another work, entitled the Karak Suwál, containing forty questions by the Mullá Furatí, with the answers of Muhammad, according to tradition, was also printed in the year 1840, at the same place.²

The Mishkát al-Masábih is a new and augmented edition of the Masábih of Al-Farrá al-Baghawí, by the Shaikh Walí ad-Dín Abú Abd Allah Muhammad Ben Âbd Allah al-Khatíb, who completed his work in A.H. 737 (A.D. 1336). It is a concise collection of traditions, principally taken from the Six Books, and arranged in chapters according to subjects. This collection has been translated by Captain Matthews³, and is, I believe, the solitary work that has been as yet published in its entirety, in any European language, on the Ílm al-Hadís; a fact that is to be deeply regretted, when we consider how little the Muhammadan religion and laws are understood, and how greatly they depend upon the science of tradition.

A small work on traditions, entitled the Muntakhab-i Bulúgh al-Marám, which appears to be an abridgment, omitting the Isnáds, of the Bulúgh al-Marám of Shiháb ad-Dín Abú al-Fazl Ahmad al-Âskalaní, who died in A.H. 852 (A.D. 1448)⁴, has been printed at Calcutta, with an interlinear Urdú translation.⁵

Another small collection, entitled Labáb al-Akhbár, and containing three hundred and ninety-five authentic traditions, was published at the same place in the year 1837.¹

The commentaries on the collections of traditions are not confined to the Six Sahíhs, all the more important compilations of this nature having received illustration from the writings of subsequent lawyers. The Ílm Sharh al-Hadís, or Science of Commentating the Traditions, is reckoned one of the subsidiary branches of the Ílm al-Hadís itself.

The Ílm al-Hadís has occupied the attention of a multitude of Shíáh writers; and a glance at any of the biographical works of that sect is alone sufficient to refute the statement already mentioned, that the followers of ÁlÍ give no authority to the oral law.

One of the earliest writers, both on the Hadís and law of the Imámíyah sect, was Ábd Allah Ben ÁlÍ Ben Abú Shuabah al-Halabí, whose grandfather, Abú Shuabah, is related to have collected traditions in the time of the Imáms Hasan and Husain. Ábd Allah wrote down these traditions, and presented his work, when completed, to the Imám Jaafar as-Sádik, by whom it is said to have been verified and corrected. Abú Muhammad Hishám Ben al-Hákím al-Kindí ash-Shaibání, who lived in the time of the Khalífah Hárún ar-Rashíd, and died in A.H. 179 (A.D. 795), is also famed as being one of the first compilers of Shíáh traditions.

Yúnas Ben Ábd ar-Rahman al-Yuktainí was celebrated as a Shíáh traditionist. Amongst other works, he wrote the Ílal al-Hadís and the Ikhtiláf al-Hadís. This author is said to have made forty-five Hajjs and fifty-four *Úmrats*² to Makkah, and to have written the surprising number of one thousand volumes, controverting the opponents of the Shíáh doctrines. He died at Madínah, in A.H. 208 (A.D. 823).

These are the earliest writers on the Shíáh Hadís; but it is stated that the Shíâhs in India consider four later works as the most authentic: these are called the Kutub-i Arbaa, and are, as it seems, held by them in the same estimation as the Six Sahíls amongst the Sunnís.¹

The two first in order of these four books are the Tahzíb al-Ahkám and the Istíbsár. They were composed by the Shaikh Abú Jaafar at-Túsí, already mentioned as the author of the Fihrist, and of a voluminous commentary on the Korán.

The third in order of the Kutub-i Arbaa is the Jámia al-Káfi by Muhammad Ben Yaakúb al-Kalíní ar-Rází, who is called the Raís•al-Muhaddisín, or chief of the traditionists. This work is of the highest authority, both in India and Persia: it is of vast extent, comprising no less than thirty books; and its author is said to have employed twenty years in its composition. Al-Kalíní also wrote several other works of less note, and died at Baghdád, in A.H. 328 (A.D. 939).

The fourth of the authentic books on Shíâh tradition is the Man lá Yazarhu al-Fakíh, by the celebrated Abú Jaafar Muhammad Ben Âlí Ben Bábwíyah al-Kumí, already spoken of as the author of two Tafsírs on the Korán. This collection is of great note in Persia, as well as in India. Ibn Babawíyah wrote many other works on tradition, the principal of which, according to Núr Allah, was the Kitáb al-Masábíh. The large number of one hundred and seventy-two works on Law and Hadís are mentioned, on the authority of An-Najáshí, to have been composed by this voluminous writer.

Abú al-Âbbás Ahmad Ben Muhammad, commonly called Ibn Úkdah, who died in A.H. 333 (A.D. 944), was one of the greatest masters of the science of traditions; and was renowned for his diligence in collecting them, and the long and frequent journeys which he undertook for the purpose of obtaining information on the subject. Ad-Dárákutní, the Sunní traditionist, is reported to have said that Ibn Úkdah knew three hundred thousand traditions of the Ahl-i Bait and the Bení Háshim.

author of the Marúj az-Zahab, and who has been, with some justice, termed the Herodotus of the East, was also a writer on the Shíáh traditions. He died in A.H. 346 (A.D. 957). Another name, scarcely less celebrated in the annals of Arabic literature, likewise appears amongst the writers on the same subject, viz. that of Abú al-Faraj Âlí Ben al-Husain al-Isfahání, who is said to have devoted fifty years to the composition of the well-known Kitáb al-Aghání, and who died in A.H. 356 (A.D. 966). It is stated that Ad-Dárakutní, and others of the Sunní traditionists, drew largely for their materials from the writings of this last author.

The great Shíáh lawyer, the Shaikh al-Âllámah al-Hillí, the author of the Khulásat al-Akwál, is also a very high authority on tradition. His chief works on the subject are the Istikhsá al-Iatibár, the Masábíh al-Anwár, and the Durar wa al-Marján.

Last amongst the writers on the Shíáh Hadís may be placed Abú al-Futúh Rází and Muhammad Bákir Ben Muhammad Takí, whose works, the Kitáb-i Hasaníyah and the Hakk al-Yakín, already described, although in the main controversial, may yet seem properly to be included in the present class, from the number of traditions they comprise. The latter of these authors also composed a work treating exclusively of Hadís, and entitled the Bahár al-Anwár.

III. Having so far described the works on the traditions, it becomes necessary to give some notices of the general Digests and special Treatises, with their Commentaries, which, together, form the third class of law-books, according to the present arrangement, and treat more especially of practical jurisprudence in all its branches. These, as may be imagined, are exceedingly numerous; and it would be impossible, in this place, to give more than the following meagre selection.

The chief works that treat generally of the doctrines of the four principal sects of the Sunnís are mentioned by Hájí Khalfah to be the Jámia al-Mazáhib, the Majmaa al-Khiláfiyát, the Yanábia al-Ahkám, the Úyún, and the Zubdat al-Ahkám.¹

The only one of these works of which I have been able to find a particular description is the Zubdat al-Ahkám, which expounds the practical statutes of the different doctrines of the four Sunnî sects, and was written by Siráj ad-Dín Abú Hafs Ūmr al-Ghaznaví, a follower of Abú Hanífah, who died in A.H. 773 (A.D. 1371).¹

I shall now mention separately the more important of the works of the most celebrated lawyers of each particular sect, since though all the four Sunnî sects receive in common the Six Sahíhs, and other collections of their traditions, with a slight preference given by some sects to particular books, it is by no means the case with the law-books of the third class, each sect holding separate doctrines, and referring to distinct authorities. In the enumeration of these works I shall dwell more especially upon those which follow the doctrine of Abú Hanífah, the prevailing Sunnî sect in India.

Abú Hanífah's principal work is entitled the Fikh al-Akbar: it treats of the Ílm al-Kalám, and has been commented upon by various writers, many of whom are mentioned by Hájí Khalfah.²

The Hanafí sect, as has already been remarked, is the one which obtains most commonly, and indeed almost entirely, amongst the Muhammadans of India; but the doctrines of its great founder are sometimes qualified, in deference to the opinions of two of his most famous pupils. Sir William Jones says, "that although Abú Hanífah be the acknowledged head of the prevailing sect, and has given his name to it, yet so great veneration is shewn to Abú Yúsuf, and the lawyer Muhammed, that, when they both dissent from their master, the Musselman judge is at liberty to adopt either of the two decisions which may seem to him the more consonant to reason, and founded on the better authority."³

In former times it seems that Abú Hanífah's opinion was preferred, even when both the disciples dissented from him; but this is not the case at the present day. There is also a distinction of authority to be observed, viz. that where the two disciples differ from their master and from each other, the authority of Abú Yúsuf, particularly in judicial matters, is to be preferred to that of Muhammad. In the event, however, of one disciple agreeing with Abú Hanífah, there can be no hesitation in adopting that opinion which is consonant with his doctrine.

Abú Yúsuf Yaakúb Ben Ibráhím al-Kúfí was born in A.H. 113 (A.D. 731), and died at Baghdád, in A.H. 182 (A.D. 798). He was a pupil of Abú Hanífah, and was first appointed to the office of Kází of Baghdád by the Khalífah al-Hádí: subsequently he was raised to the dignity of Kází al-Kuzát, or Chief Civil Magistrate, by the Khalífah Hárún ar-Rashíd, being the first who held that high office. The only work known to have been written by Abú Yúsuf treats of the duties of a magistrate, and is entitled Adab al-Kází.¹ The reputation of this work has been eclipsed by that of another, having a similar title, by Al-Khassáf, which will presently be mentioned. Abú Yúsuf is said to have committed his notes to his pupil, the Imám Muhammad, who made great use of them in the composition of his works.

Abú Ábd Allah Muhammad Ben Husain ash-Shaibání, was born at Wásitah in Írák al-Árab, in A.H. 132 (A.D. 749), and died at Ray, the capital of Khurásán, in A.H. 187 (A.D. 802). The Imám Muhammad, as he is most generally called, was a fellow pupil of Abú Yúsuf, under Abú Hanífah, and on the death of the latter pursued his studies under the former. It is also stated, that, in his younger days, he was instructed by the Imám Málík. His chief works are six in number, of which five are considered of the highest authority, and are cited under the title of the Záhir ar-Rawáyát, or Conspicuous Reports.²

The *Jámia al-Kabír*³, the first of the Záhir ar-Rawáyát, contains a body of most important questions of jurisprudence, and has been commented upon by many learned doctors, amongst whom we find the well-known Shams al-Aïmmah Abú Bakr Muhammad as-Sarakhsí, who died in A. H. 490 (A. D. 1096), and Burhán ad-Dín Mahmúd Ben Ahmad, each of whom composed a work entitled Al-Muhít, which will be presently noticed.

The *Jámia as-Saghír*¹, the second of the works of the Imám Muhammad, is perhaps even more celebrated than the Jámia al-Kabír; and it is in its composition that he seems to have been chiefly indebted to Abú Yúsuf. The Commentaries on the Jámia as-Saghír are very numerous: the best known is by As-Sarakhsí, and there is also one of some note by Burhán ad-Dín Âlí, the author of the Hidáyah.

The third work of the Imám Muhammad is the *Mabsút fí Furúa al-Hanafíyat*², which is also of great celebrity, and has received numerous comments.

The *Ziyádát fí Furúa al-Hanafíyat*³, the fourth of the Conspicuous Reports, is said to have been composed under the inspection and with the approbation of Abú Yúsuf. It is a work highly esteemed, and, together with its supplement by the same author, has been commented upon by a multitude of writers, amongst whom are As-Sarakhsí, and Kází Khán Hasan Ben Mansúr al-Úzjandí, who died in A. H. 592 (A. D. 1195).

The fifth of the Záhir ar-Rawáyát is called the *Siyar al-Kabír wa as-Saghír*⁴, and is supposed to have been the latest work of its author. The name of Abú Yúsuf nowhere occurs in the Siyar.

The Nawádir, the sixth and last of the known compositions of the Imám Muhammad, though not so highly esteemed as the others, is still greatly respected as an authority.

The next authorities among the Hanafís of India, after the founder of their sect and his two disciples, are the Imám Zufar Ben al-Hazíl, who was Chief Judge at Basrah, where he died in A. H. 158 (A. D. 774)⁵, and Hasan Ben Ziyád: these lawyers were contemporaries, friends, and scholars, of Abú Hanífah, and their works are stated to be quoted in India as authorities for that Imám's doctrines, more especially when the two disciples are silent.¹

In addition to the above, the following are a few of the works according to the doctrines of the Hanafí school, best known, and most frequently referred to in India, or in the works of chief authority in that country.

Abú Bakr Ahmad Ben Ūmr al-Khassáf was the author of the most celebrated of several treatises known by the name of Adab al-Kází. He died in A.H. 261 (A.D. 874). Hájí Khalfah speaks very highly of this work, which contains one hundred and twenty chapters, and has been commented upon by many learned jurists: the most esteemed Commentary is that of Ūmr Ben Ābd al-Āzíz Ben Mázeh, commonly called Husám ash-Shahíd, who was killed in A.H. 536 (A.D. 1141).²

Abú Jaafar Ahmad Ben Muhammad at-Tahawí is one of the numerous commentators on the Jámia as-Saglír of the Imám Muhammad: he also wrote an abridgement of the Hanafí doctrines, called the Mukhtasar at-Tahawí. Both works are often quoted as authorities in India, but they are not known to exist in that country at the present day. At-Tahawí died in A.H. 321 (A.D. 933).³

The Mukhtasar al-Kudúrí by Abú al-Husain Ahmad Ben Muhammad al-Kudúrí, is among the most esteemed of the works which follow the doctrines of Abú Hanífah, and is of high authority in India: indeed, it is in such general repute, that Hájí Khalfah, when speaking of those several works which are emphatically designated by antonomasia, "Al-Kitáb" or "the Book," says, that if, in matters connected with jurisprudence, such expression be used, it signifies the Mukhtasar al-Kudúrí.⁴ It is a general treatise on law, and contains upwards of twelve thousand cases. , As may be supposed with regard to a work of such celebrity, it has been commented on by numerous writers : several of the Commentaries are quoted in the Fatáwa al-Áálamgírí. Al-Kudúrí died in A.H. 428 (A.D. 1036).¹

The section of Al-Kudúrí's work relating to the warring against infidels was published in the original, with a Latin translation by Rosenmüller, in the year 1825.²

A well-known Commentary on the Mukhtasar al-Kudúrí is entitled *Al-Jauharat an-Nayyirat*³, and is sometimes called Al-Jauharat al-Munírat.⁴ Bailey says that this work, though of later date than the Hidáyah, is perhaps more valuable in other respects.⁵

Shams al-Aïmmah Abú Bakr Muhammad as-Sarakhsí, mentioned above as the author of comments upon the Jámia al-Kabír and the Jámia as-Saghír of the Imám Muhammad, and of other works, composed, whilst in prison at Úzjand, a law-book of great extent and authority, entitled the Mabsút.⁶ He was also the author of the most generally celebrated of the many works entitled Al-Muhít, which is derived in a great measure from the Mabsút, the Ziyádát, and the Nawádir of the Imám Muhammad.⁷

Burhán ad-Dín Mahmúd Ben Ahmad, already spoken of, also wrote a Muhít, which, though known in India, is not so greatly esteemed as the Muhít as-Sarakhsí. The work of Burhán ad-Dín Mahmúd is commonly known as the Muhít al-Burhání, and is taken principally from the Mabsút, the two Jámias, the Siyar, and the Ziyádát, of the Imám Muhammad : the author also made use of the Nawádir of the same doctor in composing his work.⁸

entitled the Tuhfat al-Fukahá.¹ The work of Álá ad-Dín was commented upon by his pupil Abú Bakr Ben Masúúd al-Káshání, who died in A.H. 587 (A.D. 1191).² This comment is entitled Al-Badáia as-Sanáia. Both the text and its comment, though not known in India, are often quoted as authorities.

The Hidáyah is the most celebrated law treatise according to the doctrines of Abú Hanífah, and his disciples Abú Yusuf and the Imám Muhammad, which exists in India: it is a Commentary on the Badáia al-Muhtadá, and both the text and comment are from the pen of Burhán ad-Dín Álí Ben Abú Bakr al-Marghínání, who, after employing thirteen years in writing the Hidáyah, died in A.H. 593 (A.D. 1196).³ The divisions and general arrangement of the Hidáyah, are taken from the Jámia as-Saghír of the Imám Muhammad, and it consists of a Digest of approved law cases, illustrated by proofs and arguments. Hájí Khalfah says, in describing the Hidáyah, "it is a practice observed by the composer of this work to state first the opinions and arguments of the two disciples (Abú Yúsuf, and the Imám Muhammad); afterwards the doctrine of the great Imám (Abú Hanífah); and then to expatiate on the proofs adduced by the latter, in such manner as to refute any opposite reasoning on the part of the disciples. Whenever he deviates from this rule, it may be inferred that he inclines to the opinions of Abú Yúsuf and the Imám Muhammad. It is also his practice to illustrate the cases specified in the Jámia as-Saghír and Kudúrí, intending the latter whenever he uses the expression 'he has said in the book.' In praise of the Hidáyah, it has been declared, like the Korán, to have superseded all previous books on the law; that all persons should remember the rules prescribed in it; and that it should be followed as a guide through life."

The same motive which dictated the compilation of the Hindú Code, induced Warren Hastings to recommend that a translation should be made into English of the Hidáyah; and accordingly Mr. Hamilton undertook the task; unfortunately, however, it was suggested by the Muhamnadan lawyers who were consulted on the occasion, that inasmuch as the idiom of the author was particularly close and obscure, a Persian version should be first made "under the inspection of some of their most intelligent doctors, which would answer the double purpose of clearing up the ambiguities of the text, and, by being introduced into practice, of furnishing the native judges of the Courts with a more familiar guide, and a more instructive preceptor, than books written in a language of which few of them have opportunities of attaining a competent knowledge."¹ This was accordingly done; and from this Persian translation Mr. Hamilton executed his English version², which is thus rendered less to be depended upon, than if it had been made from the original Arabic, without adding in any degree to its intelligibility. The work of Burhán ad-Dín Âlî as we possess it in this translation, is, however, a most useful book, although it contains much that is unimportant, and omits altogether the Law of Inheritance, which is perhaps the most important of all.

The text of the Hidáyah was published in the original Arabic at Calcutta in A. H. 1234 (A. D. 1818)³, and was again edited, together with its Commentary, the Kifáyah, by Hakím Maulaví Âbd al-Majíd in 1834.⁴ The Persian version was also published at Calcutta in the year 1807.⁵

A work of such great celebrity and authority as the Hidáyah has of course been illustrated by a large number of Commentaries, the first of which is said to have been written by Hamíd ad-Dín Álí al-Bukhárí, who died in A.H. 667 (A.D. 1268), and is a short tract entitled the Fawáid. The glosses of the Hidáyah which are most conspicuous for their reputation in India, are the Niháyah, the Înáyah, the Kifáyah, and the Fath al-Kadír.

The Niháyah of Husám ad-Dín Husain Ben Álí, who is said to have been a pupil of Burhán ad-Dín Álí, was the first composed of these; and it is important as supplying the omission of the Law of Inheritance in the Hidáyah, although the chapter on this law is said not to be looked upon as of equal authority with the Faráiz as-Sirájíyah, which will be hereafter described.

There are two Commentaries on the Hidáyah entitled *Înáyah*¹; but the one more commonly known by that name was written by the Shaikh Akmal ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Mahmúd, who died in A.H. 786 (A.D. 1384). The Înáyah is much esteemed for its studious analysis and interpretation of the text.

The Arabic text of the Înáyah was published in Calcutta in 1837, edited by Ramdhan Sen.²

The third Commentary, the Kifáyah, is by Imám ad-Dín Amír Kátib Ben Amír Ūmr, who had previously written another explanatory gloss of the same work, and entitled it the Gháyat al-Bayán. The Kifáyah was finished in A.H. 747 (A.D. 1346), and, besides the author's own observations, gives concisely the substance of other Commentaries.

The original text of the Kifáyah, accompanied by that of the Hidáyah, has been published as mentioned above.

Muhammad as-Siwásí, commonly called Ibn Hammám, who died in A.H. 861 (A.D. 1456), is the most comprehensive of all the comments on the Hidáyah, and includes a collection of decisions which render it extremely useful.

The Wáfí by Abú al-Barakát Âbd Allah Ben Ahmad, commonly called Iláfiz ad-Dín an-Nasafí, and its Commentary, the Káfí, by the same author, are works of some authority. An-Nasafí died in A.H. 710 (A.D. 1310).

An-Nasafí is also the author of the Kanz ad-Dakáik¹, a book of great reputation, principally derived from the Wáfí, and containing questions and decisions according to the doctrines of Abú Hanífab, Abú Yúsuf, the Imám Muhammad, Zufar, Ash-Sháfí, Málik, and others. Many Commentaries have been written on this work: the most famous is the Bahr ar-Ráik, which may, indeed, almost be said to have superseded it in India. The Bahr ar-Ráik is by Zain al-Aábidín Ben Nujaim al-Misrí, who died in A.H. 970 (A.D. 1562).² He left his work incomplete at his death, but it was finished by his brother, Siráj ad-Dín Umr, who also wrote another and inferior Commentary on the same work, entitled the Nahr al-Fáik.

The Tabyín al-Hakáik³, which is another Commentary on the Kanz ad-Dakáik, was composed by Fakhr ad-Dín Abú Muhammad Ben ÂlÍ az-Zailaí, who died in A.H. 743 (A.D. 1342), and is in great repute in India, on account of its upholding the doctrines of the Hanafí sect against those of the followers of Ash-Shafí.

Two other Commentaries on the Kanz ad-Dakáik deserve mention: one is called the Ramz al-Hakáik, and is by Badr ad-Dín Mahmúd Ben Ahmad al-Âainí, who died in A.H. 855 (A.D. 1451)⁴; the other is the Matlab al-Fáik by Badr ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Âbd ar-Rahman ad-Dairí⁵: the latter is much esteemed in India.

the Hijrah, by Burhán ash-Sharíyat Mahmúd, as an introduction to the study of the Hidáyah, has been comparatively eclipsed by its Commentary, the Sharh al-Wikáyah, by Úbaid Allah Ben Masúúd, who died in A.H. 750 (A.D. 1349): this author's work combines the original text with a copious gloss explanatory and illustrative. Both the Wikáyah and the Sharh al-Wikáyah are used for elementary instruction in the Muhammadan Colleges. Other Comments on the Wikáyah exist, but they are of no great note.

The Sharh al-Wikáyah has been printed and published at Calcutta.¹

The Nikáyah is another elementary law book well known in India, and is by the author of the Sharh al-Wikáyah: it is sometimes called the Mukhtasar al-Wikáyah, being, in fact, an abridgement of that work.

The original Arabic text of the Mukhtasar al-Wikáyah, was printed and published at Kasan in the year 1845.²

Three Comments on the Nikáyah are much esteemed: they were written respectively by Abú al-Makárim Ben Ábd Allah in A.H. 907 (A.D. 1501), Abú Álí Ben Muhammad al-Birjindí in A.H. 935 (A.D. 1528), and Shams ad-Dín Muhammad al-Khurásání in A.H. 941 (A.D. 1534).

The Ashbah wa an-Nazáir is also an elementary work of great reputation by Zain al-Aábidín, the author of the Bahr ar-Ráik already mentioned. Hájí Khalfah speaks of this work in high terms, and enumerates several Appendices to it that have been composed at different times.³

The original text of the Ashbah wa an-Nazáir was published at Calcutta in the year 1826, edited by Ramdhan Sen⁴; and was again printed at the same place, together with a Commentary by Ahmad Ben Muhammad al-Hamawí in 1844.¹

There is a law treatise entitled Núr al-Anwár fí Sharh al-Manár, by the Shaikh Jún Ben Abí Sayyid al-Makkí: it was published at Calcutta in the year 1819.²

A small tract on the sources of the law, entitled the Usúl ash-Sháshí, together with an explanatory Commentary, was printed in lithography, at Delhi, in the year 1847.³

These are the principal law-books of the third class that are known, and are of authority among the Sunnis of the Hanafí sect in India; but, as may be imagined, it is only a few of these that are quoted in the Courts; the Hidáyah and its comments, illustrated by the books of Fatáwa, generally sufficing to satisfy the Judges, and to offer sufficient grounds on which to base a decision.

Many works according to the doctrines of Abú Hanífa have been written, and are received as authorities in the Turkish empire. These I apprehend would be admissible if quoted in our Courts in India where the parties to a suit are of the Hanafí persuasion.

The most celebrated of these is the Multaka al-Abhár, by the Shaikh Ibráhím Ben Muhammad al-Halabí, who died in A.H. 956 (A.D. 1549). This work, which is an universal code of Muhammadan law, contains the opinions of the four chief Mujtahid Imáms, and illustrates them by those of the principal jurisconsults of the school of Abú Hanífa. It is more frequently referred to as an authority throughout Turkey, than any other treatise on jurisprudence.¹

The Multaka al-Abhár was published in the original Arabic, at Constantinople, in A.H. 1251 (A.D. 1835)²; and a Commentary on it, entitled the Majmaa al-Anhár, by Âbd ar-Rahman Ben Shaikh Muhammad, commonly known by the name of Shaikh Zádah, was published at the same metropolis, in A.H. 1240* (A.D. 1824).³ A Turkish translation, accompanied by a commentary by Muhammad Mavkúfátí, called after his name, *Al-Mavkúfátí*⁴, appeared at Búlák, in the year 1838. The Multaka has been also translated, in a great part, into French, and constitutes the basis of D'Ohsson's magnificent work on the Ottoman Empire.

The Durar al-Hukkám, by Mullá Khusrú, who died in A.H. 885 (A.D. 1480), is a Commentary upon a law treatise by the same author, entitled the Ghurar al-Ahkám. Mullá Khusrú, who is one of the most renowned of the Turkish juriconsults, completed his work in A.H. 883 (A.D. 1478). It is very voluminous, and, as an authority, is second only to the Multaka al-Abhár, which is preferred to it chiefly on account of its comparative brevity.⁵

The text of the Durar al-Hukkám was published at Constantinople in the year 1844.⁶ A Turkish translation of this Commentary, accompanied by the Arabic text of the Ghurar al-Ahkám, appeared previously, at the same place, in the year 1842.⁷

A tract on Penal Laws, in Turkish, was published at Constantinople, in A.H. 1254 (A.D. 1838): it is entitled Kánún Námeḥ-i Jazá.¹ The penal clauses in the Khatt-i Sharíf have been twice printed; once in Turkish², published at Constantinople in 1841; and again in Turkish, with a German translation by Petermann³, published at Berlin in the following year.

It will be unnecessary to dwell at any length upon the books which have been composed according to the doctrines of the three other principal Sunní sects.

I have already mentioned, that the sect founded by Málík Ben Anas is not known to prevail in any part of India; but the student of Muhammadan law will consult with interest two treatises which have lately appeared in France on the Málíkí doctrines.

The first of these was published in 1842, by M. Vincent.⁴ It contains a short account of the origin of the Málíkí doctrine, principally derived from *Al-Makrízí*⁵, a description of the most noted works treating of that doctrine⁶, and a translation of the chapter on Criminal Law, taken from the Risálah of Abú Muhammad Ábd Allah Ben Abú Zaid al-Kairuwání.⁷ The preliminary matter in M. Vincent's treatise is very interesting.

The second, which is a French translation, by M. Perron, of the Mukhtasar of Khalíl Ibn Ishák, is now in progress: two volumes have already appeared, and were published, respectively, in the years 1848 and 1849.⁸ The Mukhtasar is a work professedly treating of the law according to the Málíkí doctrines. M. Perron's version has been undertaken by order of the French Government, for the especial use of those who are employed in the administration of justice in Algeria, and is the more valuable, as the translator has not confined himself to a bare translation of the original text, but has illustrated all the obscure passages by introducing explanations from the different commentators on the work. When finished, it will present the first complete translation of a general treatise on Muhammadan jurisprudence that has as yet appeared. The typographical excellence of the volumes, combined with their lowness of price, do honour to the liberality of the French Government.

The works of MM. Vincent and Perron are peculiarly worthy of notice as being the first, and indeed the only ones, devoted to the explanation of the Sunní doctrines other than those of Abú Hanífah, that have been published in any European language.

Ash-Sháfíî, the third of the chief Mujtahid Imáms, and the preceptor of Ibn Hanbal, besides the works on the traditions already noticed, is said to have composed a most excellent treatise on jurisprudence, entitled Al-Fikh al-Akbar; but it has been questioned whether he was the author.¹ Abú Ibráhím Ismaîl Ben Yahya al-Muzaní, who was a distinguished disciple of Ash-Sháfíî, and a native of Egypt, was the most celebrated amongst that doctor's followers for his acquaintance with the legal system and juridical decisions of his preceptor, and for his knowledge of the traditions. Amongst other works, he wrote the Mukhtasar, the Mansúr, the Rasáil al-Muatabira, and the Kitáb al Wasáik. The Mukhtasar is the basis of all the treatises composed on the legal doctrines of Ash-Sháfíî, who himself entitled Al-Muzaní "the champion of his doctrine." Al-Muzaní died in A.H. 264 (A.D. 877).²

The writings of the followers of Ibn Hanbal are few in number, and it will be needless to mention any of them in this place, as they are never quoted in India, where his sect is not found to prevail.

The Shíâh works of the third class are, perhaps, not so numerous in proportion to those of the Sunnís, as are their works on the traditions, the writers of the Shíâh sects having expended more labour upon theological controversy, and that portion of the law immediately connected with the doctrines of their faith and their religious observances, than upon those branches which treat of civil and criminal jurisprudence. The materials for a description of this class of law-books are scanty. Núr Allah gives little more than their names, which, as is most frequently the case with regard to the titles of oriental works, afford scarcely any information as to their nature: in addition to this, MSS. of Shíâh law-books are rarely to be met with in any of our libraries.

Âbd Allah Ben Âlî al-Halabí was one of the first writers on Shíâh jurisprudence as he was amongst the earliest compilers of the traditions of that sect. It does not appear, however, that any of his legal compositions are extant.

Yúnas Ben Âbd ar-Rahman al-Yuktainí, who has been spoken of as a writer on traditions, composed a number of law treatises of the present class. The most famous is entitled the Jámia al-Kabír.

Abú al-Hasan Âlî Ben al-Husain al-Kumí, commonly called Ibn Bábawíyah, who died in A.H. 329 (A.D. 940), was the author of several works of note, one of which is called the Kitáb ash-Sharáia. This writer is looked upon as a considerable authority, although his fame has been almost eclipsed by his more celebrated son, Abú Jaafar Muhammad, already mentioned as a traditionist. When these two writers are quoted together, they are called the two Sadúks. The best known of the law-books of the present class, composed by Abú Jaafar, is the Maknaa fí al-Fikh. Abú Jaafar is said to have written in all one hundred and seventy-two works, and to have been especially skilled in Ijtihád.

Abú Âbd Allah Muhammad Ben Muhammad an-Nuamání, surnamed the Shaikh Mufíd and Ibn Muallim, was a renowned Shíâh lawyer. Abú Jaafar at-Túsí describes him in the Fihrist as the greatest orator and lawyer of his time, the most eminent Mujtahid, the most subtle reasoner, and the chief of all those who delivered Fatwas. Ibn Kasír ash-Shámí relates, that when he died—an event which took place in A.H. 413, or, as some say, in 416 (A.D. 1022—1025)—Ibn an-Nakíb, who was one of the most learned of the Sunní doctors, adorned his house, told his followers to congratulate him, and declared, that since he had lived to see the death of the Shaikh Mufíd he should himself leave the world without regret. The Shaikh Mufíd is stated to have written two hundred works, amongst which, one called the Irshád is well known. These are all enumerated in the Majális al-Múminín, on the authority of the Shaikh Najáshí. When the Shaikh Mufíd is quoted in conjunction with Abú Jaafar at-Túsí they are spoken of as the two Shaikhs.

Abú Jaafar Muhammad at-Túsí, who has been already noticed as a writer on biography, a commentator on the Korán, and one of the most distinguished of the Shíáh compilers of traditions, is also of the highest authority as an author of the present class of law-books. His chief works are the Mabsút and the Khiláf, which are held in great estimation, as are also the Niháyah and the Muhít, by the same author. The Risálat-i Jaafariyah is likewise a legal treatise by At-Túsí which is frequently quoted.

The most generally known of all the Shíáh lawyers is the Shaikh Najm ad-Dín Abú al-Kásim Jaafar Ben Muáyyid al-Hillí, commonly called the Shaikh Muayyid. He died in A.H. 676 (A.D. 1277). His great work, the Shará'ia al-Islám, is more universally referred to than any other Shíáh law-book, and is the chief authority for the law of the Indian followers of ÁKí.

The original text of the Shará'ia al-Islám was edited in Calcutta, by Maulaví Sayyid Aulád Husain and Maulaví Zahúr Álí, and published in the year 1839.¹

al-Islám, entitled the Masálik al-Afhám, was written by Zain ad-Dín Álí as-Sáílí, commonly called the Second Sahíd.

Yahya Ben Ahmad al-Hillí, who was celebrated for his knowledge of traditions, and who died in A.H. 679 (A.D. 1280), is well known amongst the Imámíyah sect for his works on jurisprudence. The Jámia ash-Sharáia and the Mudkhal dar Usúli Fikh are in the greatest repute.

The Shaikh al-Államah Jamál ad-Dín Hasan Ben Yúsuf Ben al-Mutahhir al-Hillí is called the chief of the lawyers of Hillah. He has been already mentioned as the author of the Khulásat al-Akwál; nor is his name second to any other as a writer of the present class of Shíáh law-books, his legal works being very numerous, and frequently referred to as authorities of undisputed merit. The most famous of these are the Talkhís al-Mirám, the Gháyat al-Ahkám, and the Tahrír al-Ahkám, which last is a justly celebrated work. The Mukhtalaf ash-Shíáh is also a well-known composition of this great lawyer; and his Irshád al-Azhán is constantly quoted as an authority, under the name of the Irshád-i Államah.

The Jámia-i Ábbásí is a concise and comprehensive treatise on Shíáh law, in twenty books.¹ It is generally considered as the work of Bahá ad-Dín Muhammad Áámilí, who died in A.H. 1031 (A.D. 1621); but that lawyer only lived to complete the first five books, dedicating his work to Sháh Ábbás II. The remaining fifteen books, as I have ascertained from a MS. preserved in the Radcliffe Library at Oxford, and forming part of the collection procured in the East by Mr. James Fraser², were subsequently added by Nizám Ibn Husain as-Sáwaí. This fact is not mentioned in the only other MS. of the entire work which I have met with; but in the Fraser MS., which comprises two volumes, the first containing the first five books, there is a distinct Preface to the sixth book, where it is expressly stated; and it is corroborated by the existence of a MS. in the Library of the East-India Company¹, which contains the first five books only of the Jámia-i Ábbásí, illustrated with notes, forming a perpetual commentary, taken from the principal Shíáh law authorities, by Ízz ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Mír Abú al-Husainí al-Musawí, who entitled his work the Majmua-i Izdiyád.

Two more modern Shíáh works of the present class are deserving of notice: these are, the Mufátih, by Muhammad Ben Murtaza, surnamed Muhsan, and a Commentary on that work by his nephew, who was of the same name, but surnamed Hádí.

The Mukhtasar-i Náfia is a Shíáh law treatise very frequently quoted, but I have not been able to discover the name of its author.

A general digest of the Imámíyah law in temporal matters was compiled under the superintendence of Sir William Jones, the text of which still remains in MS. The first portion of this Digest was translated by Colonel Baillie², who introduced some valuable additions, particularly the ninth and tenth books, which are translated from the Tahrír al-Ahkám of Állámah al-Hillí. It is greatly to be regretted that this work was not completed, and that the Preliminary Discourse promised, and so frequently referred to by the translator in the first volume, was never published, as there can be no doubt that Colonel Baillie's extensive knowledge and means of acquiring information on the subject would have supplied the numerous and unavoidable deficiencies of the present imperfect sketch of the authorities of Shíáh law.

IV. The works which treat separately and especially of the Ilm al-Faráiz, or science of dividing inheritances, are not

Abú Saad Zaid Ben Sábit, one of Muhammad's Ansárs, or allies, who died at Madínah in A.H. 54 (A.D. 673), is the earliest authority on the Îlm al-Faráiz, and may be called the father of the law of inheritance. Muhammad is reported to have said to his followers, "The most learned among you in the laws of heritage is Zaid"; and the Khalífahs Omar and Othmán considered him without an equal as a Judge, a juris-consult, a calculator in the division of inheritances, and a reader of the Korán.¹

The Imám Muwaffík ad-Dín Abí Àbd Allah Muhammad Ben Âlí ar-Rahabí, surnamed Ibn al-Mutakannah, wrote a short treatise, entitled the Bighyat al-Báhis, consisting of memorial verses, which are nearly unintelligible from their conciseness, and which give an epitome of the law of inheritance according to the doctrine of Zaid Ben Sábit. This doctrine, which was partly exploded by Abú Hanífab, is still looked upon with respect by all writers on Faráiz: it cannot, however, be said, so far as we know, to belong to any particular sect, unless, indeed, it be that of Ash-Sháfi, who, it seems, took Zaid Ben Sábit for his chief guide. For this reason I place the Bighyat al-Báhis as the first in order of these separate works on the Îlm al-Faráiz, although I have not been able to ascertain the period when its author flourished.

Sir William Jones published the text of the Bighyat al-Báhis, accompanied by a literal translation, which is almost as obscure as the original.² In the Preface to this work the learned translator falls into error, by stating, that as the author "was himself an Imam, his decisions on that account are considered binding by the sect of Ali, which the Indian as well as the Persian Mahomedans profess.”¹ Now, setting aside the fact that the Shíáh faith has never at any time had great weight in India, where, even at Lakhnau, “the seat of heterodox Majesty itself,” the tenets of the Sunnis are adhered to², the mere circumstance of Ibn al-Mutakannah being denominated “Al-Imám,” would be in itself sufficient to prove that he was not a Shíáh writer, since that title, as we have seen, is considered by the Shíáhs to be sacred, and is never applied by them to any other than Álí and his immediate descendants. Moreover, the 8th, 9th, and 10th pages of the Bighyat al-Báhis³, if they can be construed to mean any thing, seem to point at the doctrine of the Increase—a doctrine which is not admitted by the Shíáh lawyers.

The highest authority on the law of inheritance amongst the Sunnis of India is the Sirájíyah, which is sometimes called the Faráiz as-Sajáwandí, and was composed by Siráj ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Âbd ar-Rashíd as-Sajáwandí, but at what precise time is uncertain. The Sirájíyah has been commented upon by a vast number of writers, upwards of forty being enumerated in the Kashf az-Zunún.⁴ The most celebrated of these Commentaries, and the one most generally employed to explain the text, is the Sharífíyah by Sayyid Sharíf Álí Ben Muhammad al-Jurjání, who died in A.H. 814 (A.D. 1411).⁵

The original text of the Sirájíyah, together with that of the Sharífíyah was published in Calcutta in A.H. 1245 (A.D. 1829).⁶ A Persian translation of the Sirájíyah and Sharífíyah, by Maulaví Muhammad Ráshid, was made by order of Warren Hastings, in pursuance of his plan for rendering the native laws accessible to those to whom the administration of justice was entrusted; and although Sir William Jones has spoken in terms of disparagement of this translation¹, it bears testimony to the active interest taken by the illustrious Governor-General in the welfare and happiness of the Musulmán portion of the population of India. The text of this Persian version was published in Calcutta in the year 1812² by Muhammad Ráshid. The text and translation of the Sirájíyah, together with an abstract of the Sharífíyah, published by Sir William Jones, are well known.³ The learned Judge has executed his task with his accustomed ability; but although he blames, with apparent reason, the diffuseness of the Persian translator, it may be doubted whether he himself has not erred in the opposite extreme. Mr. Neil Baillie has well observed of Sir William Jones' translation: "The Sirajiyah is very brief and abstruse; and, without the aid of a Commentary, or a living teacher to unfold and illustrate its meaning, can with difficulty be understood even by Arabic scholars. It is therefore not a matter of surprise that its translation by Sir William Jones should be almost unknown to English lawyers, and be perhaps never referred to in His Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature in India. With the assistance of the Shureefee, it is brought within the reach of the most ordinary capacity; and if the abstract translation of that Commentary, for which we are also indebted to Sir William Jones, had been more copious, nothing further would have been requisite to give the English reader a complete view of this excellent system of inheritance."⁴ Mr. Baillie himself subsequently supplied this desideratum by his admirable treatise on the law of Muhammadan Inheritance, which will be noticed hereafter in speaking of the European works on the Musulmán law. Until the appearance of this last treatise, Sir William Jones' translation of the Sirájíyah was undoubtedly of considerable utility to the English Judge, as supplying in a great measure the omission in the Hidáyah; but it has been quite superseded by Mr. Baillie's clear and comprehensive exposition of this intricate and important branch of the Muhammadan law.

The most celebrated Commentaries on the Sirájíyah next after the Sharífíyah, although perhaps not much known in India, may be here noticed. These are, that by Shiháb ad-Dín Ahmad Ben Mahmúd as-Síwásí, who died in A.H. 803 (A.D. 1400), and which has a great and general reputation; one by Burhán ad-Dín Haidar Ben Muhammad al-Harawí, who died about A.H. 830 (A.D. 1426), which is famous for being of great excellence, though small in volume¹; another by Shams ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Hamzah al-Fanárí, who died in A.H. 834 (A.D. 1430), and whose work is considered to be one of the best of the glosses on the *Sirájíyah*²; and lastly, a Persian Commentary entitled Al-Faráiz at-Tájí fí Sharh Faráiz as-Sirájí, by Ábd al-Karím Ben Muhammad al-Hamadání.³

Burhán ad-Dín al-Marghínání, the author of the Hidáyah, also wrote a work on Inheritance entitled the Faráiz al-Úsmání, which has been illustrated by several comments.⁴

The Faráiz-i Irtizíyah is a concise treatise in Persian on the law of Inheritance, which appears to be the principal authority of that law in the *Dakhn*⁵: its author is Irtizá Álí Khán Bahádúr.

The Faráiz-i Irtizíyah was printed at Madras, but without a date.⁶ I have never been able to meet with this work.

The following separate treatises on the law of Inheritance according to Ash-Sháfi's doctrine may be mentioned:—Al-Faráiz al-Fárikíyah, by Shams ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Killáyí, who died in A.H. 777 (A.D. 1375). The Farāiz al-Fazārī, by Burhān ad-Dīn Abú Ishák al-Fazārī, commonly called Ibn Firkáh, who died in A.H. 729 (A.D. 1328). The Farāiz al-Mutawallí, by Abú Saíd Âbd ar-Rahman Ben Mámún al-Mutawallí, who died in A.H. 478 (A.D. 1085); and the Farāiz al-Mukaddasí, by Abú al-Fazl Âbd al-Malik Ben Ibráhím al-Hamadání al-Mukaddasí, and Abú Mansúr Âbd al-Káhir al-Baghdádí, who died respectively in A.H. 489 and 429 (A.D. 1095 and 1037).¹

The earliest treatises on the Îlm al-Farāiz by Shíáh writers appear to have been written by Âbd al-Âzíz Ben Ahmad al-Azadí, and Abú Muhammad al-Kindí, the latter of whom lived in the reign of Hárún ar-Rashíd. The best known and most esteemed are the Ihtijāj ash-Shíáh, by Saad Ben Âbd Allah al-Ashhārī, who died in A.H. 301 (A.D. 913); the Kitáb al-Mawáris, by Abú al-Hasan Âlī Ben Bábawíyah; and the Hamal al-Farāiz, and the Farāiz ash-Sharííyah, by the Shaikh Mufíd.

Abú Jaafar Muhammad at-Túsí, who, in addition to his general works on the Korán, the Hadís, and jurisprudence, wrote separate treatises on almost every branch of Shíáh law, has left a work on Inheritance entitled Al-Íjáz fí al-Farāiz.

V. Having described to this extent the comments on the Korán, the books of traditions, and the general and particular treatises on jurisprudence and special laws of the different sects, the fifth class of works, which treat of the Îlm al-Fatáwa, or science of decisions, remains to be noticed. These are very numerous, amounting to several hundreds: the greater portion, however, are either unknown, or never used in India.

Almost all these collections have the title of Fatáwa, but some appear under other designations. Some give the decisions of particular lawyers, or those found in particular books; others, those which tend to illustrate the doctrines of the several sects; whilst others again are devoted to recording the opinions of learned jurists, who were natives or residents of certain places, or lived at certain times. It will be necessary here to mention only a few of these works.

The Khulásat al-Fatáwa by the Imám Iftikhár ad-Dín Táhir Ben Ahmad al-Bukhárí, who died in A.H. 542 (A.D. 1147), is a select collection of decisions of great authority.¹ Iftikhár ad-Dín was also the author of the Khizánat al-Wákiáát, and the Kitáb an-Nisáb, on which books the Khulásat was grounded, and to which many subsequent collections of decisions are indebted for numerous valuable cases.

The Zakhírat al-Fatáwa sometimes called the Zakhírat al-Burháníyah, by Burhán ad-Dín Ben Mázah al-Bukhárí, the author of the Muhít al-Burhání, is also a celebrated, though not a large collection of decisions, principally taken from the Muhít.²

The Fatáwa Kází Khán, or collection of decisions of the Imám Fakhr ad-Dín Hasan Ben Mansúr al-Úzjandí al-Farghání, commonly called Kází Khán, who died in A.H. 592 (A.D. 1195), is a work held in the highest estimation in India, and indeed is received in the Courts as of equal authority with the Hidáyah of Burhán ad-Dín Álí, with whom Kází Khán was a contemporary: it is replete with cases of common occurrence, and is therefore of great practical utility, the more especially as many of the decisions are illustrated by the proofs and reasoning on which they are founded. Yúsuf Ben Junaid, generally known by the name of Akhí Chalabí at-Túkátí, epitomised Kází Khán's work, and compressed it into one volume.³

The Fatáwa Kází Khán was lithographed and published in the original at Calcutta in the year 1835.⁴

The Fatáwa az-Zahíriyah was written by Zahír ad-Dín Abú Bakr Muhammad Ben Ahmad al-Bukhárí, who died in A.H. 619 (A.D. 1222). His decisions were collected partly from the Khizánat al-Wákiáát, and his work has again become one of the bases of other collections. Badr ad-Dín Abú Muhammad Mahmúd Ben Ahmad al-Âiní, who died in A.H. 855 (A.D. 1451), compiled a collection selected from this and other old works of the same nature, entitled the Masáil al-Badríyah.¹

The *Fusúl al-Isturúshí*² was written by Muhammad Ben Mahmúd, commonly called Al-Isturúshí, in A.H. 625 (A.D. 1227), and is principally restricted to decisions respecting mercantile transactions.

The Fusúl al-Îmádíyah, by Abú al-Fath Muhammad Ben Abú Bakr al-Marghínání as-Samarkandí, was composed in A.H. 651 (A.D. 1253).³ It comprises forty sections containing decisions respecting mercantile matters, and, being left incomplete at the author's death, was finished by Jamál ad-Dín Ben Îmád ad-Dín.

The Fusúl al-Îmádíyah was lithographed and published in the original at Calcutta in the year 1827.⁴

These two last-mentioned works were incorporated in a collection entitled the *Jámia al-Fusúlain*⁵, which is a work of some celebrity: it was composed by Badr ad-Dín Mahmúd, known by the name of Ibn al-Kází Simáwanah, who died in A.H. 823 (A.D. 1420).

The Kunyat al-Munyat is a collection of decisions of considerable authority by Mukhtár Ben Mahmúd Ben Muhammad az-Záhidí Abú ar-Rijá al-Ghazmíní, surnamed Najm ad-Dín, who died in A.H. 658 (A.D. 1259).⁶

An-Nawawí, the author of the Biographical Dictionary the Tahzíb al-Asmá, who died in A.H. 677 (A.D. 1278), made a collection of decisions of some note, which is called the Fatáwa an-Nawawí. He also composed a smaller work of the same nature, entitled Üyún al-Masáíl al-Muhimmat, arranged in the manner of question and answer.¹

The Khizánat al-Muftiyín, by the Imám Husain Ben Muhammad as-Sanâání, who completed his work in A.H. 740 (A.D. 1339)², contains a large quantity of decisions, and is a book of some authority in India.

The Khizánat al-Fatáwa, by Ahmad Ben Muhammad Ben Abí Bakr al-Hanafí³, is a collection of decisions made towards the end of the eighth century of the Hijrah, and comprises questions of rare occurrence. It is known and referred to in India.

The Fatáwa Tátárkháníyah was originally a large collection of Fatwas in several volumes, by the Imám Âálim Ben Âlá al-Hanafí, taken from the Muhít al-Burhání, the Zakhírat, the Kháníyah, and the Zahíríyah. Afterwards, however, a selection was made from these decisions by the Imám Ibráhím Ben Muhammad al-Ilalabí, who died in A.H. 956 (A.D. 1549), and an epitome was thus formed, which is in one volume, and still retains the title of Tátárkháníyah.⁴

The Fatáwa Ahl Samarkand is a collection of the decisions of those learned men of the city of Samarkand who are omitted, or lightly passed over, in the Fatáwa Tátárkháníyah and the *Jámia al-Fusúlain*⁵, to both of which works it may be considered a supplement.

The Fatáwa az-Zainíyah contains decisions by Zain al-Âábidín Ibráhím Ben Nujaim al-Misrí, the author of the Bahr ar-Ráik and the Ashbah wa an-Nazáir. They were collected by his son Ahmad about A.H. 970 (A.D. 1562).⁶

The Fatáwa-ı Ibráhím Sháhí, by Shiháb ad-Dín Ahmad was composed by order of Ibráhím Sháh of Júnpúr, in the ninth century of the Hijrah. It is known in India, but it is not considered to be of much authority.¹

The Tanwír al-Ābsár, by the Shaikh Shams ad-Dín Muhammad Ben Ābd Allah al-Ghazzí, who composed this work in A.H. 995 (A.D. 1586), is enriched with a variety of questions and decisions, and seems to come within the present class of law-books. It is considered to be one of the most useful books according to the Hanafí doctrines, and has been frequently commented upon.² The most noted of these commentaries are, the Manh al-Ghaffár, which is a work of considerable extent, by the author of the Tanwír al-Absár himself; and the Fatáwa Durr al-Mukhtár, which was written in A.H. 1071 (A.D. 1660), by Muhammad Ālá ad-Dín Ben Shaikh ĀlÍ al-Iliskafí. Both these commentaries contain a multitude of decisions, and are well known in India.

A Persian translation of the book on Taazírát, from the Durr al-Mukhtár, was made, by order of Mr. Harington by Maulavi Muhammad Khalíl ad-Dín, and printed and published at Calcutta in the year 1813⁴; and a lithographed edition of the original Arabic text of the whole work appeared in the same city in the year 1827.⁵

A note book, or Háshíyat, entitled the Háshíyat al-Tahtáwí Āla Durr al-Mukhtár, was printed and published at Búlák, in the year 1839⁶; but I have not seen it, and am not aware whether it be explanatory of the work of Al-Hisfāfī or of some other treatise bearing a similar title.

Of the collections of decisions now known in India, none is so constantly referred to, or so highly esteemed, as the Fatāwa al-Âālamgīrī; and although, as has been stated, the Fatāwa Kāzī Khān is reckoned to have an equal authority with the Hidāyah, it is neither so generally used nor so publicly diffused as the Fatāwa al-Âālamgīrī. The latter work, from its comprehensive nature, is applicable in almost every case that arises involving points of Hanafī law, and is on that account produced and quoted as an authority, almost every day, in the Courts in India. The Fatāwa al-Âālamgīrī was commenced in the year of the Hijrah 1067 (A.D. 1656)¹, by order of the Emperor Aurangzēb Âālamgīr, by whose name the collection is now designated. It contains a bare recital of law cases, without any arguments or proofs; an omission which renders it defective for elementary instruction. The immense number of cases, however, compensate in some measure for this want, which is, moreover, supplied by the Hidāyah, and other works; and the insertion of argument can the more readily be dispensed with, since the opinions of the modern compilers could not have been esteemed of equal authority with those of the older writers on jurisprudence; and the mere decisions, without comment or explanation, are equally applicable to particular cases, when illustrated and explained by reference to works of authority as text books. The Fatāwa al-Âālamgīrī was translated into Persian by order of Âālamgīr's daughter, Zēb an-Nisā.

The original Arabic text of the Fatāwa al-Âālamgīrī was printed and published at Calcutta in the year 1828, in six large quarto volumes.²

Hudúd, from the Fatáwa al-Áálamgírí, was made, by order of the Council of the College of Fort William at Calcutta, by the Kází al-Kuzát Muhammad Najm ad-Dín Khán, and was published in the year 1813, together with a Persian treatise on Taazírát, by the same author, in the same volume with the translation of the book on Taazírát from the Fatáwa Durr al-Mukhtár already mentioned.¹

Mr. Neil Baillie, has recently published a translation of selected portions from two books of the Fatáwa al-Áálamgírí that comprise the whole subject of sale.² "The rule adopted in making the selections," says Mr. Baillie, "was to retain every thing of the nature of a general proposition, but to reject particular cases, except when they were considered to involve or illustrate some principle or maxim of law."³ The translator has executed his task in a most able manner, and, by preserving the division and arrangement of the original into chapters and sections, has rendered reference to the Arabic text a matter of no difficulty to the Oriental scholar. He has added throughout explanatory notes, which might, perhaps, have been extended with profit to the student. This work is a most important addition to the translated treatises on Muhammadan Law; and, being printed at the public expense, affords an additional instance of the reiterated and judicious liberality of the Honourable Court of Directors in patronising works tending to benefit India.

The Fatáwa al-Ankirawí, a collection of the decisions of Al-Ankirawí, by the Shaikh al-Islám Muhammad Ben al-Husain, who died in A.H. 1098 (A.D. 1686), is according to the doctrine of Abú Hanífab, and is a work of great authority.⁴

The Fatāwa Hammādīyah was composed by Abū al-Fath Rukn ad-Dīn Ben Husām an-Nāgūrī, and dedicated to his tutor, Hamād ad-Dīn Ahmad, chief Kāzī of Nahr Waláh. This work is a modern compilation, though its date has not been precisely ascertained, and is of considerable authority.

The Fatāwa Hammādīyah was lithographed, and published in the original Arabic at Calcutta in 1825.¹

The Fatāwa as-Sirājīyah is a collection of decisions on rare cases, which do not often occur in other books. Mr. Baillie, in his treatise on Inheritance, has constantly referred to this work as an authority. An edition of the original text was published at Calcutta in 1827.²

Típú Sultán ordered a collection of Fatwas to be compiled in Persian by a Society of the Ūlamá of Mysore. It comprises three hundred and thirteen chapters, and is entitled the Fatāwa-i Muhammadī.³

The following works of the present class, published at Constantinople, and containing decisions according to the doctrine of Abū Hanífa, may be noticed.

A collection of Fatwas, in the Turkish and Arabic languages, entitled the Kitáb fī al-Fikh al-Kadúsí, composed by Háfiz Muhammad Ben Ahmad al-Kadúsí, in A.H. 1226 (A.D. 1808).⁴ It was published in 1821.⁵

The Fatāwa-i Âbd ar-Rahím Effendí is a collection of judgments pronounced at various times in Turkey, and collected by the Muftí Âbd ar-Rahím. It was printed in the year 1827.⁶

of six hundred and seventy decisions, which is entitled the Tuhfat as-Sukúk, and was published in the year 1832.¹

The Jámia al-Ijráatín is a collection of decisions relating to the law of farming and the tenure of land, by Muhammad Aárif. It was printed in the year 1836.²

A collection of Fatwas relating to leases was published at Constantinople, by M. D'Adelbourg, in the year 1838.³ Prefixed to this collection are the principles of the law of lease, according to the Multaka; and it is followed by an analytical table, facilitating reference to the various decisions.

There are several collections of decisions according to the doctrine of Ash-Sháfi. The one most esteemed seems to be the Fatáwa Ibn as-Saláh, by Abú Âmrú Ūsmán Ben Âbd ar-Rahman ash-Sháhrázúrí, commonly called Ibn as-Saláh, who died in A.H. 642 (A.D. 1244).⁴ Ibn Firkáh, who has been already spoken of as the author of the Fáráiz al-Fazárí, a treatise on Inheritance, also made a collection of decisions, according to the same doctrine, which is called, after his name, the Fatáwa Ibn Firkáh.⁵

A few other collections of Fatáwa are mentioned by Harington as being known in India, but I have not met with them, nor have I been able to gain any information as to their nature, beyond what he has stated. Of three of these he merely gives the titles; viz. the Fatáwa-i Buzázíyah, the Fatáwa-i Nakhshbandíyah, and the Mukhtár al-Fatáwa.⁶ A fourth, the Fatáwa-i Karáklání, he describes as a Persian compilation, the cases included in which were collected by Mullá Sadr ad-Dín Ben Yaakúb, and arranged some years after his death by Kará Khán, in the reign of Sultán Âlá ad-Dín.⁷

are very rare; and although many writers are distinguished by the description of having been great masters of the Îlm al-Fatáwa, or as Givers of decisions, I have only discovered two works that come expressly within this class. The first is the Mujarrad fí al-Fíkh wa al-Fatáwa, by the Shaikh Abú Jaafar Muhammad at-Túsí, already so often mentioned; and the second is the Lamâh-i Dimishkíyah, by the Shaikh Ash-Shahíd Abú Âbd Allah Muhammad Ben Makkí ash-Shámí, who was killed in A.H. 786 (A.D. 1384).

The origin of the latter work is stated to have been, that Sultán Âlî Muayyid, who was the Ruler of Khurásán and a Shíáh, sent to Syria, to request the Shaikh Abú Âbd Allah to leave that country and proceed to Khurásán; whereupon the Shaikh excused himself, and having collected his decisions into the volume above-mentioned, sent the book to the Prince, instead of going himself.

There is a Commentary on the Lamâh-i Dimishkíyah, by Zain al-Aábidín, entitled the *Rauzat al-Bahíyat*¹, which is probably the same work as that referred to by Âlî Hazín, in his Memoirs, by the name of Sharh-i Lamâh-i Dimishkíyah.²

I may add, that Mr. Bland mentions a collection of decisions in his notice of the Oriental MSS. in the Library of Eton College³, which, from its title, Aurád-i Imámíyah, is most probably a Shíáh work.

The preceding selection will, I believe, be found to comprise the greater part, if not the whole, of the Muhammadan law-books which are of any authority in India, together with a list of their printed editions and translations. A short account of the original treatises by European authors, which are, unfortunately, very few in number, will close this enumeration of the writers on Muhammadan jurisprudence.

Sir William Hay Macnaghten's *Principles and Precedents of Muhammadan law*¹, like every work of their accomplished author, are of the highest authority, and exhibit the accuracy and clearness of arrangement for which he was so eminently distinguished. The Precedents are of the greatest importance, and the original extracts from the Hidáyah, the Shará'ia al-Islám, the Sirájíyah, and the Sharífíyah, which he has subjoined as an Appendix, materially increase the value of his work.

Mr. Neil Baillie's excellent treatise on the *Law of Inheritance*² is, as he himself modestly remarks, little more than a condensation of the Sirájíyah and Sharífíyah; but it is a condensation executed with much ability and judgment, and renders a very intricate subject perfectly intelligible. The passages in the original Arabic from the two works above mentioned as forming the basis of his treatise, together with others which he has added, will be consulted with advantage and gratification by the Arabic scholar.

A good abstract of Muhammadan law will be found in the *Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society*³: it is from the pen of Lieut. Colonel Vans Kennedy, and is well worthy the attention of the student.

Harington, in his Analysis of the Bengal Regulations, already so often quoted, has devoted a long chapter to the Criminal Law of the Musulmáns, as modified by the Regulations, which may be said, so far as it extends, almost to supersede reference to any other work on the subject.⁴ This chapter on Criminal Law is introduced by a description of some of the law-books of the Muhammadans, being a reprint of the paper on the same topic inserted by Harington in the tenth volume of the Asiatic Researches.

tions, forming the Sixth Appendix to the Minutes of Evidence taken before the Judicial Sub-Committee of the House of Commons in 1832¹, has also given a clear and concise exposition of the Muhammadan Criminal Law.

The principles of this law, as it is now in force in Bengal, are laid down by Mr. Beaufort, in his Digest of the Criminal Law of the Presidency of Fort William; and the work on the Criminal Law of Madras, which was published by Mr. Baynes, Civil and Sessions Judge of Madura, in the year 1848, leaves nothing to be desired on the subject with regard to that Presidency.²

The proprietary right in the soil, about which so much has been written, seems hardly to come within the compass of the present account of the Muhammadan law. I cannot, however, forbear to mention the learned works of the late General Sir Archibald Galloway and General John Briggs, who have especially distinguished themselves by their researches on this difficult question.³

Of the works by Europeans that have appeared on the Continent treating of Muhammadan law, the Tableau de l'Empire Othoman, by Mouradgea D'Ohsson, is entitled to the first place. As I have already stated, it is founded almost entirely upon the Multaka of the Shaikh Ibráhím al-Halabí, and embodies a translation of the greater portion of that treatise. The introduction to the Civil Code is both interesting and valuable; but the Code itself is wanting in arrangement, and sometimes, unfortunately, even in accuracy. Mouradgea D'Ohsson did not live to complete his work, but it was finished by his son. If we consider the paucity of materials, and the backward state of Oriental learning in Europe at the time when it was composed, it must be allowed to reflect the highest credit upon its authors. It will always be referred to with profit by those who may turn their attention to Indian Muhammadan law, as exhibiting a practical exposition of the doctrine of Abú Hanífa and the two disciples, which obtains throughout the Turkish Empire.

In the year 1841 M. Eugène Sicé of Pondicherry published a treatise on the Muhammadan law as current in the Dakhin.¹ The author states that he compiled it from the Kanz, by Nasr Allah Ben Ahmad²; the Khulásat al-Ahkám, by Ahmad Abú al-Kásim Ben Ahmad al-Táyaatí; and the Faráiz-i Irtizíyah.³ M. Sicé states that the Muhammadaus of Pondicherry are Shíáhs; but it is quite clear that no real Shíáh would allow many of the doctrines laid down in his treatise, based as they are on the authority of the Sunní Imáms. He, however, mentions that they pay respect to the memory of Hasan and Husain; and he also quotes as an authority, in several places, a certain Imám Jaafar, who is very likely no other than Jaafar as-Sádik himself. It is probable that these so-called Shíáhs of Pondicherry may be a kind of hybrid sect (not true Shíáhs), who venerate Álí and his descendants, and at the same time, through ignorance, pay respect to the opinions of the great jurisconsults of the Sunnís, and even grant them the title of Imám.

A series of important papers on the Civil Code of the Sunnís is now in course of publication in the Journal Asiatique, by M. Du Caurroy⁴: the first appeared in July 1848.

M. M. Solvet and Bresnier published at Algiers, in the year 1846⁵, a short treatise on the law of Inheritance according to the Málíkí doctrine: it is an interesting little work, and the tabular statement of the shares taken by the concurrent heirs of a deceased, which it was written to illustrate, will be found of considerable practical utility.

A valuable and recondite contribution by Dr. Worms to the literary illustration of the proprietary right in the soil according to the Muhammadan law has appeared in the *Journal Asiatique*¹: it is full of curious and varied information on the subject, taken from different authors; and as the extracts are in almost every case accompanied by the original texts, a reference to a multitude of volumes, and to MSS. difficult of access, is spared to those Orientalists who may wish to investigate this most important and interesting topic.

The latest publication on the Continent relating to the Muhammadan law is also inserted in the Journal Asiatique; in a recent Number of which excellent periodical Mírzá Kásim Bég, Professor at the Imperial University of Saint Petersburg, has given an admirable account of the rise and progress of the jurisprudence of the Sunnís, displaying an intimate acquaintance with the subject, and great ability in its treatment.²

No original European work has been written on the Shíáh law, which is only slightly touched upon by Sir William Macnaghten in his Principles and Precedents of Muhammadan law. An announcement was, however, made in the Annual Report of the Asiatic Society of Paris for the year 1848³, that M. Kasimirski de Bieberstein, the librarian of the Society, was occupied in the preparation of a Shíáh Code of Law: M. Kasimirski has himself visited Persia, and his personal experience will thus enable him to supply practical information on the subject, which could not be furnished by those who have not enjoyed the same opportunities.

It is not an easy task to obtain accurate information with respect to many of the laws which come under this class. All of them depend, more or less, and in some instances entirely, upon arbitrary usage and customs, to which time has given the force of law.

The natives of India not comprised in the Hindú and Muhammadan classes, even when possessing a Code of laws of their own, rarely respect its provisions, and are generally ignorant of its application; and it is only by a diligent inquiry into the local customs upon which they rely that justice can be administered to them in our Courts according to their so-called systems of jurisprudence. Such being the case, the subject may be dismissed in a very few words, taking the different classes of natives seriatim.

The law of the Portuguese in India is the Roman Civil Law as current in Portugal¹, but somewhat modified by local custom.

The Armenians of Bengal, in their petition, which I have quoted in a former page², state that "no trace of their own law is now to be discovered;" and it appears to be an undoubted fact, that no peculiar Code of laws has been administered amongst them anywhere since they have ceased to be a nation.³

No Code whatever is alluded to in Father Chamich's History of Armenia; nor is the name or title of any author or work on law given by the learned Sukias Somal in his account of the literature of Armenia.⁴

Mr. Avdall, an Armenian gentleman well versed in the literature of his country, states, in a communication addressed to the Secretary of the Indian-Law Commission¹, that "two Codes of Armenian law have at different times been compiled. The first is said to have been compiled under the auspices of the Armenian King, Johannes Bagratian, about the year 1046, and is known only through the medium of a translation made into Latin, in the year 1548, by order of Sigismund the First, King of Poland, into whose territories a body of Armenians had emigrated in the eleventh century. The second is the compilation of Mechithar Ghosh, a learned Armenian, who flourished in the end of the twelfth and beginning of the thirteenth centuries. According to this writer there was, in his own times, a total absence of laws and law-books among the Armenians. A copy of this book exists at Venice; but neither of this, nor of the preceding Code, does any copy exist in India."

A short time since I was favoured with a communication on the subject of the Armenian laws by the Archbishop and Abbot-general of the Mechitaristân Monastery of San Lazzaro in Venice. The learned prelate distinctly states that the Code of ancient Armenian laws no longer exists. He says, also, that the Armenians who were established at Leopolis in Poland in the eleventh century, carried with them the Armenian laws, which were there administered to them. He then mentions the Latin translation made by order of King Sigismund, and the later compilation spoken of by Mr. Avdall; adding that there is a MS. of the former, and several of the latter work, in the library of the Monastery. He also refers to another Armenian work, which is a translation from the Greek, and is entitled "the Laws of Kings;" and he concludes, by stating emphatically, that the Armenians who remained in their own country lost not only their independence, but also their national laws; and that all those who emigrated have always been governed by the laws of the countries in which they have settled. The Archbishop, however, makes the general reservation, that in ecclesiastical matters all Armenians are subject to the laws of the Armenian Church, as established by their ancient holy Fathers.

There is no doubt, therefore, that the Armenians at the present time have no actual laws especially applicable to them; and that decisions in cases to which they are parties can only be regulated in accordance with local usage.

The Pársís, who are now settled principally in Gujarát, and on the north coast of Bombay, are a large and influential class of natives, and are supposed to have first established themselves in India about the year 651, when the Sásánian monarchy was extinguished in Persia by the defeat and murder of Yazdajird, the last king of that race, and the fireworship of Zartusht was supplanted by Islám.

On the establishment of the new creed, a large body of Persians emigrated from Kiruán to India, in order to practise peacefully the faith of their forefathers, and they are represented to have carried with them the ancient books of their religion and law. Such books, however, as are now extant relate almost exclusively to the doctrines and ceremonial observances of their religion; and there are no existing works which can be considered as forming a Code of laws properly so called.¹

Their present law, if it deserve the name, consists of their national customs, preserved by immemorial usage, and many others borrowed from the Hindús, which are ascertainable only by reference to the Dustúrs, or Pársí priests, or to the Múbid, or head, or a Pancháyit, of the Cast, for as such they Westergaard of Copenhagen, who has been long occupied in researches on the ancient languages of Persia, is preparing for publication a complete edition of so much of the Zendavesta as has been handed down to us. Some years since he undertook the voyage to Bombay for the purpose of collecting materials; and since then he has been diligently employed in the examination of the literary treasures of all the public libraries of Europe. M. Westergaard's work will be accompanied by a translation, a grammar of the two dialects of the Zend, and a complete concordance of the Zendavesta.

are considered in India, and they have adopted the Hindú method of referring disputed points to a Pancháyit.

The Act of the Legislative Council of India No. IX. of 1837, may be mentioned here as fixing the law with regard to Pársís in certain cases. By this Act it was declared, that all immoveable property belonging to any Pársís, and situate within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts, should, as far as regards its transmission in cases of death or intestacy, be of the nature of chattels real, and not freehold.

The Sikhs do not appear to have any distinct system of jurisprudence: indeed, the religion itself of the followers of Nának can hardly be called an established belief. Its original elements were deism of a mystical tendency, contemplative worship, peace and goodwill, and amalgamation of Muhammadan and Hindú.¹ These principles have, however, become sadly degenerated in practice. The great distinction between the Sikhs and the other Hindús is the abolition of Cast; but the experiment has proved a most unsuccessful one, as it has caused, to use the words of Professor Wilson, "the extinction of many of the restraints which, in the more orthodox system, supply, however imperfectly, the want of a purer code of faith and practice."² The sacred books of the Sikhs contain no systematic exposition of doctrine, and but few practical rules of conduct; being for the most part of a mystical or moral purport.³ Their laws, if they may be so termed, are adaptations of the Hindú system, and depend entirely upon usage, and not upon any written Code.

I am not aware that the Jain laws have ever been treated of by any European author, or that their legal writings have ever been consulted or examined. In some rare instances, however, when cases have arisen involving questions of Jain law, the Hindú law officers of the Courts have given their opinions, professedly founded on a reference to the Jain Shastras. What these Shastras are I have not been able to ascertain.

An abstract translation of the Burmese Code of laws, entitled Damasat, or the Golden Rule, appeared in the year 1833.¹ The Damasat seems to be of considerable antiquity, and presents many analogies with the Hindú law; the abstract, however, is only sufficient to give a general view of the system.

Dr. Rost is now engaged in preparing an edition of a Code of Buddhist laws in the Páli language, under the auspices and at the expense of the Earl of Ellesmere, the President of the Royal Asiatic Society. The existence of this Code was not known to Europeans until it was discovered by Dr. Rost among the MSS. preserved in the British Museum. It is said to have been promulgated in the fifth century of our Æra; but it is a question how far it is Buddhistical in its origin; and the name of its reputed author, Manusara, would of itself lead us to infer that it is founded on the Institutes of Menu, even if the fact were not abundantly proved by an inspection of its form and contents. This Páli Code is accompanied by a translation and commentary in the Burmese language, adapting its provisions to the wants of more recent times, and appears to be the text book of the Burmese Courts of Law, as well as those of the other Buddhist nations who inhabit the extra-Gangic peninsula.

The laws of China, also a Buddhist country, have been made known by the learned labours of Sir George Staunton, who, in his translation of the *Ta Tsing Leu Lee*², has presented us with the fundamental laws of the Chinese, and a selection from their Penal Code. The Leu Lee is held in the highest veneration.

tion in the Celestial Empire, and comprises a general Code of laws, Civil, Fiscal, Ritual, Military, and Criminal, together with such as are relative to public works.

The Javan law is divided into two departments, that depending upon the Muhammadan law, and that which rests upon custom and tradition: the former called Hukm Allah, and the latter Yúdha Nagára. The Muhammadan law decisions are guided by the Arabic works on law, or rather by a collection of opinions extracted from them, and translated into the Javan language. The law of custom is chiefly handed down in oral tradition, but is also contained, in a great measure, in two works, one by Júgul Múdah Pátch, which is computed to be about six hundred years old, and another by Rája Kápa. The first compilation of the Javan laws, in which they were somewhat blended with the Muhammadan jurisprudence, was made by order of the first Musulmán prince of Deniák. Another work of this description which is in high estimation is the Súria Alam: it will be found translated into English in Sir Stamford Raffles' History of Java.¹ In the latter work there is also an abstract of some of the laws said to have been in force in the earliest periods to which Javan tradition refers.² The proclamations, and the laws and regulations of the Sovereign, form another source of deviation from the Muhammadan law. Collections of these have been committed to writing.³

It is not probable that the Hebrew laws, grafted by the Rabbinical writers on the Code contained in the Old Testament, will ever be received or administered in India: those, however, who are curious in the matter, will find ample information as to the Jewish laws of succession and marriage, in the works of the learned Selden.⁴

In addition to the above, several races, as the Khonds and some others, might be ranged under the present head; but these have no pretension to laws of their own.

It is evident, from this rapid sketch, that the class of natives of India who are neither Hindús nor Muhammadans rely in most instances almost entirely upon custom; that they are either destitute of particular laws; that such laws are unknown or forgotten, or laid aside; or, lastly, that they have adopted modifications of the Hindú and Musulmán systems of jurisprudence.

Such is the present state of things; and the uncertainty caused by it, which has called forth the express complaint of the more influential portion of this class of natives, seems to require the prompt and active interference of the legislature.

VI. ACCOUNT OF THE REPORTS OF DECIDED CASES, AND CONCLUSION.

Before concluding this Introduction, I shall give a short account of the Reports from which the cases contained in the Digest have been collected.

The decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council are taken from the Reports of Knapp and Moore, from the Indian Appeal Cases collected and published separately by the latter gentleman, and from a valuable collection of the printed cases in Indian Appeals, with the judgments annexed, prepared and arranged by Mr. Lawford. I have added a few from MS. notes taken by myself in the Council Chamber.

The cases decided in the Supreme Court at Calcutta are derived from the following sources:—

Notes of decided cases by the late Sir Edward Hyde East, Baronet, formerly Chief Justice of the Court. These notes are printed in extenso in the second volume of this work. They were originally placed at my disposal in MS., by the late learned Judge; and they are now published for the first time, by the kind permission of the present Baronet, Sir James East, M.P.,

These notes will be found to contain many most important decisions on points of native law, and questions relating to the jurisdiction of the Court.

Reports of cases inserted by way of illustration, by Sir Francis Macnaghten, formerly a Judge of the Court, in his Considerations on the Hindú Law as current in Bengal, published in the year 1824. These Reports, from the nature of the work from which they are extracted, are of course confined to cases involving questions of Hindú law.

The notes of cases contained in Mr. Longueville Clarke's editions of the Rules and Orders of the Supreme Court, published in 1829; of the additional Rules and Orders which appeared in the same year; and of the Rules and Orders for 1831,—32, published in 1834. These notes of cases are very valuable, many of those in the two latter collections containing the judgments in full, and relating to points of native law of the greatest interest.

The Reports by Mr. Bignell, published in 1831. A single number only of these Reports appeared. The cases are fully and ably reported.

The notes of cases inserted in Mr. Smoult's Collection of Orders on the Plea Side of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, from 1774 to 1813 inclusive, published in 1834. These notes are succinct, but highly useful, and comprise decisions, principally on points of practice, from the year 1774 to 1798.

A Note-book by the late Mr. E. D. Barwell, formerly a barrister of the Court, containing MS. notes of decisions in the Supreme Court at Calcutta. Some of these notes are extracted from the MSS. of Mr. L. Clarke, and that gentleman has kindly authorised me to make use of them.

A Collection of decisions of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, published by Mr. Morton in 1841. This Collection is principally compiled from the MS. notes of Sir R. Chambers, C.J., Mr. Justice Hyde¹, and other Judges of the Court; and the cases relate almost exclusively to questions altogether peculiar to India. It is needless to add that it is a work of the greatest utility and authority.

The Reports by Mr. Fulton, of which the first volume was published in the year 1845. This volume comprises cases decided between the years 1842 and 1844. Mr. Fulton has since returned to England, and I am not aware that any Reports have been undertaken in continuation of his work.

The only collection of the decisions of the Supreme Court at Madras is that published by Sir Thomas Strange, C.J. This work appeared in the year 1816, and comprises three volumes. The cases are clearly set forth, and the judgments frequently given entire; but, from the paucity of the materials placed at the disposition of the learned Judges at that period, the decisions of the Court, where they relate to questions of native law, must be taken with some reservation.

For the decisions of the Supreme Court at Bombay I am indebted to the kindness of Sir Erskine Perry, who now presides in that Court. These decisions have not been before published, and will be found printed verbatim in the second volume of this work. They gain additional authority from the fact of the MS. having been carefully revised and corrected by the learned Chief Justice himself.

The first printed Reports of cases decided in the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company were published by Sir William Hay Macnaghten, when Register of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta, in which Court the cases were determined. A second edition of the first two volumes appeared in the year 1827, and the Reports were subsequently continued in their present form. Those contained in the first volume were chiefly prepared by Mr. Dorin, afterwards a Judge of the Court. The notes appended to the cases in this first volume are entitled to weight, as having been written or approved by the Judges by whom the cases were decided; and those explanatory of intricate points of Hindú law are most especially valuable; as coming from the pen of the learned Henry Colebrooke. The second, third, and part of the fourth volumes, were also published by Sir William Macnaghten: the later cases in the fourth volume, were selected and prepared by Mr. C. Udney, his successor in the office of Register. The cases contained in volume the fifth were reported by Mr. J. Sutherland: those given in the sixth and seventh volumes have no reporter's name affixed, but they were approved by the Court, and were, as I believe, prepared by the Registers. These Reports are still in progress.

Reports of summary cases determined in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta from the years 1841 to 1846 were appended to the seventh volume of the above-mentioned collection. In the year 1845 a selection of Reports of summary cases was published separately, containing selected decisions from the year 1834 to 1841, the former year being the period at which the summary and miscellaneous department of the business of the Court was first entrusted to one Judge.

Reports of cases, chiefly in summary appeals decided in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta, were published by Mr. Sevestre, one of the Pleaders of the Court. Volume the first of this collection comprises three parts, and was completed in the year 1842. I have received five parts of the second volume, which bring these valuable Reports down to September 1846, in which year the fifth part appeared. The cases are inserted in the Digest to that period.

The decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta, recorded in English, in conformity to Act XII. of 1843, are now published monthly. This collection was commenced in the year 1845, by order of the Right Honourable the Governor of Bengal.

• Reports of the decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of the North-Western Provinces, recorded in English, in pursuance of Act XII. of 1843, were commenced in April 1846, and are still in course of publication.

The decisions of the Zillah Courts of the Lower Provinces, recorded in English, according to Act XII. of 1843, are also printed monthly, in the same form as the two preceding collections.

The later cases in these three last-named series came into my hands too late for insertion in the Digest, but they will be collected and arranged in a continuation of this work, which I purpose to publish periodically, as the materials accumulate in sufficient quantity.¹

The Reports of cases decided in the Courts of the Honourable Company at Madras are few in number. A volume was published in 1843, entitled, Decrees in Appeal Suits determined in the Court of Sudder Adawlut, Vol. I., containing select decrees from 1805 to 1826 inclusive. The cases in this collection which involve questions of Hindú law are interesting, as illustrative of the prevailing doctrines of the southern schools. They are, however, obscurely reported, and, in some instances, contain no point of law at all, being merely decisions for want of proof.

The cases decided in the Sudder Adawlut at Madras are now printed monthly: the first number appeared in July 1849. These arrived in this country too late for insertion in the Digest, but will be found in the Continuation.

The decisions in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Bombay are taken from two collections of Reports.

The first is the well-known series of Reports by Mr. Borradaile, formerly one of the Judges of the Court, and the author of the translation of the Mayúkha. Mr. Borradaile's work is in two folio volumes, and was published at Bombay in the year 1825. It is replete with cases on points of law peculiar to the Bombay side of India, which are very ably reported.

The other source from which I have derived the decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Bombay is a small anonymous publication, which appeared in 1843. It is entitled, Reports of selected cases determined in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Bombay. The Reports contained in this little volume were prepared, with few exceptions, by the Deputy Registers of the Court, and are arranged according to the dates of the decisions, which are scattered over a period of twenty years, from 1820 to 1840, the later ones having been noted by the Judges who sat, as proper subjects for publication.

In the branch of Criminal Judicature two series of Reports have alone been printed. The former of these comprises five volumes and part of a sixth, and contains sentences of the Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta. The first two volumes were prepared by Sir William Macnaghten: the three last have no reporter's name. This series is still in progress.

The second series contains Reports of criminal cases determined in the Court of Sudder Foujdary Adawlut of Bombay from 1827 to 1846. This compilation is by Mr. Bellasis, Deputy Register of the Court; and the cases have been selected to illustrate the application of the law, both in questions of evidence and of punishment, and also to settle doubtful points of procedure and practice. The first volume was published in the year 1849, but its very recent appearance in this country has precluded me from making use of it in the Digest. The cases it contains will, however, be inserted in the Continuation.

It remains to make some remarks respecting the plan which I have adopted in the arrangement of the Digest.

It may be thought by some that it would have been better to have divided the work into two separate portions, one having reference to the decisions pronounced in Her Majesty's Courts, and the other to those in the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company. And, indeed, the diversity of the laws, and the variety of the Courts, cause a great difficulty in arranging the decided points together, so as to combine brevity with clearness. Many of the cases decided are, however, of authority in all the Courts; and thus, had I divided the Digest into two distinct parts, it would have necessitated an almost endless repetition; whilst, by always keeping the placita under each title separate, when the decisions are not of common authority, I trust that any inconvenience of reference will be avoided. The title "Mortgage" may be cited as an instance. Under this title the placita are arranged under the following heads:—1. Hindú Law; 2. Muhammadan Law; 3. In the Supreme Courts; 4. In the Courts of the Honourable Company. The decisions under the two first heads are applicable to both species of Courts, Queen's and Company's; whilst those placed under the two latter have a special and restricted application. In certain instances I have not thought it necessary to class the decisions under separate heads as to the Courts in which they were passed. The placita found under the title "Hindú Widow," for example, may be quoted as authorities in all the Courts; whilst those under "Sheriff" are strictly confined to the Supreme Courts of Judicature; and those arranged under the title "Resumption" apply to suits which can only arise in the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company. By this means I think the various systems of law are kept entirely distinct, with a greater attainment of conciseness, lucidity of arrangement, and convenience of reference, than would have resulted from any other method: and I apprehend that no confusion can arise in the minds of those who are acquainted with the constitution and powers of the Courts of Judicature in India, or who have followed me thus far in this Introduction.

Where questions of native law occur, I have always referred copiously, in the notes at the foot of the page, to the text-books. This, I hope, will save some trouble to those who may not be well acquainted with such works, by directing their attention at once to the places where the law is to be found on which the decisions are based.

I am sensible that this plan of reference might have been more fully carried out; and I trust that, at a future period, I may have an opportunity of perfecting it. So far as it extends, however, I believe it will afford assistance to the student.

In cases involving disputed points of Hindú law the reader will perceive that I have, on their first occurrence, stated shortly in the notes the difference of doctrine which obtains in the various schools, and given references to works in which the points in consideration are more elaborately discussed.

It is hoped that these references, together with the name of the Court in which any case may have been decided, which is obvious from the title of the work from which the decision is extracted, always appended to the foot of the placita, will be sufficient to indicate the school of law to which each decision has relation. For instance, in the case of Sree Brijbhookunjee v. Gokoolootsaojee (Adoption 3), it appears, by the abbreviated name of the Report, viz. Borr., that the cause was decided in the Sudder Adawlut of Bombay; and reference being given in the Notes to the Mayúkha, the reader will at once be aware that the doctrine upheld by the decision is of authority in the Maharashtra school. When this is not so self-evident, and generally where the doctrine is peculiar to one particular school, I have prefaced the decision by stating the school of law by which it is governed.

Whenever the notes illustrating and explaining the various decisions are not from my own pen, I have added the names of their authors. Some few, however, affixed to the decisions taken from the latter volumes of the Reports in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Calcutta, have been inserted without acknowledgment, the names of the annotators not appearing on the face of the Reports.

The decisions of the Judges in the Courts in India are of various authority; those of early date having been sometimes of necessity pronounced upon insufficient grounds, no means then existing for the acquirement of the native systems of law; and they are always of greater or less weight according to the Judges by whom they were given. In order to assist the discrimination of the reader on this point, I have added the names of the Judges by whom every judgment or sentence was passed in the Courts of the Honourable East-India Company; and I have invariably noticed in every case the date of each decision. It must also be observed, that many of the decided points are founded upon Laws and Regulations which have been since abrogated. This I have always pointed out in the notes.¹

Where it has been found impracticable to arrange the cases under the several titles in a connected order of subject, I have placed them chronologically.

The reader will remark, that, both with regard to the placita and the notes, I have freely resorted to a system of double entry. As an excuse for this, I may observe, that, in a work like the present, omission is more to be guarded against than repetition; the principal object in view being, that every decided point, and the authorities upon which it is grounded, may be readily discovered.

The plan of numbering the placita has been adopted with some hesitation, the mere fact seeming to imply, that the numbers given under any reference to a particular title comprise all the cases relating to such title. I have no doubt, however, that many decided points may be discovered which should more strictly have been inserted under other titles than those where they occur, and that references have frequently been omitted. Accuracy in this respect can scarcely be expected in the first arrangement of so many thousands of cases. I have, nevertheless, carried out the plan of numbering, as, however imperfect, the placita referred to are more easily consulted when numbered, than if the references were made merely to a title generally, as is the case in Harrison's and other Digests. Many points of law may, by this means, be at once discovered; but it must not be concluded that the numbers mentioned refer to the only places in which such points are illustrated. I therefore beg to make the express reservation, that the plan of numbering the placita has been introduced solely for the purpose of affording assistance to the reader, and that it must not be entirely relied on, so as completely to supersede his own research.

I have naturally experienced great difficulty in classifying the cases which relate to the practice of the Sudder and Mofussil Courts. Correctness, in regard to so technical a subject, is, I fear, hardly to be attained by one who has never practised in the Courts in India.

The method, if it deserve the name, which I have followed in the transcription of native words, may call for a few words of explanation. Nowhere does a greater incongruity exist with respect to the rendering of Oriental terms by means of the Roman character, than in the works relating to Indian law. This has arisen from the fact, that the original transcriptions were, for a lengthened period, merely endeavours to represent the sounds of words, with, of course, more or less accuracy according to the discriminating power of the ear of the transcribers, who were, for the most part, ignorant of the native languages. The confusion that resulted was afterwards still worse confounded by the introduction of the unsightly orthography of Dr. Gilchrist, which neither gives satisfactorily the equivalents of the Eastern characters, nor furnishes even a tolerable guide to the pronunciation of the words. At first I had wished to have adhered to one uniform plan throughout the work, following the system recommended by Sir William Jones in the first volume of the Asiatic Researches, as modified by the Oriental Translation Committee. This, however, I was soon forced to abandon, since it would have rendered many words in the most common use utterly unrecognizable, excepting by an Orientalist. The words Dewanny, rupee, Bombay, and Mysore, for instance—and a host of others might be adduced—would scarcely have been identified by one unacquainted with the Eastern languages, if spelt with reference to the native orthography. Many terms, however, have been transcribed, and are still written, in a variety of ways, and without any pretension to uniformity or correctness. It is obvious that these terms are as likely to be recognised if accurately spelt, as though they were to occur under any other form. Whenever this variety of spelling prevails, I have, therefore, adopted the system of orthography which I originally set out with; but whenever words have been spelt through a long course of years, however erroneously, in one invariable manner, and have thus, as it were, become naturalized into our language, I have retained such spelling. It is difficult, in observing this distinction, to draw the line between those terms which come within the former or the latter class; but in the Glossary which I have appended to this volume I have, in all cases, added the transcription of each word in the Arabic or Dévanágari character. I have restricted the Glossary to such terms as occur in the present work, giving the meaning of each, so far as I have been able to ascertain, and denoting the language from which it is derived.

The names of cases occurring in the Digest are always given, for convenience of reference, as written in the Reports from which they are taken.¹ The reader, therefore, in referring to the Index of Cases at the end of this volume, will frequently have to seek for what is in reality the same name in different places: e. g. the name of Muhammad must be looked for under Mahamed, Mahomed, Mohammed, Mohammud, Moohummud, Muhammad, and Muhamnud. A like difficulty would be experienced in some other instances, but it is of course quite unavoidable.²

Before taking leave of this portion of the subject, I may notice a work which is now in progress, and from which we may expect the most beneficial results. Some years since the Honourable East-India Company caused to be printed a List or Dictionary of all the technical terms employed in the administration of the British territories in India. Copies of this List were distributed to the Company's Officials in the various districts, who were invited to furnish details as to the origin and application of each of these terms. The answers obtained have been transmitted to England, and placed in the hands of the Learned Professor Wilson, who has far advanced in the preparation for the press of a complete Glossary of all the Indian technical terms. Sir Henry Elliot, Foreign Secretary to the Government of India, in answer to the Company's requirement, contributed such a mass of information on the subject, that the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces directed his work to be published. The first volume has appeared, and, so far as it extends, is exceedingly useful. Sir Henry Elliot's Glossary will be incorporated in the work of Professor Wilson, which will contain every word in alphabetical order, in Roman letters, with transcriptions in the native characters. All the incorrect methods of spelling hitherto employed will be given, with references to the accurate orthography; and each word will be followed by its definition, etymology, and remarks on the different shades of meaning in which it is employed in the various provinces. It is to be hoped that this Glossary, when completed, will put an end to the confusion that has hitherto prevailed; and that henceforth, at least in all official documents, it may serve as a standard of orthography for every Oriental term when technically applied.

I have a large debt of gratitude to acknowledge before I lay down my pen. In the first place, my thanks are due to the Honourable Court of Directors, who have munificently granted me their patronage in the publication of this work, with that liberality which they have so constantly displayed in the encouragement of every project calculated to improve the condition of our Indian fellow-subjects. Whether their patronage has been, in this instance, properly applied, remains to be proved; but of thus much I am certain, that in no case can it be more humanely or judiciously extended, than in promoting a knowledge of the law, and furthering the administration of justice in the mighty empire of which they are the delegated rulers.

I have to express my deep obligations to the late Right Honourable Sir Edward Hyde East, Bart., formerly Chief Justice of Calcutta, who has closed a long and laborious life, devoted to the service of his country, whilst this work has been passing through the press. In doing so, I cannot but feel a melancholy satisfaction in placing in the hands of that Profession, of which he was for so many years an ornament, the latest records of his valuable experience, committed to my care by his son. I am also especially indebted to the Honourable Sir Erskine Perry, Chief Justice of Bombay, for the luminous and important judgments with which he has favoured me. The accumulation of decisions by competent authorities is undoubtedly one of the surest foundations on which to base any attempt at the codification of the laws of India; and the accession of fresh materials from such sources must therefore be regarded as of the highest utility.

My most sincere thanks are due to the Right Honourable Sir Edward Ryan, late Chief Justice of Calcutta; Horace Hayman Wilson, Esq., Boden Professor of Sanskrit in the University of Oxford; David Hill, Esq., Assistant-Examiner at the East-India House; Richard Clarke, Esq., formerly of the Madras Civil Service; Benjamin Hutt, Esq., of the Bombay Civil Service; and Henry Reeve, Esq., of the Privy-Council Office: to the very learned Judge, for his kindness in furnishing me with materials which I could not otherwise have procured; to the learned Professor of Sanskrit, for having given me the benefit of his extensive and varied knowledge of the law of India; to the four last-named gentlemen, for much valuable information connected with the Regulation Law and the subject of Appeals to this country; and to all and to each for their advice and assistance in the progress of my labours, and for the unvarying kindness and promptitude with which it has been proffered.

The excuses of a writer are but an insufficient apology for the imperfections of his work. Still, in the present instance, when it is considered how many topics concur, how much reading, involving totally distinct studies, is requisite for their illustration, and how arduous is the task of analyzing and arranging the results of such reading, I trust that any obscurity or omission on my part may be deemed pardonable. In the Digest itself I fear that much may have found place which might have been left out, and that matter has been omitted which ought to have been inserted. In a work of so complex a nature, the first of its kind, perfection is, however, hardly to be attained or expected.

I may be permitted to add a few words with regard to this Introduction, in which I have endeavoured to lay before the reader a concise but comprehensive treatise on the past and present systems for the administration of justice in India, and some account of the laws peculiar to that country, as well as of the works from which a knowledge of them may be acquired.

My main object has been, to give, in a condensed form, and in one place, information which has hitherto been diffuse and dispersed, together with such new matter as I could collect from fresh sources. In this attempt I have had to contend with the difficulty of including a vast quantity of materials within inadequate bounds; for although I have already extended this Introduction beyond the limits I had originally proposed to myself, it will be obvious, to any one who has considered the subjects of which it treats, that their complete elucidation would require an infinitely greater space than I have had at my command. I believe, nevertheless, that, although cramped and imperfect, it will be found of some utility, more especially in its bibliographical portion.

Finally, I can confidently assert, that, however I may have succeeded in my task, I should have been most glad to have met with a work like the present when I first entered upon the study of the law of India. Should it save future students but a tithe of the pains it has cost me, I shall not have laboured in vain.

By this Interpretation, dated the 12th September 1846, "it was declared, that the provisions of Act III. of 1843, limit special appeals from decrees in regular appeals to the Sudder Dewannee Adawlut." The word "special," as used in this Interpretation, must, I apprehend, be confined to appeals from decisions in regular appeals, presented on the ground of the latter being inconsistent with law or usage, or the practice of the Courts. There must, therefore, be a distinction drawn between second appeals to the Zillah Judges, which lie from ordinary decisions in regular appeals of Principal Sudder Ameens, and Assistant Judges, under the Regulations, and special appeals, grounded on the reasons mentioned in the Act, which, by the Interpretation, do not lie to any Court but the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. Thus it would seem, that an appellant from a decision passed in a regular appeal, by a Principal Sudder Ameen, or Assistant Judge, may make his election whether he should present his further appeal as a second appeal to the Zillah Judges, or go at once, in special appeal, to the Sudder Court, on the ground of such decision being contrary to law, usage, or practice. There appears to me to be no question that the right of second appeal to the Zillah Judges from the decisions in regular appeals of Principal Sudder Ameens, and Assistant Judges, as limited by the Regulations, remains untouched by Act III. of 1843, if such second appeal be presented for any other reasons than those specified in the Act. I may add, that the doubt expressed in the note upon which I have thought it necessary to make these observations, was inserted on the very highest authority.

- II. OF ACTION.—See ACTION, 51.

I. OF NUISANCE.

1. Where A and B, residing in a certain alley, sued to compel the removal of an alleged nuisance, viz. a gate built at the end of the alley, which caused damage to them, inasmuch as it prevented their carts from entering the alley; it was held, that as there was no evidence to prove that the dispute about the gate was contemporaneous with its being put up, the claim of A and B, as a matter of right, was without any foundation: and as it was to be inferred, from the fact that no other household in the alley had joined in the suit to compel its removal, that the benefit of the gate to the community, as a defence against thieves, &c., much exceeded the inconveniences arising from it, A and B were nonsuited. Bhurvannee-shunkur Koosuljee v. Jugguneshwur and another, 12th Sept. 1822. 2 Borr. 371.—Romer, Sutherland, & Barnard.

2. Where A repaired an embankment whereby the land of B was laid under water, and it appeared that the embankment was not in existence when the parties purchased their estates, it was decreed that the embankment should be broken down, and that B was entitled to the damages sued for. *Abch Nundee Mustoofee v. 3. Interest on.—See INTEREST, 4.
4. With Native Women.—See NATIVE WOMEN, 4.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOUR-ABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally, 11.
2. Interest on.—See INTEREST, 22, 23.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

1. If an account have been settled by agreement between the debtor and creditor, the creditor cannot annul such agreement on the equity side of the Court, unless he can shew fraud in the party contracting with him, or some undue means made use of to draw him into such an agreement. And should the creditor file a bill to set aside the settled account, a demurrer will be allowed. Iyasamy v. Colingaroy Moodeliar. 30th Oct. 1809. 2 Str. 47.

2. But if the terms of the agreement were not fulfilled, the creditor may have ground to call upon the other contracting party for a specific performance. Avadanum Paupiah v. Tulloh and others. 30th Oct. 1809. 2 Str. 54.

3. The plea of a stated account will be allowed to stand for an answer, with the usual liberty to except. Ib.

4. An account, though settled, may be re-examined where particular errors appear, independently of any agreement for the purpose, and notwithstanding a bond may have been given for the balance, and releases have been executed. If an omission can be shewn, for which credit ought to have been given, it is a matter of surcharge; or if there has been a wrong debit, it may be falsified. But if, on re-examination, the account be proved in any particular to be fraudulent, the whole account is infected, and liable to be set aside in toto, leaving the parties to go to another upon equal terms. If error only, however, be imputable, as that certain allowances have not been duly made, or that in certain particulars the party against whom the balance is found has been overcharged, equity will decree a fresh account, but one of a more limited nature, being restricted to the particulars pointed out appearing to be erroneous, and the proof of the error will be upon the party complaining; the account standing subject to the one side of it being surcharged, or the other falsified. Shaikh Devaljee v. Maury Chitty. 7th Aug. 1809. 2 Str. 23.

5. If an account be settled by composition between the parties, it cannot afterwards be set aside or opened on discovery of error. Ib.

6. Otherwise it seems discretionary in the Court to set it aside in toto, or to order it to stand, with liberty to surcharge and falsify according to the circumstances. Ib.

7. On plea or answer, stating a settled account as a defence to a bill for an account, it seems doubtful whether the account relied on must be set forth by the defendant. Ib.

8. It was held, that the act of a son striking balances for different years in an account standing in the name of his father, for moneys bond fide taken up for the use of the family, being undivided, was good and valid, and rendered both the father and son responsible; and the principal sum sued for was decreed against them, together with simple interest at 12 per cent. up to the date of the decree, provided such interest did not exceed the principal, according to Sect. 4. of Reg. I. of 1814. Wujoo Bhace Hurree Prasad and another v. Jace Bhace Wujehram and another. 23d March 1819. 1 Borr. 310.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Bell, & Prendergast.

9. In an action of debt against A and others, on a recognizance entered into by him under the 68th Equity Rule¹, to account to the Master for the estate of an infant of whom he had been appointed guardian, accounts were proved filed by A to a certain amount, but the account was not settled finally, so as to fix with certainty to what extent the sureties were bound to make good the defaults of their principal, and the Court gave judgment generally for the plaintiff on the recognizance, with a stay of execution, and subject to the further order of the Court; but by consent of the parties it was referred to the Master to take an account and ascertain the sum. Sir William Burroughs v. Gopeenath Bose and others. 20th January 1821. East's Notes, Case 24.

2. Bill for an Account.

10. Where property was bequeathed by a Hindú to his sons in different proportions, the two elder sons and two other persons being directed by the will to have the management of the estate, and the younger sons filed a bill for account, receiver, and partition, the account was adjudged by the Court previous to any other determination. Anon. Feb. 1814. East's Notes, Case 9.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

11. An adjusted account, in the nature of a bond, is not actionable, unless it be written on stamped paper. Framjee Manikjee v. Jaeram Go- vind. 11th Nov. 1822. 2 Borr. 621.—Romer.

12. An account current entered in a merchant's books, and signed by the debtor, was held to be a valid and actionable debt, not liable to the penalties of the stamp regulation; for though the acknowledgment partook something of the nature of a note of hand, it could not be rejected because not written on stamped paper, being executed by the party contracting the debt, so acknowledged by it, and not by a third person making himself responsible for such debt. Panachund Ottumchund v. Ghoolam Khan. 1823. 2 Borr. 623.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

13. An account signed whilst under unlawful restraint is not binding. Conduscamy Moodely v. McLeod. Case 7 of 1826. 1 Mad. Dec. 552.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

ACCOUNT BOOKS.—See EVIDENCE, 126 et seq.

ACCOUNTANT GENERAL.

1. It was decided on the plea side that money declared by a decree to belong to a suitor in equity, and in the hands of the Accountant General, may be seized by the Sheriff in execution as a debt due to the defendant, the party whose money was in the Accountant General's hands being defendant at law.² Rogonath Chund v. Bissonath Ghose. 19th May 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 152. Mor. 277.

² Macnaghten, J., thought that this was the only mode of proceeding under the words of the Charter, although the Accountant General could not pay without an order of the Court on the equity side. The Charter declares that the debts so seized shall be payable as the Supreme Court (which must mean the Court on the plea side) shall direct. In other and similar cases the same course had been pursued.

2. Where a rule was obtained by the plaintiff that the Accountant General and Sub-treasurer of the Company should pay over to the plaintiff certain arrears of salary due to the defendant, extended in their hands, the salary bills not being audited; the Court held, that there was therefore no ascertained debt, and discharged the rule. Govindchunder Sain v. Mackenzie. Nov. 1840. Mor. 302. note.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. By and against whom maintainable.

1. Trespass is not maintainable against a Justice of the Peace for a distress for not paying an assessment for repairs of a road on the ground that it had not been in fact repaired. Compton v. Gahagan. 9th April 1812. 2 Str. 161.

1 a. Held, that under the 21st Geo.

III. c. 70. s. 24. the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a civil action for false imprisonment against a Provincial Magistrate acting in his judicial capacity, however irregular and illegal his act.¹ Calder v. Halket. 13th Nov. 1835. Mor. 179. (Grant, J., dissent.)

2. This judgment was affirmed on appeal, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, when it was held that the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 24. protecting Provincial Magistrates in India from actions for any wrong or injury done by them in the exercise of their judicial offices, does not confer unlimited protection, but places them on the same footing with those of English Courts of a similar jurisdiction, and only gives them an exemption from liability when acting bonâ fide in cases in which they have acted without jurisdiction. Same v. Same. 8th July 1840. Mor. 396. 3 Moore 28.

3. Trespass will not lie against a Judge for acting judicially, but without jurisdiction, unless he knew, or had the means of knowing, of the defect of jurisdiction; and it lies with the plaintiff, in every such case, to prove that fact. Mirzahce Begum v. Fuzlul Curreeem and another. 8th Feb. 1841. 1 Fulton, 406.

4. A Muhammadan widow cannot sue her sons, as representatives of her deceased husband, at law, for the recovery of her marriage portion. Ib.

5. An action of trespass will not lie against the East-India Company, for acts legally done by a Superintendent of Police, under a warrant from the Governor in Council of Bombay. Dhackjee Dadajee v. The East-India Company. 13th Sept. 1843. Perry's notes. Case 9.

8. Semble, Unless an administrator or executor be appointed. Ib.

9. Where there are several plaintiffs who have been co-partners in trade, the warrant to sue on a partnership transaction need not be signed by all, but it is sufficient if it be signed by one plaintiff for "Self and partners." Bates and others v. Feilden. 24th June, 1844. 1 Fulton, 460.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.¹

10. Where A, an indigo-planter, made advances to cultivators on engagements to deliver the whole of the indigo-plant produced, and B, another planter, seized the crops of the said cultivators, and was sued by A for damages; it was held, that the action brought by A against B, to recover damages, would not lie, but that A might sue the cultivators for a breach of engagement, and that the cultivators had their remedy against B. Rouse v. Haig and others. 26th June 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 69.—Fombelle & Stuart.

11. Although a decree passed by the principal Collector of Malabar, previously to the introduction into that province of the judicial system pronounced by the Regulations of 1802, be a legal instrument under the provisions of sec. 47 of Reg. II. of 1803, yet where neither the appellant nor any of his predecessors (Colatery Rájahs) was a party to the suit wherein that decree was passed, though the appellant's particular family property was considered in it; yet as, at the period of passing that decree, the appellant had not attained the rank of Colatery Rájah, the Court held, reversing the decision of the Provincial Court, that such decree did not bar the institution of a suit to consider the appellant's claim in his rank of Rájah, and that it could not be regarded as having determined the rights of the Colatery Rájah. Colatery Rájah of Colutnaad Cherical v. Cherical Ravee Vurma Rájah and others. Case 9 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 293.—Harris & Gowan.

12. A makes an usufructuary mortgage of certain lands to B, and some time after, alleging that the sum borrowed by him had been realized, with interest, from the profits, retakes possession. B sues A for dispossession, and while the case is pending sells his title to C, who, by the summary decision of the Court, obtains possession of the disputed lands, with mesne profits. Held, that one suit may be preferred by A against C, and the heirs of B, since dead, for redemption of the mortgage, mesne profits, and exemption from the summary award. Ramnarain Mitter v. Kallee Das Rai and others. 4th Dec. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 420.—Harrington & Fombelle.

13. It was held, that a suit will not lie against a Malik Mukaddam with whom the decennial settlement was concluded in Bhaugulpore, for Chakladari or Chaudhari rights or fees, as the Potta granted to a proprietor contains no stipulation for the payment of fees of this nature. Mun-surnath Chowdhry and others v. Bhowany Churn. 20th Feb. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 126.—Leycester & Dorin.

13a. It was held, that since the permanent settlement, a claim for Mukaddami, Chaudhari, and Chakladari dues will not lie against a Zamindar. Kulian Chondhree v. Raja Ikbal Ali. 19th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 215.—Leycester & Dorin.

14. Judgment of the Provincial Court in favour of A, who claimed an estate of B, was executed on the security of C, who stipulated to hold the estate and profits to abide the result of B's appeal. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed the judgment, and B, in execution of its decree, obtained an order to levy an adjusted award of mesne profits from A and C. After this A sued C on his acknowledgment of profits for two years, exceeding the sum awarded B for four years. B intervened and claimed the sum sued for. Held, that A is entitled to a judgment against C, who may set off judgments by him held for advances made to A; and B, by merely intervening, cannot obtain an award for excess of profit, but may bring a regular action. Khwaja Bagdesar v. Ghulam Hassan Ali and another. 31st July 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 218.—Rattray & Walpole.

15. Held, that a son born after a decree made cannot summarily get possession of property adjudged to his brothers and cousins, who were parties thereto, notwithstanding the opinion given by the Pandit of the Court, who declared such after-born son to possess equality of right with his brothers in the ancestral estate of his maternal uncle. But this was not to narrow his remedy by legal recourse to the institution of a regular suit. Vijai Govind Barral and another, Applicants. 30th December 1834. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 75.—D. C. Smyth.

16. The Circular Order of the 29th of July 1809, prohibiting the institution of suits under fictitious names, does not refer to the case of a plaintiff suing in his own name for the recovery of money lent by himself upon a bond executed in the name of another. Beijnath Ghuttuk v. Fukeer Chund. 19th Sept. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 109.—Rattray.

17. Held, that an action for arrears of rent against a large portion of the inhabitants of a village, who are in no otherwise connected with each other than as residents in the same village, and are not joint cultivators, is liable to be nonsuited. Gour Chunder Pal and others v. Kha'jah Alcemoolah. 25th Aug. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 112.—Lee Warner & Reid.

18. Held, that an action by a person as friend or next of kin to devisees under a will, who were minors, one of the executors under the will being alive, is irregular, and the suit was dismissed accordingly. Brij Ruttun Doss v. Joakim Gregore Poyose. 24th Nov. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 119.—Reid & Barlow.

19. A Hindú widow claimed a share of ancestral property, under an Anumati-putra alleged to have been executed by her husband in behalf of the son whom she might adopt. Held, that until the adoption was made no action would lie; and that the expression of any opinion as to the authenticity of the deed was, in the present action, uncalled for. Mt. Subudra Chowdry v. Goluknath Chowdry and another. 28th Dec.

20. A new suit will be admitted to supply an evident defect in a former decree. Joogul Kishwor and others v. Radhakaunt Ghose. 18th Aug. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 154.—Harrington & Fombelle.

20 a. A claim by the appellant on the respondents for a sum of money alleged to have been embezzled by their ancestor from the ancestor of the appellant was dismissed, as the alleged embezzlement was disproved. Oditnaraen Sing v. Casinath and others. 24th April 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 183.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

21. A instituted a suit against B, a Zamindár, for the recovery of a Lákhiráj village, and also for the recovery of certain Men-cavil Máníyams and Rusíms of two other villages, the produce thereof, and certain cattle thereon. The claim to the Lákhiráj property, and to the Men-cavil Máníyams and Rusíms, was declared, on evidence, to be unfounded, and the Court adjudged that the profits arising from private cultivation, and the cattle, alleged by A to have been unjustly seized by B, and avowed by the latter to have been taken in distraint for a balance of rent under the authority of ancient usage and the Regulations, should have been made the subject of a separate suit. Anon. Case 10 of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 45.—Scott & Greenway.

22. Where a party claimed a moiety of an estate as his by inheritance; it was held, that his claim was not precluded from cognizance by an incidental judgment against him in another suit, such judgment containing no distinct decision respecting his proprietary right to the moiety in dispute. Shekh Bhukaree v. Imambuksh. 5th Nov. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 355.—Harrington and Stuart.

23. Where a person pleaded two previous decrees in his favour as barring the present action, the plea was overruled on its appearing that the decisions pleaded did not affect the merits of the present action. Buldeo Sircar v. Rajah Nurnarayun Rai. 4th Mar. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 49.—H. Colebrooke.

24. In a suit for possession of lands, and for profits during dispossession, it was held not to be necessary that the annual produce and profits during dispossession should each exceed the sum of Rs. 5000 to make the suit originally cognizable in the Provincial Court, but only that the aggregate amount of both should exceed that sum.² Nabkishore Bunhoojee v.

² Subsequently, however, in reply to a reference from the Commissioner of Cuttack, the Court determined, on the 29th Sept. 1820, that in suits for Málguzárá estates distinctly assessed with the Government revenue, or for specific portions of such estates, the rule of estimating the value, and determining the form in which the suits are triable, should be the Sudder jama alone (as laid down in Reg. 1. of 1814), distinct from mesne profits; and that the Court which adjudges the proprietary right to the estate, may, at the same time, add an order for the mesne profits to be accounted for (where there exists no doubt of their being due), without regard being had to their amount, and without its being considered that the amount, either of the mesne profits, or of those added to the valuation of the estate, affects the Court's jurisdiction. In the event,

25. According to the spirit of Sect. 2 and 3 of Reg. XIII. of 1808, when a person brings a suit for land or other immoveable property, and also for money or other moveable property, the aggregate amount of both descriptions of property is to be considered as the cause of action. Ib.

26. A sued B for the value of certain timber, consigned to B by C, under a power of attorney granted to A by C. A admitted that the actual property in the timber vested in C, subject to a mortgage which A alleged he had upon it. Pending the suit, C died; and on appeal, the Court, reversing the decision of the Provincial Court, held that A's authority ceased on the death of C, and could be renewed only by the act of C's representatives. This judgment having the effect of a nonsuit in an original action, it was open to A to sue B for the recovery of any claim he might have upon the timber, and the like course could be taken by the representatives of C. Soobiah and another v. Nagamully Venkiah. Case 22 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 194.—Scott and Greenway.

27. In a suit between two parties, judgment in favour of one of them was held not to bar the claim of government, not a party to the suit, to the lands affected by that judgment. Joanna Fernandez v. Domingo de Silva. 12th Feb. 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 227.—Harington and Fombelle.

28. A Muhammadan, filing a suit for the recovery of his share of an hereditary office, and dying shortly however, of doubt existing as to the right to mesne profits, or alleged collections, however denominated, it would be necessary that a separate suit should be brought for them in the Court of which the jurisdiction would belong, according to the amount demanded. Mutatis mutandis, a similar rule would hold in suits for Lākhirāj lands. Reg. I. of 1814 has been since rescinded by Sect. 2. of Reg. X. of 1829.

afterwards, the Court, under the opinion of the law officers, allowed the suit to be carried on by his widow, having a son, a minor, then living. Mt. Humedoon Nisa v. Ghoolam Moheood Deen Chowdree. June 1819. 2 Borr. 33.—Sutherland.

29. Four years after the date of a decree for money, the holder of the decree sued out execution against the grandson of the person against whom the decree was given. As the case involved a point of Hindú law, as to the liability of the property for the debt, which could not be properly determined on a summary suit, the decree holder was referred to a regular suit, to prove the liability of the person against whom he claimed the amount adjudged. Govind Chund v. Nandanund Sing. 20th Aug. 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 308.—Rees & Goad.

30. Part of a debt having been realized by the process of the Supreme Court, and the action having been discontinued, it was held to be still competent to the complainant to sue for the remainder in a Provincial Court, though the claim to be reimbursed for costs of suit incurred in the former Court would be rejected. Munohar Lal v. Ramnarain Ghose. 16th Jan. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 66.—C. Smith.

31. In a dispute respecting the boundary of two estates, situated in different Zillahs, it was held that the summary award of one Court is insufficient to render the contested lands exclusively subject to its jurisdiction, and to invalidate, under Sect. 8. of Reg. III. of 1793, a regular suit, which the party cast may institute in the Court of the Zillah within which he maintains them to be situated. Ladlee Mohun Thakoor v. Iswar Chunder Pal. 15th Dec. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 282.—Harington & Leycester.

32. A suit founded on a claim of inheritance having been dismissed, it is not competent to the Courts to entertain another action by the same individual, on the same grounds, though the person sued and the amount claimed be different. Seam Begum and others v. Ghalib Jung Khan and others. 13th April 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 335.—Smith & Ahmuty.

33. It was held, that a claim against a party in possession to certain alluvial lands, and a claim against an Ameen to the profits realized while the lands were under attachment by him, may be preferred in the same action. Ramkishen Rai and another v. Gopee Mohun Baboo. 26th April 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 340.—Harrington.

34. Punishment for a misdemeanour (as, for instance, desertion from a ship with a boat) does not bar the civil remedy of the owner; and those concerned in the act are jointly and severally liable. Jivan Sarang v. Benfield Paine. 6th Jan. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 1.—Turnbull.

35. A sued B and C for a real estate, on an alleged breach of a covenant¹ by B, and defect of C's title, which had been recognised by B; but during B's life, A, by the Hindú Law, could have no right to enter. B died during the litigation, and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut adjudged to A part of the interest held by B, which had in the meantime become vested in A, as joint heir, notwithstanding defect of any immediate right of entry at the time of claim. Babu Sheo Manog Singh v. Babu Ram Prakash Singh. 25th Sept. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 145.—H. Shakespear & Turnbull.

36. Where B and C impugned as illegal a gift by A to D, made several years before his death, it was held, that on A's death B and C might recover by suit the object of such illegal gift, their right then accruing, so that there was not adverse possession during the lifetime of A, nor waiver of claim on the part of B and

C, by previous omission to sue. Jivan Lal Singh and others v. Ram Govind Singh and another. 24th Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 163.—Rattray.

37. A decree given against a proprietor who has purchased at a public sale for arrears of revenue, and awarding the right of possession to a party who claims to hold an under tenure at a fixed rent, is no bar to an action by the proprietor to establish his right to an increase of rent.² Doorgapershad v. Clementi. 2d Aug. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 179.

38. Held, that the institution of an inquiry into a plea of fictitious purchase, made after judgment passed, by a party to the suit, constitutes a new cause of action under Sect. 4 of Reg. V. of 1798, and cannot be looked upon as carrying out the original intentions of the Court passing the decree. Bakshu Bay v. Taij Singh and others. 13th June 1840. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 15.—D. Smyth, Tucker, & Lee Warner. (Rattray dissent.)

39. A summary judgment under Cl. 7. of Sect. 7. of Reg. XVIII. of 1817 is not open to any further regular suit. Tarnee Parshad Nayaratna Bhattacharjya, Applicant. 19th June 1840. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 21.—D. C. Smyth.

40. In an action, founded on right by inheritance, for possession of the estate, real and personal, of a party deceased, the Zillah Court gave judgment in regard to the real estate, and referred the plaintiff to a separate suit for the personal property; held, that as the action was brought for the recovery of the entire estate, both real and personal, the order was against the practice of the Courts, and that the Lower Court should have decided on the merits of the entire claim, and the case was referred back accordingly. Mt. Ramdhun Dibhea v.

Rooderncrain Chondree and others. 10th Feb. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 15.—Reid.

41. A decree of a Court of competent jurisdiction, in an action for foreclosure of a mortgage against the alleged heir, in possession of the property of the deceased mortgagor, was held to be no bar to the recovery of the property awarded by the decree on a suit instituted by the rightful heir. Rajah Kishen Chunder and another v. Mahanund Roy. 15th Feb. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 16.—Tucker & D. C. Smyth. (Dick dissent.)

42. In an action brought for the possession of certain Malguzari lands, not bearing a defined Jama, the value of the lands had been computed at the rate of an arbitrary Jama fixed upon by the plaintiff; held, that the plaintiff should have sued at the estimated selling price of the land, instead of fixing a Jama himself, and he was accordingly nonsuited; permission, however, being granted for him to sue de novo. Lal Purmessur Buksh Singh v. Rajah Oodhwant Parkash Singh. 16th Feb. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 19.—Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

43. Construction No. 1129 was held to bar the institution of a regular suit in a case of dispute, arising in the execution of a decree in regard to mesne profits and other matters involved in the original decision of the case. Sheogholam Singh v. Sultan Singh. 12th June, 1841. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 139. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 35.—D. C. Smyth & Barlow.

44. But it was also held, that an action by the late proprietor of an estate to set aside a sale made in execution of a decree (an application to reverse which has been summarily rejected under the provisions of Sect. 5. of Reg. VII. of 1825 by the Courts of original and appellate jurisdiction), is not barred, either by the terms of that Section, or by the rule of Construction No. 1129. Ib.

45. Property sold to realize a debt due to the decree holder, and pointed out subsequently to, and in execution of, a decretal order of Court for balance of account, creates a new cause of action. The validity or invalidity of such sale was held not to be involved in, or to affect, the judgment passed in the original cause, and may be the subject of a separate suit. Ib.

46. Where, in an action by a landholder for recovering rent-free lands, the suit was laid at one year's produce, instead of at the value prescribed for suits regarding rent-free lands, the plaintiff was nonsuited under Construction 576, dated 1st Oct. 1830, with leave to sue de novo. Ram Tannoo Mundul v. Gunganarain Bonnerjee and others. 16th June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 37.—Lee Warner & Barlow.

47. The fact of the quantity of land comprised in a certain parcel for which the plaintiff sued, with mention of its boundaries, being somewhat in excess of that mentioned in the petition of plaint, was held to be no bar to the recovery by the plaintiff of the entire parcel, the right of ownership in the parcel being the real subject of dispute, and not merely the quantity of land comprised in it. Ajaib Singh and others v. Hajee Begum. 23d June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 39.—Rattray & D. C. Smyth.

47 a. A money action will lie where a mortgagor fails to fulfil a condition mutually agreed on between him and the mortgagee, of transferring the mortgaged property to the occupancy of the mortgagee, and the mortgagee is entitled to recover both principal and interest. Rajah Gopal Surn Singh v. Martindell. 27th Sept. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 47.—Tucker, Lee Warner, & Barlow.

48. A decree of foreclosure of a mortgage does not bar inquiry into the claim of a claimant, not a party to the suit, for recovery of the property. Futteh Singh and others v. Bikramajit Singh. 9th March, 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 76.—Tucker & Reid.

49. A suit for property, real and personal, in right of inheritance, having been adjusted by Rázínámeh and Sufínámeh, between the parties; it was held, that such adjustment did not bar an action by the same plaintiff against the same defendants for his share of certain ancestral property alleged to have been fraudulently concealed by the latter at the time of the adjustment. Casheenath Mookerjee v. Prawnkishen Mookerjee. 14th Sept. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 131.—Tucker & Barlow.

50. An acquittal on a criminal charge is not a sufficient plea to a civil action for damages grounded on the same transactions. Mt. Sidhisree Debea and others v. Wise. 30th Nov. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 136.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

3. Abatement of Action.

51. Where separation has taken place between two brothers, and one of them dies, the survivor cannot continue to prosecute a suit commenced by the deceased brother for the recovery of property from his son's widow, since she is his heiress. Juvchur Tilukchund v. Phoolchund Dhurmchund. 5th Feb. 1824. 2 Borr. 616.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

I. HINDÚ LAW.

1. The Qualification and Right to Adopt.

1. The consent of a husband is indispensable to enable his widow to adopt a son after his death.<sup>1</sup> Veera-

permal Pillay v. Narrain Pillay. 5th Aug. 1801. 1 Str. 91.

2. And the same was held in the case Mt. Tura Muneo Dibia v. Dev Narayan and another. 10th July 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 387.—Shakespeare.

3. A widow may adopt a son with the consent of her husband or of her relations. Ranee Sevagamy Nuchiar v. Streemathoo Heraniah Gurbah.<sup>1</sup> Case 18 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 101.—Scott, Greenway, and Stratton.

4. According to the law as current in Benares, an adoption made by a widow without authority from her husband is illegal<sup>2</sup>, although she may have obtained the consent of her husband's heirs. Raja Shumshere Mull v. Rancee Dilraj Konmur. 31st Jan. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 169.—Harrington & Fombelle.

5. A widow may legally adopt a son without consent of her husband, if she have obtained permission of the Cast and the sanction of the ruling powers.<sup>3</sup> Sree Brijbhoojunjee Mularaj v. Sree Gokoolootsoojee Mu- haraj. 5th Nov. 1817. 1 Borr. 181.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, and Bell.

6. And having obtained such permission, must adopt the nearest of kin to her late husband<sup>4</sup>; but if there should be two persons equally near, she may adopt either. Id.

7. A widow is competent to adopt, even without the injunction of her husband, the son of her husband's brother; and he thereupon succeeds to the property of her late husband. But she cannot adopt any other but her husband's brother's son during his existence; nor, as it appears, can she adopt any other but such son without the consent of her husband.<sup>5</sup> Huebut Rao Mankur v. Govind Rao Bulmunt Rao Mankur. 1st Sept. 1823. 2 Borr. 75.—Barnard.

8. Held, that by the law applicable to Behar, permission of the husband is necessary to legalize adoption by his widow in the Dattuka form, and that leave from her husband's kindred will not be sufficient. Jai Ram Dhami and others v. Musun Dhami. 14th Jan. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 3.—Scaly & Rattray.

9. The Jain Shastra authorizes a widow to adopt a son without the sanction of her husband. Maharaja Gorindnath Ray v. Gulal Chand and others. 23d March 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 276.—H. Shakespear & Walpole.

10. An adoption by a widow after her husband's death, without any authority from him, was held to be invalid in the Zillah of Etawa, in provinces ceded by the Nabob of Oude in 1801. Raja Haimun Chull Sing v. Koomer Gunseam Sing. 4th Jan. 1834. 2 Knapp, 203.

11. The adoption made by a widow, without authority from her husband, (the Anumati-patra, or deed of permission exhibited by her, as granted by her husband, appearing to have been fabricated,) was declared to be

H. L. 79. 2 Do. 92. 96. 115. Steele 54. 138. and App. A. 32. May. c. iv. s. v. 17, 18. According to the Mithila school, a Kritrina son may be adopted by the widow without her husband's authority, but he does not inherit to the husband.—Suth. Synop. note v. 222. 2 Str. H. L. 204. 2 Macn. Princ. H. L. 196.

12. A Hindú widow claimed a moiety of an ancestral estate as heir to her deceased husband, who had given her, as she alleged, an Anumati-patra, which, however, she had never exercised. The Court, considering that the Anumati-patra was altogether unworthy of credit, as no mention had been made of it by the widow for twenty-two years after her husband's death, dismissed the claim of the widow, and declared that she was only entitled to maintenance, her husband having died during the lifetime of his father and brothers.<sup>2</sup> Mt. Himulta Chowdrayn v. Mt. Puddoo Munce Chowdrayn. 14th Feb. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 19. — C. Smith & Martin.

13. Held, that there may be two successive adoptions, under due authority for that purpose, by the widows of the same man.<sup>3</sup> Shamchun- der and another v. Narayni Dibeh. 21st Aug. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 209.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

<sup>1</sup> It is to be observed, that in this case instructions were given to the Zillah magistrate for bringing to trial the persons concerned in the forgery of the deed exhibited by the appellant, and in endeavouring to support its authenticity by perjury.—Macn.

<sup>2</sup> In this case the widow was held not to be qualified to adopt, as the Anumati-patra was unworthy of credit; but in a subsequent case (Mt. Subudra Chowdrayn v. Goluknath Chowdrayn and another, 7 S. D. A. Rep. 143.), where there was an alleged anumutiputr, and the widow had not adopted a son under its authority, the Court refused to express any opinion as to the authenticity of the deed, and held, overruling this case, that, until the adoption was made, no action would lie for the widow's share.

14. Authority given to a wife to adopt, in the event of disagreement between her and the son of her husband then living, will not avail. But, Semble, the authority to adopt in the event of the son's death would be valid. Mt. Solukhna v. Ramdotal Paule and others. 27th May 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 324.—Harington.

15. Quære, Whether a Hindú, having a son of his body, can, in any case, authorise the adoption of a son during the life of such son of his body? Ib.

16. A Hindú having properly adopted a son, cannot disinherit him, even for bad behaviour, nor can he adopt another son. Duce v. Motee Nuthoo. 6th Oct. 1813. 1 Borr. 75. — Nepean, Brown, & Elphinstoun.

17. But should a man take another for the purpose of adoption, and change his mind before the full performance of the ceremony for adoption, he is at liberty to put him aside, and to adopt any other whom he may choose. Ib.

18. A childless Hindú, having two wives, gives permission to each of them to adopt a son. After having himself adopted a son on behalf of his senior wife, he confirms the permission originally given to his second wife. Held, that an adoption by her, after her husband's death, is valid.<sup>4</sup> which a widow has made a second adoption on the failure of the first by death, in fulfilment of a single injunction or authority from her husband, the object of such injunction being unattained unless the child live. But the validity of a second adoption while another son, whether by birth or adoption, is living, would be a distinct question, on which writers of eminence have disagreed. Jagannátha, in his Digest (3 Coleb. Dig. 295.), inclines to hold it valid. But the author of the Dattaka Mimánsá maintains the contrary opinion.—Datt. Mim. s. i. 6. 2 Str. H. L. 85. Steele, 52, 185. 2 Macn. Princ. H. L. 200. Macn. Cons. H. L. 146.; but see Do. 157.

19. But Semble, if, after such first adoption on behalf of his senior wife, the husband had not confirmed the permission to the second, the adoption by her after his death would have been invalid; because if a person giving permission, afterwards himself does the thing permitted, the permission given to another becomes by his act void. Ib.

20. By the law as current in the provinces subject to the Madras Presidency, a person having adopted a son, and subsequently married a second wife, and in conjunction with her adopted another son, the first being still alive, it was held that such second adoption was valid. Rungamah v. Atchammah and others. Case 11 of 1827. 1 Mad. Dec. 521.

21. A Hindú cannot adopt a son, he having already an adopted son, and a son born. Yachereddy Chinna Bassapa and others v. Yachereddy Gondapa. 4th Dec. 1835. 3 P. C. Cases, Case 5.

22. If a Hindú by will express a wish to be represented by the unborn son of a particular person, who has but one at the time, and who has no other living at the death of the testator, his widow is not bound to wait indefinitely the birth of a second for have turned on the obviousness of the adopting father's desire to have many sons.

the purpose of adoption under her husband's will; but may, without waiting, adopt any competent person she thinks proper. Veerapermall Pillay v. Narrain Pillay and others. 5th Aug. 1801. 1 Str. 91.

23. A power of adoption granted by a Hindú to his wife may be exercised by her at any time after her husband's death. And where a Hindú widow adopted a son fifteen years after her husband's death, according to instructions received from him during his lifetime, it was held that such adoption was good, and the adopted son entitled to the inheritance.<sup>2</sup> Anon. 24th March 1814. East's Notes, Case 10.

24. A Hindú widow having received authority from her husband during his lifetime to adopt a son, may adopt any stranger without restriction, even though the son of a deceased daughter of the husband be living at the time of his death. Ib.

25. A Hindú widow can adopt a child not in existence at the time of her husband's death, she having received authority from him to adopt a son. Ib.

26. It is not necessary that a written authority be given by a Hindú to entitle his widow to adopt a son: a verbal authority is sufficient<sup>3</sup>; but such verbal authority must be proved by witnesses, the widow's testimony alone not being sufficient.<sup>4</sup> Ib.

27. The same point was decided in Ranee Sevagamy Nachiar v. Stréemathoo Heraniah Gurbah.<sup>5</sup> Case 18 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 101.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

28. The consent of the husband to an adoption by his widow may be given in writing; and if the handwriting be proved to be his, the signature of witnesses (to the deed) is unnecessary: otherwise it must be signed by witnesses. Ib.

29. The consent may be given by a writing, either mentioning the name of the child to be adopted and of the parents of the child, or leaving the child to be afterwards fixed upon. Ib.

30. If a man and wife have agreed in writing to adopt a child, and one of them afterwards die, the survivor must fulfil the engagement. The agreement is not rendered void by the death of one of the parties. Ib.

31. If the husband at the time of his death refer to such an agreement, the wife is authorised thereby to adopt the child mentioned in the agreement. Ib.

<sup>1</sup> The Dattaka Mīmāṃsā must be considered to refer only to a Dattaka adoption, and not to the Kritrima form. The same point as in the above case was ruled by a decree of the Sudder Court of Allahabad, dated the 16th July 1833, in a case, Mt. Bala v. Mt. Botolee and another, in which the parties were Mithila Brahmans. It is presumable, from a part of the decree, (which generally upheld the validity of a Kritrima adoption of a sister's son,) that the parties were governed by the Mithila law; but this is not clear.

<sup>3</sup> This point gave rise to much discussion at the time (see 1 Str. H. 77. Even if subsequent to gift and adoption, and before the sacrifice for male issue, the ceremony of tonsure had been performed in the family of a natural father, it was held to have no vitiating effect on the adoption; tonsure being an indifferent act by a stranger, possessing no effect whatever.<sup>4</sup> *Mt. <sup>4</sup> See supra p. 13, note 1.

<sup>5</sup> In the Dattaka Mimānsā it is declared that the son adopted cannot become a Dattaka in the ordinary form after tonsure has been performed in the family of the natural father, but that he must be considered the son of two fathers. According to the Dattaka Chandrikā, adoption is lawful even after tonsure. The difference of opinion arises from a difference of grammatical construction.—1 Macn. Princ. H. L. 72. <sup>8</sup> The restriction as to purification and age respects only the three superior Casts: it is not binding upon Sūdras. And, with respect to the superior Casts, the criterion is not the precise age of the adopted, but whether he have undergone, in his natural family, the ceremonies of inauguration, of which the principal is tonsure.

<sup>9</sup> In this case a very important question of Hindú law was finally determined. It had been previously agitated in other cases before the Supreme Government, formerly exercising a judicial authority in regard to the succession to Zamindaris, and had been then determined on similar principles. But the question was now, for the first time, decided in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. A passage cited as an authority of law by the Hindú writers whose works are current in Bengal, expresses, that after the fifth year a child should not be adopted by any of the forms of adoption, but that a person desirous of making an adoption should take a child of an age not exceeding five years. On this passage a question arose whether the limitation of age was to be understood as positive and constituting an indispensable requisite to the validity of the adoption, or whether it admitted of any latitude of con-

<sup>2</sup> It did not appear that in this case there had been any written contract of adoption between the parties. Had a plea of this nature been established, it would doubtless have given validity to the transaction, provided the offer of adoption had been accepted during the lifetime of the person nominating, the performance of the ceremony of bathing, &c. being considered of minor importance.—Macn.

A child may be adopted from the twelfth day after its birth to the day of the Upanayana, or tying on the thread worn across the body: the age for performing the Upanayana is, for Brahmans eight years, for Kshatriyas eleven, for Vaisyas twelve<sup>1</sup>: Súdras may be adopted till the sixteenth year.<sup>2</sup> *Rance Seragamy Nachiar v. struction. In other provinces, and even in Bengal, if the adoption be of a near relation on the paternal side, no difficulty would occur, as the adoption of a brother's son or other nearest male relation of the husband would be unquestionably valid at an age much exceeding that specified. But in Bengal, where the adoption of strangers to the family is practised, the settled doctrine is, that the boy's age must be such, that his initiation, the principal ceremony of which is tonsure, may be yet performed in the adopter's name and family. Admitting, then, the authenticity of the passage and its interpretation (both of which are, however, contested), the best authorities in Bengal acknowledge the restriction as thus explained, and not as confined to the particular age of five years. Accordingly, in the case under consideration, the boy not having been previously initiated in his natural father's family, was held by the Court to have been legally adopted.—Coleb. And see Macn. Cons. II. L. 141, 146, 192, et seq.

The limitation of the age to five years appears to be founded on a doubtful passage of the Káliká Purána.—3 Coleb. Dig. 149. The Dattaka Chandriká does not mention it: the Dattaka Mimánsá does.—Suth. Synop. 216, 225, note xi. Datt. Chan. s. ii. 20—33. Datt. Min. s. iv. 22—54.

11. Held, that the Courts could not award to special agents (Mukhtârs), appointed to conduct a cause in the principal Sudder Ameen's Court, any remuneration by the losing party for the performance of the duties of their office, under Reg. XII. of 1833.<sup>2</sup> Krishto Mohun Ray, Applicant. 15th Jan. 1840. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 69.—Reid.

2. Right of Agent against Principal.

12. In a suit for damages for the loss of manna, belonging to A, and deposited with B, a broker, which manna, as alleged by A, was illegally detained by B, and damaged through his neglect; it was held, that as the illegal detention and want of care were not proved, the suit should be dismissed; and the Court authorised B to apply for a public sale of the manna in his hands for payment of costs of suit adjudged against A, who had sued in formâ pauperis. Meer Nizamooddeen v. Ramjeemul. 5th April 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 300.—Harington & Stuart.

3. Liability of Agent to Principal.

13. Where A claimed possession of certain lands, as having been purchased by B, as her agent, with her money, and on her behalf, judgment was given in A's favour on the production of B's written acknowledgment of the fact. Pudum. Nath Rai v. Rance Judesree. 2d May 1806. 1 S. D. A. 132. — H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

<sup>1</sup> It not being established in this case that the lands were purchased at the public sale for A, in the name of B, it did not become a question how far the provisions against purchases in fictitious or substituted names contained in Cl. 3. of Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799 were applicable.

<sup>2</sup> By an official Notification, dated the 8th June 1841, published at p. 456 of the Calcutta Gazette, the whole of the provisions of the above Regulation were extended to all the Courts in the Lower Provinces, except those of the Moonsiffs. But it has been rescinded by Act I. of 1845.

14. Where A, a trader, claimed from B and C, agents and brokers by profession, the price of goods sold by them on his account to a person who had proved insolvent, judgment was given for A against B and C, chiefly on presumptive proof, arising from the high rate of commission charged, that they had made themselves responsible for the recovery of the money when selling on credit. Shahir Jan v. Ahmud Ollah. 1st Aug. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 149. — H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

15. A transmitted a bill on the Military Paymaster at Madras to B, desiring him to present the same, and to send him the amount in bank notes by post. A portion of the bank notes arrived safely, but others were lost. B proved, by the evidence of two witnesses, that he had inclosed the missing notes in a letter, and delivered the letter sealed to C, with directions to forward it by post. The Court held, that as B had acted in conformity with A's instructions, he was not answerable for any subsequent accident or loss. Vyapooree Moodelly v. Moolavady Ramyengar. Case 7 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 55. — Scott & Greenway.

16. A ship broker, taking up freight (for the Government) from ship-owners, through the medium of another broker, was held liable for the payment of his agent's brokerage, according to the rate established by general usage. Mikirmanjee v. Wulubhdas Hureedas. 23d May 1822. 2 Borr. 240. — Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

17. Where a broker was held liable for the value of goods consigned to him to sell, and unaccounted for to his principal, a decree was given against him by the Zillah Judge (Jones), with costs; it was held, on appeal, that as the goods were merely sent to the broker to sell, and some portion remained unsold on his hands; and that as the principal had never sent to demand the goods, the broker ought not to have been made liable for the costs; and the costs were decreed to be paid by the principal. Nunna Meysa v. Jummadass Heerachund. 27th July 1823. Sel. Rep. 18. — Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

4. Rights of Principal against third persons.

18. Where a Muharrari Potta was obtained for certain lands from the agent of the Jagirdars, without their authority or knowledge; it was held, that such Potta was illegal and invalid against their right and interest in the Jagir; and that the Jagirdars were entitled to recover possession, with mesne profits since the date of the suit. Moohammad Reazodeen v. Ahbur Ali Khan. 13th June 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 238. — Harington & Fombelle.

5. Obligation of Principals to third persons.

19. An engagement having been written without the knowledge and consent of a female on a signed blank, and entrusted by her to her agents for another purpose, was pronounced to be an invalid instrument.<sup>1</sup> Wujih-On-Nisa Khanum v. Roshun-Ara Khanum. 30th Oct. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 110. — H. Colebrooke & Harington.

20. A deposit of money delivered to the head Gumáshtah of a banking-house, who also had a distinct house in his own name, and that of his son, was declared not to be recoverable from the principals of the house to which the receiver was Gumáshtah, though the latter gave a receipt for the money as Gumáshtah Mukhtár-hár, it appearing from the evidence that the money had been received and used by the Gumáshtah on his own account, subject to an interest of half per-cent. per mensem, and there being no proof that the money was deposited on the credit of the bankers, to whom the receiver was agent.<sup>1</sup> Jugut Ram v. Enayut Ullah. 24th July 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 204.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

21. A Tahsildár was held to be liable to refund nazrs illegally exacted by his officers, with his knowledge and connivance. And he was also subjected to a fine to Government of three times the amount so exacted.<sup>2</sup> Bahoo Deohinundun Sing v. Jobraj Rai. 19th Feb. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 229.—Harington & Fombelle.

22. A party resident at Baroda indorsed two khoomdis, or bills of exchange, in the name of a firm carrying on the business of banking at Surat, alleging himself to be the Gumáshtah, or agent of the firm, and afterwards, on the bills being dishonoured, absconded. Held, that in order to fix the firm at Surat with the amount of the bills, clear evidence ought to have been produced of the authority to act as Gumáshtah, and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, not being satisfied with the evidence admitted in the Courts below, reversed the decrees of both the Zillah and Sudder Courts, with costs. Madho Row Chinto Pant Golay v. Bhookun-das Boolaki-das. 8th Feb. 1837. 1 Moore, Ind. App. 351.

6. Liability of Agent to third persons.

23. A claim of the appellant on the respondent for a sum of money as balance of an account was dismissed, the respondent appearing to have acted as Gumáshtah of a banker, and not being personally responsible. Nowell v. Mootee Ram. 15th July 1805. 1 S. D. A. 97.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

24. A person having been imprisoned for debt, in execution of a decree of the Assistant Judge's Court, was released by a Judge's order, on security being tendered and accepted by the Vakeel of the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued the Vakeel and the deputy Názir for the amount of the debt, with costs; but it appearing that the Vakeel was acting under full powers from his principal, to do according to the best of his judgment; that the provision money for the prisoner had never been paid; and that the plaintiff having known that the prisoner was at large one month after his release, and not having taken further proceedings during seventeen months, had thus virtually acquiesced in the act of his Vakeel, the plaintiff (appellant) was nonsuited. The deputy Názir was held to be in nowise responsible, as the prisoner was released under the order of the Judge. Maloo Bhace Kureem Bhace v. Pesh-tunjee Kala Bhace and another. 5th Nov. 1816. 1 Borr. 177.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, & Bell.

<sup>2</sup> Proprietors and farmers of land are expressly declared by the Regulations (Cl. 7. of Sec. 15. of Reg. VII. of 1759, and a corresponding Clause in Sec. 14. of Reg. V. of 1800, as well as in Sec. 32. of Reg. XXVIII. of 1803) responsible for illegal exactions by their agents; and the same principle is obviously applicable to the agents of Tahsildárs, especially when the exaction is made with the knowledge and connivance of the latter. In such cases the agent must be presumed to act for his principal, for it is the duty of the principal to restrain his agent from an abuse of the power vested in him.—Macn.

25. Where a Cast (Sootars) compelled a widow of a person deceased, at the instance of his relations, to give up her dower jewels, to be appropriated to his funeral expenses; and the widow sued one member of the Cast only (for recovery of their value), with whom the jewels had been deposited by her own brother in the presence of the Cast; the Court held, that he was only an agent for the Cast, and was therefore not personally responsible; for if agency were to be considered as creating responsibility, the widow's claim would be against the agent, who took up the matter immediately from herself, namely, her brother; and if the ultimate disposition of the property were to be the rule, then the Cast were responsible. Moorar Khooshal v. Mt. Lukmee. 5th Sept. 1822. 2 Borr. 349.—Romer & Ironside.

III. SIKH LAW.

26. By the Sikh law, a son inheriting his father's estate together with the widow, may, as Mukhtár of the estate, be empowered by the widow to dispose of her share by Parol, in the same manner as an elder brother, or Mukhtár, of an undivided Hindú family may bind the whole property by his acts. Doe dem. Kissenchunder Shaw v. Baidam Beebee. Jan. 1815. East's Notes, Case 14.

ALIEN.

1. All foreigners born, and residents of every description, except prisoners of war, within the King's territories in Asia, are as much King's subjects as the same description of persons would be in England.<sup>1</sup> Anon. 10th Dec. 1813. East's Notes, Case 2.

2. A native of the Peshwá's territory was held not to be an alien enemy, after the territory had been taken under the protection of the Honourable Company, by proclamation of the Commissioner of the conquered territory. Therefore, when an officer in the political department sent for and imprisoned a native of rank, after such proclamation, and confiscated his money, on the plea that it belonged to the ruling power, he was ordered by the Supreme Court at Bombay, on an action of trover by the native, to refund the money with six per-cent. compound interest, from the time of seizure. Amerchand v. The East-India Company. 28th Nov. 1826. Perry's Notes, Case 2.

3. The Government of Fort St. George has no inherent power to send an alien friend out of the presidency. The King v. Lieut. Col. Symons and others. 25th July 1814. 2 Str. 256.

4. The Court declared that lands and houses in Calcutta, held by an alien friend, did not pass by his will, although duly executed in the presence of three witnesses, and in such manner as to have been sufficient, according to the English law, to pass real estate; but as the Attorney General was not resident within the jurisdiction of the Court, and there was no party on behalf of the Crown, it was ordered that the receiver, appointed by the Court, should continue to receive the rents and profits of such lands and houses, and that the same should be placed to a separate account, to abide any claim thereafter to be made by or on behalf of the Crown. The Martin Case, 10th May 1836. 1 Fulton, 257.

5. Held, that the lands and houses which belonged to an alien, situated out of the local limits of Calcutta, did not pass by his will. Ib.

6. The introduction of the English law into a conquered or ceded country does not draw with it that branch which relates to aliens, if the acts of the power introducing it shew that it was introduced, not in all its branches but only sub modo, and with the exception of this portion. The English law incapacitating aliens from holding real property to their own use, and transmitting it by descent or devise, has never been introduced into India so as to create a forfeiture of lands held in Calcutta or the Mofussil by an alien, and devised by a will executed according to the Statute of Frauds for charitable purposes. The Mayor of Lyons and others v. The East-India Company. 12th Dec. 1836. 1 Moore 175.

II. MÁLIKÁNEH.—See MÁLIKÁNEH, passim.

I. GENERALLY.

1. A executed to B a Karárnámeh fixing for B's support a certain allowance of money, which B should continue to enjoy, until, by his applications to Government, he should succeed in procuring restitution of his Mírásí. B never obtained restitution of his Mírásí, but sued A in the Provincial Court for arrears of the allowance, with interest thereon. The Provincial Court rejected B's claim, and the Sudder Adawlut, on appeal by the heirs of B, held, confirming the decision of the Provincial Court, that as the allowance to B was gratuitous, the original claim of B, and the claim of his heirs for a continuance of the allowance granted by A, were equally untenable. Jopully

VOL. I.

Appa Rao v. Syypul Abbas Alee Khan Bahadoor. Case 24 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 115.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

2. Where the plaintiffs claimed the proprietary right of certain lands, and a Sadámí Bhogam, and failed to prove that such right vested in them, or that the allowance was a Sadámí Bhogam, their claim was rejected. But as the defendants had admitted that an allowance from the produce of the lands had, from time immemorial, been made by them for the support of the Pagoda, it was held that they were bound to continue that allowance. Veeraraghoovien and others v. Toppa Moodely and others. Case 11 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 158.—Scott & Greenway.

3. An allowance granted by a Karárnámeh, there being nothing in the said deed to shew that it was meant to be hereditary, even if it be granted as a compensation for the relinquishment of a claim by the grantee, will cease at the death of the latter, there being no stipulation to the contrary; the continuance of such allowance to the widow of the grantee, and subsequently to an adopted son of the latter, is a voluntary act of the grantor, and does not establish any right of those persons, or either of them, to claim it. Husein Ruza Khan Bahadoor v. Mohammod Muhdee Khan. Case 12 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 167.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

4. The rent assets of an estate included an impost (Gosain Taki) levied as a pious allowance to the administrators of certain idols, such allowance having been disbursed to them by the Zamindár; the assessment was made on a calculation which excluded this item. The Zamindári having been split by public sales, one of the administrators sued the auction purchaser of one portion for his quota of the allowance. The claim was adjudged by the Zillah Court, and affirmed in the Court of Appeal, on the ground of prior decision and payment, by the Court of Wards on the part of a minor Zamindár. This judgment was reversed in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut by two Judges, but not on identical motives. One (Rat-tray) did not find the title of the plaintiff proved, nor the fact of the levy of the impost on the section of the Zamindari held by the defendant; the claim, too, appearing to him to be barred by prescription, the defendant and his father having held many years without payment. The other (Halhed) thought that there was no proof that the revenue officers had confirmed any grant of the former Zamindár, and that the charge on the rents of the section sold was not obligatory on the new Zamindár, who had acquired by sale the entire Zamindari right, the allowance being consolidated in the general rent-roll. He also thought that the fact that the apportioned Jama on the estate sold, resulted after deduction of the allowance, did not sustain the claim.<sup>1</sup> Ray Rádhá Gobind Singh v. Gorachandra Gosain. 15th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 290.—Rat-tray & Halhed.

<sup>1</sup> Mr. Halhed remarked in this case that "the Gosain Táihi was deducted from the gross assets with village expenses and another impost; but such deduction did not bar the right of the Zamindár to collect the same. Though the Vritti may be considered as amongst the prohibited imposts, yet the revenue functionaries, in a manner, legalized it with other imposts in the Hast-o-búd statements. The Lot Bandi, and other papers, shew that it was deducted and included in legal imposts; the right of the Zamindárs." IV. of 1793, but had been subsequently sworn to his report; two Judges (Turnbull and Leycester) admitted a special appeal from the doubt; but one Judge (Walpole) judicially determined that the defect was cured. *Shah Nawaz Khan v. ##### II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOUR- ABLE COMPANY, 25.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

1. All amendments must be specially brought before the notice of the Court, together with the state of the cause; and all processes of contempt will fall, unless the amendment be allowed without prejudice to them. Bhuggobuttychurn Mitter v. Gooroo-persaud Nundy. 2d Feb. 1828. Cl. R. 1834. 22.

2. Of Writs.

2. In a writ of right, where the jurisdiction clause had been omitted, and the cause had been called on and opened, but no witnesses examined, the writ was allowed to be amended by adding the jurisdiction clause. Taylor v. Mackillop. 2d Term 1826. Cl. R. 1829. 208. Sm. R. 117.

3. Of Bills.

3. The amendment of a bill taken pro confesso for want of an answer will be allowed at the hearing, without prejudice to the several process of contempt. De la Cruz v. Goorachund Seal. Cl. R. 1829. 335.

4. Attachment for want of appearance, issued the same day that the bill was amended, is irregular. All amendments should be brought specially to the notice of the Court. Collypersaud Hazrah v. Mandub-chander Soor. 1st Term 1828. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 46.

5. A bill was dismissed for want of proceeding when more than three weeks had elapsed without amending, after an order obtained for that purpose, and the order to amend having been previously discharged. Sed quere. Isserchunder Dutt v. Woodychund Dutt. 19th March 1829. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 49.

6. And where, under an order to amend, the complainant has not amended within six weeks given to him, the defendant will be allowed to move to dismiss the bill at once. At the same time it must be understood, that if the defendant do not move to dismiss, nor take any step, the complainant may still amend, notwithstanding the six weeks have expired. Ramchurnloll v. Joykissen Doss. 16th July 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 39.

7. Where a rule had been obtained to stay proceedings in an original and amended bill, until a co-plaintiff had fully answered a cross bill which had been filed, and an order was afterwards obtained for leave to amend the original and amended bill, which was subsequently done by striking out the name of the co-plaintiff, for want of whose answer the rule to stay proceedings had been obtained; on an order nisi to discharge the order to amend for irregularity, the Court made such order absolute, with costs, holding that the order to amend was irregular, having been obtained without sufficient grounds pending the rule for stay of proceedings. Comolmony Dossce v. Rajah Bunnoreany Loll. 11th July 1836. Clarke's Notes, 112.

8. A motion was made to take an amended bill off the file for irregularity: there had been a new engrossment, which did not shew how the original bill had been amended. The counsel for the defendant urged that the practice was to insert the amendment in red ink, running a line through the part of the original bill intended to be altered, where the alteration was sufficiently short to admit of it. The Court decided that such was not the practice at home, though convenient, and sometimes practised in India, but not uniformly; and they decided, that it was not a sufficient ground to take the bill off the file. However, they intimated to the Clerk of the papers that it would be a convenient course to pursue for the future. The motion was refused, with costs. Case of the Burdwan Ranees. Barwell's Notes, 14.

9. It is not regular for the plaintiff to file a re-engrossed amended bill, making no distinction between the amendment and original matter. Gibson v. Chisholm. 22d July 1844. 1 Fulton, 481.

10. After the death of a sole defendant, and the revival of the suit against his representatives, the plaintiff may amend his original bill. Id.

11. Leave was given to withdraw replication, and amend the bill generally, for the purpose of introducing new matter, which did not alter, but strengthened the complainant's original case, although the bill had been filed three years. Nubhissen Sing v. Dayamoye Dossee. Sept. 1829. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 55.

12. After exceptions overruled, the complainant obtained an order to amend her bill, on amending the defendant's copy gratis. The usual words, on payment of costs, were not contained in the order, nor the undertaking to amend in three weeks, as required by the 8th Rule. The complainant did amend within three weeks, and caused a new copy to be served on the defendant's solicitor. No subpoena for a further answer was taken out; and the defendant not putting in a further answer, an attachment was issued. Held, that the attachment was irregular, and it was accordingly set aside, with costs and the costs of this application; the complainant consenting that the defendant should have two months to file a further answer. Ranee Bussunt Coomaree v. Mudoosoorhun Coopoorah. Sittings after 1st Term 1839. Barwell's Notes, 120.

4. Of Declarations.

13. The Court will allow a declaration in ejectment to be amended at the trial in favour of justice. Doddenn. Tanjah Chitty v. Ahmed Khan Saheb. 20th Sept. 1815. 2 Str. 308.

5. Of Plaints.

14. Plaints in the Supreme Court are amendable, though they are in the nature of original writs. Manichund v. Cruttenden and others. 2d Term 1796. Mor. 270.

15. A defendant pleaded in abatement another party who joined in the promises, now living at Serampore, &c., not named. Replication was demurred to. It was held, that the plea was good, and that the replication could not be supported; that the plaintiff should have stated the joint promise, and the reasons why he could not implead the other defendant in his plaint; and on motion to amend, it was refused, unless the defendant were let out of custody on filing common bail. Sumboochurn Bhose v. Pereira. 4th Term 1799. Sm. R. 5.

16. An amendment of the plaint, by adding parties named in a plea of abatement, was refused, and the action abated.<sup>1</sup> Bennet v. Friar. 9th Nov. 1799. Sm. R. 5.

17. A cause being at issue against one of two defendants, the other not having entered an appearance, motion was made to strike the name of the latter defendant out of the plaint, on the suggestion that he had renounced. The motion was refused; and it was held, that if a defendant should die before the cause had arrived at the stage in which, under the statute, his death might be suggested on the record, the action would abate. Sands v. Mears and another. 16th June 1800. Sm. R. 5.

18. Amendment of the plaint discharges sequestration, and puts an end to all process of contempt. And no amendment without prejudice to the sequestration shall be allowed, unless the amendment itself be brought before the Court. Bhuggobuttychurn Mitter v. Soobulchander Nundy. 1st Term 1828. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 47. Mor. 277. Sreehissen Bysack v. Bissumber Parn and another. 1st Feb. 1828. Cl. R. 1834. 22. Mor. 278, note. Bhuggobuttychurn Mitter v. Gooroopersaud Nundy. 2d Feb. 1828. Cl. R. 1834. 22. Mor. 278, note.

19. There must be a new rule to plead after amendment of the plaint

before cause set down ex-parte. Bindabun Mundell v. Panchoo Mistry. 18th July 1826. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 44.

20. When the cause was on the board, and it appeared that there were variances between the agreement set out in the plaint, and a translation of the original by the sworn interpreter, amendment was allowed on consent, the discharge of bail above, and the filing of common bail. Rangopaul Sing v. Isserchunder Bose. 13th March 1828. Cl. R. 1834. 22.

21. An amendment of a plaint was allowed, after the cause was called on, to correct the date of the year of the Sheriff's bill of sale, upon payment of costs, and an undertaking to proceed to trial on the following day. Doctem. Ramkissen Sain v. Mahomed Sarrang. 9th July 1828. Cl. R. 1834. 22.

22. After plea in abatement of non-joinder of other defendants, the plaintiffs were allowed to amend, (with reference to the statement of jurisdiction required in the plaint, whereby the plaintiff might be prejudiced if he were compelled to begin de novo against all,) by adding parties; and it was ordered that further summons should issue to the other defendants, and that the plea should be taken off the file. Richardson and others v. Colrin. 29th Oct. 1830. Sm. R. 5.

23. An error in the plaint on guarantee, the effect of which was to render it absolutely nonsensical, as it did not appear but that the debt had been duly paid by the principal debtor himself, was held not to be amendable. Curr, Tagore, and Co. v. Macdonald. 14th Nov. 1838. Mor. 292.

6. Of Pleas.

23a. A plea in assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, that the goods did not correspond with the representation of the seller, is bad, but may be amended. Schneider v. Morgan. 12th June 1838. Mor. 243.

24. A rule nisi, obtained by a defendant to amend the record, by filing an additional plea after issue joined and cause set down, was discharged. The action was trespass, and the defendant had inadvertently pleaded the general issue only. Buddlinauth Saha v. Brachen. 16th Nov. 1840. Mor. 401.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

25. Suit by the daughter of an Aimahdâr against the son for a share of a Aimah mauza, as heir; to which the son pleads that the mauza fell to the mother in payment of dower, and that she conveyed it to him. The plea not being substantiated, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut adjudged to the plaintiff her share of the land on a division of it according to the Muhammadan law of inheritance. But the decree was afterwards amended, the parties having represented the land (not in possession of either of them) to be held by other persons in mortgage, whereas the alleged mortgagees, when called upon, stated themselves to hold as proprietors, paying a fixed Jama to the Aimahdâr's heirs. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut therefore adjudged a share of the Jama receivable, and not of the land; leaving the claimant to contest the validity of the tenure of the possessors in a separate suit, should she think proper so to do.<sup>1</sup> Beebe Jagun v. Bakir Ali and others. 7th May 1804. 1 S. D. A.

<sup>1</sup> According to the maxims of Muhammadan law, the respondent, or person denying the claim, may be required to make oath to the denial; and the refusal to do so is a confession of the demand. (3 Hed. 68. 70.) In this case the person who defended the action, setting up a claim founded on certain documents exhibited by him, was not respondent, but claimant, and the oath could not properly be tendered to him, but to the other party; and for this reason the law officers remark, that the plaintiff in the action (who denied that claim and the documents exhibited in support of it) had not declined to make oath.

Rep. 78.—H. Colebrooke & Harrington.

<sup>2</sup> Admitting the father's disposition of his estate in favour of his eldest son to have been an improper exercise of power on his part, as possessor of the hereditary patrimony, still the validity of a gift actually made by a father is affirmed by Jimātā Vāhana (Dāya Bh. c. ii. 29, 30). For since the gift of the entire estate to a stranger would have been valid (however blamable the act of the giver might be), the donation in favour of one son, with provision for the support of the rest, would seem to be equally valid, according to the doctrines received in the province of Bengal. And after extending to the case of sons, no less than to that of strangers, Jimātā Vāhana's position, respecting gifts valid, though made in the breach of the law, it becomes necessary to the consistency of the doctrine equally to maintain that a father's irregular distribution of the patrimony, at a partition made by him in his lifetime, in portions forbidden by the law (Dāya Bh. c. ii. 17.), shall, in like manner, be held valid, though, on his part, sinful. No opinion was taken from the law officers of the Sudder Court in this case, but it has been received as a precedent which settles the question of a father's power to make an actual disposition of his property, even contrary to the injunctions of the law, whether by gift, or by will, or by distribution of shares.—Coleb.

3. It was held, that a Hindú "might and could dispose by will of all his property, moveable and immoveable, and as well ancestral as otherwise." Ramtoonoo Mullick v. Ramgopaul Mullick. 11th July 1808. Maen. Cons. II. L. 340. Cl. R. 1834. 103.

5. It was held, that the gift by a father of the whole ancestral estate to one son, to the prejudice of the rest, or even to a stranger, is a valid act (although an immoral one), according to the law as received in Bengal. Ramkoomar Nease Bachesputtee v. Kishenkunker Turk Bhoosun. 24th Nov. 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 42.—Fombelle & Rees.

6. A Hissahnamch, or deed of partition, made by a Hindú father, in which he allots to his sons portions of his estate, moveable and immoveable, ancestral and acquired, but which disposition was not carried into effect during his lifetime, is not binding on his sons after his death. Bhowannychurn Bunkhojca v. The heirs of Ramkamt Bunkhojca. 27th Dec. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 202.—Harington & Fombelle.

8. A Zamindár, in Bengal, sold part of his ancestral estate to his mother for her maintenance, on condition of her binding herself not to alienate the property, but to leave it to his son on her death. Held, that such a transaction did not terminate the Zamindár's right in that property, nor bar the alienation of it by him and his mother jointly, to the prejudice of the eventual heir. Kumla Kwant Chaherbatty v. Gooroo Gaurind Chondree and others. 20th Jan. 1829. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 322. Cl. R. 1834. 106.—Leycester & Ross.

9. By the law as current in Bengal, a son has no right in the ancestral property inherited by his father during his father's life. Ib.

10. A Hindú, who has sons alive, can, without their consent, sell, give, or pledge immoveable ancestral property situate in Bengal; and can, without their consent, by will, devise, prevent, alter, or affect their succession to such property.<sup>2</sup> Doc dem. Juggomohun Roy v. Neemo Dossce. 21st Nov. 1831. Mor. 90. Cl. R. 1834. 101.

By the law as current in Bengal, the gift by the proprietor of his patrimonial estate to his paternal relation, whilst his sister or his sister's sons exist, is valid.<sup>3</sup> Radhanath Chondree v. Mt. Kishen Ramnee Dossce and another. 4th Aug. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 35.—Braddon & Robertson.

<sup>1</sup> The decision in this case is not repugnant to the former ones. In fact, it went upon a different question, viz. the non-delivery of possession; and it appears that Macnaghten was not warranted in referring to this case as the latest decision on the question, "wherein it was determined that an unequal disposition of ancestral immoveable property is illegal and invalid."

tral estate is valid as regards his own share. Rajbulubh Bhooayan v. Mt. Banneta De. 14th Aug. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 44.—Lumsden & Harington.

13. A, the manager of a joint Talook, held in his name, was put under confinement by the servants of the superior Zamindár for a balance of revenue, for which, seeing no other mode of discharging it, he executed a conveyance of the Talook to B (the Zamindár's Mukhtár-Kár), voluntarily, but without any express authority from the other sharers, who, however, allowed B to hold possession undisturbed for ten years. In a suit against B after this period for the recovery of the Talook on the ground that the conveyance was void as obtained by duress, and executed by one only of the sharers, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut determined, in conformity with an opinion of their Pandits, that the title of B under the conveyance was good.<sup>1</sup> Pramath Das and others v. Calishunkur Ghosal. 29th Aug. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 45.—Lumsden & Harington.

14. A co-parcener may give or alienate his own share of joint property. A gift by A to his son of a Talook which he had received from his father while sole Zamindár, was upheld, as the gift of the Talookdári tenure, which is distinct from the Zamindári right, and usually held as a dependency paying rent to the Zamindár, did not destroy the right of the brother of A in the Zamindári. Certain alleged acts of ownership on the part of A, after the date of the deed of gift, did not, in the opinion of the Court, vitiate the gift, as they might be no more than acts of guardianship, which it is natural and proper for a father to perform during the minority of his son. Anund Chund Rai v. Kishen Mohun Banaja and others. 4th Dec. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 115.—H. Colebrooke and Harington.

opinion of the law officers expressly is, by the circumstances of the case, the single parcener who made the sale in question having been sole manager of the Talook on behalf of himself and co-heirs, and registered singly as owner of it, and having sold it for the liquidation of arrears of revenue due from that very Talook, for which, too, the land itself was answerable, and the co-parceners having acquiesced in his act by their silence during a period of ten years, that opinion as to the validity of the sale appears unobjectionable. The law recognizes the family arrangement by which one brother takes entire possession of the patrimony, and conducts the affairs of the family like a father (Dāya Bh. c. iii. s. i. 15). In this case one of the coparceners having done so, and being the recorded proprietor and ostensible manager of the estate, and having sold it, not for his own benefit, but for the discharge of the revenue for which it was answerable, must be considered to have made the sale on the part of his co-heirs, as their agent and representative. It should be observed, that the mode of confinement which appears to have been practised in this instance, was no unusual exercise of authority by a superior landholder, at the remote period when the transaction took place, but has since been effectually prohibited.—Coleb.

priated for his maintenance, is not attachable in satisfaction of his father's debts during the lifetime of the latter. Amrut Row Trimback Pehtay v. Trimback Row Amrutayshwur and another. 19th Sept. 1839. Sel. Rep. 218.—Pynce and Greenhill.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.

41. By the Muhammadan law, a gift of ancestral property, held as a joint and undivided estate, by one of the sharers, is invalid, where no actual partition has taken place. Mt. Banoo Beeber v. Fulkhereodeen Hossein. 3d May 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 180.—Harington & Fombelle.

ANNUITY.

1. An annuity granted by the Zamindár of Nuddea to his younger son, on a devise of the Zamindari to his eldest son, and made payable from the Musháhara, or proprietary allowance received from Government while the Zamindari was under the management of the public officers, was adjudged to be demandable from the possessor of the Zamindari, who, without the consent of the annuitants, relinquished the Musháhara, and took on himself the management of the Zamindari, with the consequent responsibility for the revenue assessed upon it. The annuity was held not to be liable to reduction on account of the public sale of parts of the Zamindari under such circumstances; and as the right of the annuitants had been twice adjudged, and appeals were preferred merely to protract the period of payment, the Zillah Court was ordered to enforce the punctual payment of the annuity in future, by a sale of lands, if necessary. Raja Grischund Rai v. Sumbhoohund Rai. 9th May 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 133.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

2. A has an annuity payable out of B's estate. In a dispute respecting the rate, B entered into an engagement to pay to A the same sum annually as might be decreed by the Court to other annuitants under similar circumstances. Held, that the engagement was binding on B, from the date of the execution of the engagement, but that it was not to have reference to previous balances, the engagement not containing any retrospective provision. Rajah Greesh Choud Roy v. Omeshchander Roy and others. 26th May 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 62.—Fombelle & Stuart.

3. A judicial order for the payment of a monthly stipend to a certain individual is not held to entitle his heirs to claim it after his death. Tohfa Dibia v. Pirtha Choud Rai. 20th Jan. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 134.—Goad & Dorin.

4. It was held, that the gift of an annuity made by a Zamindár, during his lifetime, to a younger son, in lieu of his share of the Zamindari, is hereditary. Rajah Geereschunder Rai v. Rajah Oonesh Choudur Rai. 29th Jan. 1829. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 328.—Rattray.

I. POWERS OF THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

1. Generally.

1. Memorials to the King in Council, complaining of, and appealing against, a scheme for the distribution of part of the booty taken in the Dakhin, which had been approved of by the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, having been referred to a Committee of Council, they, without hearing the memorialists upon the merits of their cases, advised His Majesty to refer the consideration of them to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. Case of the Army of the Deccan. 10th July 1833. 2 Knapp, 103.

2. Semble, That the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will not exercise jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal from the decisions of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, as to grants by the Crown of property accruing to it by virtue of its prerogative. Ib.

3. Semble, The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will not entertain an appeal merely for costs. Mt. Keemce Bae v. Latchman-das Narrain-das. 5th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 470.

4. Semble, Where a matter which is not strictly an appealable grievance has been referred by Her Majesty to the Judicial Committee, their Lordships may, under the reservations contained in the 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 41., advise Her Majesty to grant the petitioner leave to appeal. Morgan v. Leech. 12th Feb. 1841. 3 Moore, 368. 2 Moore Ind. App. 428.

II. FROM THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. When allowed.

5. Dictum of Impey, C. J.—The defendant, by consent, may relinquish the right to appeal; and on an appeal the rule for judgment, as of a time passed by consent, would be sent with the judgment, and would have the same operation as a consent not to move in arrest of judgment. If parties here would, by consent, preclude themselves from an appeal, we should, on that consent, refuse their petition of appeal. Rudacount Gose v. Gungagorind and another. Hyde's Notes. 10th Feb. 1778. Sm. R. 31. Mor. 47.

6. An appeal against a nonsuit will be allowed, even where its utility is questionable. Lyon v. Chaund Holdar. Hyde's Notes. 11th June 1782. Mor. 47.

7. An appeal will be allowed against an order on the equity side of the Court discharging an order nisi for confirming an award. Rajah Ramlochan Roy v. Bulram Ghose. Hyde's Notes. Chamb. Notes. 24th Jan. 1785. Sm. R. 63. Mor. 49.

8. An appeal was allowed against an interlocutory order in equity overruling a plea.<sup>1</sup> The East-India

9. Quære, Whether a mere question of costs is appealable where they exceed 1000 pagodas? Same v. Same. Chamb. Notes, 14th July 1788. Mor. 51.

10. The demand in the bill of complaint was for a sum exceeding 1000 pagodas, claimed on a promissory note; and the defence set up was, that the instrument was a forgery. The bill was dismissed with costs, on the ground of insufficient proofs of jurisdiction; but because it did not sufficiently appear that the taxed costs would amount to 1000 pagodas, the Court refused to allow an appeal.<sup>2</sup> Ramcant v. Scott and another. Hyde's Notes, 4th Feb. 1784. Sm. R. 62. Mor. 52, note.

11. An issue had been directed to be tried at law from the equity side of the Court, in which issue the defendant in equity was the plaintiff at law, and at the trial was nonsuited. An application was afterwards made, both on the plea and equity side, to set aside the nonsuit, and grant a new trial, which was refused. The plaintiff then presented his petition of ap-that "it did not follow as a consequence of this decision that every order in an equity cause might be the subject of an appeal: for if, upon an order for further time to answer, or like order being made, an advocate were to present an appeal against it, he should consider it as trifling with justice and with the Court; but that he thought an appeal would lie from any interlocutory order in equity, by which the final determination of the suit might be materially affected." In the argument of this case the question was raised, as to whether a mere question of costs is appealable; but the point was not decided by the judgment, which was given on the ground, that, as the plea went to the merits generally, the "matter in dispute" was, in fact, the whole subject matter of the suit.

<sup>2</sup> It seems that this appeal ought to have been allowed, as the dismissal of the bill determined the whole suit, and, besides the costs, a sum far beyond the limited amount was in dispute.

peal against the nonsuit, and also against the order refusing the new trial. The appeal was allowed.<sup>1</sup> Rogonwath Chund v. Soroopchund Addy. Chamb. Notes, 14th Feb. 1797. Sm. R. 19. Mor. 55.

12. It was held, that there can be no appeal to the King in Council from a judgment of nonsuit, where the nonsuit had left it uncertain what the damages, if any, ought to have been. Maudville v. Hayes. 14th Dec. 1798. 1 Str. 1.

13. But Strange, R., thought that it would be different in an action of assumpsit, or the like, where the value of the matter in dispute appears by reference to some tertium quid, as a note of hand, or a balance of an account. Ib.

14. A special appeal upon terms, however, may be admitted by the King in Council under the Charter. Ib.

15. Held, that an appeal did not lie from an interlocutory order, under the Charter of the Court of the Recorder at Madras; but at the end of the cause the party dissatisfied with the judgment might object to any order by which he could shew that he had been finally aggrieved.<sup>2</sup> Johnston v. The East-India Company. May 1799. 1 Str. 21.

16. Strange, R., thought that under the Bengal Charter of the Supreme Court, an appeal would lie from any rule or order, whether interlocutory or final, in any way affecting the suitor's interest. Ib.

17. Obiter dictum, an appeal against a verdict will be allowed, the verdict being given in an issue, and the appeal being against the verdict only.<sup>3</sup> Woomeschunder Paul Chowdry v. Sreenutty Woolulmoney Dossee. 24th July 1826. Cl. R. 1829, 172.

18. Semble, That an appeal from a final judgment or decree will not open prior interlocutory decrees or orders, in respect of which the time for appealing has elapsed. The East-India Company v. Syed Ally Khan. 14th July 1830. 1 Knapp, 331, note.

19. Semble, An appeal will lie from interlocutory judgments as well as from final ones. Ib.

20. Where a Court below has granted leave to appeal in a case in which they were not authorised by their Charter to do so, it is not sufficient for the appellant to present the common petition of appeal to the King in Council; but a special application for leave to appeal must be made to the King in Council under such circumstances. Ib.

21. Where a party has lost his right of appealing, according to the Charter of a Court below, through the erro-

<sup>1</sup> This case is again inserted in Chambers' Notes (26th Oct. 1797), where it is said, "This petition, entitled an amended petition of appeal, is against several distinct interlocutory orders and decisions, one of them made very long after the rest, and only one within six months previous to its being preferred before a Judge, and filed by his order during the late vacation." But see infra, The East-India Company v. Syed Ally Khan. Case 18 et seq.

<sup>2</sup> This case was decided by the Court of the Recorder at Madras, but the words of the Charter of that Court, and upon which the decision was made, remain unaltered in the Charter of the Supreme Court. And see infra, Case 23.

<sup>3</sup> But notwithstanding this case, no petition of appeal can be allowed against a verdict. The appeal is directed to be by persons aggrieved by any judgment, decree, order, or rule of the Court; words which clearly do not comprehend the mere finding of a verdict, whether it be on the common-law side of the Court, and afterwards to be carried into effect by a judgment, or (as in the above case) upon an issue directed to inform the Court sitting in equity what decree or order it is to pronounce. It is not certain that the judgment, decree, or order, will correspond with the finding; but if it should do so, the effect of an appeal against the verdict is obtained by an appeal against the judgment or order founded upon it; for all the evidence and proceedings had in the cause appealed are to be transmitted to the Privy Council, and they have therefore the fullest opportunity of deciding on the correctness of the verdict. Minute relating to appeals filed by order of the Court. 20th Jan. 1836. (Ryan, C. J., Grant and Malkin, Js.) Mor. 62.

neous construction of it by the Court, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will, upon a special petition, grant such party leave to appeal. Ib.

22. Upon an issue at law directed from the equity side of the Court a verdict had been found for the defendant, and the plaintiff having first applied (on the equity side) for a new trial, which was refused, obtained an order nisi that her petition of appeal against the order refusing a new trial be allowed.<sup>1</sup> Sreemutty Seboosondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Conulmoney Dossee. 28th March 1839. Mor. 66.

23. The right of appeal given by the Charters of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, is not confined to cases where a right or duty is finally decided, but includes interlocutory judgments, decrees, or decretal orders. Such appeal does not, however, extend to the finding of a jury upon issues directed from the equity side of the Court; no motion for a new trial having been made, nor exceptions taken to the Master's report founded upon the verdicts in such issues.<sup>2</sup> Nathooobhoy Ramdass v. Mooljee Madowdass and others. 7th Feb. 1840. 3 Moore, 87. 2 Moore Ind. App. 160.

24. Dictum of Peel, C. J.—“There is no doubt that an order or judgment on consent cannot be appealed from, not coming under the class of orders by which the party against whom it is made can be said to be aggrieved.

<sup>1</sup> In this case Ryan, C. J., observed, “This Court has decided, that no appeal against a verdict shall be allowed; and we still adhere to that determination. But we are not disposed to extend the doctrine to the present case. The doctrine itself, however, we still uphold; and it is observable that it does not overrule any express decision of the Court, for the opinion expressed in Woomeschunder Paul Chowdry v. Woonulmoney Dossee was merely an obiter dictum, the order having been, in fact, upon other grounds, discharged. The power of appeal is given as a privilege, and ought to be construed liberally.”

Ragober Dyal v. The East-India Company. 6th Feb. 1840. 1 Fulton, 146.

25. A party in contempt may be heard when praying leave to appeal. Sreemutty Rance Hurroosondry Dossee v. Cowar Kistonaath Roy and others. 27th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 85.

2. Petition of Appeal.

26. Where a petition of appeal contained a summary of the arguments on the part of the plaintiff, because the Charter requires the reasons for the appeal to be set forth in the petition, Impey, C. J., said, “it was not drawn in a clerk-like manner, for it ought to have stated the points only, and not the reasoning, as this petition did.” Commual ul deen Alli Khan v. Goring and others. Hyde's Notes, 21st March 1777. Mor. 63, note.

27. The Court will not refuse to receive a petition of appeal though it contain passages not strictly true, or contrary to the evidence; but the Court will direct the defendant's counsel to correct such passages. Praenkissen Sing v. Baranassy Gose. Chamb. Notes, 26th March 1787. Mor. 63, note.

28. A petition of appeal containing matter considered by the Court as impertinent and improper (such as the names and arguments of counsel, the judgment, and that, too, incorrectly taken of the Judges, &c.), the Court desired the advocate who signed it to correct it, and tender it again to the Court. Manickchund Mahajun v. Pott. Chamb. Notes, 1st Nov. 1796. Sm. R. 69. Mor. 63.

28 a. In a petition of appeal, a statement of the Judge's reason was struck out; but the Court refused to order an affidavit, set out nearly in hæc verba, in the body of the petition, to be struck out, though they expressed their disapprobation of it.<sup>3</sup>

Lolljee Mull v. Rajchunder Chowdry. 25th Nov. 1835. Mor. 61.

29. A motion on the equity side that the petition of appeal be allowed should be for an order nisi, and not on notice. Comolnoney Dossee v. Seboosondery Dossee. 7th May 1839. Mor. 294. Radakissen Mitter v. The Bank of Bengal. 22d July 1839. Ib. note.

3. Security.

30. Where a petition of appeal presented on behalf of the defendant in a cause has been filed before the issue of the writ of execution, motion must be made on the other side that execution do issue; in order to which, the Court will require the plaintiff to give security to the appellant to perform such decree as the King in Council shall make on such appeal, and also to refund the amount of the judgment, with interest and costs, in case the judgment should be reversed. Kiernander v. Watson. 5th March 1787. Sm. R. 66.

31. An appellant in whose favour a decree had been made, but with which he was dissatisfied, was ordered to give security in double the amount of the decree and costs in the Supreme Court, as well as for the costs on the appeal. Bebb v. Morgan. Chamb. Notes, 28th Jan. 1790. Mor. 53.

32. In all cases the appellant should enter into the securities before moving that the petition of appeal be allowed, and a certificate thereof should form part of the grounds of the motion. Lolljee Mull v. Rajchunder Chowdry. 25th Nov. 1835. Mor. 61.

33. A mercantile firm will be con-

Judges; and if these are stated, it is competent for the Court to reform the petition, by directing the statement to be omitted. It is desirable that Judges should exercise the power of reforming petitions of appeal themselves, and not refer them to the Master for impertinence. Minute relating to appeals filed by order of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, 20th Jan. 1836. (Byan, C. J., Grant and Malkin, Js.) Mor. 62.

sidered as a good security in appeal cases; and however numerous the partners may be, they will be considered as constituting but one security. Rajkistno Bonnerjee and others v. Tarranej Churn Bonnerjee and others. 7th March 1839. Mor. 64.

34. As a general rule, when the property exceeds one lac of rupees, the Master should require distinct and independent securities for each lac.<sup>1</sup> Ib.

35. The security required from the respondent when the decree is ordered to be executed must be applied for before the allowance of the appeal. Bissumber Seal v. Ramdhone Bonnerjee and another. 1st Dec. 1841. 1 Fulton, 32.

36. When the judgment of the Court has been satisfied by the act of the party out of Court, and not by virtue of any direction of the Court, no order for security for the performance of the decree of the Privy Council can be made. Ragobher Dyal and others v. The East-India Company. 6th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 146.

4. Time for Appeal.

37. It was held to be doubtful whether the six months, the time allowed by the Charter for commencing an appeal, are to be reckoned from the day the judgment is pronounced in open Court, or from that on which it is completed by being entered in the office by the attorney of the successful party. De Castro and others v. Page and others. Hyde's Notes. 12th July 1783. Sm. R. 62. Mor. 48.

38. An appeal will be allowed on the same day that the petition is filed, in order to save the six months. Same v. Same. Hyde's Notes. 12th July 1783. Doe dem. Ramrutton

Tagore v. Holme. 12th July 1783.
The East-India Company v. Balfour.<sup>1</sup> Hyde's Notes. 21st June 1784. Dutteram Turrufidar v. Watson.<sup>2</sup> Hyde's Notes. 25th Oct. 1784.
 Sm. R. 63. Mor. 49.

39. The legal meaning affixed by the Court to the expression "six months" in the Charter, limiting the time of appeal, was, that they were to be "lunar months," and not calendar months. Calein and others v. Ball. Chamb. Notes. 6th Mar. 1798. Sm. R. 19. 71. Mor. 56.

40. But this decision was afterwards overruled, and the "six months" allowed for appealing were held to be "calendar" and not "lunar" months. Reed v. Govindchund and others. June 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 172. 329. Mor. 57. Woomeschunder Paul Chowdry v. Isserchunder Paul Chowdry.<sup>3</sup> 17th July 1828. Cl. R. 1829. 329. Mor. 58.

41. If the appellant should suffer six months from the date of the order allowing the appeal to elapse without taking further steps, it will not be held sufficient to enable the respondent to get the appeal dismissed for want of prosecution. Woomeschunder Paul Chowdry v. Isserchunder Paul Chowdry and others. 13th Feb. 1839. Cl. R. 1834. 160. Mor. 59.

<sup>1</sup> In this case Hyde, J., observed, when it was moved that the appeal should be allowed:—"It is now more than six months since the decree was made in this cause: it will therefore be necessary to transmit with the appeal the order made by me in the vacation, before the six months were expired, that the appeal should be received and filed."

<sup>3</sup> In the former of these two cases the time was held to run from the "signing," and not from the "pronouncing" of a decree, and that the day of signing and its corresponding day six months were both inclusive. In the latter case, however, the Court decided that the time runs from the day of "pronouncing," according to the words of the Charter, and not from the day of signing; and that the day after the pronouncing of the decree is the first day to be reckoned.—Mor.

42. Semble, A twelvemonth is sufficient. Ib.

43. The time is to be reckoned, not from the mere filing of the petition, but from the date of the order allowing the appeal. Ib.

44. If a petition of appeal be filed, it will be held good ground for a plea to a bill of review filed subsequently to the petition, and the bill of review must be dismissed. Janokey Doss and others v. Bindabun Doss and others. 2 Nov. 1835. Mor. 60.

45. The motion to receive, read, and file the petition of appeal is a sufficient preferring of the petition within six months. Rogober Dyal v. East-India Company. 6th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 146.

5. Restoration of Appeal.

46. Leave was given to restore an appeal dismissed for want of prosecution, the Court below having consolidated it with another appeal in the same cause, which was still pending. Surroopchunder Sircar Chowdry v. Ramrutton Mullick. 10th Feb. 1837. 1 Moore, 404. 1 Moore Ind. App. 358.

47. Leave was given to restore an appeal which had been dismissed for want of prosecution; the appellant's agent, though instructed to prevent the dismissal of the appeal, not having received the transcript until after the expiration of a year and a day from the time of the allowance of the appeal, and the respondent having in consequence thereof obtained an order of dismissal. Sree Mutty Bissnoosondery Dabee v. Rajah Burrodacant Roy. 12th Feb. 1839. 3 Moore, 11. 2 Moore Ind. App. 127.

6. Practice in Appeals.

48. The certificates of the copies of the proceedings in a cause to be transmitted for an appeal only require the seal of the Court, and not the signature of the Judges. Lyon v. Chaund Holdar. Hyde's Notes. 11th June 1782. Sm. R. 61. Mor. 47.

49. Before a petition of appeal be filed, there must be a certificate of the judgment having been signed in the office. De Castro v. Page and others. Hyde's Notes. 20th Mar. 1783. Sm. R. 61. Mor. 48.

50. The Court of Appeal will always require some clear distinct ground of error to be pointed out before they will reverse a decision depending upon the credibility of evidence. Where the question is a mere question of fact, the Court will adopt the course of adhering to the determination of the Court below in whose presence the whole evidence was given, unless the case be so unsatisfactory as to require further explanation, so improbable as to be manifestly unworthy of credit, or exhibit circumstances which must convince any impartial and judicious mind of its untruth. Baboo Utruch Sing v. Beny Persaud. 11th Feb. 1834. 2 Knapp, 265. Mor. 69.

51. Held, that in all cases on the meaning of the words of the Charter, the security for costs should be entered into by the appellant before moving to allow the appeal, and that a certificate thereof should form part of the grounds of the rule nisi why the petition of appeal should be allowed. A statement of the Judge's reasons was struck out, but the Court refused to order an affidavit set out nearly in hunc verba in the body of the petition to be struck out, though they disapproved of it. Lalljee Mull v. Rajchunder Chowdry. 25th Nov. 1835. Clarke's Notes, 115.

52. Motion to allow a petition of appeal should be for an order nisi, and not upon notice. Comulmoney Dossee v. Sibosoondery Dossee. 7th Mar. 1839. Barwell's Notes, 14.

53. But it was upon notice in the case of Joymoney Dossee. Barwell's Notes, 14.

54. In appeals to England three motions only are requisite, viz. 1st.

That the petition of appeal be received, filed, and read. 2d. That recognizances be entered into, or deposit made. 3d. That the petition be allowed. Sreemutty Rance Hurosoondry Dossee v. Concar Kistennauth Ray. 20th June 1842. 1 Fulton, 10.

55. After an application to the Court for the allowance of a petition of appeal has been wholly refused, if the appeal be persevered in, a fresh petition must be preferred within six months from the date of the order appealed against; but otherwise if the application be only delayed, as for want of security for costs having been given. Same v. Same. 10th April 1843. 1 Fulton, 205.

56. Semble, After a petition of appeal has been filed, the rule for execution should be nisi in the first instance. Remfry v. Comie. 6th Mar. 1844. 1 Fulton, 446.

57. Pending an appeal, the Court has a discretionary power to allow execution to issue, or otherwise. Ib.

58. The circumstance of an appeal being bonâ fide is not sufficient to induce the Court to stay proceedings. Ib.

58a. The Court will not allow an appellant to deposit Company's paper in lieu of giving the respondent his execution, upon the suggestion that the sureties may leave the jurisdiction, the Charter conferring no such power. Ib.

III. FROM THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. When allowed.

59. In an appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut against the decision of a Provincial Court, under Sec. 8 of Reg. III. of 1801; it appearing that the Zillah Judge had dismissed, on default of prosecution by the appellant, an appeal from a decision of the Zillah Register, and that the Provincial Court, after hearing both parties for and against that dismissal, had approved and confirmed it, the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut did not consider a further appeal within the intent of the Section and Regulation quoted.<sup>1</sup> Ram Pursud Lusher and another v. Ram Soonder Ghose. 30th Jan. 1809. S. D. A. Rep. Vol. I. 269.—Harington & Fombelle.

60. By Sec. 8. of Reg. V. of 1793,<sup>2</sup> an appeal from a decision on the award of arbitrators may be admitted, without, in the first instance, requiring proof of their corruption or partiality. Debeerpurshad Sein v. Indurjeet Sein and others. 19th May 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 233.—Harington & Stuart.

61. A judgment in a suit, brought on the behalf of the appellants by one not duly authorised on their part, was held not to bar the appellant's right of action. Rajah Kusheenath Rai and others v. Nurab Dilawar Jung. 12th May 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 14.—Harington & Fombelle.

62. It was held, that an appeal from a nonsuit, on the ground of former judgments, the merits of the cause not having been investigated, should, under the spirit of Sec. 8. of Reg. II. of 1801<sup>3</sup>, be admitted as summary. No institution fee was therefore required from the appellants. Ib.

63. Where a decree had been given against the appellant in the Zillah Court, by a summary decision, passed under the provisions of Reg. XLIX.

of 1793<sup>4</sup>; and the appellant petitioned the Provincial Court to admit an appeal from that decision, on the ground that the Regulation above mentioned was not relevant to his case, and such petition had been rejected by the Provincial Court; it was held by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that as the appellant's petition of appeal to the Provincial Court contained an express claim to appeal on the ground of the irrelevancy of the Regulation, it was clearly their duty to admit an appeal, and investigate that point under the provisions of Sec. 7. of Reg. V. of 1798; and the Court accordingly passed an order, directing the Provincial Court to receive the appeal, and proceed to investigate the appellant's objections. Lukkan Manik Rai v. Mt. Roolmee. 10th Sept. 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 39.—Fombelle & Stuart.

64. It was held, that, according to the provisions of Sec. 2. of Reg. XXVI. of 1814<sup>5</sup>, a special appeal cannot be granted from a decree, on the ground of its awarding to an auction purchaser possession of certain lands, which lands, not being specified among the auction papers and in the plaint under the designation given to them in the decree, were apparently different from those claimed; but it was held, that this was sufficient ground for recommending a review of judgment; and the appellants were directed by the Court to present a petition for a review in the mode prescribed by Cl. 2. of Sec. 4. of Reg. XXVI. of 1814. Shaum Beebee and others v. Sonaoolla. 4th April 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—Ker.

65. The appellants were adjudged by the Provincial Court to pay a debt borrowed by their brother, on the ground of the family having been undivided, and of the money having been applied for the benefit of the family generally; but the decree allowed them, at the same time, to sue for the recovery of the sum so adjudged from the estate of their brother. A special appeal was admitted against this part of the decree as inconsistent, and so much of the decree as gave this option was annulled by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. Nub Koomar Chowdry and another v. Jye Deo Nundee. 14th Aug. 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 247.—Ker & Oswald.

66. Where the Provincial Court had unsuited the appellants for having sued only for a part of their claim, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut allowed a summary appeal from that decision, and directed the Provincial Court to re-admit the suit, and allow the appellants to pay the institution fee on the remainder of their claim, and to amend their plaint in conformity with Sec. 4. of Reg. IV. of 1793. Neel Kant Ghose and another v. Nasse Munnice Dassee. 9th April 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 293.—Fendall & Goad.

67. An order by a Zillah Judge for the execution of a private award by arbitrators is not appealable. Ram Surran v. Saboodha Misser. 8th Jan. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 4.—Rees & Goad.

68. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut passed an order admitting an appeal, and directing the prosecution of a suit which had been compromised in the Provincial Court ten years previously, on its being proved that the parties who compromised the suit were incompetent to do so. Kamla Kant Chukerbutty v. Gooroo Govind Chowdree. 22d Aug. 1822. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 322.—C. Smith & Dorin.

69. Where judgment is given against two persons jointly, one of them is not competent to appeal severally for the reversal of half the decree; nor can half a judgment be appealed from when given against one individual. Roshun Khatoon v.

Jan Khatoon. 10th Nov. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 414.—Smith.

70. A special appeal was admitted, on the ground of deficient investigation which appeared from the decision of the Lower Courts. Karta Das Mahant v. Lehkraj and others. 16th March 1825. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 266.—C. Smith & Ahmuty.

71. A special appeal was held to be admissible on review, on the ground of the conflict of two orders of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; viz. a prior order disallowing a special appeal, and judgment on a regular appeal, from the decree of a Provincial Court in another suit, in which the same fact was at issue. Kali Parshad Ray v. Heirs of Khela Ram Mukhopadhyay. 30th April 1827. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 207.—Leycester & Ross.

72. A special appeal was admitted, because the order of the Zillah Judge, imposing a fine of Rs. 100 on the appellant for the temerity of his defence, was unjust, and contrary to judicial practice. Ray Radha Govind Singh v. Gorachandra Gosain. 12th July 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 290.—Turnbull & Ratray.

73. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut admitted a special appeal, perceiving reason to doubt the accurate finding of a fact operating a legal forfeiture. At the same time the Court ruled, that this case should not be received as a precedent, authorising any departure from the rules for the admission of special appeals, of which observance is directed by Cl. 2. of Sec. 4. of Reg. II. of 1825. Sri Nath Mallik v. Abhai Charan Nandi. 20th Dec. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 79.—C. Smith & Ross.

74. Where a course of procedure required by the Courts to be observed in cases in which the plaintiff asserts that the rule of limitation under Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1795<sup>1</sup> was within the exception established by Reg.

II. of 1805, that fraud is a bar to limitation, had not been observed; the Court admitted a special appeal, judging that, on that account, the case merited further deliberation and consideration. Pran Krishu Neogi and another v. Sadr-ud-din Chaudhuri. 19th July 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 323.—Sealy & Ross.

75. Two Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut admitted a special appeal, because the Lower Courts had decided the case, in which a question of Hindú law was involved, without reference to the Law Officer, such a course being contrary to the Regulations and practice. Kripa Sindhu Patjoshi and others v. Kanahaya Acharya. 9th Feb. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 335. — Ratray & Sealy.

76. In an action to recover on a conditional sale, the plaintiff succeeded in the Lower Courts, on the ground that the sale had become absolute by default of the vendor to repay all within the legal time, the vendee having received rent from the sold property, and having continued to receive partial payments after default, and the vendor having deposited in Court a sum as balance due to the vendee. A special appeal was admitted, because the Lower Courts had not inquired into the state of account between the parties after bringing to the credit of the defendant the sums received by the plaintiff, nor as to the disputed service of notice under Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1806 on the vendor. Parasnath Chaudhuri v. Lala Bihari Lal. 8th March 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 346. — Ross & Ratray.

77. A special appeal was admitted from a doubt whether, in a case in which an Ameen not having been sworn previous to deputation under Sec. 17. of Reg. IV. of 1793, the defect was cured by his being subsequently sworn to his report. Shah Nawaz Khan v. Clement. 10th Jan. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 261.—Turnbull & Leycester.

78. A judgment creditor, who had intervened, in a case in which his debtor was defendant, to assert the latter's right; and the liability of the contested property to satisfy his claim, was allowed to appeal from the judgments of the lower Courts, which diminished the solvency of his debtor. Imdad Ali v. Kadir Buksh and others. 24th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 296.—Leycester & Ross.

79. Where judgment creditors had intervened in an action for foreclosure of a mortgage, in which their debtor was defendant, their interest was held to entitle them to appeal from a judgment which tended to bar their right of execution against the real property of their debtor. Ram Ruttun Roy and others v. Sumbhoochunder Roy and others. 20th May 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 32.—Lee Warner & Reid.

80. Pending an appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in a case in which the claim was founded on peculiar family usage, the claimant died, and a party stating himself to have the next best title to the property applied for permission to carry on the appeal; the application was refused, and the applicant referred to a separate action, as no decree could be passed in his favour on the plaint of the party who originally claimed under the special usage. Loll Munnee Koonceeree and others v. Rajah Nemgenerain and another. 16th April 1839. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 255.—Tucker & Ratray.

81. The plaintiff having failed to appear in the Court of original jurisdiction, and having shewn no reason for the default, the Court will not entertain his appeal, or enter into his objections to the claim. Mofeezooddeen v. Ram Ruttun Roy. 6th June 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 288.—D. C. Smyth.

82. Held, upon a petition for leave to appeal from an interlocutory order to the Queen in Council, that no appeal could be allowed, except from a "decree, judgment, or decretal order," having the effect of a definitive judgment in a regular case. Sayyad

Mahammad Ali Khan v. Nagar-Ara Begum and others. 29th June 1840. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 113.—Reid, Rat-tray & Tucker.

83. A party having acknowledged the justice of a decree given against him, by asking time to satisfy it, was not allowed to impeach it in appeal, preferred subsequently to such acknowledgment. Laloo Ram Dullal v. Sheik Mahomed Ismail. 7th Sept. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 44.—Tucker & Reid.

84. The Court rejected an application for the admission of a special appeal, where the grounds on which it was preferred were found, on a perusal of the papers of the case by the Court, not to be borne out by the facts and allegations as set forth by the petitioners themselves. Mahabul Singh and others, Petitioners. 8th March 1842. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 157.—Tucker & Reid.

2. Security.

85. Held, that there is no regulation in force providing summarily for any remedy against losses sustained in appeal cases from the insufficiency of security, pronounced by the Názir of a Civil Court to be good and sufficient for the performance of final judgment. But in cases of alleged injuries to parties from neglect of duty, or other misconduct, wilful misrepresentation or the like on the part of the Názir, the injured party can only have his remedy by the institution of a regular suit under the provision of Reg. IV. of 1793. Lal Mohun Bose, Applicant. 2d July 1839. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 53.—Reid.

86. Under the provisions of Sec. 11. of Reg. XIII. of 1808<sup>1</sup>, the Court directed a greater amount of security, equal to one year's produce of the adjudged property, to be entered into by the respondent during an appeal to the King in Council, than that which the Zillah Court had accepted as good and sufficient to answer the condemnation. Shumsoon-Nissa Khanum v. Rayjan Khanum. 15th Aug. 1839. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 107.—Braddon, Tucker, & Reid. (D. C. Smyth, dissent.)

3. Time for Appeal.

87. The three calendar months prescribed by Sec. 12. of Reg. V. of 1793<sup>2</sup>, as the time within which appeals must be instituted from the Zillah to the Provincial Courts, ought to be calculated according to the English, and not the Bengal Calendar. But where the appellants had preferred their appeal within three Bengal months, and pleaded ignorance of the English Calendar, the Court admitted the appeal. Anon. 26th Sept. 1797.—Harington's Anal. 2d Edit. 120, note.

88. In an action brought for possession of an estate mortgaged under a deed of Bay-bil-ucufi, or conditional sale, the period for its redemption having expired, a decree was obtained in the Zillah Court by the mortgagee. Two years afterwards (the estate having in the mean time been sold by public auction) an appeal being preferred to the Provincial Court, the Zillah decree, from its not being in conformity with the rules of Reg. XVII. of 1806, was reversed. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, however, held the sale to have become absolute, considering the omission by the mortgagor to prefer an appeal in due time, and to stay the intermediate sale of the estate, as a sufficient bar to his right of redemption. Puddumchurn Mohapatra v. Ramall Pandey. 19th Nov. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 200.—Ker & Oswald.

89. On the 30th December 1820, a Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut struck an appeal off the file, on the compromise of the guardian of an infant appellant with the respondent. On the application of the appellant at the end of eleven years (three after the age of sixteen attained) review was admitted by a single Judge, and the appeal revived, on the ground that there was no apparent benefit arising from the withdrawal of the appeal. Rajendra Narayan Adhikari and another v. Sayud Abdul Hakim. 7th Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 307.—Ross.

90. Where a special appeal from a judgment affecting government was admitted after a lapse of five months and thirteen days from its date, the appellant justified the delay by the necessity of reference to, and sanction of, the superior functionaries of government. Collector of Zillah Chittagong v. Krishn Kishnar. 2d Feb. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 331.—Rattray.

4. Who may defend.

91. A mortgage having been declared valid by the former judgment of a Zillah Court, from which no appeal was preferred, was found to be illegal on the trial of a subsequent suit for redemption of the mortgaged property, but was not set aside on this account by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the former judgment being still in force, and voidable only on review or appeal. Three respondents, each claiming a right of succession to the mortgaged property, were permitted to defend the appeal, and referred to a regular original suit for the adjustment of their respective claims. Juggut Chunder Sein and another v. Kishwanund and others. 12th Sept. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 126.—Harrington & Fombelle.

92. Pending an appeal from a decision obtained in the Provincial Court by A and B as attorneys of C, C died; but the Court allowed A and B to defend the appeal under a general power of attorney executed by the son and next heir of the deceased. Oodry Chund Chatoorjeu v. Palmer and Co. 14th Feb. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 14.—Fendall & Goad.

93. A, having failed in his action against B, appealed; the judgment creditors of B, interested in his solvency, were allowed to defend the appeal. Aiman Bibi v. Ibrahim Khan. 9th May 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 304.—Barwell & Walpole.

94. On the death of a respondent, his judgment creditors, with reference to the interest they had in the property of their debtor for liquidation of the debt due to them, were permitted to defend the appeal. Roopnarain Singh and another v. Busshee Bhugwant Singh and others. 4th April 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 86.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

5. Appeal by a Pauper.

95. Held, that a special appeal preferred by a pauper, in a suit instituted subsequently to the 1st of February 1815, could not be entertained. Jai Ram Dhami and others v. Munsu Dhami. 14th Jan. 1822. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 3.—Shakespear. Munsa Ram v. Jomahir Pande and others.<sup>1</sup> 16th Sept. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 172.—C. Smith.

96. Where the Provincial Court had refused to admit an appeal in formâ pauperis, on the merits of the case, and without reference to the question of pauperism; it was held, that such order was final, and not open to a special appeal.<sup>2</sup> Synud Kulunder Ali v. Dhooman Beebee. 16th Jan. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 105.—Smith.

<sup>1</sup> Sec. 5, of Reg. II. of 1825, however, is in the following terms:—"Regulation XXVIII. of 1814 relative to paupers, not containing any specific provision respecting pauper appellants or respondents, in second or special appeals in formâ pauperis from decisions passed in original suits, shall, after the promulgation of the present Regulation, be considered applicable to any second or special appeals which may be preferred in formâ pauperis, and which may hereafter be deemed admissible under the rules specified in the preceding Section." This rule, though it alters the law, furnishes a proof of the accuracy of the construction given in the above report.—Macn.

<sup>2</sup> By Cl. 3. of Sec. 12. of Reg. XXVIII. of 1814 it is provided—"If, upon a perusal of the petition and copy of the decree (in the case of an appeal by a pauper) the original judgment shall not appear to the Court to be erroneous or unjust, or if the nature of

98. A's special appeal in formâ pauperis, contrary to a particular rule (Sec. 17. of Reg. XXVIII. of 1814) admitted by two Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut (Leycester and Goad), was quashed on the proposition of one of the two Judges (Dorin), before whom it came on for trial, and adopted by a second Judge (J. Shakespear). A's subsequent application to be admitted to appeal in the usual mode was overruled (Shakespear, Dorin, and Leycester), but not on the merits. Held, that on the enactment of Reg. IX. of 1828 his appeal in formâ pauperis is admissible on renewed oath to poverty, such rejection notwithstanding. Malik Fa'hûb and others v. Jag Jewan Dhar and others. 3d April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 179.—H. Shakespear.

6. Dismissal of Appeal.

99. It was held, that where notice has not been served on an appellant, as required by Sec. 12. of Reg. V. of 1793<sup>1</sup>, delay on the part of the appellant in filing his pleas of appeal is not a sufficient ground for dismissing his suit. Oodwunt Raneut the cause shall not appear to be of sufficient importance to merit a further investigation in appeal, the Court will reject the petition, and will refuse to admit the petitioner to sue in appeal as a pauper." This rule has been construed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on many occasions, as vesting the appellate authority with discretion to pass a final order not open to special appeal. It would have been otherwise had the appellate authority rejected the petitioner's appeal, on the ground that he was not a pauper, in which case a special appeal might have been admitted for the purpose of trying that point.—Macn.

100. Before the dismissal of an appeal, it is required (as laid down in Sec. 12. of Reg. V. of 1793) that the appellant should be summoned, and required to shew cause why the suit had not been proceeded on during the prescribed period. Shereuk Pal v. Juggoobundua. 23d Sept. 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 41.—Fombelle & Stuart.

101. On appeal to the Sudder Court, a suit was dismissed on account of the irregularity of the plaint, and, consequently, of the whole record. The respondent had sued for only produce, and had obtained judgment for land. As the land was in dispute, the party in possession should have been sued by the other; and from the pleadings and evidence it appeared to the Court that the appellant was in possession. Amma Terommoombon v. Coonyoor Chinden. Case 6 of 1819. 1 Mad. Dec. 230.—Harris & Cherry.

7. Restoration of Appeal.

102. Where an appeal had been dismissed for want of prosecution, no step having been taken in it for ten years, the appeal was, upon petition to the King in Council, restored, the appellant paying the costs of dismissal and restoration; it appearing that the appellant was ignorant of the proceedings necessary to be taken in this country, and had, though after a lapse of some years, instructed a commercial house in Calcutta to prosecute the appeal, but whose agent in England becoming insolvent, no proceedings were taken to bring the case to a hearing. Rajah Deedar Hossein v. Rancee Zuhooroonisa. 24th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 441.

8. Practice in Appeals.

103. The Court, in special appeals, do not consider themselves bound to decide more than the point on which the appeal is admitted. Kalachund Chukurbutte v. Joogul Chukurbutte. 2d June 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 279.—Harington & Stuart.

104. Where the Provincial Court had rejected a petition of appeal on the ground of the period allowed for appealing having elapsed, without looking into the pleas explanatory of the delay, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on a summary appeal, ordered that Court to inquire into the truth of the statement of the appellants previously to rejecting the appeal. Mt. Nund Koor Beebee v. Bheer Kishore Mhytee. 7th May 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 299.—Rees & Goad.

105. Where the Provincial Court had dismissed, on default, an appeal, because the appellants had neglected to file a reply to the respondent's answer; it was held by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that the reply was unnecessary according to the spirit of Sec. 9. of Reg. XXVI. of 1814, although the appeal was admitted before the date fixed for the operation of that Section; and the Court ordered the Provincial Court to readmit the appeal, and try it on its merits. Ajeet Sing and others v. Hurlal Sing and others. 16th July 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 306.—Rees & Goad.

106. The respondents having procured the attachment of certain property in dispute as being that of their deceased relative A, the appellant instituted a suit to remove the attachment, on the ground of the property belonging to her late husband, and not to A. This suit was decided against her, and she acquiesced in the decision. The question then was, whether the appellants or respondents were entitled to the property; and it was decreed that it should be divided amongst them in certain proportions. It was against this decision that the appeal was brought, being for "the recovery of the property of her late husband;" and the appeal was thrown out, because the appellant had preferred it against this decision instead of the first, nonsuited herself in a direct claim for her own husband's property from the respondents. Mt. Umroot v. Kulyandus and others. 5th July 1820. 1 Borr. 284.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Colville, Bell, & Pendergast.

107. A party appealing to the Sudder Court was allowed to file additional papers to those already exhibited by him in the Lower Court, in consideration of his having been interrupted by his duties in the regular prosecution of his suit, he being a Havildar in the service of the East-India Company. Bukerojee Bhilare v. Salajee Bhilare. 27th April 1822. 2 Borr. 222.—Babington.

108. The examination of the provisions of a Zillah decree, not regularly appealed against, recommended by the sitting Judge (Romer), was disallowed. Sookhlal Rattanchund v. Mt. Ruheema Buhoo. 24th July 1823. 2 Borr. 632.—Sutherland & Ironside.

109. The appeal of one party brings the merits of the judgments of the Lower before the Superior Court, which is competent to amend an error of which the respondent, in his answer, complains; and any separate and formal appeal on his part is not necessary for this purpose. Rudha Mani Deyya v. Surya Mani Deyya and another. 31st May 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 120.—Ross & Ratray.

110. Where there were several defendants to a suit, which was dismissed by the Lower Court, the Court, in appeal, admitted the plaintiff, appellant; to discharge those not considered by him liable, and to prosecute the appeal against the principal defendant only. Karta Das Mahunt v. Lekhranj and others. 5th Feb. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 266.—H. Shakespear & Ratray.

111. Where the original notice of appeal had been mislaid, the Court directed renewal, and the respondent was allowed to appear and defend after proceedings had in the appeal ex-parte. Ib.

112. One Judge decided finally a special appeal admitted by another, though he did not adopt the legal ground on which the appeal was admitted. Collector of Zillah Chittagong v. Krishn Kishwar. 30th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 331. — Braddon.

113. Two suits having been brought for sums due on the same account, each of which was under Rs. 50,000, or £5000; it was held, that such suits could not be consolidated for the purpose of appeal, though the original severance of them was contrary to the plaintiff's instructions, and the aggregate amount of both exceeded £5000.<sup>1</sup> Moofti Mohommud Ubdoolah v. Babon Mootcheund. 10th Feb. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 363.

114. Held, that in a suit laid at a sum exceeding Rs. 5000, but in which the principal Sudder Ameen gives a decree for a sum less than that amount, the appeal, under Sec. 4. of Act. XXV. of 1837, lies to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and is not cognizable by the Zillah Judge. Rajah Nawul Kishore Singh v. Achumbut Ray and others. 31st March 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 80. — Tucker & Reid.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Where an interlocutory judgment has been entered up at the trial pro formâ for the damages laid in the plaint, subject to the award of an arbitrator; and after such award made for a less sum, the plaintiff obtained a rule to shew cause why the judgment should not be entered up for the sum awarded, with costs; this is sufficient after the expiration of that rule, and judgment entered accordingly, (the defendants having shown no cause, except as to the costs,) to enter final judgment on the roll, and sue out execution, without first giving the common four-day rule for judgment, which the defendant had had the benefit of before the judgment was signed. Hemming v. Kidd and another. 4th Nov. 1817. East's Notes, Case 68.

2. A bill was dismissed, the complainant having incurred a penalty (as stated), i.e. his advance on a contract of purchase of goods for not having completed his purchase in time. After further time, and much negotiation, the complainant left it to the decision of the Governor-General, who decided against him. Held, that he was bound, especially after an acquiescence of several years. Ramrutton Mullick v. The East-India Company. 27th April 1820. East's Notes, Case 118.

3. A plea that the submission to arbitration has been made a rule of Court, and that the bill to set aside the award had not been filed until after the last day of the next term after publication of the award, was held good, although the bill sought to set aside the award on the ground of fraud. Thompson v. Clark. 4th Term 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 60.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Award.

4. In a suit for possession of the endowed lands of a Mohanti, the plaintiff (between whom and the defendant there had been disputes about the right of succession to the late Mohant) was determined by a Panchágit, or assembly of Mohants, convened by order of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, to be the rightful successor, and possession was adjudged to him accordingly. Suruband Purbut v. Deo Sing Purbut. 31st Jan. 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 296.

5. A dispute between two Pársis, respecting their right to certain shares of a house, was referred to arbitration by the Zillah Judge (Bourcier), who decided according to the award, as there was no charge of corruption alleged to bar its confirmation. On appeal to the Provincial Court (Grant and Smith), and to the Sudder Adawlut, it was held, that, under Sec. 20 of Reg. VII. of 1800<sup>1</sup>, the appeal must be dismissed with costs, and the award was confirmed merely as an award, without inquiring into the merits of the decision. Furidoonjee Shapoorjee v. Jumshedjee Nowshirwanjee. 7th April 1811. 1 Borr. 23.—Duncan, Lechnere, & Rickards.

6. Where a Hindú woman, who had become a convert to the Muhammadan faith, sued her husband to recover property which devolved on her at the death of her parents, and a Panchágit had decided that she (previous to her apostacy) had forfeited all claim to the property in question by her profligate conduct, such award was upheld, and her claim dismissed. Mt. Rubbee Koor v. Jemut Ram. 1st April 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 257.—Ker & Oswald.

7. An award of a Panchágit, under the orders of the assistant Collector, not having been observed, the appellant sued to have it enforced; but as the testimony of his witnesses was unsatisfactory, and neither the award nor the Collector's order were forthcoming, his claim was dismissed.<sup>2</sup> Pulla Soury v. Abrama Thaven and others. Case 8 of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 412.—Ogilvie & Gowan.

8. Where arbitrators had made an extra-judicial award of partition amongst brothers, one of the brothers receded from it, and the others insuing claimed their full legal right according to their allegation as to facts. The defendants did not claim the benefit of the award; but the Court adopted the partition proposed by the arbitrators as equitable, and disregarded the rest of the award. Kripa Sandhu Patjoshi and others v. Kanhaya Acharya and others. 31st Dec. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 335.—Braddon & Halled.

9. A, by receding from an award made by arbitrators on his contest with B, to which both at first consented, compelled B to sue for his legal claim. A defended, and B was nonsuited, for some informality, by the lower Court, and instead of appealing sued de novo. The second suit was tried on special appeal by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which decreed the right of B to be according to the award as to part, and more than the award as to part. Ib.

2. Setting aside Awards.

10. In a suit to recover a piece of land, alleged to have been usurped by the defendants as part of their village, it was agreed between the parties that one of the defendants should walk the boundary of the village, and a person was deputed as Ameen to witness the performance of the solemn act. The boundary was accordingly walked in the presence of the Ameen and other persons, and all the ceremonies usual on such occasions were performed. Held, that the parties, having agreed to this mode of settling their dispute, were bound to abide the result. Anon. Case 4 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 84.—Scott, Greenway & Stratton.

11. It was held, that an order by a Zillah Judge for the execution of a private award by arbitrators, is not appealable; but if the parties against whom the arbitrators gave their award are dissatisfied with the decision, they are at liberty to institute a fresh action, with a view to get it set aside, agreeably to the general rules contained in Reg. IV. of 1793, extended to Benares by Reg. VIII. of 1795.<sup>1</sup> Ram Surran v. Sabooddha Misser. 8th Jan. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 4.—Rees & Goud.

12. In a claim for recovery, under an award of private arbitration, of certain shares of the property of the respondents' great uncle from his widow and sister-in-law, and which was resisted after the widow's death by her sister-in-law, on plea of a will by the widow in favour of her son, and of the invalidity of the award; it was held, that the will was void, as the award, being consistent with the law of inheritance, was, as the latest transaction, more valid than former ones; and the award was therefore supported by the decree of the Court. Mt. Umroot v. Kalyan- das and others. 5th July. 1820. 1 Borr. 284.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Colville, Bell, & Prendergast.

13. Where, in a dispute between the first and second wives of a Hindú, deceased (the first claiming from the second, who was childless, the property of their late husband), it was proved that the dispute had been settled by an award of arbitration, and that the first wife had passed a Fá-ríkhkhatt for her share; the Court held, that the Fá-ríkhkhatt was binding against her, and the award valid, and dismissed her claim with all costs. Mt. Nhance Buhin v. Mt. Umroot Buhoo. 23d Jan. 1823. 2 Borr. 59.—Elphinstone & Sutherland.

14. A claiming to set aside an award of arbitration, after a silence of ten years, was nonsuited, as he ought to have instituted a suit under Reg. XLIX. of 1793<sup>2</sup>, immediately on being dispossessed. Muzuffer Ali Khan v. Faheer Chand and others. 22d Mar. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 46.—Smith.

15. An objection having been raised to an award of arbitration, to the effect that one of the two arbitrators appointed had not accompanied the other to the disputed lands for the purpose of local investigation; it was held, that such an objection was not sufficient to invalidate an award of arbitration, which can only be set aside on proof of bribery and corruption. Gource Kaunt Bhattacharje and another v. Kaleperschand Chowdree and another. 5th Feb. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 51.—Stockwell & Master.

16. The award of a Pancháyat, under a mutual and voluntary deed of reference, cannot be set aside, according to the provisions of Reg. VII. of 1827. Geereappa Dessae v. Bishtapa Poojarree. 12th Oct. 1839. Sel. Rep. 223.—Giberne, Pyne & Greenhill.

17. By Sec. 28. of Reg. V. of

1793, an appeal from a decision founded on the award of arbitrators may be admitted, without in the first instance requiring proof of their corruption or partiality.<sup>1</sup> Debeerpurshad Sein v. Indurjeet Sein and others. 19th May 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 288. —Harington & Stuart.

ARMY.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Courts-Martial, 1.

2. Sutler, 12.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY, 14.

<sup>1</sup> It may not be considered of material consequence whether the allegation of corruption or partiality against arbitrators be tried before or after the admission of an appeal from the judgment founded on the award. But it is consonant to general practice, that objections against the grounds of a judicial decision should be tried after admitting an appeal, and it also secures the attendance of the respondent, on notice to him for that purpose previous to the investigation of such objections.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Courts-Martial.

1. By the 3d and 4th Vict. c. 37. s. 9. the Commanders-in-Chief of the several Presidencies have statutory power to institute Courts-Martial to try offences, whether the army be employed in the territories of the Honourable Company or elsewhere. A person, therefore, who belonged to the army of the Bombay Presidency, and was tried by a Court-Martial in Scinde, under the authority of a warrant from the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, and was sentenced to transportation, which sentence was confirmed by the Governor of Scinde, and not the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, was ordered to be discharged from custody. In the matter of Mark Porrett. 13th Mar. 1844. Perry's Notes. Case 13.

2. The Supreme Court has no power to interfere with the sentences of military Courts-Martial legally instituted, and awarding punishments for military offences. Ib.

3. Nor can any informality in the proceedings of Courts-Martial be objected to, or listened to, in the Supreme Court. Ib.

4. The authority to try the soldiers, of a portion of a Presidency army, put under the command of an officer, not a Commander-in-Chief, and sent on service extra fines of any of the Presidencies, can only emanate from one of the three Commanders-in-Chief. Ib.

5. And as such portion of an army is not within the local jurisdiction of any Presidency, the authority of no other Commander-in-Chief but the one of the Presidency to which such portion of an army belongs can be referred to as a legal source for instituting Courts-Martial. Ib.

<sup>3</sup> In consequence of the decision in this case, the late amended India Mutiny Act was immediately passed, but a number of puzzling questions still remain on the subject. Note by Sir E. Perry.

6. If a portion of an army belonging to one Presidency be temporarily placed under the command of the Commander-in-Chief of another, the Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency to which the said portion of an army belongs is the exclusive authority for instituting a Court-Martial for the trial of a soldier in such portion of an army, and not the Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency in which it is serving. Ib.

7. In Sec. 3. of the 3d and 4th Vict. c. 37. the words "under his command," do not refer to the Commander-in-Chief issuing the warrant, but to the officer to whom it is directed. Ib.

8. Semble, The authority to delegate their powers of instituting Courts-Martial, which the Commanders-in-Chief of the three Presidencies possess, depends upon mutual arrangement, and the rules of military etiquette. Ib.

9. Sec. 10 of the 3d and 4th Vict. c. 37. does not apply to Commanders-in-Chief at all, but only refers to those cases wherein Her Majesty is competent to issue a commission or warrant. Ib.

10. The Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's forces in any of the Presidencies holds no warrant from Her Majesty for holding Courts-Martial over the Honourable Company's forces, but only over those of the Crown. Ib.

11. There is nothing in the 3d and 4th Vict. c. 37. to prevent the Commander-in-Chief of a Presidency from delegating the jurisdiction vested in him over the Presidency's army, wherever that army, or a portion of it, goes, to any officer whatever, whether under his command or not. Ib.

2. Sutler.

12. A person who traded and was a resident within the British cantonments at Cawnpore, and dealt in general in European articles, which he principally disposed of to the military stationed there, was held to come within the description of a Sutler, and to be subject to military law. Baile v. Stewart. Circa 1797. 2 Str. 152. (Sup. Cot. Cale.)

13. To justify the imprisonment of a Sutler under the 22d Article of the 11th Section of the Articles of War for the Honourable Company's forces serving in India, the force must be at the time in the field; and such an imprisonment was held not to be justifiable where a force was merely considered as a field force, and though a force ready at all times to take the field upon the shortest notice. Smith v. Gore. 27th Sept. 1811. 2 Str. 142.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

14. Martial law, established under the authority of Government, operates to the exclusion of all other tribunals, and allows of no civil action for acts done or authorized during its continuance. And where the appellant complained of acts which the Court considered were done under certain powers vested in the respondent, by an authority fully competent to the giving thereof, and during the full operation of martial law, the Court held, that the appellant's claim should have been dismissed in the first instance, under Sect. 10. of Reg. II. of 1802, and dismissed the appeal. Veeracethal v. The Sheragunga Zamindar. Case I of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 3. —Oakes, Scott, & Hurdle.

ARREARS OF REVENUE.—See REVENUE, passim; SALE, passim.

ARREST.

1. A person who was subpoenaed to attend at the Examiner's office in Calcutta, from his residence in the Mofussil, having, after he left the office, gone to attend a suit in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in coming from whence he was arrested by process out of the Supreme Court, will not be entitled to be discharged without the Court being satisfied that the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut would have protected him under like circumstances, from an arrest, by their own process. Ex parte Reid. 23d Jan. 1819. East's Notes, Case 95.

2. An arrest on attachment for non-payment of money on an award will be considered an arrest on mesne process. The Queen v. Peer Ally. 17th Feb. 1840. Mor. 306.

3. A defendant indicted for a misdemeanour, and not entering into recognizances, and only traversing the indictment to the next sessions, will not be protected from arrest in coming to Court after the sessions are over for the purpose of entering into recognizances before a Judge in chambers. Ib.

4. A party may be arrested in the verandah of the Court-house while the Court is sitting, but not in the Court itself. Ib.

5. Semble, When a capias has issued, and the defendant has been arrested, the application for his discharge should be to set aside the Judge's order on which the capias issued, and not to set aside the bail-bond and discharge the sureties. Macgregor v. Sheddings. 8th Aug. 1843. 1 Fulton, 216.

ARSON.—See CRIMINAL LAW, 73.

ARTICLES OF WAR.

1. The power of the Crown to make articles of war by the 27th Geo. II. s. 8. is binding upon persons not strictly military. Smith v. Gore. 27th Sept. 1811. 2 Str. 142.

2. To justify the imprisonment of a Sutler under the 22d Article of the 11th Section of the Articles of War for the Company's forces serving in India, the force must be at the time in the field. Ib.

3. Such an imprisonment was not held justifiable where a force was merely considered as a field force, and though a force ready at all times to take the field upon the shortest notice. Ib.

ASSESSMENT.

I. ASSESSMENT UNDER THE 33d GEO. III. c. 52. s. 158.

II. LAND ASSESSMENT.

1. Generally, 3.
2. Fixed Rent, 10.
3. When increased, 12.
4. Measurement, 20.
5. Alteration of Assessment. — See GOVERNOR-GENERAL, 2.

I. ASSESSMENT UNDER THE 33d GEO. III. c. 52. s. 158.

1. If a Justice grant a warrant of distress against a person for the non-payment of his share of the assessment, evidence of non-repairs, &c., in the vicinity of the house of the plaintiff will not sustain trespass by him against the Justice who granted the warrant. Nor can general objections to the assessment be tried in such action. Compton v. Gahagan. 9th April 1812. 2 Str. 161.

2. An assessment of property out of Madras is good, under the 33d Geo. III. if within the limits as settled by the order of the Governor in Council of the 2d November 1798 for the jurisdiction of the Court of the Recorder. Ib.

II. LAND ASSESSMENT.

1. Generally.
3. The annual rent demandable from a dependent Talookdár by the Zamindár should be fixed on a measurement of the lands and estimate of their produce, by deducting 10 per cent. from the produce as the profit of the Talookdár, together with the actual charges of collection, the residue to form the rent demandable by the Zamindár. Buncharund v. Hargopal Bhadery and another. 21st July 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 145. — Harrington & Fombelle.

4. It was held, that in fixing the rent of a dependent Talookdár, the charges of collection and 10 per cent. must be deducted from the actual produce of his lands, as directed by Reg. V. of 1812. Gopce Mohun Thakoor and another v. Radha Mohun Ghose. 20th June 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 17. — Harrington & Fombelle.

5. During the time a certain Pergunnah belonging to Government was held Khás, certain lands were made free of assessment by Lákhiráj sanads duly sanctioned: after this the Pergunnah was sold by auction as a Zamindári, subject to a specific Jama. The purchaser sued Government for a deduction in his Jama, on account of the lands included in the previous grants; but the claim was dismissed, the Jama payable having been distinctly mentioned in the proclamation advertising the sale. Baboo Birj Nath and others v. The Collector of Burdwan. 20th May 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 240. Ker & Oswald.

6. Favourable quit-rents are included in the assets upon which the permanent assessment of every Zamindári was formed. Rajah C. Venkatadry Gopal Jagganadha Rao v. Khajah Shumsooddeen and another. Case 16 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 179. — Scott & Greenway.

7. An engagement having been taken from a landholder in Cuttack to pay so much rent for his Talook in the event of all the lands therein comprised being declared by the result of the suit which he had instituted to be liable to assessment, it was held by the Commissioner, that on a decree to that effect the revenue of such lands should not belong to Government, though exceeding ten Bighás. The decree of the Commissioner was affirmed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. Gungadur Peharee and others v. Harchander Ghose and others. 29th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 253. — Leycester & Dorin.

8. The plaintiffs sued to have two Tarafs re-annexed to their estate, on the plea that they were dependent; but their claim was rejected, on proof that they had been separated before the plaintiff's purchase of the estate, and distinctly assessed by the Collector, and the assessment confirmed by Government. Collector of Zillah Rajshahy v. Rughoonath Nundee and another. 16th August 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 400. — Smith & Martin.

9. In an action between A and B, the issue was, whether a parcel of land claimed by A was his assessed tenure, recorded on the rent-roll of a Government Maháll, or component of the assessed estate of the defendant B. Judgment in the last resort went in favour of B. About seven years therefrom A sued B and the Government to recover back the principal of, and interest on, the assessment of fourteen years which he had paid the Government. By judgment in appeal, B recovered the principal from the Government alone, because, by the judgment in a prior suit, it was established that the Government had received a double assessment on the same land, a plea that the Government was not a party being disregarded. Collector of Zillah Chittagong v. Krishn Kishwar. 30th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 331. — Braddon.

2. Fixed Rent.

10. Where a Zamindár claimed from two Talookdárs a balance for arrears of rent for a certain period, during which the latter were alleged to have paid at too low a rate, the rent of the Talookdárs appearing variable, and there not being settled rates of similar tenures in the Pergunnah according to which it could be determined; it was held, that the rate should be fixed for future years by actual survey, and for past accounts should be settled at the rate so fixed. Bunchamund v. Hargopal Bhadery and another. 21st July 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 145.—Harington & Fombelle.

11. Judgment for the right to hold lands in under-tenure does not necessarily imply the right to hold at a fixed rent. Fiazuddin v. Ray Chander Ray. 17th July 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 46.—Ross & Turnbull.

3. When increased.

12. On a claim being preferred by the respondent, a Talookdār, against the appellants, Zamindārs, to recover an excess of rent levied from his Talook, the claim was disallowed, it appearing that additions had been made to the assessment within the period of twelve years antecedent to the decennial settlement, and there being no mention made of a Mukarrari tenure on his part in any authentic document.<sup>1</sup> Bhebindar Na- raen and another v. Bishennath Rai. 14th Aug. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 100.—H. Colebrooke, Harington, & Fombelle.

13. A claim to hold a Talook at a fixed rent in a Zamindari purchased by the defendant, was adjudged in favour of the plaintiffs, on proof of an Istimrari tenure, and in conformity with Sec. 49. of Reg. VIII. of 1793, by which dependent landholders, Istimrādārs, or tenants at a fixed rent, holding their tenures from Zamindārs, or superior landholders, who have already "held their land at a fixed rent for more than twelve years," were declared "not liable to be assessed with any increase, either by the officers of Government, or by the Zamindār, or other actual proprietor of the land. Chintamunee Mastofee v. Durupnarain Rai. 16th July 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 302.—Harington.

14. The assessment imposed at the time of the decennial settlement on a Talook held under a Jangalhoori tenure, is liable to be enhanced, according to the Pergunnah rates, on a measurement of the lands brought into cultivation. Khaja Arratoon and another v. Doorgapershaud Bhut-tacharjya and others. 18th July 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 34.—Fendall & Goad.

15. A dependent Talook, for which a sanad had been granted by the former proprietor to hold it at a fixed rent, but which was granted within twelve years before the decennial settlement, was held to be liable to increase of assessment by the present proprietor, though not an auction purchaser. Khaja Neekoos Marcar v. Ram Lochan Ghose. 20th March 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 221.—C. Smith & Shakespear.

16. Held, that lands granted by the former Soobadar of Cuttack to a exempted from any increase of the public assessment "all separate Talooks, as well as all lands heretofore paying revenue immediately to Government, which may have been held at a fixed Jama during the last twelve years."

Khandait, or Sirdar of Pyghes, who had held them at one invariable quit rent for more than twelve years before the Company's Government, are not liable to any increase of assessment, although the grant did not specify the terms Mukarrari, Istimrari, or other word signifying perpetuity. Moohammad Ismail Jemadar v. Rajah Babungee Surin. 3d May 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 346. — Ahmuty & Harrington.

17. On a suit by the respondent to be exempted from the demand of increased assessment, his claim was disallowed, on proof that the former Collector had erroneously granted a Zamindari patta, deducting an allowance for Dehyak and Bhuray, which was the right of the Tahsildars alone, and had been resumed on settlement with the proprietors. But the decree providing that no further increase should be demanded, a petition for review was granted, and it was finally decreed that the respondent should not be exempted from the increased demand, but that, if dissatisfied therewith, he might apply for a new settlement. The Collector of Benares on the part of Government v. Baboo Ulrak Sing. 25th June 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 381. — Shakespear & Martin.

18. Lands held at an invariable quit rent by the appellants and their ancestors under Mukarrari pottas for a period of thirty-eight years were held not to be liable to any enhanced assessment, though the grants did not specify that the tenure should be hereditary. Joba Singh and others v. Meer Nujeeb Oollah and others. 29th Nov. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 271. — Ross.

19. An under-tenant of Mâl land in the twenty-four Pergunnahs, repelled the claim of the Talookdar, to levy enhanced rent on his tenure, at the improved Pergunnah rate, by pleading exemption from increase on the rent settled by the government survey and Jamabandi of 1190 B. S. (1783), and continuous payment at that rate. On proof that the local rate had risen, and on defect of proof by the defendant as to the legal fixed character of the rent heretofore paid by him on his tenure, his plea was overruled, and the right of the superior landlord to proceed to assess the tenure at the improved customary rate, under Reg. V. of 1812, awarded. Mt. Deb Rani and others v. Ram Narayan Nâg. 24th March 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 102. — Turnbull & Ross.

4. Measurement.

20. In a suit for the adjustment of the rent of a dependent Talookdar, assessable at the Pergunnah rates, it was determined that the land should be measured with the rod in common use, and assessed according to the rates of a former settlement, inclusive of Abwab and Salami, ordered to be consolidated by Reg. VIII. of 1793, and subject to the customary deductions in favour of the Talookdar. Ramkant Datt and another v. Gholam Nabee Chondree. 10th May 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 55. — H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

21. In the province of Benares the land measure described in Sec. 5. of Reg. II. of 1795 is not restrictive so as to bar reference to any other standard locally current. Nor is the intervention of Amcens and Kauingôs for adjustment of money-rents imperative, particularly since the enactment of Reg. V. and Reg. XVIII. of 1812. *Raghubir Ray v. 2. An attachment was refused to be granted by the Supreme Court against the East-India Company to compel answer to a bill; but a rule to shew cause why a sequestration should not issue to compel an answer to the amended bill of complaint was granted.<sup>1</sup> Keighley and another v. The East-India Company. Hyde's Notes. 19th March 1792. Mor. 269.

3. A rule nisi for a writ of attachment was discharged with costs, for irregularity, because the rule was not served personally. Small v. Sheppard. 30th Oct. 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 268.

4. And though the defendant had moved to enlarge the rule, it was held not to dispense with personal service. Sheriff v. Bonanneyper-saud. 11th March 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 268.

5. To ground an attachment for non-payment of costs there must be a personal service of the order, and a letter of attorney from the party to whom they are payable. Doe dem. Bibee Jamann v. Mirza Ally. 2d Term 1827. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 45.

6. An attachment for want of appearance, issued the same day that the bill had been amended, was held to be irregular. Collypersaud Hazrah v. Mandabchunder Soor. 1st Term 1828. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 46.

7. An attachment for rescuing a prisoner was granted, although the warrant was directed to the person executing it, not in his real name, but in the name by which he was generally known. Ludleymohun Tagore v. Rajessorey Dabey. 27th Jan. 1829. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 49.

8. Writs of attachment and assistance cannot be moved for together. Radanauth Chuckerbutty v. Ber-momoje Dossee. 2 Feb. 1837. Mor. 284.

9. Before an attachment can be moved for, after the death of the attorney of the party against whom the attachment is applied for, an order calling on the party to appoint a new attorney must be obtained, and personally served. This order is obtained by petition. Service by post is not sufficient. Stephen v. Hume. 19th June 1837. 1 Fulton, 73.

10. A writ of assistance may be moved for under equity process Rule 7<sup>1</sup>, before the return of the attachment. Anundharain Ghose v. Bissumber Hoddar. Feb. 1840. Mor. 306.

Ramnarain Mookerjee and others*. 20th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 160.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. What Property may be Attached.

15. The Court declared that a

party was at liberty to attach, under the decree of the Court, whatever property he might point out, such attachment being at his own risk, leaving the persons in whose possession it might be to bring an action in the Civil Court for removal of the attachment. This principle was declared to hold in all executions wherein application was made for an attachment. Maha Lukmee v. The Grandsons of Kripasookul. 29th July 1817. 2 Borr. 510.—Pren-dergast & Sutherland.

16. Where an action was brought to remove an attachment from property which one brother (against whom was an unsatisfied decree) had made over to another brother, under colour of his defraying their mother's funeral expenses, the attachment was confirmed on one-half the property by the Zillah Assistant Judge (Grant); and on appeal to the Judge (Kentish), on the ground that the transaction appeared fraudulent, and that the note upon which the transfer was made was on unstamped paper; this decision was modified by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, according to the opinion of the law officers, and it was ordered that Rs. 10. should be allowed for the mother's funeral expenses, and that the attachment should be raised from certain jewels, part of the property attached, which had not been proved to be part of the ancestral estate. Hurreedass Asaram v. Ghirdhurdass Keruldass. 14th Mar. 1831. Sel. Rep. 43.—Barnard, Anderson & Baillie.

17. Held, that a pension granted by Government is not liable to be attached in satisfaction of a decree of Court, and is payable only to the party to whom the Government may have assigned it. Kadir Alee and others v. Mt. Chowrassee. 6th Feb. 1830. Serajoon-Nissa Khamm, Petitioner. 6th April 1839. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 89.—Reid & Tucker.

18. An attachment cannot be placed on a son's share of ancestral property, specially appropriated for his maintenance, in satisfaction of his father's debts, during the lifetime of the latter. Amrut Row Trimback Peytay v. Trimback Row Amrutay-shwar and others. 19th Sept. 1839. Sel. Rep. 218.—Pyne & Greenhill.

2. Alienation of Property under Attachment.

19. An attachment of lands by the Supreme Court, was pleaded by the purchaser at the Sheriff's sale, against the validity of a mortgage and conditional sale of part of the lands during the attachment. The plea was disallowed, on proof that the Sheriff's sale took place in satisfaction of a different demand, and in execution of a different judgment than that under which the original seizure was made; it not being shewn, also, that any legal attachment by the Supreme Court existed at the time of the mortgage on which a judgment had been obtained in the Zillah Court before the Sheriff's sale. Petamber Ghose v. Ghurceb Ollah. 3d Oct. 1806. I S. D. A. Rep. 167.—H. Colebrooke & Foubelle.

20. But the private sale of a dependent Talook, made by the Zamindar while his Zamindari was under attachment by the Supreme Court, which ended in the public sale of it, was declared invalid against the purchaser at the public sale, though obligatory on the Zamindar or his successor in the event of the public sale being set aside by the Supreme Court.<sup>1</sup> Munroop Rai v. Ramjee

Bunaja and another. 22d Dec. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 172.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle. Pitumber Bhurtacharij v. Ramjee Bunaja. 3d July 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 195.—Harrington & Fombelle.

21. Property belonging to a public defaulter being attached, and about to be sold in satisfaction of the dues of Government, should another person claim the property, it is sufficient that, previous to the sale, a summary inquiry be made into the merits of the claim. A formal inquiry is not in the first instance necessary. But it is at the option of the claimant to institute subsequently a regular suit; and if his title be proved, the sale will be void, and the property adjudged to him with costs. Valcet of Government and others v. Mt. Kishoree. 25th Sept. 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 162.—Harrington & Ker.

22. The same rule holds good with regard to property under attachment, and about to be sold in satisfaction of a decree. Ib.

23. Where A sued for the removal of the attachment of a judgment creditor, on the ground that the property had been previously made over to him by a deed of transfer, the Court, on evidence, decided that the deed was a fabrication, and ordered the attachment to stand good, decreeing that A should pay costs and interest at 12 per cent., on the amount to be recovered on the sale of the attached property, from the date on which A sued to have the attachment removed. Deoshankur Ramanand v. Kaseeram Juganund. 3d July 1823. 2 Borr. 534.—Romer, Sutherland & Ironside.

24. The heirs of a person deceased cannot alienate property by sale while there is an unsatisfied decree pending against the deceased. And where a person purchased property from the heirs of a deceased against whom there was an unsatisfied decree pending, and for which such property had been attached, the right of the purchaser was held to be subservient to the attachment, which was decreed to remain in full force until such decree should be satisfied from the property attached, or in any other way the heirs might prefer. Luggah Pattajee v. Trimbuch Herjee. 4th May 1830. Sel. Rep. 33.

25. Where A sued his brother B for the half of the expenses incurred by their father in B's marriage, and obtained a decree in his favour, in satisfaction of which he attached certain property belonging to his brother B, who had previously died; C sued to remove this attachment, on the ground that the son of B had made over the property so attached to him in San Gerania; it was held, that B's property was answerable; and the San Gerania bond having been passed long since the decree under which the property was attached, the alienation of such property by the son of B under it, whilst such a demand remained unsatisfied, was held to be invalid. Dianna Enderjee v. Narotom Peetamber. 5th June 1830. Sel. Rep. 34.

26. Where a Hindú had an interest in a moiety of a house (ancestral property) alienated by his father with his consent; it was held, that such alienation was invalid, there being a judgment remaining unsatisfied against him; and an attachment placed on the house under such judgment was held to be good. Duggashunker Kaseeram v. Brijendabih Motheerchand. 13th Aug. 1830. Sel. Rep. 41.

27. Where, in a suit to raise an attachment from off a part of a house, the house had been sold under the attachment which should have been levied on the shares of two persons only; it was held, that the sale was void, and should be annulled, with power to resell the two shares to which the attachment should have been confined. Luxmcedas Lalidas v. Mt. Hafizboo and another. 24th March 1831. Sel. Rep. 48.—Bar-nard, Anderson, & Baillic.

3. Erroneous Attachment.

28. A Zamindār is entitled to compensation for any loss actually sustained by him in consequence of an erroneous attachment of his Zamindārī by the Collector, however unintentional it may be. Sree Rajah Roydappa Runga Rao Bahadoor v. Heirs of Smith. Case 12 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 480.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

29. Where A sought to recover damages, laid at Rs. 1515. 2. 85, on account of an attachment levied upon his property in pursuance of a judgment given in the Zillah Court, which was afterwards reversed in the Sudder Adawlut, the Zillah Court adjudged damages to the amount of Rs. 30. On appeal, the Sudder Court held that damages were recoverable; and considering that the extent of damage had not been properly investigated, referred the case back to the Zillah Court, with directions to assemble a Panchāyit to assess the damages; and the latter awarded Rs. 154. This award was affirmed by the Court, with one-tenth of the costs of the whole suit, and the Panchāyit's expenses, leaving the remaining nine-tenths of the costs to be discharged by A. Sallekhan v. Dayamkan. 25th Feb. 1830. Sel. Rep. 31.

30. Where A claimed an Inaām village, and eleven years' produce thereof, granted to A by the late Peshwa, and attached before the commencement of the British rule by the farmer of the province, he, as asserted, not having authority for the act, the question at issue being on the validity, or otherwise, of the resumption of the village as the act of the Peshwa's government; it was held, that the farmer was not proved to be a competent authority to attach the village; and the same was ordered to be restored to A. The claim for eleven years' revenue was considered as a money debt, and unsustainable under Sec. 3. of Reg. V. of 1827; and six years' produce was awarded, in conformity with the pro-

4. Practice on.

31. The Zillah Judge having applied to the Court of Appeal to know whether a search warrant might be granted to a party who had made application for an attachment, the Court gave its opinion, that a search warrant could not be granted in civil process; but it was not considered objectionable that property should be attached in the presence of a civil officer under the Judge's instructions, when pointed out by the party claiming the same at his risk. Muhu Lakmee v. Grandsons of Kripashookul. 19th July 1817. 2 Borr. 510.—Prendergast & Sutherland.

32. A suit for the removal of an attachment must be laid in the amount of that decree under which the attachment issued. Ichhashunkur Sheeshunkur v. Mt. Beejeebahoo 22d Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 469.—Sutherland & Ironside.

ĀTISH BAHIRĀM.

1. Certain Pārsis of the Rasmī sect sued others of the Kadīmī sect to prevent the building of an Ātish Bahirām, or fire temple, by one of the latter; the Rasmīs affirming that only one Ātish Bahirām could, by their laws, exist in one place; and that they made their vow to build one before the Kadīmīs did. The Rasmīs failing to prove the fact that more than one temple was not allowed in the same city, it was settled by arbitration, under the directions of the sitting Judge, that both parties should be at liberty to build temples, the Rasmīs being allowed to consecrate theirs first, and the Kadīmīs theirs at

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Appointment and Admission of.

1. The appointment of the Company's attorney must be made by motion in the Supreme Court, that the appointment be filed by the Keeper of the Records: this motion will be minuted in all the offices, and then the appointment must be filed by the Keeper of the Records, and kept by him among the records of the Court. In the matter of Polfrey. Hyde's Notes, 23d Oct. 1780. Mor. 265.

2. The Supreme Court at Bombay has no power to admit persons as attornies and solicitors to practice in the Courts there, except as are qualified in the manner pointed out by the Bombay Charter and Letters Patent of 1823 establishing the Court; viz. those who have been admitted attornies or solicitors in one of the Courts at Westminster, or were practising in the Recorder's Court at Bombay at the time of the publication of that Charter.<sup>1</sup> Morgan v. Lecch. 12th Feb. 1841. 3 Moore, 368.

2. Privilege of Attornies.

3. The Court refused to enter an

4. Where an attorney of the Supreme Court had been sued in the Petty Court, and moved for a certiorari to remove the proceedings into the Supreme Court on his privilege of an attorney, in analogy to the privilege of attornies to the Superior Courts at Westminster, the Court agreed, that no such privilege existed in the case of the officers of the Court, and could not therefore be recognized; as the Judges alone are, by the Charter, exempted from arrest in civil suits, and no other exemption is made.<sup>2</sup> Burne v. Trebeck. 29th Oct. 1821. East's Notes. Case 29.

3. Bill of Costs.

5. The 76th Plea Rule, which requires an attorney to deliver in his bill to the client before any demand be made for the amount, is not satisfied by leaving the bill taxed with the client for a few hours, and then taking it back again; for delivering in means a delivery to and a resting with, in order that the client may be enabled to have full consideration of the items, and to take advice up to the period of the settlement.<sup>3</sup> Comberbatch v. Kistopreak Dossee. 9th Nov. 1816. East's Notes. Case 56.

6. A rule to retax an attorney's bill must be a rule nisi. Ramrutton Mullick v. Tarrachund Doss. 4th June 1825. Cl. R. 1829. 244.

<sup>2</sup> Per Curiam; "It is only in matters of mere practice that we are to follow the Court of King's Bench when we have no different rule of our own. This decision does not preclude the Court from granting a certiorari to remove any cause out of the inferior Court upon any proper ground, on the application of an attorney.

It not being shewn that the injurious acts complained of by the late Avignat Nayr operated in any way to cause damage or pecuniary loss to his successor, it was held, reversing the decree of the Lower Court, that an action could not lie on the part of the successor. *Peratt Nambodry v. ### II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY, 19.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Deposit of money in lieu of Bail.

1. Where money was paid into Court in lieu of bail, it was ordered by the Court, that in future the sum sworn to, and Rs. 500 for costs, should be paid, and not the bailable sum as theretofore. Rajchander Chowdry v. Nobhissore Dutt and others. 18th June 1810. Sm. R. 141.

4. Quere, Whether, after notice to justify bail has been given to the plaintiff, the defendant can abandon his notice, and pay money into Court in lieu of bail, without having previously paid the plaintiff the costs of opposing the justification. Kully Angee and others v. M'Gibbin. 26th June 1844. 1 Fulton, 462.

2. Qualification of Bail.

5. Bail, who are householders in the suburbs of Calcutta, and who live beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, are good bail. Shaik Loodi v. Shaik Punchoo. 30th Jan. 1826. Cl. R. 1829. 227.

3. Notice of Bail.

6. Householder is a sufficient addition in the notice; and a mistake in the notice that the bail was put in before one Judge, when in fact it was put in before another, is not fatal, being cured by putting in the exception. Habberly v. Toulmin. 1st Nov. 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 225.

7. Landholder is not a sufficient description in the notice of bail; and Bow Bazar is an insufficient description of residence of abode. Puresmoney Dossee v. Oddychnurn Mullick. 31st Oct. 1825. Cl. R. 1829. 227.

8. The bail need not point out their property, but the bail must be produced at the time of serving notice to produce them. Two hours after would be bad. Scott v. Gungagovind Bonnerjee. 3d Term 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 226.

9. A defendant, on giving notice to the plaintiff or his attorney of bail put in, may at the same time give two days' notice of justification, without waiting for the expiration of the twelve days allowed for entering exceptions. Notice served on Saturday must be for Tuesday. For added bail there must be three days' notice. Anon. 10th March 1825. Cl. R. 1829. 226.

4. Notice of Justification.

10. Bail attending to justify attending at the rising of the Court according to notice of justification for that day, the notice may be saved till the next day, as they had the whole day to justify. Mudoosoodun Mitter v. Bulram Sill. 28th Jan. 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 227.

11. If notice of justification be given within the twelve days for exception, it does away with the necessity for exception; and after twelve days the defendant cannot, on the ground of no exception entered, obtain his discharge. Hart v. Holmes. 1st Term 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 225.

12. And bail not having attended at the office of the Plaintiff's attorney with the notice of justification cannot justify. Ramdhone Ghose v. Low. 17th Jan. 1825. Cl. R. 1829. 226.

5. Justification of Bail.

13. If bail do not justify within four days after exception entered, of which two days' notice must be given, a sequestration will be regular. Collyersand Sandell v. Mudoosooden Sandell. 24th Jan. 1825. Cl. R. 1829. 226.

14. Bail cannot justify if there have been two or more previous notices of justification, until first paying or securing the costs incurred by such prior notices. The present practice of the Court of King's Bench in England is to be considered the practice of the Supreme Court. Koopchund Day v. Matthews. 8th July 1825. Sm. R. 137. Cl. R. 1834. 43.

2. Where A claimed from B the value of timber alleged to have been his property, sent down to Calcutta for sale on his account, and illegally seized by B, the claim was dismissed, on proof that the timber was provided for B, in pursuance of a contract with C and D; and that A, who was only surety for its conveyance to a certain distance, had no legal right or interest in it after its conveyance to that distance. Heirs of Shamchurn Sing v. Heir of Omur Sing. 5th Aug. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 248. —Harington & Fombelle.

3. Where A, one of three brothers, deposited jewels in the hands of D, with the knowledge of B and C, his elder and younger brothers, and for the general interests of the family, and D established their restitution to B, the elder brother and the head of the family, to the satisfaction of the Court; such restitution was held to be sufficient as against any claim by A and C for the jewels, or their value: such deposit not having been separately made by each brother on their separate accounts, the restoration of the jewels to any one of the brothers was legal. *Totah Rungiah and another v. Where A had consigned a sum of money to Poona through the hands of B, which the latter had failed to deliver, alleging that the persons to whom he had entrusted the money were attacked by thieves on the road, and a portion of the money stolen; it was held, that the owner was subject to loss from robbery when re-mitting money; but as in this case the robbery had not been established by B, and he having acknowledged the receipt of Rs. 1501, he was responsible for the loss. Semlal Oodakishun v. Nainsook Soobaram. 11th April 1839. Sel. Rep. 196.—Bell, Giberne, & Pyne.

1. Where A purchased at a public sale a portion of a Zamindári, and B purchased another portion, besides the Bankar of the whole estate; it was held, that the Bankar purchase made by B conveyed to him a right over all the forest timber, though growing in the portion purchased by A, but that no right to the land on which the trees grew was conveyed by the sale of Bankar: that A, as purchaser of the soil, should enjoy its produce when cultivated; and that B should remain in undisturbed possession of the profits arising from the forests. By agreement of the parties, it was further ordered, that B should not obstruct A in clearing away the forest lands, but should possess the timber when felled; and that in the event of A's wantonly cutting down any trees without being able afterwards to cultivate the land, he should make good to B whatever loss might be thereby sustained. *Byjnauth Muzmoodar v. ### BANKRUPT.

1. A plea of a certificate under a commission of bankruptcy in England was held on demurrer to be no bar to an action of debt on bond in India. Wilson v. Smith. Hyde's Notes. 16th March 1785. Mor. 365.

2. And it was held to be no defence to an action for a debt on a bill of exchange incurred in India previously to such bankruptcy and certificate. Richardson v. Betham. 26th Nov. 1820. East's Notes. Case 89.

3. But these cases were afterwards overruled; and it was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that a certificate of conformity, obtained under a commission of bankrupt in England, is a bar to an action for a debt contracted by the bankrupt at Calcutta previously to his bankruptcy, although the creditor had no notice of the commission, and was resident at Calcutta. Edwards v. Ronald and others. 5th March 1830. 1 Knapp, 259.

4. A deed of assignment executed for the benefit of the creditors generally, though made pendente lite, was held to be valid, and not affected by a judgment obtained two days afterwards. Johnston v. Morris. Hyde's Notes. Chamb. Notes, 23d July 1787. Mor. 357.

5. An assignment of all a trader's effects to a particular creditor for the payment of his claim first, and then for the benefit of the rest, was held not to be avoided by the 13th Eliz. c. 5. (though some of the creditors dissented, and the assignment would have been an act of bankruptcy in England), the assignment being open and bona fide, for an undoubted consideration. Candler and another v. Morris. Chamb. Notes, 11th Dec. 1787. Mor. 359.

6. It was established, that an assignment under a lawful adjudication of bankruptcy in the country where a bankrupt is domiciled, binds his property and rights everywhere; and therefore property of a bankrupt in India would pass to the assignee in England.<sup>1</sup> Wyatt v. Rooploft Mullick. 5th Feb. 1834. Cl. R. 1834. 151. Mor. 367.

7. And that though the commission of bankruptcy and adjudication be fully proved, the validity of the adjudication, and consequently of the assignment, is triable in India. In an action brought by the assignee, the petitioning creditor's debt, the trading and act of bankruptcy, may be brought into question, notwithstanding the adjudication; and the commission is disregarded if it has issued on insufficient evidence. Ib.

8. The principle that one creditor shall not take a part of the fund which otherwise would have been available for the payment of all creditors, and at the same time be allowed to come in pari passu with the other creditors, for satisfaction out of the remainder of that fund, does not apply where that creditor obtains, by his diligence, something which did not, and could not, form a part of that fund. Cockrell and others v. Dickens. 24th Feb. 1840. 3 Moore, 98. 2 Moore Ind. App. 353.

8 a. The Orphan Chamber of Batavia being the executors of a foreign creditor in the Island of Java, by their agent in Calcutta proved the amount of their whole debt against the estate of A & Co., who had been declared insolvents under the Indian Insolvent Act, 9th Geo. IV. c. 73; and after making such proof, and receiving the dividends upon the whole debt, instituted a suit in the Island of Java, to recover a plantation or estate there held by one of the insolvents, as trustee for the firm of A & Co. and B in equal shares, to which suit the assignees of the insolvent appeared as defendants; but judgment was given in favour of the creditor, for the sale of the estate for his benefit, the proceeds of which amounted to three-fifths of his whole debt. The assignees of A & Co. filed a bill on the equity side of the Supreme Court at Calcutta against the agent of the foreign creditor, resident within the jurisdiction, praying that the dividends might be refunded, and that the defendants might be restrained, by injunction, from receiving any further dividends until all the other creditors were put on an equal footing with the creditor at Java. The defendant demurred, and obtained judgment against the assignees. It was held, on appeal, by the Judicial Committee, that the estate in Java, not passing to the assignees under the assignment, did not form any part of the fund that was available for the benefit of the several creditors, and that the creditor was therefore not bound to refund the dividends, nor ought to be prevented from receiving any future dividends, provided he did not receive more than twenty shillings in the pound upon his whole debt. But the bill having stated that the creditor had also instituted proceedings against certain debtors of the insolvents at Bencoolen, whose debts passed under the assignment; it was held, that the assignees were entitled, under the prayer for general relief, to an injunction to stay the receipt of further dividends until the proceedings at Bencoolen were abandoned. Ib.

9. Assumpsit, by the surviving assignee of a bankrupt, under an English commission, against a debtor, a native of India, and resident within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Calcutta: plea that the defendant had not undertaken, or promised in the manner or form as the plaintiff, assignee as aforesaid, had complained against him. Two days after issue joined the defendant gave notice that he intended to dispute the trading, the petitioning creditor's debt, and bankruptcy. At the trial, copies of the proceeding in the Bankruptcy Court, the commission, adjudication, and assignment to the plaintiff and his co-assignee, which purported to be certified by the Clerk of the enrolments, and to be under the seal of the Court of Bankruptcy in England, pursuant to the 2d and 3d Will. IV. c. 114. s. 9., were given in evidence, but no proof was given that these copies were authentic, nor was the seal proved to be that of the Court of Bankruptcy in England. A verdict was given for the plaintiff, liberty being reserved for the defendant to move for a nonsuit. A rule nisi was afterwards granted, and, after argument, made absolute, and the verdict set aside, and judgment of nonsuit entered for the defendant, on the ground that there was no evidence of an act of bankruptcy, of trading subsequent to the passing of the 6th Geo. IV. c. 16, and that neither that Act, nor the 2d and 3d Will. IV. c. 114. extended to India. It was held, on appeal, affirming the judgment of the Court below, 1st, That the plea of non-assumpsit put the bankruptcy and assignment at issue sufficiently without any notice; 2dly, That the form of the plea, "Assignee as afore-said," was not an admission of the plaintiff's title as assignee of the bankrupt, but only used in reference to the description the plaintiff had given of himself in the declaration; 3dly, that the Statutes 6th Geo. IV. c. 16., and the 2d and 3d Will. IV. c. 114., made to facilitate the proof of bankruptcy and assignment in England, did not extend to the Courts of India; and that in these Courts such evidence of bankruptcy must be given as would have been required to prove the fact if no statutory regulations had been made.<sup>1</sup> *Clark v. 1. A writ of habeas corpus will be granted to the mother of an illegitimate infant, to obtain possession of it, it being in the custody of its putative father, where there appear no circumstances to controul the right of custody. The King v. Nagapen. 3d May 1814. 2 Str. 253.

1 a. But it is in the discretion of the Supreme Court to give or refuse to its mother the possession of an illegitimate infant; and in the exercise of this discretion the interest and benefit of the child will be principally regarded. Ex-parte Intiazoon Nissa Begum. 14th Sept. 1814. 2 Str. 271.

2. The fact of a father and mother of illegitimate children conveying each his and her own estate, by separate instruments, to trustees for the benefit of the children, will not (although the one was considered to be in consideration of the other) make such conveyances good against creceive, as part of the law, upon which the existence and validity of such contract and assignment rests, the law of that foreign country, regarding the evidence by which that existence and validity might be there sufficiently proved. And therefore a question would arise, whether the statutes in question, though not binding here as laws, ought not to be received here as the leges loci contractus to determine the evidence which is admissible to prove the assignment."

<sup>1</sup> Grant, J., in delivering his judgment in the Supreme Court at Calcutta in this case, said, "But it is a different question whether, by the principles of international law, when we give effect to a contract or assignment made in a foreign country, according to the laws of that country, we are not bound to ditors or subsequent purchasers for a valuable consideration: still less if the deed of the natural and reputed father be stated to be made in consideration "of natural love and affection," and of a nominal sum of Rs. 5, not noticing the other conveyance, except by stating that his deed was by way of part provision for the children. *Rajnarain Ghose v. 2a. A claim to recover a Birt tenure, on the plea that, as there was no specification thereof in the bill of sale, it was not included in the assets of an estate sold by order of the Supreme Court, was dismissed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on the ground of the bill of sale plainly stating that all the lands, both Khirāj and Lā-khirāj, included in the said estate, together with all the right, title, and interest of the proprietor therein, were thereby conveyed to the purchasers. *Kishanmohun Bunhoojee and others v. ### I. MUHAMMADAN LAW.

1. By the Muhammadan law every bill of exchange imports a command to the drawee to pay; and his acceptance is not only an admission of effects or money in his hands to pay, but also an undertaking by the acceptor, as well with respect to the drawer, as the payee, to pay the bill. Agha Mohammed Mahadustee v. Sait Gopal Doss Mookhondoss. Case 5 of 1805. 1 Mad. Dec. 1.— Lord W. Bentinck & Hurdiss.

2. The drawer of a bill of exchange accepted by the drawee can only become responsible for payment thereof in one of two cases; viz. if he had entered into an agreement to pay, in the event of payment being refused by the acceptor, or if the acceptor had died insolvent. Ib.

3. By the custom of merchants, though the indorsee of a bill of exchange was dead at the time it was indorsed to him, his legal representatives are entitled to recover the amount. Kurrimoollah Khan and others v. Hutton and others. 8th July 1819. East's Notes. Case 101.

4. And the heirs of a Musulmán deceased may sue on a bill of exchange indorsed to him, though the deceased should have made a will appointing an executor, or gave verbal directions to others to collect his debts, &c., and pay over the amount to his widow. Such executor cannot sue in his own name, but an action may be brought by a creditor of the deceased. Ib.

II. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

5. Where the consideration of a promissory note was stated to be Rs. 1700, which, in fact, was only paid with government paper of that nominal value, but which was then at a considerable discount in the market, the Court only suffered the plaintiff to recover the amount minus the discount. Gooroopersaud Bose v. Habberly. 31st Mar. 1815. East's Notes. Case 32.

6. It was held, that a Hindú eldest son, the manager of the family, might, after his father's death, sue alone for a debt due on a promissory note to the father without joining an infant brother. Govindchund Sein v. Simpson. 20th April 1820. East's Notes. Case 119.

7. Where re-exchange is allowed, the rate of it must be the same as that at which private bills can be drawn. Hastie v. Members of the Indemnity Insurance Office. July 1843. 1 Fulton, 213.

III. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

8. In a suit to recover a debt on a promissory note, under seal, due to the appellants by the respondent's father (the respondent being his daughter and heiress), commenced more than twelve years after the debt was contracted, it was held, that the debt was not affected by the Statute of Limitations, Sec. 13. of Reg. I. of 1800<sup>1</sup>, on the ground that, as the respondent had received credit within the twelve years from the appellants for a bill of exchange drawn upon them in her favour, by an Armenian merchant, the claim of the appellants became thereby cognizable, the credit given to the respondent for the bill of exchange being considered as an acknowledgment of the debt on her part. Jacob Johannes v. Mukia Khatoon. 27th Nov. 1815. 1 Borr. 253.—Sir E. Nepean & Bell.

9. Where the daughter and heiress of a person who gave a promissory note passed more than twelve years previously, but which she had afterwards acknowledged by allowing herself to be credited by the payees of the note for the amount of a bill of exchange drawn in her favour upon, and accepted by them, could not prove the payment of the note, she was directed to pay the amount due on it with interest equal to the principal, but deducting from that sum the amount credited to her on the bill of exchange. Mukia Khatoon v. Gregory Johannes and another. 12th May 1819. 1 Borr. 262.—Sir E. Nepean, Bell, Prendergast, & Warden.

10. A, by mistake, having sold to B a promissory note for Rs. 2000 instead of one for Rs. 500, sued him to recover the difference between the two notes. B having sent the note to C, his agent, pleaded ignorance of the mistake, and referred A to C for the difference. It being proved that A had no dealings with C, judgment was given against B, leaving him the option of suing C for the recovery of the difference. Gour Sirdar v. Gossee Dutt. 30th Nov. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 281.—Fendall & Oswald.

2. Drawer and Indorser.

11. A gave a draft in favour of B upon C, who accepted it, and B indorsed it over to D, his creditor, who sued both B and C, and obtained judgment against them, jointly and severally, they being decreed to pay the balance sued for with costs and interest up to the date of the decision. Bhugoo Bhucc Prannulabh v. Kasee Bhucc Khandas. 27th Aug. 1821. 2 Borr. 150.—Elphinston.

3. Actions on.

12. Where the respondents claimed the amount of a bill of exchange, or Khoondi, given on credit to the appellant, the parties who granted the bill having given an acquittance on adjustment of accounts, and no collusion or unfairness in the transaction being shewn, judgment was given against the claim. Jograj Sahoo v. Ramoo Sahoo and another. 12th Sept. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 104.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

13. A bill broker is not liable for the amount of a bill of exchange procured by him in case of its being dishonoured, the loss in such case falling upon the principal who took it up. Nurotum Sheolal v. Roostumjee Nureemunjee. 12th March 1817. 1 Borr. 162. Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, Brown, & Elphinston.

14. A merchant honouring the draft of a constituent in the amount of the drawer's credit in his books, by payment of that amount only, and no more, is not liable for the balance of the draft unpaid, to the person in whose favour it is drawn. Girdharlal Brijlal v. Mihirwanjee and another. 19th July 1821. 2 Borr. 96.—Elphinston & Sutherland.

15. The sellers of a bill of exchange which was not discharged, though accepted by the drawee, were held to be responsible for the amount in the first instance, without reference to the acceptor.<sup>1</sup> Ishree Pershad and another v. Harbans Lal and others. 10th Dec. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 177.—Goad & Dorin.

16. It was held, that the seller of a bill of exchange is answerable for the amount in the first instance when not paid by the drawee; that his having lodged the amount of it in the hands of a banker, on account of the purchaser, without the purchaser's sanction, does not exonerate him; and that his not having received back the bill, or caused it to be cancelled, affords sufficient presumption, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that such sanction was not obtained. Naroopa Naik and another v. Clark. 24th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 248.—Shakespear.

17. It was held, that the negotiator of a forged draft or bill of exchange, receiving the amount thereof, is liable to refund on a suit against him by the drawee; the payees named in the draft being unknown, and the forgery proved. Muggeeram v. Gokul Das and another. 11th Dec. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 290.—Sealy.

BIRT MAHÁBRAHMANÍ.

1. According to the Hindú law, as current in Behár, the Birt Mahábrahmaní, or profits arising from sacrificial fees, cannot be transferred, as the fees which constitute the Birt are only fit to be received by the officiating priests to whom they are offered; and the purpose of the offerings, namely, the spiritual welfare of deceased ancestors, would be defeated by the alienation. Nundram and others v. Kashce Pande and others. 30th June 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 232.—Lyecester & Dorin.

2. Where Birt Mahábrahmaní is held in joint tenancy by several sharers, unless it be divided, no one of the sharers is at liberty to alienate his share without permission of the other sharers. Nundram and others v. Kashce Pande and others. 30th June 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 70.—Harington & Martin.

3. Semble, that if several sharers have possession of Birt Mahábrahmaní, and the *Páreh*s, or divisions into days, are fixed, the interest of the sharers of each Páreh is distinct and separate, so far as relates to the sharers in the remaining *Páreh*s; but so far as relates to the interests of the sharers in each individual Páreh, that individual Páreh is held to be joint and undivided. Ib.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Nature and Validity.

1. Bengal bonds are simple contracts and not specialties. The interest agreed upon, even though more than 12 per cent., will be allowed where the Stat. 13th Geo. III. c. 63. does not apply. Weston and another v. Chaudhrany. Hyde's Notes. 23d Jan. 1778. Mor. 231.

2. A bond for the performance of an agreement affecting the exclusive trade granted to the East-India Company was held to be void under the Stat. 7th Geo. I. c. 21. s. 2. & 21st Geo. III. c. 65. ss. 22 & 30. Horsley v. Perreau and another. Chamb. Notes. 12th July 1791. Mor. 362.

3. A bond given for a corrupt consideration will be cancelled. Park v. Mootiah. 30th April 1799. 1 Str. 3.

4. A bond for appearance taken by the Board of Revenue, applicable to a variety of matters, of the greater part of which the Board had not cognizance, and of which, with respect to some, the complainant had been found entitled to relief, was declared void, and decreed by the Court to be delivered up and cancelled. Vencata Ranga Pillay v. The East-India Company. 26th Sept. 1803. 1 Str. 174.

2. Liability of Obligor.

5. A Hindu is of full age at sixteen years to bind himself by executing a bond. Noooor Bysack v. Gopalchand Seat. Chamb. Notes. 21st Nov. 1788. Mor. 82.

6. The obligor coming into Court with unclean hands, the costs will not be allowed. Vencata Ranga Pillay v. The East-India Company. 26th Sept. 1803. 1 Str. 174.

3. Proceedings on Bond.

7. The prothonotary is authorised by the Court to sign judgment in all cases where a plene administravit or plene administravit præter is pleaded alone, and admitted by the replication in actions of debt on bond. Barretto v. Inglis. 28th June 1811. Cl. R. 1829. 222. Fulton v. Inglis. Ib. Mackintosh v. Inglis. Ib.

8. Where a bond is payable by instalments, breaches need not be stated on the record before issuing the fieri facias, if judgment has been confessed under a warrant of attorney. M'Carthy v. Harrison. 4th Term 1814. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 33.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Nature and Validity.

9. A bond taken from the respondent, a landholder in Zillah Ramghur, was pronounced null and void, as being indirectly in favour of the Divân to the Collector of the Zillah, in opposition to Sec. 2 of Reg. XIX. of 1793, and also as having been obtained by undue influence. Manik- chand Bunoja v. Raja Gooroonaraen. 19th Sept. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 165.—Harrington & Fombelle.

10. Where it appeared by the evidence that the defendant was induced, by threats of violence, to execute a bond, and the plaintiff failed to establish that any consideration was given for it, judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant paying all costs of suit. Venkiah v. Venkatarauze. Case 12 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 24.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

11. A bond not being witnessed, and there being no evidence whatever to prove that it was in the handwriting of the obligor, or that the sum mentioned therein had been received by him; and its execution being, moreover, expressly denied by the heirs of the obligor (the original defendants); the instrument was declared to be invalid, and the Court adjudged the respondents to pay all costs. Vencata Rama Iyen and others v. Vencata Narnappa Chitty and another. Case 11 of 1813. 1 Mad. Dec. 76.—Scott & Greenway.

2. Construction and Operation.

12. A bond having been executed by A, and the amount secured by a mortgage of certain villages to B, and such bond subsequently coming into the possession of C (by an alleged assignment), who sued A for the amount secured and interest, the Court observed that the bond bore no endorsement indicative of the transfer of the property to C, nor was there any evidence to that effect; and his claim was dismissed, notwithstanding that C had received a monthly stipend from A, his relative, which the Court held could not be taken as evidence in favour of the claim, the amount being disproportionate to the rate of interest stipulated in the bond, but could merely be considered as an allowance to a poor relation. Cavoo Boyce v. The Jagheerदार of Arnee. Case 3 of 1810. 1 Mad. Dec. 34.—Scott & Greenway.

13. Where a bond was executed before the 1st of Jan. 1804, bearing interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and subsequently to that period a second bond (the first remaining uncanceled) for the same debt at a higher rate; it was held, that, agreeably to Reg. XXXIV. of 1803, the legal interest was not thereby forfeited. Jeetun Das v. Lal Roodur Partab Singh. 18th June 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 96.—Goad.

14. A claim to recover a debt on bond was rejected, it appearing that the stamped paper on which the bond was executed in the year 1813 was of the kind prescribed for use by Reg. VI. of 1797, which had been altered, by order of the Board of Revenue, in 1801.<sup>1</sup> Bhugoo Sing v. Doonda Sing. 5th April 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 328.—C. Smith & Ahmuty.

15. Where a bond was written on the adjustment of accounts between the parties, a previous bond having been cancelled, and the aggregate amount of the principal, and the legal interest remaining due upon the adjustment consolidated into principal money; it was held that the passing such new bond, after such adjustment, barred all retrospective inquiry, and it was decided to be a valid and just document, and the full amount, with interest, recoverable, under the provisions of Sec. 5. of Reg. I. of 1814.<sup>2</sup> Ramchunder Unoopram v. Bhugwan Mansing. 18th Nov. 1824. Sel. Rep. 12.—Romer, Ironside, & Kentish.

16. Where A brought an action against B to recover on a Samedast-khatt a sum of money, from some land of which A held the title-deeds in deposit, the sum was decreed in A's favour, to be recovered from B personally, and not from the land, as it did not appear, from the terms of the bond, that A had any right to recover from the land, but, on the contrary, from the person of B; and that, as the deeds had been deposited merely as an assurance, and not as a security, they could not be considered to tie up the land as in mortgage, and must be returned whenever B chose to ask for them. Muncharambhace Jugjeerunduss v. Moolu Kutboodeen Hussain and another. 26th Sept. 1838. Sel. Rep. 139.—Greenhill.

17. Quere. Whether a Samedast-khatt, which is in the nature of a bond, is valid if written on unstamped paper? Ib.

18. In the case of a bond or other instrument for the payment of money, the origin of the cause of action is to be reckoned from the date of the money becoming payable.<sup>3</sup> Gunga Sahoo v. Bhookim Misser. 23d Mar. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 77.—Tucker & Reid.

3. Liability of Obligor.

19. Where A claimed from B the principal and interest of a bond debt paid by A's ancestor as surety for the ancestor of B, judgment was given for the balance of the principal proved to be remaining unpaid; but the interest was declared to be forfeited in consequence of being stipulated at more than the legal rate. Rai Balgovind v. Sheikh Gholam Ali. 24th June 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 93.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

20. A instituted a suit against B for the recovery of the principal and interest due on a bond. B admitted the bond, but put in a paper purporting to be an acquittance for the sum in question. The Court, taking into consideration that the validity of the acquittance had been brought in issue before the Court of Circuit, when B had been accused of fabricating the instrument, but had been acquitted, declared it to be valid, as, by the evidence taken on the trial above referred to, the prosecutor had failed to prove the forgery; and the further evidence subsequently produced in the Civil Court to this point was equally unsatisfactory. Talloory Javikarandoo v. Vassereddy Vencata-dry Naid. Case 7 of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 41.—Scott & Greenway.

21. A sold to C, for a certain sum of money, a bond, bearing interest, purporting to be executed by B, a Zamindar, to A, and also a deed, likewise alleged to be executed by B, by which the latter agreed to grant certain lands to A, on the occurrence of a contingency. C sued B for the recovery of the principal sum and interest, and the possession of the lands, the contingency having happened. B resisted the claim, on the ground that the instruments in question were fraudulent fabrications of A. B's signature and seal being admitted by him to be genuine, and as having been affixed by him to a blank bond which he gave to A, the Court, confirming the decrees of the Lower Courts, awarded to C the principal and interest due on the bond, together with the costs of suit; but with regard to the land, the claim of C was dismissed, as the grant agreed upon between A and B was contrary to the Regulations. Rajah Vencata Permal Rauze v. Abbot and another. Case 16 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 66.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

22. A claimed from B a sum of money, due on a bond executed to him by C, for which B was alleged to have made himself responsible. It appeared that there was no evidence to prove that B was justly responsible for the payment, for though B had agreed to discharge the amount, this promise was coupled with certain conditions, with which A refused to comply, and the nature of which would seem to shew that B, so far from agreeing to pay the amount as a debt justly due by him, consented to pay it partly as a means of freeing himself from the importunities of A, and partly as the price of certain papers which, in a moment of confidence, he had entrusted to A, and which he was apprehensive A would use, or had used to his prejudice. Held, therefore, that A had failed, under the circumstances, to substantiate his claim, and he was ordered to pay all costs. Nurab Roostoom Jah v. Meerza Abdool-Wahab. Case 19 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 107.—Scott & Greenway.

23. A claimed a sum of money due on a bond executed to him by B; but it appearing that no consideration had ever been given for the bond, which had been executed with a fraudulent intention, merely to make it appear before the Collector that A had become the creditor of B for the purpose of undertaking the rent of a certain district which the Zamindar wished to resume, and that he had received at the time a counter document from A, which he produced; the Court, in deciding against the claim of A, unadverted upon the disgraceful grounds on which B had resisted the claim. Nurab Roostoom Jah v. Meerza Abdool-Wahab. Case 20 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 112.—Scott & Greenway.

24. Where the principal of a banking house sued to recover a sum of money lent from the funds of the house on a bond executed in favour of the head Gumdashtah, the claim was adjudged. Mt. Seetul Bhao v. Emaum Khan and another. 28th Feb. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 253.—Fendall & Oswald.

25. A lent a sum of money on bond to B, payable in two months, with 1 per cent. per mensem interest; and also two other sums of money on bonds to C, with the like interest, and the principal to be payable on demand. D became surety for the three bonds, and executed deeds accordingly. B and C failed to pay their bond debts, and D refused to fulfil his engagement of responsibility. It appeared, on evidence, that C had acted as the Gumastah of D; and that the latter had, moreover, executed a Karārnāmah, by which he became surety for the two bonds of C. It was held, that though, according to the Muhammadan law, A could not recover under the security deeds, either originally or finally; yet as the Karārnāmah clearly shewed that D looked upon himself as responsible for the bonds of C, no question to the law officer was necessary regarding security; and D was accordingly decreed to pay the same, with interest from the date of the decree of the Lower Court at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem. Nabob Roostoomjeh Bahadur v. Aga Mahammad Ebrahim. Case 10 of 1818. 1 Mad. Dec. 207.—Harris & Cherry.

26. Where the obligor in a bond refused payment on the ground that the dates of the bond were inaccurate, and that the document was a forgery, and failed to prove such to be the case, the Court gave judgment that he should pay its amount, with interest up to the day of payment, and costs. Sheodas Kishundas v. Jaggerram Nandram. 20th June 1820. 2 Borr. 99.—Romer & Ironside.

27. Where a suit was instituted against the head partner in a firm for the recovery of the amount of a bond in the name of the firm itself; under the circumstances, the debt being found to be just, the Court gave a decree against the firm; but remarked, that as the bond was in the name of the firm, which was not bankrupt, the action should have been entered in the name of it, and not in that of the head partner; and that the Court below should have dismissed the case, leaving the complainants to their fresh action against the firm. Damodhur Bindrabai v.

Moolchand Govardhun. 11th March 1822. 2 Borr. 207.—Sutherland.

28. Where the heirs of a Hindú, deceased, refused payment of a bond contracted by his widow (also dead), it being proved that part of the amount was expended by the widow in payment of her husband's debts, it was held that the heirs were liable for so much of the amount as had been so laid out, but that the widow could not saddle the estate, or heirs, with unnecessary burthens. Umrotram Byrajee v. Naragundas Raschidas. 9th April 1822. 2 Borr. 201.—Romer.

29. Where, in a claim for the recovery of a sum of money on a bond, it appeared that the bond had been given in lieu of principal and interest due on two former bonds, which were executed in favour of the plaintiff while he was acting as Mukhtár and guardian of the parties bound by them, and the third bond being also executed under similar circumstances, the Court rejected the claim. Baboo Ram Ghose v. Kallee Pershad Ghose and another. 9th Feb. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 17.—C. Smith.

4. Proceedings on Bond.

30. A executed a security bond to B, agreeing to pay, within a month from its date, the amount of a decree then already passed against B's debtor. The Court of Appeal ruled that B must recover by action at law, because the term specified in the security bond had long expired. B sued, proved the bond, and got a decree for the principal; but the Court would not allow interest on the amount, as, if B incurred any loss by this, it was his own fault, for the intervening period during which he had been kept out of his property had elapsed from his own negligence in not suing either the principal or his security. Dada Bhuee Suhoorajee v. Dhoolubh Deochund. 30th Aug. 1821. 2 Borr. 119.—Elphinston, Sutherland, & Ironside.

31. A person bringing an action against one of four parties, who passed a bond to him, instead of against all, was nonsuited, leave being reserved to him to sue them all in a fresh action. Mooljee Kameshwar v. Bhugwandas Wullabhdas. 14th Aug. 1823. 2 Borr. 595.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

BRITISH SUBJECT.

I. WHAT CONSTITUTES A BRITISH SUBJECT, 1.

<sup>1</sup> Mr. L. Clarke, in a note to his Edition of the 9th Geo. IV. c. 33. (page 111), says: "According to one opinion, all persons born within the Company's territories are British subjects. This opinion is founded on the supposition that these territories are British Colonies, and stand in the same situation as the Island of Bombay, the Canadas, the Cape of Good Hope, or any other Colony which has been acquired by conquest or ceded by treaty. According to another opinion, those persons only are British subjects who are natives, or the legitimate descendants of natives of the United Kingdom, or the Colonies, which are admitted to be annexed to the Crown. A third opinion considers Christianity to be a test of an individual being a British subject, provided that the person was born in the Company's territories; and according to this an Armenian, or the illegitimate offspring (being a Christian) of English and native parents, would be a British subject. Nothing positive can be gathered from any of the Acts of Parliament, excepting that the 9th Geo. IV. c. 33. appears to negative the position that Muhammadans and Hindús are British subjects; and the Jury Act, 7th Geo. IV. c. 37, seems to be equally opposed to any persons being British subjects

II. JURISDICTION AS TO BRITISH SUBJECTS. — See JURISDICTION, 100 et seq.

III. RIGHT TO THE BENEFIT OF THE ENGLISH LAW. — See PRACTICE, 19, 22.

I. WHAT CONSTITUTES A BRITISH SUBJECT.

1. A native Christian, born of a native Musulmán woman, and the illegitimate son of a British father, is not a British subject within the meaning of the term as used in the Charter and in the various Acts of Parliament. Byjenant Sing v. Reed and others. 21st June 1821. East's Notes, Case 26.

2. Semble, Hindús, &c. born within the limits of Calcutta, though resident out of it, are British subjects. Assignees of Boyd v. Maurel. 14th June 1844. 1 Fulton, 455.

3. A person does not become a British subject, within the terms of the Charter, who becomes such by conquest merely, and has no rights of a natural-born subject. Ib.

BROKER.—See AGENT AND PRINCIPAL, 16, 17; BILLS AND NOTES, 13; CONTRACT, 8, 9.

BROKERAGE.

1. Brokerage was held to be a remuneration for personal service, which ought to have been paid at the time but natives, or the legitimate descendants of natives of the United Kingdom or its acknowledged Colonies." There is no doubt but that, under the 9th Geo. IV. c. 33, Muhammadans and Hindús are not British subjects. See, relative to the words "British subjects," the Fifth Appendix to the Third Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1831, pp. 1114, 1142, 1146 et seq. 1168, 1178, 1229. 4<sup>o</sup>. such service was performed, or, on failure, demanded through some judicial proceeding; and where the debt for brokerage had been allowed to lie over for a considerable term, a claim for interest was disallowed, as contrary to the equity which should govern the settlement of a claim for remuneration on account of personal services. *Mihirmanjee v. ## CAST.<sup>1</sup>

I. LOSS OF CAST, 1.

II. LAWS AND PRIVILEGES, 16.

I. LOSS OF CAST.

1. Where a Cast (Ahmadábádí Bísá Khandaita Banyans) had drawn up and signed a Bandobast, or set of bye-laws, registered in the Adawlut, and one of the members who had not signed the Bandobast acted in contradiction to the provisions contained in it, he was temporarily excommunicated by the Cast; and on suing for damages was recommended by the Court to sign the Bandobast, in token of consenting to abide by it. This he agreed to do; and the Court decided that, on his signing, he should be restored within one month to his full privileges, or that the other members of the Cast, who then agreed to this arrangement, should pay the damages sued for, for his loss of Cast. Shumbhoodas Race- chund v. Dhoolubh Poorshotum and others. 1st Sept. 1808. 1 Borr. 347.—Grant & Smith.

<sup>1</sup> Originally there were but four Casts; viz. the Brahman, the Kshatriya, the Vaisya, and the Súdra; the Kshatriya, and the Vaisya, and perhaps even the Súdra, are alleged by the Brahmans to be extinct. At the present day these are replaced by a multitude of mixed Casts, who maintain their divisions with great strictness, and abide by certain laws and regulations fixed by themselves. These mixed Casts, in many cases, coincide with trades which, in all towns, are held together as Jamaát, or companies, under hereditary chiefs, who, with a Council, or Panchájit, settle all disputes among themselves, including those of Cast: this, however, appears to apply to trades carried on in a common locality; and it does not follow that a goldsmith of one city would acknowledge common Cast with a goldsmith of any other. Under these circumstances I have arranged all the cases which relate to Cast and manufacturing companies, or crafts, under the head of Cast, though it must not be inferred that the terms Cast and Jamaát are synonymous, but merely that community of Cast and community of occupation generally go together: it is even a possible case that all the members of a Jamaát might not be exactly of the same Cast.

2. A member of a Cast (goldsmiths) being publicly accused by another of having forfeited his right of eating with the Cast, it was held that the Cast, as a body, were justified in avoiding communication with him until he should have cleared himself from the charge, and that the members, as a body, could not be considered responsible to him. The Court, however, decreed that he might file his action for defamation against his accuser. Bhugwan Koober v. Hansjee Nattru and others. 9th Jan. 1811. 1 Borr. 363.—Crow & Day.

3. The husband of a woman having accused her of a criminal intercourse with a Pársí, she and her mother, a widow, who lived with her, were avoided by the Cast (the Morh Brahmans), and the widow instituted a suit for damages for expulsion from Cast. The Court held, that although the fact of adultery had not been proved, considerable suspicion attached to the daughter; and as the very suspicion of a Brahman woman in such a case was naturally revolting to Brahmans, the Cast were justified in avoiding intercourse with her and her family; and that her remedy lay in an action against her husband, by which her guilt or innocence might be determined. Deekoonmur v. Ichharam and another. 14th Aug. 1811. 1 Borr. 368.—Crow & Day.

4. Accordingly, the widow instituted a suit against the husband, who retracted his accusation, but it being proved, by the acknowledgment of the wife, that she had been guilty of conduct sufficient to justify her expulsion from the Cast, and it being clear that the husband was lying, in order to get himself and family re-admitted, the suit was dismissed under the circumstances. Deekoonmur v. Umbaram Lala. 14th Aug. 1811. 1 Borr. 370.—Crow, Day, & Romer.

5. Absolution of an excommunicated member of a Cast (Bhatiya Lo-hana) by a person claiming to be Seth, was set aside on proof that the Setheeu-ship did not vest in him, and his authority was therefore not sufficient to annul the act of excommunication. Lalsoondur and others v. Sumbhoo Narayundas Seth and others. 5th Sept. 1811. 1 Borr. 378.—Crow & Romer.

6. Held, on a reference to the whole Cast, that damages could not be recovered where the whole Cast concurred in the expulsion of a member; and the Court decreed that the members of a Cast possess the right of expelling a member, except where it is done from purely malicious motives. And the respondent was ordered to refund sums of money received in damages and costs in the Lower Courts, and referred to his Cast under an award given by the heads of the Cast at Ahmadábád, to whom the Court had referred the final decision of the respondent's claim. Khooshalchund Goolabchund v. Hurruckchund Moteerchund. 4th Nov. 1811. 1 Borr. 38.—Brown, Abercrombie, & Elphinston.

6 a. A Rajpoot brought an action for damages for expulsion from Cast for not performing his aunt's funeral ceremonies; and it was decreed that he should be re-admitted into the Cast when he had performed the ceremonies, but not before. Ghelajee Nana Bhace v. Umr Singh and others. 19th Feb. 1812. 1 Borr. 389.—Crow & Day.

7. In the Lohar Cast it is the custom to allow a man to marry a second wife, when the first has reached her fortieth year without bearing children, but only with the first wife's consent; and a man marrying a second wife, against the wishes of the first, was expelled from the Cast, and the expulsion was confirmed by the Court. Rugoonath Jetha v. Poorshootum Sunkur and others. 6th Feb. 1813. 1 Borr. 398.—Crow & Day.

8. A Hindú cohabiting with a Muhammadan woman was held to be subject to the penalty of irrevocable expulsion from his Cast, and by such expulsion to lose his right to hereditary succession. Sheonauth Rai v. Mt. Dayamyce Chowdrain. 17th March 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 108.—Rees.

9. A woman introduced by marriage to the Cast (Śrīmālī Brahmans), and admitted, when she was, in fact, of an inferior Cast, was held to be liable to expulsion from the Cast; but as she had lived five years as a member of the Cast, and had been put to the expense of giving them two dinners for admission, the Court granted the damages she sued for on account of expulsion; her claim for re-admission was, however, disallowed. Nhanee v. Hureeram Dhoolabh and the Cast of Srceemalre Brahmans. 20th May 1814. 1 Borr. 84.—Duncan.

10. Certain parties suing for damages for expulsion from their Cast (Koondecgur) were nonsuited on proof that they had not conformed to the custom of the trade, by paying certain admission-fees, and that, therefore, they had never been regularly admitted as members of the Jamaat. Bunmalee Sheolal and others v. Bhikha Vence and others. 4th March 1819. 1 Borr. 420.—Romer & Sutherland.

11. A Hindú sued certain members of his Cast (Banyans) for damages for expulsion from the Cast, caused by their having spread a report that he had had connection with a low Cast woman. Damages were given in his favour on proof of the report having been spread abroad by them as alleged, and none being produced in defence of its being true. In this suit, it not being against the whole Cast, the party complaining was left to the remedy of a fresh action against the whole Cast if they still refused to admit him. Kuhandas Soorchund and others v. Hemchund Hurukchund. 15th May 1821. 2 Borr. 108.—Romer.

12. Where a person had signed a Bandobast, and had afterwards refused to abide by it, his expulsion from the Cast was held to be lawful.

Bhaucehund Bhikaree v. Prumamund Madhow and others. 27th Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 434.—Romer & Sutherland.

13. Where a person was expelled from his Cast for eating with a person of a lower Cast, and the fact was proved in evidence, his expulsion was confirmed by the Court until he should perform certain penances required by the Cast rules. Meetha Kuchara v. Bhana Munzul and others. 11th March 1823. 2 Borr. 473.—Romer.

14. Where A, a member of a Cast (Ahmadábádī Bīsa Śrīmālī Banyans) sued for damages for expulsion; it appeared, on evidence, that he and his family for three generations had adopted the tenets of a certain sect of the Cast (Dhundías) without relinquishing the tenets of the sect (Tappas) which all the members of the section of the Cast to which he belonged professed, and that he and his family had at all times frequented the temples of both sects of the Cast; the other members asserted their ignorance of his profession of the Dhundia tenets, and that, on discovering the fact, they had expelled him; as although, at some places, Dhundias were admitted to all rights of Cast by the Tappas, it was not the case in their city, where there were no Dhundias. Under the circumstances, the Court held, that, notwithstanding the improbability of such alleged ignorance, and since neither he nor his ancestors had ever openly avowed their tenets, and as none of their section of the Cast professed such tenets, the Cast should not be compelled to re-admit A to the rights of Cast; but that such members as chose were at liberty to do so, and that the Cast should not molest members so acting; nor should A have any claim for damages against members refusing him the rights of Cast. At the same time, it was held, that if A should at any time relinquish the Dhundia tenets, and adhere to those of the Tappa only, then he and his family should be admitted to the full rights of the Cast, and be entitled to sue for damages for any neglect towards him from the Cast, or any individual member of it. Punjee Phoolchand v. Racechand Roopchand and others. 14th Aug. 1823. 2 Borr. 598.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

15. Where a member of a Cast (Kherawal Brahmans) sued for damages for expulsion, no act of expulsion was proved; and the Cast declaring that they had no objection to eat with him, provided he complied with the custom of the Cast by paying certain fees, their justification was held good. Jaceshankur Bhawaneechankur v. Balkrishnu Lukmeedut and others. 30th March 1824. 2 Borr. 685.—Romer.

II. LAWS AND PRIVILEGES.

16. Damages were recovered against the superintendent of a Hindú feast for having wantonly and maliciously caused the loss of the plaintiff's character by omitting to invite him to such feast, which was a solemn feast of the Cast; but it was held, that the amount of damages for such loss of Cast must be fully proved, and that no more than the actual damages incurred should be recovered. Dhurmchand Abeela v. Nana-Bhace Goolchand. 9th March 1809. 1 Borr. 11. —Duncan, Lechmere, & Rickards.

16 a. The Jamaát of silk-spinners filed a suit against a party for carrying on the business without paying the established fees. He, however, defended himself by saying that his grandfather had worked at the trade many years ago, and that he himself had obtained permission to resume the occupation of his forefathers from the Pátels of the Jamaát, who had the power to admit him into the trade. He also produced the old Jamaát accounts in which his grandfather's name was inserted as one of the Jamaát. The objections of the Jamaát were declared to be groundless and vexatious, and their suit was dismissed. Pitambur Munohur and others v. Amichund Jugjeevun. 12th

Aug. 1809. 1 Borr. 356.—Grant & J. Smith.

16 b. A tradesman being accused by two companies (gold-wire drawers and gold-thread makers) of working at their trades conjointly, the companies respectively instituting suits against him to make him relinquish their trades, it was urged, in defence, that he only practised one trade, but admitted that the other was carried on in the same house by his brother and a partner. The Court held, that the two companies rising against him was corroborative of his not fairly observing the rules of trade; and though it was a common and allowable practice for two brothers, united in interests, to follow two distinct trades; yet as the trades in the present case were closely connected, and the two brothers, by each following one of these trades in the same house, could play into each other's hands, in a manner contrary to the meaning and spirit of the Rules of the two Pancháyits, the Court directed that the two brothers should be confined to one of the trades, so long as they should continue to live in the same house, making their own election. Kutyanjee Narayanjee v. Huree Bhace Poonjiya Mookadum and others. 13th June 1811. 1 Borr. 365.—Crow & Day.

16 c. Where a Firókhtiyah, or retail dealer in grain, sued the company of Maparas, or wholesale dealers, to obtain the rights of the company, on the ground that his father was a Mupara, and that he himself, though he had been for a short time a Firókhtiyah, wished to resume his father's wholesale trade; the Court held, on evidence, that the father was never regularly a Mapara, and that the claim of the applicant was groundless, the Collector having reported that none of his family had ever been in the Pancháyit of Maparas, or ever paid any part of the yearly Nazráneh to Government. Khooshal Motee v. Venedas Seth and others. 17th Aug. 1811. 2 Borr. 538.—Crow, Day, & Romer.

16 d. Where certain members of a trade (Kunbísarí, weavers) admitted the validity of claims made against the whole body of the trade who disputed them, they, as consenting to the claims, were held to be the only parties responsible, and the remaining members of the Cast exonerated. Joga Lukmeedas and others v. Lala Joita. 9th Dec. 1811. 1 Borr. 390.—Crow & Day.

17. Where certain members of a Cast (Srimali Ahmadábádí) instituted a suit to oblige the others to conform to certain bye-laws; the Court took the vote of each individual member of the Cast, and finding the majority hostile to the Regulations, dismissed the suit. Mootee Tapeedas and others v. Kalandas and others. 14th Feb. 1814. 1 Borr. 108.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinstou.

18. Where the defendant touched a Súdra woman in public, in order to point her out to a Peon, so that the latter might serve her with a summons to appear at the police, such action was held to be lawful, the defendant being of a superior Cast, and it seems would have been so held had it been otherwise, the occasion appearing to the Court to be lawful. Gobee Dossee v. Gungaram Day. 27th Nov. 1820. East's Notes. Case 23.

19. Where a man sued a member of a Cast (Sutars) for damages for loss of character, by such member's refusing him the use of the Cast cooking pots; the suit was dismissed for want of proof of the injury, the law officer affirming that he would not be endangered, either in credit or property, by the act complained of, and for want of proof that the pots were refused by the body of the Cast. The Court added, that his remedy lay with the Pancháyit, which had full power to correct any matter of this description. Bhugwan Meetha v. Kasheeram Govurdhun. 17th June 1822. 2 Borr. 323.—Sutherland.

20. A Cast may lawfully execute a Bandobast among themselves, without the consent, or against the will, of one member, and that one member cannot break it, whether he have previously agreed to it or not; and they have the power of fining a person for breach of its terms as provided for in it. Bhaecchund Bhikaree v. Prumamund Madhom and others. 27th Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 434.—Romer & Sutherland.

21. In a suit by the gold-thread spinners Pancháyit, at Surat, against a member of their body, for working for a wire-drawer, contrary to a bye-law of the Cast; a decree was given in their favour by the Assistant-judge (Fawcett), and the Judge (Barnard), as it was proved that he had signed the agreement; but on appeal it was held, that though it was fully proved that he was a party to the engagement, bye-laws and private engagements like the present, tending to the injury of the public, could not lawfully be made the ground of an action; and the decrees of the Lower Courts were reversed, relieving the appellant from the responsibilities incurred, and making the respondent liable for all costs. *Gerdhur Mooljee v. ### CERTIORARI.

1. The Court will interfere to stay a plaint in the Petty Court, involving the title to real property or in a case of difficulty. Rajah Raykissen v. Joykissen Sing and others. 1st July 1819. East's Notes. Case 102.
2. The Court have power to refuse a certiorari to remove a cause of small amount, and not being of an intricate nature, or involving any general right, from the Petty Court.<sup>1</sup> Kertychunder Holdar v. Torrachund Bosse. 4th Term 1819. East's Notes. Case 106.

2 a. A certiorari was refused to an attorney who had been sued in the Petty Court, and had moved for the writ to remove the proceedings into the Supreme Court on his privilege of attorney. Burne v. Trebeck. 29th Oct. 1821. East's Notes. Case 29.

3. Writ of certiorari to the Commissioners of the Court of Requests issued after Term. A rule was granted to shew cause why the plaintiffs should not file their plaint against the defendant, and pay the costs of the application, and the writ of certiorari and the proceedings thereon. The Court discharged the rule without costs, but desired it might be understood, in future, that they would not grant such rules.<sup>2</sup> Lyall and others v. Courtayne. 18th Nov. 1833. Clarke's Notes, 111.

3a. The Supreme Court has not the power to remove, by certiorari, the conviction, by a Zillah magistrate, of a British subject, unless such conviction be under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. In the matter of Pattle. 14th Nov. 1836. 1 Fulton, 313.

4. An affidavit by a British subject that he believes the conviction by a Zillah magistrate to be under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. is sufficient to entitle him to a rule absolute, in the first instance, for a certiorari. Ib.

5. A Zillah magistrate may put in affidavits in reply to those on which a rule nisi for a certiorari is founded. Ib.

6. If the applicant be entitled to a certiorari a rule absolute will go in the first instance if applied for. Ib.

7. Rule absolute in the first instance for a certiorari to a Mofussil magistrate for an error apparent on the face of his conviction. In the matter of Russell. 5th Nov. 1838. 1 Fulton, 362.

8. The Court granted a certiorari to remove a conviction by a joint magistrate, under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. s. 105., suggesting, for the consideration of counsel, that the writ might be affected by the 9th Geo. IV. c. 14. s. 48, 49. See quare.<sup>3</sup> Ib. Clarke's Notes, 119.

CESSES.

1. A Zamindár claimed a sum of money from his farmer, alleged to have been realised by the latter from the tenantry under the head of Zabita batta, or customary levy of an excess of half an anna in each rupee, and stipulated in the Kabúliyat to be payable to the Zamindár. Held, that such claim is illegal under Sec. 3. of Reg. V. of 1812, which provides that the imposition of arbitrary or indefinite cesses, whether under the denomination of abráh, mat'hôte, or other denomination, is illegal, and that all stipulations of that nature should be judged by the Courts to be null and void. Radha Mohan Sernu Chowdry v. Gungapershad Chuckerbuttee and others. 16th Dec. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 142.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

<sup>3</sup> The Court granted the certiorari in this instance on the following grounds—That it appeared, on the face of the conviction, that the magistrate had refused to summons or examine the defendant's witness; that the conviction was against the evidence, the complainant contradicting all his own witnesses; that the complainant was not a native of India, being a Cingalese; and that the form of the conviction was wrong, it being in Persian, and defective in many essentials.

CHARITABLE BEQUEST.

1. It was held, that where certain persons had been appointed, by will, to dispose of funds for charitable purposes, such persons were to have the sole direction of distribution without being subject to the interference of the Court except as to supervision. Anon. 31st Jan. 1814. East's Notes, Case 8.

2. Property bequeathed by a Roman Catholic for distribution among the poor was held not to be applicable for the repairs of a Roman-Catholic church and convent, represented by the applicants to be in a state of great decay. Ib.

3. Where a testator, by his will, bequeathed certain property to be laid out after his death by his executors in pious uses, such as the saying masses for his soul, and also for distribution among the poor; it was held, that saying masses for the soul of the testator was included in the general description of superstitious uses in the Statute, being such as our Church abhors and disallows, and that part of the testator's will was accordingly decreed to be set aside as contrary to law, and the whole fund to be appropriated to charities. Ib.

4. Where a testator bequeathed a certain principal sum for a charitable purpose, to be lodged in the Company's treasury until the occurrence of a certain specified event, and the interest to be carried to the credit of his estate annually until the occurrence of such event; it was held, that all interest until such occurrence was to be considered as assets of the estate. Sukies v. Sukies. 28th Jan. 1816. East's Notes, Case 43.

5. Various bequests and donations having been given to the Capuchin Monks at Madras, and a large amount existing applicable to charitable and religious purposes, the Government had interfered, and appointed Syndics, who were to deposit the funds in the treasury of the Company, and to pay the interest arising therefrom to the Superior of the order. The Superior refusing to account for the expenditure of the interest, the Syndics refused to pay him any more, and the Government declining to interfere, the Superior, in conjunction with the prefect of the order, filed a bill against the Syndics and the Company. The Superior Court referred it to the Master to take an account of the funds in question in the hands of the defendants, and also to inquire how they had been applied; directing him also to inquire into and state the nature and extent of the various and different trusts, duties, bequests, and donations, relating to the said Capuchin Church, with liberty to report specially if he should have occasion or be required so to do; reserving farther directions until he should have made his report. Baptiste and another v. The East-India Company and others. 4th April 1816. 2 Str. 385.

6. A bequest for a charitable institution at Lucknow, out of the jurisdiction of the Court, was directed to be paid to the Governor General, to enable him to carry out the intentions of the testator. The Martin Case. 10th May 1836. 1 Fulton, 257.

7. A testator devised considerable property, both real and personal, for charitable purposes, amongst which he directed certain sums to be set apart for the liberation of prisoners confined for debt, and for the endowment and establishment of a College at Lucknow, in the dominions of the King of Oude. A suit having been instituted in the Supreme Court of Calcutta to administer the will, the Court directed an inquiry whether the College could be established, and the bequest for the liberation of prisoners carried into effect, with reference to the testator's intention, and the sanction of the Government at Lucknow. On the subject of the bequest for the liberation of prisoners, the Master found in the negative; and reported that, with respect to the establishment of the College, there was not sufficient evidence to enable him to state whether it could be established, with reference to the testator's intention and the sanction of the Lucknow Government; but as no further evidence was likely to be obtained, he appended the correspondence with the British Resident at Lucknow, by which it appeared, that though the King of Oude did not object to the establishment of the College, he held out no expectations that he would afford it his countenance or support. The Report having been confirmed, and a decree made thereon, the Supreme Court, on a rehearing, directed an inquiry whether the Governor-General in Council had the means of giving effect to the bequest to the College at Lucknow, and whether he was willing to receive the funds bequeathed for that purpose. The Master found that the Governor-General was willing to receive the funds, but did not state whether he had the means of giving effect to the bequest. The Court, however, therefore decreed the payment of the funds to the Governor-General, or such person as he should appoint. Upon appeal to the King in Council, it was held by the Judicial Committee, that they thought the reference to the Master, on the rehearing, after the confirmation of his previous Report, was informal, and if objected to at the time would have been fatal; yet as no objection had been taken, and the Master had not satisfied the whole of the inquiry, by stating whether the Governor-General had the means of carrying the testator's intention into effect, that part of the decree affirming the Master's Report, and directing the payment of the fund to the Governor-General, must be reversed, and the case sent back to ascertain that fact; their Lordships being of opinion, under the existing relations between the East-India Company and the King of Oude, an arrangement might be made for the appointment of a trustee to carry the Lucknow bequest into effect, under the direction, and subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. The Mayor of Lyons and others v. The East-India Company. 12th Dec. 1836. 1 Moore, 175.

I. POWERS OF THE SUPREME COURTS OVER COLLECTORS.

1. In an action against a Collector of the Company, the Court will issue process as of course, without inquiry, whether the action be for any act done in the collection of the revenue, or under the Regulations of the Governor-General and Council within the 21st G. III. c. 70, s. 8. Ramcaunt Nundil v. Colebrooke. Charab. Notes. 1st Nov. 1791. Mor. 140.

II. POWERS OF COLLECTORS.

2. A, a Zamindár, claimed to recover land alleged to have been encroached upon and to be illegally occupied by B. But it appearing on evidence that the unauthorized encroachment of B, if it were an encroachment, took place previously to the permanent settlement; it was held, that under the provisions of Reg. XXXI. of 1802 it was competent only to the Collector, under the authority of the Board of Revenue, to call in question B's title to hold possession of the lands in dispute. A's claim was accordingly dismissed, with all costs. Zamindár of Pettapore v. Bhooputty Rauz Sooborauze. Case 14 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 135. —Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

3. A Collector had attached certain villages for arrears of revenue. The defaulter dying, an alleged adopted son tendered the arrears, and claimed to be put in possession: there appeared to be another party entitled. Held, that under the circumstances the Collector was fully justified in retaining possession of the villages, until he should receive legal authority for delivering them up. Collector of Guntur v. Rajah Vassareddy Jugganadha Baboo. Case 8 of 1818. 1 Mad. Dec. 203.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

3a. A Collector cannot annul a sale of lands which he considered to have been made under a fictitious name, the power of confiscating, under such circumstances, being reserved exclusively to the Governor-General in Council. Debee Dutt v. The Collector of Gorurupore. 21st April 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 294.—Fendall & Goad.

4. According to the Regulations, a Collector can only attach a farm, or a Zamindari, of a defaulting proprietor, in his capacity of Collector, under the provisions of Reg. XXVII. of 1802.<sup>1</sup> Rajah Manoozy Venkataram Zamindar v. Annadarone. Case 4 of 1822. 1 Mad. Dec. 328.—Grant & Gowan.

5. Where a settlement had been made with one individual as proprietor, it was held, that, under Cl. 8. of Sec. 53. of Reg. XXVII. of 1803, a Collector is not competent to substitute another individual without a judicial decree.<sup>2</sup> Murdun Singh and others v. Rughoonath Pathick. 19th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 239.—Martin.

5a. A Collector has full liberty to sue either the individual defaulters of a Jamaat for payment of government dues, or the particular Patels who had collected such dues, and had not brought them to account. *Agar v. <sup>1</sup> Under this Regulation, when any landholder, who should pay revenue immediately or direct into the Treasury of the Collector, or of his subordinate officer, a Tahsildar, or other native revenue officer, fails in the regular payment of his revenue and falls into arrear, the Collector, on the part of Government, is invested with the power of attaching his estate; but then he has no power to annul the defaulter's right of property therein. It is true he may sell it for the discharge of the arrear; but if he retain it in attachment, he is required by Cl. 5. of Sec. 13. of the above Regulation to restore it to the defaulter, on the arrear being in any way discharged. It appeared in the above case that the revenue, considered apart from rent, payable by the lessee to the Government, was punctually discharged, and the Collector, in his capacity of revenue officer, had no further demand upon him; for which reason he could not, under the above Regulation, legally attach the estate and cancel the lease.

<sup>2</sup> The provision on which this case principally turned has been re-enacted by Sec. 13. of Reg. VII. of 1822, which prescribes that Collectors, and other officers exercising the powers of Collectors, shall not, unless when specially authorized, do any act tending to disturb possession, but shall leave the Adawlut to investigate, in a regular suit, all claims of persons not in possession, but deeming themselves entitled to be so.

3. Bhaya Jha*. 27th July 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 23.—Harington & Stuart.

4. The preceding decision was confirmed, on appeal, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, when it was held, that a Soluhnamah, entered into in the presence of witnesses, and solemnly acknowledged in Court, by parties who were mutually ignorant of their respective legal rights, cannot afterwards be set aside upon plea of ignorance of the real facts, when the party seeking to avoid the deed had the means of ascertaining those facts within his reach. Rajender Narain Rao and another v. Bijai Gorind Sing. 20th Dec. 1839. 2 Moore Ind. App. 181.

5. The onus of shewing that a compromise has been fraudulently obtained by intimidation and false representation is cast upon those who seek to impeach the validity of their own deed. Ib.

6. Pending a suit between A and B, terms of a compromise were settled between the parties, by which they mutually released each other, and B agreed to pay a consideration. No clause to this effect was inserted in the release signed by A, and <sup>2</sup> The cases under this title have been arranged without subdivision, as it does not always appear on the face of the Report by what law each individual decision was governed. It may, however, be noticed, that Nos. 3, 4, 9, & 9a, are clearly according to the Hindú law.

<sup>3</sup> At the same time it was thought proper by the Court to signify to the parties, that the transfer of Deowattar lands, as specified in the defendant's agreement, could only be carried into effect as far as was consistent with the Regulations, and that, in case of there not being the quantity specified, actually and duly held as Deowattar by the defendant's father, the deficiency could not be supplied from other lands, responsible for the public revenue.

lodged with C; but on proof of the fact by C, the compromise was enforced by the Court, and the consideration awarded to A, costs being made payable in equal shares. Bireswar Dyal Singh v. Jai Nath Singh. 7th April 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 107.—Turnbull.

6*a*. The evidence of a single witness, corroborated by circumstances, is sufficient to prove a compromise.

7. A sued B for the moiety of an estate held jointly, and B, in answer, asserted his right to the whole. A's suit was withdrawn on a compromise, by the terms of which A assured to B the reversion of the moiety held by him, and generally, of his entire estate, real and personal. In a subsequent action brought against B, by A's heirs, it was held, that the claim, as to the moiety of the estate specified, was repelled by the compromise. Ibrahim Khan v. Sayid Mahammad Arab and another. 19th Sept. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 143.—Turnbull & Ratray.

8. A deed of compromise should be construed liberally; so that where an item of property was left out of a contemporary schedule, of properties partible amongst litigants, the plaintiff should have the benefit of the principle of the compromise. Brij Isvari v. Bindra Ban Chandra Raj. Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 159.—Turnbull & Ratray.

9. A, a Hindú, had repudiated a settlement made by his elder brother, B, of estates alleged therein to be the sole acquisition of B, by which one quarter was allotted to him, and sought to recover a moiety of a part by title of community. Pending litigation, an award of arbitration, under a bond of submission, was passed in conformity with the deed; and then a compromise was had, in pursuance of which A signed retraction, which he afterwards denied, and failed to file in Court. His claim for a moiety by title of community was disallowed, but he obtained a decree for a quarter on the deed; and in a later action, brought by A against the heirs of B, it was held, that the judgment of the Court must be ruled by the prior decision, and that A should recover a quarter share under the deed and compromise, his repudiation and denial notwithstanding. Báman Dás Mukhopádhya v. Radhánáth Mukhopádhya. 18th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 187.

9*a*. A Hindú widow cannot, during the minority of her sons, compromise an action regarding the property of her late husband, and such compromise will be set aside on application by the sons on attaining their majority. Ram Kewal Biscas and others v. Jaggurnath Biscas and others. 29th Jan. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 19.—H. Shakespear, Robertson & Stockwell.

10. If one party to a compromise does not comply with its conditions, the other party is not bound by it. Purab Singh Dagar v. Anandram Jani. 27th April 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 160.—Braddon & F. C. Smith.

11. A deed of compromise, executed by an Armenian woman, possessed of two-thirds of an estate, both of which had descended to her from her father, who held one-third absolutely in his own right, and the other under the will of his grand uncle, which it was alleged had given him only a life interest in that third, was held to be binding on the woman's representatives, though not claiming in her right, but directly under the will; as it appeared that, notwithstanding the deed of compromise, they were still left in possession of one full third of the estate, and there was no doubt of her competency to dispose of the other third. Gasper Maleum Gasper v. Hume and others. 30th Nov. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 54.—Tucker & Barlow.

XLIX. of 1793.<sup>1</sup> Pran Kishen Dutt v. The Collector of the Twenty-four Pergannas. 6th Jan. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 3.—Martin.

2. A instituted a suit in the year 1820, claiming by inheritance a share of an estate which he alleged was the joint property of B and C, his father and uncle, and which had been confiscated by Government in consequence of the rebellion of C, and had been granted to D by a sanad twenty-three years previously, asserting that he had not attained his majority until the year 1807, and that his father had disappeared. A was nonsuited on the ground that any right of B became extinct on account of the rebellion in which he had participated, and that therefore A derived no right from him, and, moreover, because B was still alive and in jail. The Court, however, reserved A's right to sue separately for three villages (part of the said estate) settled in his name.<sup>2</sup> *Mahipat Singh v. <sup>2</sup> In this case Mr. Turnbull observed, that if the other arguments were even pre-termitted, the action was barred by the lapse of twenty-three years, during which D had enjoyed quiet possession under a grant from Government. It is by no means certain that the confiscation of property by Government, on account of rebellion, would act as a ground of exclusion from inheritance by the heirs of a member of an undivided family, where it is merely asserted, and not proved, that the ancestor of the claimant had participated in the rebellion in which another member of the joint family had been concerned, and for which the whole property had been confiscated.

Goluckchunder Roy.* 1st Feb. 1826. Cl. R. 1829. 145.

4. No affidavit of the service of a summons is necessary in order to obtain a capias of contempt; and a capias will not be set aside on an affidavit that there has not been service. Ib.

9. The process of contempt, under Eq. Perhaps the complainant might move for a writ of proclamation, and, after that writ had been executed, a commission of rebellion; but the Court will not leap over any intermediate stages of process. *Rammohun Mullick v. 14. A defendant in contempt by resisting a writ of assistance, moved for an order that the complainant should, within four days, file interrogatories for the defendant's examination upon the contempt, and that in default thereof he should be discharged from his contempt, which order was made. The complainant then moved that the interrogatories filed should be referred to the Master to settle, and that the Master should take the examination of the defendant upon them, which order was also made. *Hartell Tagore and others v. 2. A contract was entered into by two persons for the sale and purchase of a house. The purchaser paid the Bagānch, or earnest money, and the balance was to be made good on the execution and registry of a final deed of sale within one month from the date of the contract. In the meantime part of the house fell down, and the purchaser refused to complete the purchase. It was held, according to the Vyavashita of the law officers, that the contract might be annulled if it so pleased the purchaser, as the buyer's ownership had not commenced, the term not having expired, and the price not having been paid, so that the seller's right to the property remained untouched: the earnest, however, was declared to be forfeited. Nursing Bhanu v. Sankardas Mukandas and another. 28th March 1815. 1 Borr. 403. — Prendergast, Keate, & Sutherland.

3. In the case of a manufacturer breaking his contract for the supply of a certain article, and the merchant acceding to it by a partial receipt of the article, the Court held (under an award of the trade, contrary to the opinion of the law officers under the Hindú law of Contracts), that the manufacturer was liable for damages incurred, through his breach of contract, by the merchant.<sup>1</sup> Brijbhoo-lundus Veerchand v. Khandas Beh-chardas. 9th Jan. 1823. 2 Borr. 234.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.

4. An engagement by A, the widow of a deceased Muhammadan, to B, his son, stating that B shall sue for her share of an estate then under litigation, and that the same shall become the property of B, B supporting A for life, is not, in Muhammadan law, valid as a conveyance of property. Kishaur Khan v. Jewan Khan. 9th Aug. 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 25. — Cowper.

8. Brokers' bargains do not bind unless both principals are truly made acquainted with the terms of the bargain struck. Ib.

9. Exact copies of brokers' memoranda of a contract must be given to both principals to make such contract binding. Ib.

10. An agreement obtained by an executor from the sole next of kin and heir at law, for commission, is not such a contract between two independent parties as the Court will sanction or enforce. Carsondass Hunsraz v. Ramdass Harridass. 26th July 1842. Perry's Notes, Case 4.

11. If there be a fraud in the original contract of sale, the sale will be vitiated, and the delivery afterwards will not pass the property; but if the contract of sale be complete, no fraud in obtaining possession of the goods will invalidate such contract, but possession so obtained is a transfer of the property. And where A made a bargain for the purchase of certain goods from B, and A sent his clerk to a partner of B's with a cheque, and the latter delivered the goods to the clerk, and the cheque turned out to be a forgery, and in the meanwhile A had obtained an advance of money

IV. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Contracts generally.

12. A contractor who had fallen into arrears, and who engaged to liquidate them gradually by a certain period, was held not to be responsible for the balance; the contract having been taken away from him before the expiration of the period specified. Commercial Resident at Patna v. Adept Sing. 20th April 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 88.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

13. A enters into an engagement with B, acknowledging himself to be in arrear for advances to the amount of Rs. 7746, and engaging to furnish silk to that value, and to clear off the arrear within a given time, or on failure thereof to pay ready money, with interest agreeably to Reg. XXXI. of 1793.<sup>1</sup> An action being brought by B for the recovery of the penalty specified in Cl. 7. of Sec. 3. of the above-mentioned Regulation; it was held, that he was only entitled to recover interest at 12 per cent. on the balance of the arrear, on the ground of the irrelevancy of the clause and section above specified to the case of A. Bishonath Mitter and others v. Commercial Resident of Comerciolly. 16th July 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 192.—Ker & Rees.

14. Where a person claimed possession of certain villages under an Ikrárnámeh, or written acknowledgment from the conditional purchaser, alleged to have been executed nine years after the sale had become absolute, his claim was rejected, the agreement not being proved, or, though proved, being either without a consideration, or the condition violated by the claimant. Gopal Lal v. Raja Torunwarain Singh. 25th Sept. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 182.—Leycester & Dorin.

15. Where a suit was brought to recover a sum of money alleged to be due to the son of the late incumbent of the office of Mufti at Surat upon a parole engagement with his successor to support him and his mother, he not being fit to succeed to the office, the Ameen and the Assistant Judge (Grant) decreed in the plaintiff's favour, as there appeared no reason why a written engagement should not have been executed had the necessity for such been contemplated; but their decrees were reversed on appeal, the Court considering, that as the agreement had been made apparently subsequent to the appellant's appointment it was revocable, the arrangement being of a private, and not of a binding nature, after it had ceased to be voluntary on the part of the appellant. Moofttee Muslehoo-deem v. Sheikh Khairooddeen. 8th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 97.—Ironsides, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

16. A Satakhatt, or preparatory instrument in the nature of articles of agreement, intended to be followed by the execution of a more formal conveyance, was held to be sufficient to bind property, and to give the party to whom it was executed the right to demand specific performance of the contract, and the execution of such further assurances as might be deemed necessary to invest him with a complete title to the property which was the subject matter of the suit. Lala Choonelul Nagindas v. Sarwaechand Namedas. 21st May 1835. 3 P. C. Cases, Case 6.

17. A superintendent of salt works in the employ of Government having entered into an arrangement with the plaintiff, whose Khelaris he had taken possession of, on behalf of the Government, to allow him a fixed compensation, which was regularly paid for a period of twenty years, the Court held, that the Government officers in the salt department could not withdraw from the arrangement on the plea that the superintendent had no authority to enter into it. The Salt Agent at Jessore v. Rada Mohan Choudry. 22d Dec. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 135.—Robertson & Hutchinson. (D. C. Smyth dissent.)

2. Construction of.

18. A, for a consideration received, engages to effect a release of lands mortgaged by him to B, and to make over the same to C, or, in default of his effecting the release of the lands in question, to make over other lands of equal value. A fails in effecting the release, and C claims other equivalent lands, or (in a supplementary plaint) to recover the consideration. The Court in this case decreed against A the principal and interest of the sum advanced by C, but no land, the engagement not being sufficiently specific to maintain a claim for land. Maharajah Grishund Rai v. Bybuntupal Choudree and another. 24th Feb. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 48. Fombelle & Stuart.

19. A executed an engagement to B, undertaking to furnish 250 Maunds of silk, at stated periods, and in certain quantities, in consideration of receiving advances from time to time, the whole quantity to be delivered on or before a specified day, or, on failure thereof, subjecting himself to a penalty of one rupee for every Sér of silk remaining undelivered. B had made one advance only, and A had failed in the performance of his contract. On a suit by B against A to recover the penalty for every Sér of silk remaining undelivered, as well as for the balance of silk remaining due on the advance, it was held, that, according to the spirit of the contract, B was entitled only to recover the penalty on the non-delivery of silk for which an advance had been made. Suroopchund Das v. Masseyh. 26th Oct. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 89.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

20. A contract is not to be extended beyond the intent of the parties, and that is to be gathered from the terms used in it. Condascamy Moodely v. McLeod. Case 7 of 1826. 1 Mad. Dec. 552.—Grant, Cochrane, and Oliver.

3. Conditional Agreements.

21. A and B purchase property from C under condition not to re-sell to any one but C or his heirs. Held, that the grant of a Patni Talook of a part of the property by A and B to D, a stranger, is a violation of their engagement, and, as such, invalid. Muddoosooden Sandial v. Pran Kishen Mitter and others. 1st March 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 56.—Ratray & Stockwell.

22. Where the plaintiff sued for the recovery of a specific sum, conditionally agreed to be paid, by a party to an appeal to the Privy Council, to a house of agency in Calcutta, for their trouble and expenses in carrying on the appeal, the condition being that the sum should be paid if the party were successful, judgment was given in the plaintiff's favour on proof of the fulfilment of the conditions of the agreement. Rajah Bejai Govind Singh and others v. Fullerton. 27th Feb. 1838. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 222.—Ratray & Money.

23. In an action for real property under a contract between the plaintiff and the defendant, the defendant pleaded the violation by the plaintiff of a separate agreement, on the fulfilment of which the completion of the contract was contingent. The agreement was to have been carried into effect within a specified period, which, however, had been exceeded. The Court overruled the plea, on the ground that the defendant had availed himself of the conditions of the agreement after the expiration of the period therein specified. Baboo Juddoonath v. Dwarkanath Tagore. 16th March 1838. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 247.—Tuck Money, & Reid.

24. A claim preferred by the respondent, to set aside an assignment executed by himself of certain religiously-endowed property, of which he had the management, on the alleged ground of failure on the part of the assignee to abide by the conditions of the assignment, was dismissed for want of proof of the alleged conditions. Mohunt Sheo Sahye Doss v. Mohunt Sookh Deo Doss. 25th Jan. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 4.—Tucker & D. C. Smyth.

4. Illegal Contract.

25. A claim to ancestral property having been dismissed by the Provincial Court under the Hindú law of inheritance, an appeal was instituted from this decision; and it appearing that the appellant had entered into an agreement with a person to give him up one half of the estate claimed by him if a decree should be passed in his favour, on consideration of that person's advancing the money required for the costs of the suit; it was held, that the transaction was illegal, as savouring strongly of gambling, and the agreement was ordered to be cancelled before the appeal could be admitted. Ram Ghulam Sing v. Keerat Sing and others. 19th Jan. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 12.—Smith & Martin.

26. An agreement to give up a portion of the property claimed to a person, on condition of his advancing the funds required for the costs of suit, was held to be illegal. Baboo Brijnerein Singh v. Rajah Tehnerein Singh. 29th Sept. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 131.—Barwell & Stockwell. Mt. Zukoormissa Khanum v. Rasack Lal Mitter and others. 15th Aug. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 298.—D. C. Smyth & Tucker.

<sup>1</sup> It may be remarked, that this does not affect the decisions of the Court, which are founded on the established principle that endowed lands cannot be privately alienated. The plaintiff in the present action rested his claim on a certain condition, on failure of proof of which the suit was dismissed; it further appearing that the terms of the assignment did not necessarily involve a diversion of the property from the original purposes of the endowment.

I. GENERALLY.

1. It was held, that, to establish a charge of corruption or extortion against a native ministerial officer of any Civil or Criminal Court, it was necessary to prove that he had taken an undue reward to influence his behaviour in his office, or that by colour of his office he had taken from any man a sum of money or thing of value which was not due to him; and where a suit was brought against a Pandit of a Zillah Court for the recovery of the penalty prescribed by Cl. 8. of Sec. 12. of Reg. XII. of 1802<sup>1</sup>, on the ground of corruption, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut adjudged, that inasmuch as the acts of corruption charged against the Pandit were in no wise connected with the duties of his office, it was unnecessary to consider whether or not those acts were proved. Zillah Judge of North Malabar v. The Pandit of the Court of the said Zillah. Case 11 of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 46. — Scott & Greenway.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY, 49.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

1. In an action for an assault of a very trivial nature, Impey, C. J., said he was inclined to give a judgment for nominal damages, and for the costs of the defendant to be paid by the plaintiff; but he thought it could not be done under the Charter, and therefore would not do it; and judgment was given for the plaintiff, with costs. Hyde, J., inclined to think it might be done, but that this was not a case for doing it, because he did not think it just to say a person shall have no redress by action for a small assault. Goopeyne Dossee v. Gobindram Bysack. Hyde's Notes. 2d Dec. 1779. Sm. R. 160. Mor. 261.

2. However, it seems the Court would make the plaintiff pay the defendant's costs if the action be a very frivolous one, although the plaintiff may have succeeded on demurrer to a special plea, and must have recovered nominal damages. Anderson v. Russonney Dutt. Nov. 1840. Mor. 265, note.

3. A rule to shew cause why proceedings should not be stayed in a suit in equity until the costs in a suit at law, by the defendant against the plaintiff, should be paid by the plaintiff in equity to the defendant in equity, was discharged, with costs. Radacant Ghose v. Hurry Ghose. Hyde's Notes. 2d Feb. 1784. Sm. R. 16.

4. Where an issue had been ordered by the Court to satisfy the doubts of the Bench, not nominally and formally only, but because the difficulty really lay there; it was held, that neither party was entitled to costs, and that it could not be then considered material whether the question had been rightly ordered into a Court of Law. Mullick v. Mullick. Jan. 1814. East's Notes, Case 4.

5. Proceedings will be staid in a second action, for non-payment of the costs of the first. Sreenuttee Dossee v. Rennell. 4th Term 1822. Cl. R. 1829. 234.

6. Costs for not proceeding to trial, pursuant to a notice by plaintiff, will not be allowed on the defendant's subsequently moving to postpone the trial. Meer Eeram Ally v. Macnaughten. Sittings after 2d Term 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 217.

7. Costs of drawing affidavits will not be allowed, although they have been prepared by counsel who had declared them necessary. Reed v.

Burnes. 3d Term 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 251.

8. Where the hearing stands over for want of parties, the costs of the day will not be allowed, the bill having prayed a discovery of parties, and the answer having stated that no others were interested. Rajchunder Mozendar v. Gooroodas Mozendar. Sittings after 3d Term 1828. Cl. R. 1829. 331.

9. Costs will not generally be given to either party when the Judges differ in opinion. Bryce v. Smith. 2d Term 1829. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 50.

10. The Bench was divided in opinion; and Grey, C. J., stated, that such being the case, costs ought not to be given. Franks and Ryan, Js., held, that costs should be given, the present case being, in their opinion, too clear to bring it within the general rule that costs would not be given where the question was so doubtful that the Court were divided in opinion. Dooheram v. Becoololl. 12th July 1831. Cl. R. 1834. 36. Mor. 278.

11. And Ryan, C. J., and Seton, J., held, that where a difference of opinion exists on the Bench, there exists no general rule, and the costs are in the discretion of the majority of the Court. (Grant, J., dissent.) Radakissen Mitter v. The Bank of Bengal and others. 2d Aug. 1838 and 1839. Mor. 278, note c.

12. Substitution of service of an allocatur for costs will be allowed, without interfering with the rule of the King's Bench, which prevails in India, where the defendant kept out of the way, it appearing that he had seen the allocatur, and acknowledged the amount. Burnes v. Reed. 22d March 1830. Cl. R. 1834. 27.

13. Per Grey, C. J.—The Court may, under the 14th Clause of the Charter, award costs between party and party, such as they may think it just that one party should pay to another. The English Statutes as to costs do not apply in India. Bryce v. Smith. Nov. 1830. Bignell, 62.

14. Costs are discretionary in the Supreme Court; and, exercising its discretion on the merits of the case, costs will be given for opposing in the first instance. Ramgopaul Mullich v. Rajbullub Seal. 15th Nov. 1833. Cl. R. 1834. 150.

15. A contempt cannot be cleared till after the costs incurred thereby have been paid by the party in contempt. The costs of the contempt need not be tendered till after the motion for clearing it has been made, and a conditional order granted. Chattoo Sing v. Rajkissen Sing and others. 28th June 1842. 1 Fulton, 27 and 30.

16. Semble, If an application be made on a point not previously raised, should the Court discharge the application, they will do so without costs. Assignees of Boyd v. Maurel. 31st May 1844. 1 Fulton, 455. Gibson v. Chisholm. 15th July 1844. 1 Fulton, 480.

16a. Semble, Where an appellant had appealed from the Supreme Court, where he had sued in forma pauperis, without applying for an order to appeal as a pauper to the Judicial Committee, he is not liable for the costs of the appeal. Munni Ram Awasty v. Shoo Churn Awasty and another. 4th Dec. 1846. MS. Notes of P. C. Cases.

2. In particular Proceedings.

17. The Supreme Court cannot give costs of an appeal to the King in Council, even when the Court of Appeal, which confirmed the judgment of the Supreme Court, made no mention of costs.<sup>1</sup> Gopeynohun Tagore v. Ramanund Ghose. 20th June 1818. East's Notes, Case 83.

18. The King in Council having dismissed an appeal for want of prosecution, without saying any thing as to the costs, the Court will not allow the plaintiff's costs of the appeal incurred in England or India.<sup>1</sup> Colein and others v. Compton. 9th Nov. 1829. Cl. R. 1834. 26.

19. Costs will generally be given in caveats, where the parties are able to pay. In the goods of Collins. Hyde's Notes. 28th March 1777. Mor. 260.

20. If a man, however, enter an altogether groundless caveat, and it be determined in favour of the petitioner, the caveator ought to be made to pay costs; but possibly it may sometimes be useful to allow costs to a caveator, to encourage such to appear, that the Court may receive information, if they should be about to commit the administration to an improper person. In the goods of Vanciller. 23d Jan. 1800. Mor. 260, note.

21. The cost incurred by a party in suing out process of contempt are not within the terms of Act. 25 of 1841, but only the costs attendant upon the motion made for enforcing the former order of the Court. Alexander v. Moran. 14th Nov. 1842. 1 Fulton, 94.

22. Where a demurrer to a plea in abatement was allowed, without entering into examination of the other objections, on this one alone, that the other partners named in the plea were not averred to be alive and within the jurisdiction; it was held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs on the demurrer, by the express words of the Stat. 4th Ann. Athinson v. Page and others. 28th March 1798. Chamb. Notes. Sm. R. 161.

23. The costs of a demurrer in equity were directed to stand over until the hearing. Fairlie v. Ferguson. 3d Term 1829. Cl. A. R. 1829. 54.

24. If a plaintiff in ejectment recover any portion of the premises for which the action was brought, he is entitled to his costs. Doc dem. Ramtonoo Mookerjee v. Beebee Jeeput. 23d Oct. 1843. 1 Fulton, 256.

25. The costs of an ineffectual notice to justify bail must be paid or secured before the defendant can again appear to justify. Loll Beharry Sein v. Ramchunder Day. 3d Term 1833. Clarke's Notes, 111. Ramratton Chatterjee v. Muddosoodan Bonnerjee. 4th November 1833. Ib. Gourmohun Paul v. Kissenmohun Sain. 1833. Mor. 280, note. Bhobumohun Paul v. Prankissen Sain. 5th Oct. 1834. Mor. 280. Bhobunghurn Paul v. Prankissen Sain. 5th Nov. 1834. Clarke's Notes, 112. Hume v. Stephanouse. 1st July 1835. Dequmber Chatterjee v. Gangagowind Bonnerjee. 18th Nov. 1835. Ib. Kullee Anjee and others v. McGibbon. 26th June 1844. 1 Fulton, 462.

3. Security for Costs.

27. A plaintiff not subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court will be required to give security for costs. Juggomohun Ray v. Bancharun Sarmono. Hyde's Notes. 16th March 1784. Mor. 269. Lachynarain Ghosaul v. Rajah Nobkissen.<sup>2</sup> 22d Oct. 1796. Mor. 142.

28. So where a plaintiff had gone to England. Hovison v. Bourke. Nov. 1784. Mor. 269, note.

29. Where the plaintiff is out of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, the defendant may move for security for costs at any time before issue joined. Kerim Moonshee v. Dcn Mahomed. 16th Jan. 1797. Mor. 241.

30. And it was held, that a native subject of the King, but not a British subject within the meaning of the Charter, residing at the Danish settlement of Serampore, out of the personal reach of the Court's process, must give security for costs on bringing an action in the Supreme Court, although he may have lands in the provinces liable for costs. Reid v. Muttoormohan Sein and another. East's Notes, Case 77.

31. Held, that the promovent, though resident in the Mofussil, must give security for costs; for though he is not within the local jurisdiction of the Court, he is amenable to an attachment for costs. Gowind Doss v. Ramashoy Jemadar and others. 8th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 155.

32. In an appeal against an order in equity, discharging an order nisi for confirming an award, the petition of appeal was granted, and the respondent ordered to give security for the costs only, and not for the sum awarded to be paid by him. Rajah Ramlochan Roy v. Bulram Ghose. Hyde's Notes and Chamb. Notes, 24th Jan. 1785. Sm. R. 63. Mor. 49.

33. An appellant in whose favour a decree has been made will be ordered to find security for double the sum decreed to him, and the costs in the Supreme Court, as well as for the costs on the appeal. Bebb v. Morgan. Chamb. Notes, 28th Jan. 1790. Sm. R. 66. Mor. 53.

34. Where an impugnant's petition of appeal shall have been allowed, the promovent will be ordered to give security, not only for the costs upon the appeal, but for the refunding, with interest, the costs of suit received by him from the impugnant, and the payment of the impugnant's taxed costs in the Supreme Court. Padre Stephanuse Aratom v. Sarkies Johannez. Chamb. Notes, 7th Feb. 1797. Sm. R. 69. Mor. 54.

35. Administrators, complainants in equity, are not bound to give security for the costs of an appeal. (Dunkin, J., diss.) Grant v. Grand. Chamb. Notes, 13th Feb. 1797. Sm. R. 73. Mor. 55.

36. The rules which are adopted in England as to requiring security for costs, are not invariably applicable, or with the same strictness, to India. Chand Beebe and others v. Ellis. 12th March 1830. Mor. 310.

37. But where, even though it was sworn that the complainants (Pardah females) were within the jurisdiction, and there was an affidavit that they were actually living in Calcutta, the Court, considering the evidence and affidavit to be unsatisfactory, required security for costs from the complainants, and referred it to the Registrar to settle the amount of such security. Ib.

38. The appellant should enter into the security for costs, before moving that the petition of appeal should be allowed, and a certificate thereof should form part of the grounds of the rule nisi. Lolljee Mall v. Rajchunder Chowdry. 25th Nov. 1835. Mor. 61.

39. The words in the 30th Section of the Charter, relating to the security to be given for the payment of the costs of the appeal, refer to the appellant alone. Rogobee Dyal v. The East-India Company. 6th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 146.

40. Where collusion and instigation by a third party is proved, security for costs will generally be ordered. Gowind Doss v. Ramashoy Jemadar and others. 8th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 155.

41. The Supreme Court will not direct an absent plaintiff to find fresh security for costs, unless it be shewn by the defendant that the first sureties are in no way subject to the jurisdiction, and have no property within the jurisdiction of the Court. Gibson v. Chisholm. 15th July 1844. 1 Fulton, 480.

42. Quære, Whether the Court will direct an absent plaintiff to find such fresh security, even should it be shewn that the first sureties are in no way subject to, and have no property within, the jurisdiction of the Court. Ib.

4. Taxation.

43. The Supreme Court cannot tax the costs of an appeal to the Privy Council, which, in its decree, reverses the decree of the Supreme Court, and takes no notice of costs. And if costs had been paid under the original decree of the Supreme Court which was reversed, they must be refunded, the whole decree being reversed, including the costs, and no costs having been given by the Privy Council. Bruce v. The East-India Company. 11th Dec. 1818. East's Notes. Case 92.

44. Where there is a condition to pay costs, it is the duty of the party who has to pay the costs to issue a summons immediately, and get the costs taxed and paid. Livingstone v. Rajnarain Bysack. 2d Term 1827. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 45.

45. And the complainant not having done so, he was let in again, on payment of costs, and undertaking to speed the cause. Luckersteen v. Rostan. 10th April 1831. Cl. R. 1834. 35.

46. True copies of bills of costs had been delivered to the defendant three years before the action was brought, who then stated that he would speak to the plaintiff, and settle the balance. He had never applied to re-tax the bills. It was held, that the Master's allocatur, and the promise of the defendant to settle the balance, was sufficient evidence of a retainer; and that the same evidence, coupled with the fact that he had applied for re-taxation during the three years, was sufficient proof of work done. The Court also dispensed with the necessity of delivering the original bills. Thompson v. Radakissen Mullick. 21st July 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 42.

47. Objections to certain items in a bill of costs taxed between party and party will be allowed, even after attachment had been granted for non-payment of the costs in question, and the costs had been actually paid. Horne v. Foss. 12th March 1840. Mor. 309.

48. A brief fee to counsel for attendance before a Judge in Chambers upon questions arising upon new rules of pleading will be allowed between party and party where the question is of difficulty, but not upon a question as to striking out one of the common counts. Ib.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

49. Costs were given against Government in a case where the plaintiffs had been irregularly dispossessed of lands, included in the decennial settlement, by the Government, without the sanction of a decree of the Court. Vakil of Government v. Rajesree Dibia and others. 30th Aug. 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 156.—Harington & Fombelle.

50. A person suing to raise an attachment can only recover costs to the extent of the interest he might have in making void the process against property so situated: in other words, for the amount of the decree sought to be satisfied out of such property. Ichhushunkar Sheeshunkur v. Mt. Beejeebhoo. 22d Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 469.

51. Kesa Bhace and others.* 9th Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 137.—Romer, Sutherland, Ironside, & Barnard.

52. In a disputed point of costs, in an action referred to arbitration, depending on the construction put upon certain words in the award, the Court, considering the arbitrators to be the best judges of their own meaning, desired them to indorse on the original award their interpretation of the point in dispute, and decided accordingly. affirmed in other respects. Baboo Brijhookundas Veerchund v. Ku-Ulrukh Sing v. Beny Persad. 11th handas Behchur. 13th May 1823. Feb. 1834. 2 Knapp, 265.

2 Borr. 239.—Sutherland.

53. A surety having made himself responsible for costs and mesne profits, provided the Zillah decree should be affirmed by the Court of Appeal, and the latter Court having reversed the Zillah decree, such surety is no longer responsible, though, by the ultimate decision of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, it would appear that they should have been discharged by him originally. Omaid v. Khyrat Ali. 15th Dec. 1825. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 260, note.—C. Smith.

54. An award greater than the sum sued for being given in the Zillah Court, by a decree which was afterwards reversed in the Provincial Court, the costs in the latter were made payable by the losing party on the sum originally sued for. Ram Pershad Avestee v. Udaroo. 12th Dec. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 293.—Sculy.

55. In a suit to raise an attachment from off a house, which should have been levied on the shares of two persons only, it was awarded by the Assistant Judge (Andrews) that the defendant, who levied the attachment, was liable for costs on the amount of his decree only, the remainder to be borne by the plaintiffs; but this decision was amended on appeal, to the extent of relieving the original plaintiffs from all costs, as the attachment ought only to have been levied against the shares of those persons against whom there was the unsatisfied decree. Mt. Hafizboo and another v. Laximeedas Lalhas. 24th March 1831. Sel. Rep. 48.—Barnard, Anderson, & Bai

56. A Superior Court having affirmed the decree of an Inferior Court, with costs, against the appellant, but not until they had required and taken much evidence in addition to what had been taken below; it was held, that they ought not to have given costs against the appellant, and their decree was so far reversed, although

57. The Board of Revenue, which had confirmed a revenue sale, afterwards finding it exceptionable and untenable, advised the buyer to abandon it, and warned him that the Board would not defend the action of the ex-owners to set it aside. The buyer persisting in retaining his purchase, the Court, which reversed the sale, charged him, on the suit of the ex-owners, with the costs of the plaintiffs, and only allowed him interest on the purchase money to be refunded up to the day of warning. Udman Singh and others v. The Collector of Zillah Patna and others. 29th July 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 358.—Brad-don & Barwell.

58. Held, that the costs of an attorney of the Supreme Court, incurred by a creditor for making a demand on a resident in the Mofussil, who is not amenable to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, are not recoverable by action in the Mofussil Courts. Atkinson v. Evans. 30th June 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 75.—Robertson & Stockwell.

59. In a suit brought on behalf of a mercantile firm for an alleged injury, supposed to have been inflicted on the reputation and trade of the firm; it appearing, in the course of the proceedings in the Zillah Court, that the principal had died whilst the suit was pending, the Zillah Court dismissed the suit, and decreed that the defendants should pay their own costs. On an appeal by one of the defendants in the original suit, it was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, affirming the judgment of the Provincial and Sudder Dewanny Adawlut Courts, that, in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 7. of Reg. II. of 1800<sup>1</sup> of the Bombay Code, the costs of the suit in the Zillah Court ought to have followed the decree, and that the judgment to that extent should be reversed. Mt. Keemee Bacc v.

Lutchman-das Narrain-das. 5th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 470.

60. In a suit instituted for the purpose of effecting a mutation of names in the Collector's register of landed proprietors, on an apparent collusive understanding between the parties in order to defeat the rights of others, the Court gave judgment as between the parties, agreeably to the admission of the defendant; but made the costs, including those of a claimant who intervened as a third party, chargeable to the plaintiff. Goluk-nath Ray Chowdhree v. Bhyronath Chowdhree. 29th March 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 78.—Lee Warner & Reid.

61. Held, that a party appointing a pleader under Sec. 2. of Reg. ### COURT OF WARDS.

1. A, a female, succeeded to a share of a joint estate, managed by the Court of Wards both before and after her succession. She alienated her share to B, and repelled his action by pleading her incompetency to alienate without leave of the Court of Wards. The plea was disallowed, because no inquiry, according to Reg. X. of 1793, had been made by the revenue authorities as to her qualification or disqualification. Jan Khattun v. Khwaja Ali Mullah. 4th Dec. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 240.—H. Shakespear.

2. Semble, That the alienation by any female ward, whom the Governor-General, under Sec. 2. of Reg. X. of 1793, after report, might not declare competent, is invalid. Ib.

3. The Court of Wards, on report of its Agent, the managing Collector, caused part of its ward's estate to be sold at public auction, to levy means to satisfy judgment and other debts. X. of 1793, and that the sale could not be disturbed on grounds applicable to other public sales. Nand Kumar Ray v. Rani Hari Priya and others. 6th Sept. 1838. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 233.—H. ## I. IN THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

1. The Queen in Council by the Charter of Bombay for reviewing a determination of the Supreme Court, when refused by such Court. In the matter of Alloo Paroo. 26th June 1847. MS. Notes of P. C. Cases.

1 a. The Crown cannot, by the words of the Charter of Bombay, grant an appeal in capital cases. Ib. In the matter of Edeljee Byramjee. 26th June 1847. MS. Notes of P. C. Case

II. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

2. Trial and acquittal for the same offence in the French Court of Chandernagore may be given in evidence under a plea of "not guilty," and ought not to be pleaded by way of plea autrefois acquit. Rex v. Joseph Rees. 21st Feb. 1794. Mor. 241.

2 a. The Statute making carnal knowledge of a female infant under the age of ten years felony, was held not to extend to India.<sup>1</sup> Rex v. Chundichurn Bose. Chamb. Notes. 18th July 1794. Mor. 357.

3. Quere, whether the Stat. 2d Geo. II. c. 25. s. 3. applies to India? Rex v. Collipersaud Ghose. Hyde's Notes. 23d Dec. 1786. Mor. 356.

4. It is discretionary in the Court to continue at large on his recognizance a defendant convicted of a misdemeanour, the counsel for the prosecution insisting on his immediate commitment. The King v. Reddy Row and another. January Sessions, 1809. 2 Str. 7.

<sup>1</sup> This exception seems only to have applied to Natives; but quere whether it would have applied to British subjects and others? The Statute 9th Geo. IV. c. 74. s. 65, now applicable to the case, is general, and makes such offence a misdemeanour punishable by imprisonment for such term as the Court shall award, and limits the age to eight years. 1 Sm. & Ry. 226.

5 A prisoner not charged in execution in time, is never too late to move to be superseded. Meer Mahomed Ally Cann v. Mohan Lall. 24th March 1810. 2 Str. 100.

6. By the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 25. any one intending to prosecute a magistrate for neglect or malfeazance of his office is required to give a month's notice to such magistrate previous to the instituting such proceeding. And where a person moved the Court for the purpose of instituting a criminal prosecution against the Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, he was ordered to conform to the rule prescribed by the said Statute. Anon. 28th Jan. 1814. East's Notes, Case 7.

7. A prisoner under execution must be brought up by habeas corpus to be tried criminally. The King v. Poole. 1st Sessions 1815. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 34.

8. Copies of depositions taken at the Police will not be given to the prisoner. But being a complicated and difficult case, indulgence was allowed, and the Court ordered the depositions to be shewn to the defendant's attorney, stating that it must not be understood as a precedent.<sup>1</sup> The King on the prosecution of Palmer v. Warrn. 3d Term 1826. Cl. R. 1829. 196.

9. A trial for perjury was postponed, because the traverser had not given eight days' notice, although the prosecutor had neglected to leave a memorandum with the Clerk of the Crown of the place at which the defendant's notices ought to be served. Rex v. Bungsheedhur Coondoo. 4th Session 1826. Cl. R. 1829. 186. Rex v. Bhaughbut Dullol. Ib.

10. A defendant having been convicted of perjury, and fined, the Court, on motion by the prosecutor, directed his expenses to be paid him out of the fine. The King on the prosecution of Goluckchander Roy v. Oditchurn

10 a. Held, that describing one of the Commissioners to swear affidavits by the initial letters of his Christian names only, together with the surname, in the Commission, was sufficient. The King v. Wright and others. 19th June 1827. Cl. R. 1829. 337.

11. Female prisoners, whose religion would not permit them to uncover their faces in public, may be brought into Court and arraigned with their faces covered. But prior to their arraignment their identity must be ascertained by the oath of a credible witness, before whom they can appear without disgrace. The King v. Abassee Khanum. 8th Aug. 1837. 2 Sm. and Ry. 9, note.

12. In criminal trials the Judge may sometimes see fit to direct the interpreter in Court to translate an untranslated document. The Queen v. Ogiley. Aug. 1838. Mor. 268, note.

13. The motion to quash the conviction of a Mofussil magistrate must be distinct from that for a remission of the fine. In the matter of Russell. 5th Nov. 1838. 1 Fulton, 362.

14. If a British subject be complained of before a Mofussil magistrate, the latter must take cognizance of the fact without its being pleaded. The Queen v. Ogiley. 11th Jan. 1839. 1 Fulton, 364.

2. Indictment.

15. A Persian writing, to the validity of which delivery is not essential, will be held to be mis-described as a deed in an indictment for forgery under the Stat. 2d Geo. II. c. 25. Rex v. Nundeeah Begum and others. 5th July 1779. Mor. 237.

16. If an indictment for forgery contain two counts, the one for forging, the other for uttering, the instrument must be set out in both; otherwise, if it be set out only in the count for forging, and the prisoner be acquitted on that count, and convicted on the other, judgment will be arrested. The King v. Shadiapen. 1st May 1800. 1 Str. 62.

17. In this case Strange, Recorder, thought that it was not necessary that the instrument should be set out in the language in which it was written, but that it would be sufficient to insert a translation by the Court interpreter. 1st May 1800. Ib.

18. In an indictment for a conspiracy to forge, proof of other similar frauds by the prisoner will not be admitted as evidence to prove the one in question. The King v. Reddy Row and Anunda Row. Jan. Sessions 1803. 2 Str. 4.

19. If there be two indictments against a man for the same offence, one as a felony, the other laid as a misdemeanour, the prosecutor must elect upon which he will proceed. The King v. Reddy Row and another. Jan. Sessions 1809. 2 Str. 1.

19 a. A statement of the ownership of a ship in an indictment is surplusage where the jurisdiction is otherwise proved, and need not be proved as stated. Anon. 10th Dec. 1813. East's Notes, Case 2.

20. It is discretionary with the Court to permit the Clerk of the Crown to attend the Grand Jury with any of the original proceedings out of his office. The King v. Ramdhone Pattuck. 7th March 1815. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 35. The King v. Kistodhurn Tagore. 7th March 1815. Ib.

21. A prisoner was found guilty of murder on board a ship which was said to be the property of A, B, and C. Counsel on behalf of the prisoner moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground that it was proved at the trial that the interest of A in the vessel had ceased previous to the commission of the offence, and that the ship belonged to the remaining two partners. The Court stated that they thought the objection good, but referred the case home. The sentence was afterwards commuted to transportation. Rex v. Appa. 1825. Clarke's Notes on the 9th Geo. IV. cap. 74. note 14. p. 73

21 a. A plea to an indictment for a misdemeanour by a native of Arcot, resident at Serroor, in the dominions of the Peshwa, to the jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court of Bombay, was overruled, on the ground that it amounted to a plea of the general issue, no other Court of competent jurisdiction being stated for the trial of the offence. Poonchhoty Moondliar v. The King. 20th Feb. 1835. 3 Knapp, 348.

22. A Hindú merchant, employed in the Commissariat Department of the Bombay army in camp at Serroor, within the territories of the Peshwa, having forged a receipt upon the East-India Company for charges incurred in the public service, which receipt was transmitted to Bombay, and there entered in the Commissariat accounts, was indicted for the misdemeanour in the Recorder's Court at Bombay. Held by the Judicial Committee, that the uttering the receipt was the completion of the offence, and that therefore the indictment was well laid in Bombay. Ib.

23. Semble, The description of the Court of the Recorder of Bombay as the Court of the Honourable the Recorder of Bombay is not a fatal variance in an indictment for a misdemeanour within the jurisdiction. Ib.

24. Semble, It is not essential to aver specially that a receipt is a receipt for money, if the instrument on the face of it purports to be such, and is sufficiently set forth in the indictment. Ib.

25. Quære, Whether indictment for assault and false imprisonment will lie against a Sheriff's officer, who peaceably obtained entrance by the outer door in execution of a bailable writ, and after having been forcibly ejected without having made the actual arrest, obtained assistance, and entered by breaking open the outer door and made the arrest? Aga Kurboolie Mahomed and others v. The Queen. 17th June 1843. 3 Moore Ind. App. 164.

3. Jurisdiction.

(a) Ordinary.

26. Indictment for wilful murder. Verbal evidence of being in the service or employ of the East-India Company is sufficient to prove the jurisdiction. Rex v. Clarke. Hyde's Notes. 6th Dec. 1791. Mor. 217.

27. An alien-born, in the military service of the East-India Company, indicted for an offence committed in India, beyond the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, under the 26th Geo. III. c. 57. s. 29., was held not to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court (Dunkin, J., dissent). Rex v. Francisco Jose. Chamb. Notes. 15th Dec. 1797. Mor. 218.

28. The criminal jurisdiction of the Court cannot be founded by inference or intendment. Ib.

29. Judgment on a conviction of manslaughter was arrested, the defendant being a German, and this though he was, and had been for many years, a soldier in one of the King's regiments, doing duty at Secunderabad when the homicide was committed. Rex v. Schomberg. 4th Sess. 1815. 1 Str. 164, note.

30. A person born in wedlock at Madras, his father being a German, and his mother a Scotchwoman, was declared by the Advocate General to be a British subject, and amenable only to the Supreme Court; but the onus probandi as to his birth rests with the prisoner. Case of Maudville. 24th Nov. 1821. 2 N.A. Rep. 111.

31. Upon an appeal to the Privy Council, it was held, that a person resident at Benares, and nowise personally subject to the general jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, is subject to the criminal jurisdiction of such Court in respect of a conspiracy in Calcutta, to which he was privy, though he himself had never actually been within the local limits of the jurisdiction. Where, therefore, a party resident at Benares was indicted with others before the Supreme Court for a conspiracy in procuring the prosecutor to be arrested in a fictitious action at law, and the instructions for the arrest were proved to the satisfaction of the jury to have originated with the appellant, it was held by the Judicial Committee, that the offence being completed within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, that Court had rightly assumed jurisdiction over the parties privy to it, though, from the slight nature of the evidence, they directed a new trial. Jamokee Doss v. Rex, on the procs. of Bunderban. 5th Dec. 1836. Mor. 222. 1 Moore, 67. 1 Moore Ind. App. 67.

32. The Court has no power to remove a conviction by a Zillah Magistrate of a British subject but by the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. In the matter of Pattle. Nov. 1836. 1 Fulton, 313.

33. Although under the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 24. the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a civil action for false imprisonment against a provincial magistrate, acting in his judicial capacity, it seems that a criminal prosecution for false imprisonment against a provincial magistrate will be entertained by the Supreme Court. The Queen v. Ogiley. Jan. 1839. Mor. 181, note.

(b) To Grant Criminal Informations.

34. The Supreme Court has the power of granting criminal informations.<sup>1</sup> Rex v. Coch. Chanb. Notes. 25th Mar. 1791. Mor. 215.

35. It was held that the Court has power, under the words of the Charter and the several Acts of Parliament passed relative to the juris-isdiction of the Court, to grant a criminal information out of Sessions. Rex v. Buckingham. 15th Nov. 1820. East's Notes. Case 21.

36. Per Fuller, C. J. "Though a power is given by the Charter to the Judges similar to that possessed by the Court of K. B., and under which it can grant informations and issue certain prerogative writs, such power can only extend to those places and those persons over whom a jurisdiction had been previously given." Rex v. Goculnauth Mullick. 22d April 1824. Mor. 222, note.

37. Dicta of Grey, C. J. In shewing cause why a criminal information should not issue for obstructing the execution of a capias ad respondendum, affidavits cannot be received to shew, nor can it be argued, that the party against whom the writ was directed was not subject to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the writ was obtained; but it would be necessary to prove at the trial that he was subject to the jurisdiction. The Supreme Court has two criminal jurisdictions in respect of natives, one under Clause XIX. of the Charter as a Court of Oyer and Terminer, the other similar to the Court of K. B. in England in respect to criminal informations. As a Court of Oyer and Terminer, natives could only be tried for offences committed by them within the Mahratta ditch; but the Court has power to grant a criminal information against any person whatsoever residing within the Company's territories (though not otherwise subject to the jurisdiction), in those cases in which the Court of K. B. in England would grant a criminal information against persons residing in England. Rex v. Wright and others. 19th June 1827. Sm. R. 117. Cl. R. 1829. 330. Mor. 222.

<sup>1</sup> By the Stat. 53d Geo. III. c. 155. s. 3. it is expressly provided, that the Advocate General shall be empowered to exhibit informations in the Supreme Courts for or on behalf of the Crown, as the Attorney General in England is by law authorised to do. Under this Statute the question has been raised, whether the right of precedence at the bar of the Court can be claimed by the Advocate General virtute officii; but the question has never been determined.

(c) Admiralty, in Crimes Maritime.

38. It was held, that the Court had no authority to try persons charged with piracy and murder on the high seas; and this being the case, the Court approved of the Governor-General's intention to issue a warrant, and to send the prisoners to England for trial, unless, on examination, they could fully answer the charges made against them. Case of O'Donnell and Maclurey. Hyde's Notes. 10th July 1782. Mor. 212.

39. But this case is contradicted by a dictum of Peel, C. J. The jurisdiction of the Court on its Admiralty side is co-extensive with the Court in England.<sup>1</sup> Murray v. Longford. 26th Jan. 1843. 1 Fulton, 130.

40. Indictment for kidnapping and selling as slaves. The defendant, the captain of a ship, was a Dane by birth, but had resided in Calcutta before the voyage, and his wife and family resided there while he was absent on the voyage. The ship sailed under British colours. The slaves were purchased at Chandernagore, and sold at Ceylon, and the defendant was in Calcutta when he gave the order to purchase them. The defendant was held to be subject to the jurisdiction. Ree v. Horrebom. Chamb. Notes. 5th Aug. 1789. Mor. 213.

41. Indictment for an assault with intent to kill, committed at sea. It appears that the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to try for murder where the wound was given at sea, and the death happened at Prince of Wales' Island. Ree v. Storey. Chamb. Notes. 7th Aug. 1797. Mor. 217.

42. Quære, Whether the proof of a claim for head-money is to be made on the Admiralty side of the Supreme Court, or in the Vice-Admiralty Court? and whether the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to hear such proof under the 28th Sec. of the Charter? H. M.'s Ship Andromache. 3d Term 1837. 1 Fulton, 71.

43. The Supreme Court at Calcutta has no jurisdiction on its Admiralty side to try aliens for robbery committed on the high seas on board an alien merchant ship in which they were serving. The King v. Agapisto de los Reis and others. 23d Sept. 1837. 2 Sm. & Ry. App. 90.

44. The Supreme Court of Bombay has jurisdiction under Act XXXI. of 1838 to try, in its Admiralty jurisdiction, offences committed on the high seas by a British subject. In the matter of Alloo Parroo, on the Petition of his Wives. 17th June 1845. Perry's Notes. Case 16.

45. By the Charter of Bombay, the Supreme Court has full power and absolute authority to allow or deny all appeal in criminal cases. In the matter of Alloo Parroo. 26th June 1847. MS. Notes of P. C. cases.

5. Bail.

45a. Although a defendant be convicted of a misdemeanour, and the counsel for the prosecution insist upon his immediate commitment, the Court has a discretionary power of allowing him to continue at large on his recognizances. The King v. Reddy Row and another. 1809. 2 Str. 6.

45b. Where the bail tendered by a defendant indicted for a misdemeanour are disapproved of by the Clerk of the Crown, it is final, and the Supreme Court will listen to no application on the subject. The Queen v. Peer Ally. 28th Jan. 1840. Mor. 304.

6. Costs on the Crown side of the Court.

45c. Costs are never granted upon a motion being refused on the Crown side. The Queen v. Peer Ally. 28th Jan. 1840. Mor. 304.

7. Jury of Matrons.

45*d.* It appears that a jury of matrons, to try whether a female prisoner sentenced to death is with child, should be Christian women. Rex v. Peggy. Hyde's Notes, 20th Dec. 1777. Mor. 260.

III. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Abortion.

46. A prisoner (not being quick with child) was convicted of destroying a fetus in her womb: the Court deemed the punishment of six months' imprisonment, which she had undergone, a sufficient punishment. Government v. Mt. Dhunkoorvee. 14th Aug. 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 464. — Leycester & Dorin.

47. It is irregular, under the Court's Circular Orders, for police officers to prosecute an inquiry into a case of abortion, though the case originated in the discovery of a murdered infant, the one case having no connection with the other. Ib.

48. A prisoner was charged with procuring abortion, and convicted by the futwas of causing the death of her infant by exposure. The Court held this to be a conviction of a greater offence than was charged, and essentially distinct, and sentenced her, for procuring abortion only, to imprisonment for two years. Government v. Mt. Zynd. 12th July 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 56. — Leycester & Dorin.

2. Accidental Homicide.

49. A prisoner convicted of homicide by misadventure by the law officer of the Court, was released; his confession that he killed the deceased at night, mistaking him for a dog or a jackall, being corroborated by the only witness in the case. Mt. Rasoo v. Mohun Lounda. 15th March 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 67. — Leycester.

50. The death of a child, occasioned by the neglect of the person in charge of it, subjects such person to the payment of *Diya*t, as incurred by the commission of Katl-i-háim makám-ba-khatáa, or homicide by misadventure. The Court, however, in this case, considering the prisoner guilty of the murder of the child, sentenced her to imprisonment for life. Government v. Mt. Beebun. 31st March 1819. 1 N. A. Rep. 382. — Fendall & Rees.

51. A prisoner convicted by the law officer of the Court of Katl-i-khatáa, in accidentally shooting the deceased whilst firing at a wild hog, and declared liable to *Diya*t, was acquitted and released by the Court. Government v. Rozario. 11th Jan. 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 1. — Rattray & Sealy.

3. Accomplice.

52. To the conviction of an accomplice in a case of affray, it is not necessary that the principal should be convicted. Needoo Adak v. Goor Corrah. 7th Feb. 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 97. — Leycester.

4. Administering Poisonous or Deleterious Drugs.

53. Administering a deleterious drug (dhatirá), to the effects of which the death of the deceased is to be attributed, not coming within the five-fold definition of culpable homicide under the Muhammadan law, the prisoner was declared liable to discretionary punishment by Ahúbat, and imprisoned for life. Government v. Mt. Sookhoo. 24th July 1800. 1 N. A. Rep. 216. — Harington & Fombelle.

54. The Futwa declared that the act of giving poison with a murderous intent to one person, by means of which poison a third person is unintentionally killed, is not, by Muhammadan law, punishable with death. But the Nizamut Adawlut may inflict capital punishment under the provisions of Cl. 1. of Sec. 10. of Reg. VIII. of 1803 (Sec. 5. of Reg. VIII. of 1799 for the Lower Provinces). Sentence, death. Government v. Mt. Indeca. 20th Dec. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 287. — Fombelle & Rees.

55. A prisoner convicted by the Commissioner of robbery and administering noxious drugs, and sentenced to thirty-nine rattans and fourteen years' imprisonment, with labour. The Court, considering the crime proved against the prisoner to amount to robbery attended with an attempt to poison, and that, in that case, the Commissioner was not competent to pass any other sentence than that prescribed by Cl. 4. of Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1817, viz. imprisonment in transportation for life, annulled his order as irregular; but being of opinion that thirty-nine rattans and fourteen years' imprisonment with labour was an adequate punishment in the present instance, a sentence to that effect was passed. Government v. Kishen Singh. 17th May 1830. 3 N. A. Rep. 333. — Ross & Rattray.

5. Adultery.

56. By the Muhammadan law, persons who harbour adulterers are liable to Akibat. Gooroopershaud Cawora v. Ramsoonder and others. 11th Sept. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 42. — C. Smith & Goad.

57. A prisoner was acquitted of the charge of rape, but convicted of the minor offence of adultery, and punished for the same as an offence contra bonos mores, and sentenced to imprisonment for one year, with labour. Mt. Jooce v. Bungsee Baoree. 10th Feb. 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 317. — C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

58. According to the intent and spirit of Cl. 4. of Sec. 6. of Reg. XVII. of 1817, it is equally requisite that, in charges of adultery, the husband should appear as the prosecutor, whether the person charged be the adulterer or adulteress. Government v. Panchoo and others. 27th Sept. 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 421. — C. Smith & H. Shakespear.

59. A complaint having been preferred to a magistrate by an individual against another under Reg. VII. of 1819 for enticing away his wife, with ornaments; the magistrate, instead of trying the complaint, proceeded to commit the prisoners on a charge of adultery. The Nizamut Adawlut quashed the proceedings on the trial, in consequence of such irregular commitment, and because the charge had not been preferred by the husband. Bhorance v. Sheo Singh and another. 30th Aug. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 177. — Leycester & Turnbull.

60. The Court held, that in a trial for rape the prisoner cannot be convicted of adultery, thus superseding the precedent in the case of Bungsee Baoree, Pl. 56. Government v. Sirdar Shookul and another. 16th Aug. 1830. 5 N. A. Rep. 140. — Rattray & Reid.

6. Affray.

61. The Muhammadan law makes a distinction between him who is proved to have struck the deceased in an affray, and those present aiding and abetting. The Nizamut Adawlut considered all present equally culpable, and sentenced them accordingly to imprisonment for five years. Mt. Soondree v. Rajoo Gaynee and others. 30th April 1814. 1 N. A. Rep. 299. — Colebrooke & Fombelle.

62. Resistance shewn by a farmer to persons legally authorized to restrain his effects, was held to be a criminal act, and punishable with imprisonment, notwithstanding the distress may have been levied in an irregular manner; the farmer having it always in his power to obtain redress by application to a court of justice. Huree

Pershaud Mujmooadar and others v. Kifayut Mundul and others. 4th Oct. 1814. 1 N. A. Rep. 302.—Fombelle & Rees.

63. It is no ground for a total remission of sentence that a party engaged in an affray was not the aggressing party; though the Nizamut Adawlut in awarding punishment may admit the circumstance to operate in mitigation. Sentence, two years' imprisonment. Livingsstone and another v. Unroodh Thakoor and others. 1st Nov. 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 339.—C. Smith & Martin.

64. Affray attended with the murder of a slave. The price of the slave was declared to be due from the Akila of the principal offender, and himself liable to Akibat, and the aiders and abettors to Tazir. Mahomed Akber v. Hussein Ali and others. 5th April 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 381.—C. Smith.

65. The prisoner having been convicted of affray, for which a prisoner formerly tried was sentenced by the Nizamut Adawlut to thirty corahs and fourteen years' imprisonment, the Judge of Circuit proposed to sentence him to the same punishment; but the Court, deeming the prisoner entitled to the benefit of Sec. 7. of Reg. XII. of 1825, sent back the trial for the Judge to pass sentence. Government v. Kooshee Rai. 7th March 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 107.—Leycester & Sealy.

66. On a conviction of affray, attended with wounding, the Court, advertg to the respectability of one of the ringleaders, remitted imprisonment, and sentenced the parties to pay fines according to their respective degrees of guilt. Government v. Momin and others. 2d May 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 141.—Sealy & Rattray.

67. Held, that the discrepancy of the evidence of the parties in an affray affords no ground for the acquittal of those charged: credit must be given to that which appears best supported by the circumstances of the case. Sentence, imprisonment for five years. Ronesun Pardhun v.

Ruggoo Dhobey and others. 22d April 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 221.—Leycester & Rattray.

68. The evidence for the prosecution went to prove that the brother of one of the prosecutors had been murdered by the prisoners; but the surgeon reporting that death had been occasioned by submersion, and that the deceased had been long blind, the prisoners were convicted of affray attended with the wounding of one of the prosecutors, and sentenced accordingly. Ramjewan Race and others v. Bullabee Kotai and others. 28th Aug. 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 273.—Rattray & Turnbull.

69. In a case where an affray was the consequence of an attachment of property made by a peon under the order of a Moonsiff, the Court held, that the officer serving the process is not necessarily bound to exhibit the warrant upon which he acted, if no demand be made to such effect. Alapoo v. Hamood and others. 31st Aug. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 251.—H. Shakespear, Rattray, & Walpole.

70. In a case of affray, in which a reference was made to the Nizamut Adawlut under the provisions of Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1823, for mitigation, in regard to one party, of the minimum punishment which the Session Judge is competent to pass under Sec. 2. of that Regulation; it was held, that the affray was not one of the nature contemplated by Reg. II. of 1823, as explained by Reg. VI. of 1828, and would have returned the case to be disposed of by the Session Judge. But an appeal having been lodged, the Court disposed of the trial in regard to one party, by directing their acquittal, and instructed the Session Judge to pass sentence on the rest of the prisoners. Government v. Durpmarain Christian and others and Rajchunder and others. 8th Sept. 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 73.—Harding & Hutchinson.

7. Appeals.

71. Sec 5. of Reg. III. of 1821 is construed as intended to limit the period of appeal, merely as relates to appellants, without restricting the discretionary authority of supervision possessed by the Superior Courts. Government v. Himmat and another. 10th Dec. 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 221.

72. Held, that it is not necessary for a Court of Circuit to furnish a magistrate with a copy of a petition of appeal against his proceedings, though a copy of the order passed in appeal should be furnished. Ib.

8. Arson.

73. The Futna of the Circuit Court found that the prisoner set fire to his own house, but declared him liable to no punishment as he warned the people to remove their goods, so that no injury occurred to any one. The Circuit Judge, however, convicted him of arson, and sentenced him to be imprisoned for one year without labour or irons. The Court, calling for the case, annulled the sentence as illegal, as the Circuit Judge differing from his law officer could not pass sentence; but, convicting the prisoner of the crime charged, sentenced him to the same punishment. Government v. Nundee. 30th April 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 231.—Leycester & Turnbull.

9. Assault.

74. A Barkandáz, in a quarrel with the Daroghah, fetched his blunderbuss (not proved to be loaded) with which he threatened to shoot him. The Court, deeming him guilty of violent and insubordinate behaviour towards his superior officer, and not being satisfied that his intent was murderous, sentenced him to be imprisoned without labour or irons for six months. Government v. Tegh Ali Khan. 4th June 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 402.—C. Smith & Sealy.

75. A Jamadár of a battalion, eight sepoy, and a peon, having been convicted by the law officer of assaulting the dwelling-house of a Zamindár, wounding him and another with musket balls, and severely beating a third person with clubs, the Circuit Judge concurred in the conviction, but referred the trial to the Nizamut Adawlut on a doubt whether the sepoy were not justified, they having acted under the orders of the Jamadár, their superior officer. The Court returned the proceedings, informing the Circuit Judge, that though the fact noted might operate in mitigation of punishment, it could not justify a gross infraction of the peace, where the criminality was obvious, and directed him to pass sentence. Bhowanny Pershaud and another v. Moonowar and others. 28th April 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 128.—Leycester & Turnbull.

76. A prisoner was convicted of attempting to stab the magistrate with a dagger, and sentenced by the Circuit Judge to imprisonment for five years; but the Judge referring the case for enhancement of punishment, the Court confirmed the sentence, with reference to the illegal act of disarming the prisoner of his weapons, which had been ordered by the magistrate, and caused the attempt. Government v. Pyzoolah Khan. 24th Oct. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 196.—Leycester & Rattray.

77. The prisoners were convicted and sentenced by the Commissioner to five years' imprisonment for an aggravated assault, attended with wounding, plundering, and abduction, but acquitted by the Nizamut Adawlut on a revision of the proceedings; the Court, with reference to the improbable nature of the charge, and the discrepancies in the depositions of some of the witnesses, deeming the evidence insufficient for conviction. Akbur Ali v. Mohun Chunder Buttoorjeah and another. 12th June 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 41.—Ross & Turnbull.

10. Bail.

78. When a prisoner on bail has not been apprehended until some time after the date of the sentence, a special report should be made to the Nizamut Adawlut, through the Court of Circuit, for their orders, as to the date from which the sentence should commence. Roopun Rai v. Jugall and others. 6th July 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 49.

79. At the termination of a trial by a Session Judge, the Commissioner of Circuit is not competent, under any circumstances, to direct that the prisoner shall be held to bail pending the reference to the Nizamut Adawlut. But the Session Judge, under Secs. 5. and 6. of Reg. VII. of 1831, possessing the same powers in the trial of commitments to his Court as had been confided to the Commissioner before that enactment, is competent to pass that order. Government v. Alexander. 26th Nov. 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 332. — H. Shakespear & Rattray.

11. Burglary.

80. The prisoners were convicted of burglary with wounding, having been detected in the act of undermining the wall of a dwelling-house at night before they had effected an entry, and one of them having wounded the person who apprehended him. Sentence, thirty-nine korahs and imprisonment in banishment for fourteen years. Mirza Badul Beg and another v. Choonee Caundoo and another. 30th July 1812. 1 N. A. Rep. 243. — Burgess & Rees.

81. If a thief break through the wall of a house, and, entering therein, take the property of another, and deliver it to an accomplice standing at the entrance of the breach, the specific penalty of Hadd prescribed by the Muhammadan law for larceny without open violence (Sarakah-i-sogra) is not incurred by either of the parties. Sentence, twenty-five korahs and imprisonment in banishment for fourteen years. Poorun v. Munghram and another. 6th Feb. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 250. — Fombelle & Rees.

82. Entering a dwelling-house with intent to rob, by lifting a door off its hinges, is burglary agreeably to the provisions of Cl. 2. of Sec. 2. of Reg. I. of 1811; also, an entry by loosening and lifting a chopper or straw thatch of a house; but not an entry by a door left open, or by climbing over an outer wall, unless followed by a burglarious entry into the house. Beharee Sahoo v. Gunga Bishen. 19th June 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 270. — Colchbrooke & Fombelle.

83. The prisoners were convicted of breaking into a cow-house which adjoined a dwelling-house, and was situated in the same enclosure, and stealing cattle from the same. This was held not to be burglary as defined in Cl. 2. of Sec. 2. of Reg. I. of 1811. Sentence, twenty stripes and imprisonment for seven years. Bazeed v. Sheebatoo and others. 13th Dec. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 286. — Fombelle & Rees.

84. In trials for burglary attended with violence by a gang of more than three armed persons, it should always be specified in the charge, whether the violence was simultaneous with, or subsequent to, the entry; as in the former case the crime is that of Dacoity, as defined in Cl. 1. of Sec. 3. of Reg. III. of 1803. Mt. Chumpa v. Mudden Jena. 22d Aug. 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 271. — Leicester & Ross.

85. Of several prisoners, No. 1 was convicted of burglary and theft in the prosecutor's house, and taking the prosecutor's daughter out of the house, and, after taking her ornaments, throwing her down in a garden, and thereby endangering her life; No. 2, of receiving part of the stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen; No. 3, of privy to the theft; and No. 4, acquitted. With reference to a doubt of the Session Judge, he was informed that this being a case of burglary, attended with corporal injury in such a degree as to endanger life, was necessarily referrible under Cl. 4. of Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1817. Sentence, No. 1, imprisonment for ten years; No. 2, for seven years; No. 3, for three years; all with labour in irons. Jyckishen Mehtee v. Needhee Mullick and others. 15th March 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 284.—H. Shakespear.

86. Two prisoners burglariously entered the house of a person and stole his property: the owner of the house awoke, and, pursuing the thieves, met his death at the hand of one, who, on conviction, was sentenced to suffer death. Sentence, No. 1, death, and No. 2, imprisonment with hard labour for fourteen years. Mt. Gadde v. Pohoo Khora and another. 13th June 1836. 5 N. A. Rep. 23.—Halhed & D. C. Smyth.

12. Childstealing.

87. Prisoners charged with stealing a child, of whom no trace could afterwards be discovered, were declared by the law officers to be liable to imprisonment until they restored the missing child; but the Nizamut Adawlut sentenced them to a definite period of imprisonment, there being no reason to suppose that the child had been murdered. Khutela v. Mt. Muna and others. 5th March 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 66.—C. Smith & Goad.

88. The Circuit Judge referred the trial of the prisoner, whom he convicted of inveigling away a girl of about six years of age, because he doubted his competency to sentence him to a specific punishment of four years, and to a further period of three years, conditional on his giving such information as might lead to the recovery of the missing girl. The Court, being of opinion that it was competent to the Circuit Judge to pass the proposed sentence, returned the trial to him, with directions to dispose of it in the usual manner. Government v. Dursun. 31st Jan. 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 447.—C. Smith & Dorin.

13. Coin, counterfeiting the.

89. To a conviction of forgery it is not necessary that the coins forged should be base metal, or that the imitation be of a coin which is a legal tender, provided it be current among the natives. Sentence, imprisonment for three years with labour and irons. Government v. Phudalee and another. 23d May 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 177.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

90. A prisoner was charged with possessing counterfeit coin, and acquitted, it being held that the provisions of Sec. 11. of Reg. XVII. of 1817 are not applicable to a carrier of counterfeit coin for another, it being presumed he was ignorant of their nature. Government v. Chopu Aheer. 16th July 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 58.—Leycester & Dorin.

91. To establish the charge of counterfeiting coin, it is not necessary that the criminal should be detected in the act of forgery. The prisoner was convicted of having in his possession counterfeit pice, and an earthen mould, with other implements for fabricating the same, under circumstances indicating that the latter had been recently used in forging spurious pice, and he was sentenced to imprisonment for two years with labour in irons. Government v. Hassan Buksh. 31st Oct. 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 95.—Ross & Turnbull.

92. A prisoner was convicted of forging coin, and recommended by the Commissioner as a proper object of mercy, he being seventy-two years old, and of weak intellect, and possibly the dupe of other scheming relations, who escaped, with an opinion that imprisonment for six months would answer the ends of justice. The Court held, that age and infirmity were insufficient grounds for mitigation to the extent proposed, but reduced the sentence from seven years, to three years' imprisonment without labour or irons. Government v. Radhakant Kamar. 10th Sept. 1832. 4 N. A. Rep. 174.—H. Shakespear & Rattray.

93. Held, that having in possession instruments of coining, with the intent to forge the current coin, is a punishable offence. The prisoners were convicted of this offence, and No. 1 being an old offender was sentenced to a more severe punishment than the others. Sentence, No. 1, imprisonment with labour and irons for seven years; Nos. 2 and 3 for three years without labour or irons, and a fine of Rs. 50 each, commutable to labour. Government v. Pran Kumar and others. 24th April 1840. 5 N. A. Rep. 171.—Reid.

14. Commitment.

94. A charge of corruption made before a magistrate not having been established, the magistrate is authorized to commit the accuser to take his trial for perjury at the instance of the party accused, should he find sufficient grounds for so doing. And the commitment is not illegal, though made pending an appeal from the decision of the magistrate, preferred by the original accuser to the Court of Circuit. With a view, however, to avoid conflicting decisions, it was considered advisable to postpone the trial for perjury, until the appealed case was disposed of; the question of the prisoner's being innocent or guilty of the alleged perjury resting on the truth or falsehood of the original charge. Byjnauth v. Hingoo Lall and another. 16th May 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 263.

95. A magistrate is authorized to commit all parties in a fatal duel, to take their trial for murder; and it is not requisite to authorize the commitment, that a case should be made by a private prosecutor. Government v. Beaufort and others. 7th Aug. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 277.—Colebrooke, Fombelle, & Stuart.

96. The prisoner having admitted before the Maulavi that he had perjured himself in the Court of the Register, was sent by the Maulavi to the magistrate, and committed by the latter officer to stand his trial for perjury. Held, that the proceeding was irregular, and that the commitment should have been made at the instance of the Court in which the perjury was committed. The proceedings of the Circuit Court were annulled, and the prisoner held to bail to answer the charge of perjury, if brought before the Judge on any report which the Register might make to him in conformity with Cl. 2. of Sec. 14. of Reg. XVII. of 1817. Government v. Ramjee Rai. 3d Oct. 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 208.—Goad & Dorin.

97. It is not competent to a magistrate, without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, to commit individuals to take their trial, for whom he had obtained a conditional pardon from that Court; but he having done so, it is competent to the Judge of Circuit to renew the offer of pardon. Mt. Pance v. Urjoon Biswal and others. 17th Sept. 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 289.—C. Smith, Lyecester, & J. Shakespear.

98. When one prisoner is committed for trial, all implicated in the same case should be committed also. Punchuma v. Dowlut. 24th May 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 396.—C. Smith & Sealy.

99. The Court, having annulled the proceedings on a trial, in consequence of its having been held without the previous permission of Government for the commitment (the offence having been committed in a foreign territory), and ordered the re-commitment after the necessary permission had been obtained, did not deem it necessary to direct that those persons should be re-committed against whom there was no sufficient evidence, and who would have been acquitted had the trial been legal. Chynsookh v. Umra Lodh and others. 18th May 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 393.—C. Smith & Sealy.

100. In a case of theft attended with murder, the magistrate committed one of the persons concerned on the simple charge of theft, absolving him from participation in the murder; and in another case of theft attended with burglary, committed on the same night, in which the same individual was concerned, he made no commitment, but appended his proceedings to the former case. The Court, deeming the whole of these proceedings irregular, quashed them; and directed that the prisoner should be committed on the whole of the first, and also on the second charge. They also informed the Circuit Judge that he should have quashed the commitment, with the concurrence of one of his colleagues. Bhowanee v. Illahya. 3d June 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 457.—Leycester & Ross.

101. The Court ruled that a magistrate cannot commit on a charge of "Murder while in a state of insanity;" the wording of the commitment being erroneous and absurd, taken as a criminal charge, and the magistrate not being competent to determine the question of sanity or otherwise. Government v. Kulloo. 19th July 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 60.—C. Smith & Dorin.

102. A single Judge of Circuit having directed the commitment of an individual who had been released by the magistrate, he being incompetent to pass such an order without the concurrence of one of his colleagues, the majority of the Nizamut Adawlut were of opinion that they could not confirm this irregular order, and annulled it accordingly. A Session Judge possessing the full power heretofore vested in the Court of Circuit collectively, may pass an order for commitment. Mudaree v. Kulloo. 31st May 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 73.—Leycester, Sealy, & Dorin.

103. Held, that a single Judge of Circuit is not competent to direct the re-apprehension and commitment of a prisoner who had been discharged by the magistrate, unless on new and distinct grounds; and a trial which had thus irregularly originated, was quashed by the Nizamut Adawlut.

Sahib Lal v. Sumbhoo Deb. 27th March 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 120.—Leycester & Sealy.

104. A complaint having been preferred to a magistrate by an individual, under Reg. VII. of 1819, for enticing away his wife with her ornaments, the magistrate was not competent to commit for adultery; and the Nizamut Adawlut quashed a trial held in consequence of such commitment. Bhowanee v. Sheo Singh and another. 30th Aug. 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 177.—Leycester & Turnbull.

105. A commitment by a magistrate for forgery and perjury in a civil suit, without reference to the Civil Court, was declared illegal and void; the provisions of Reg. III. of 1801 being considered applicable to charges of forgery preferred by parties in civil suits against their opponents. Government v. Bungsee Dhur Chowdree and others. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 203.—Leycester & Sealy.

106. Under Sec. 14. of Reg. XVII. of 1817, the Judge only is competent to commit for perjury committed before himself. The commitment having been made by the magistrate, under such circumstances, vitiates the trial. Government v. Neemut Oollah and another. 20th Nov. 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 290.—Leycester & Turnbull.

107. Held, that as no charge had been preferred against her by her husband, the commitment of a female prisoner (who died before the close of the trial) for adultery, was improper under Reg. XVII. of 1817. Sheikh Ramzaan v. Ruheem Oollah and another. 10th Feb. 1830. 3 N. A. Rep. 298.—Sealy & Rattray.

108. A prisoner acquitted on a charge of murder, appearing to have knowingly received property obtained by robbery, the Court directed that he should be committed and brought to trial on that charge. Choonce Lal v. Kuchoonna and others. 7th May 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 32.—Ross & H. Shakespear.

109. In a case in which three prisoners were originally committed for trial, the Session Judge annulled the commitment and directed further inquiry. The magistrate, having completed the inquiry, released two of the prisoners, and re-committed the third. Held, that this was irregular in the Session Judge, and that the prisoners, who had been committed, should be tried, and a sentence of acquittal passed upon them, in the event of deficiency of evidence to convict. Mt. Pearee Muneo Bustonce v. Mt. Labnunee Bustonce. 25th March 1839. 5 N.A. Rep. 116.—Reid.

110. A charge of assault having been preferred by certain parties against each other, the magistrate committed both for affray in one case. The Session Judge, after taking the evidence for the prosecution, returned the proceedings to the magistrate, with instructions to make two separate commitments on the charge and counter-charge preferred by the opposing parties. The magistrate, in carrying these orders into effect, took the evidence of one of the prisoners first committed, and omitted his name in the list of prisoners on the subsequent commitments, and sent him up to the Sessions Court as a witness, without its calling forth any remark from the Session Judge. Held, that a sentence of acquittal or conviction should have been passed upon every prisoner committed. Government v. Joy Chaund and others. 14th Oct. 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 145.—Tucker.

111. On the trial of a Moonsiff, charged with corruption, it appeared that the Civil Judge conducted the whole of the preliminary inquiry on the commitment, leaving it to the magistrate only to submit the proceedings to the Sessions Court. Held, by the Court, that the Judge should have confined himself to a preliminary inquiry, and have ordered the Government Pleader to prefer a charge of corruption before the magistrate. They quashed the proceedings, and directed the Judge to follow the course above indicated. Government v. Abool Hussien. 20th

Dec. 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 151.—Court at large.

112. The Session Judge having annulled the commitment of certain prisoners on a charge of affray, directed the re-commitment of one party on the charge of assault and homicide, and the admission of the other party as evidence against them, under the provisions of Reg. X. of 1824. Held, that the Regulation cited was not applicable to the case, affray not being enumerated in Cl. 1. of Sec. 2. of Reg. X. of 1824, as one of the offences which the magistrate is authorized to tender a pardon to the persons concerned in. Held, also, that the Session Judge should not have finally disposed of the prisoners admitted as evidence, without formally passing upon them a sentence of acquittal; and, further, that the misapplication of the Regulation by the Session Judge did not vitiate the proceedings on the last commitment. Manoolah v. Khateer Chameedar and others. 29th Aug. 1840. 5 N. A. Rep. 173.—Laycester & D. C. Smyth.

15. Compulsion, Homicide by.

113. The prisoner having killed the deceased by order of his master, and under fear of immediate death in case of refusal, the Futwas declared that he was not liable to Kisás, and should be released. The Court accordingly directed his immediate release. Boodhoo v. Ratra. 30th Jan. 1806. 1 N. A. Rep. 101.—Harington & Fombelle.

<sup>1</sup> Homicide by compulsion (Kirah), under menaces which induce a fear of death, is not strictly justifiable under Muhammadan law; but the penalty of Kisás, according to the doctrine of Abú Hanifah and Muhammad, is transferred to the compeller; and the compelled person is considered rather the instrument than the author of the homicide, yet not altogether free from criminality, as the act is unlawful, and subject to discretionary punishment, if the circumstances of the case may appear to require it.

16. Concealment of Murder.

114. Concealment of murder is, under the Muhammadan law, punishable at discretion. Poonirja v. Fyzoo. 10th Jan. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 2.

17. Confessions.

115. The only evidence against the prisoner, charged with murder, being his own confessions, in which he stated that he killed the deceased in self defence, after having committed adultery with the deceased's wife, the plea was admitted in mitigation, and the prisoner sentenced to imprisonment for two years. Government v. Dhununjee. 9th July 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 39.—Harington and Fombelle.

116. The prisoner, charged with the murder of his concubine, confessed that he killed her from irritation at abusive language and kicks. But his acknowledged continuance for nearly an hour in the act of strangling the deceased, appeared to take the case altogether out of the predicament of homicide on sudden provocation, and to evince deliberation and malice, such as distinguish the crime of murder. Sentence, death. Shirkut Ullah v. Sonu Ghazee. 14th Sept. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 60.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

117. The Court admitted the confession of No. 1 (on the trial of the prisoners for the murder of her husband), corroborated by other evidence, though it appeared that the police Dárooghah had irregularly and improperly held out hopes of impunity as an inducement to the prisoner to confess. The Court directed that the Dárooghah should be reprimanded, and admonished not to repeat such means of obtaining confession. Sentence, death. Government v. Mt. Luckhnee and others. 12th Nov. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 81.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

118. The prisoner was convicted on his own confession of being an accomplice in robbery and murder; but the confession, the only evidence against him, having been made without promise or inducement to confess, apparently with a view to a pardon on conviction of accomplices, the Court did not think fit to reject it, but admitted it, with his voluntary surrender, and his not appearing to have been actually concerned in murder, in mitigation of a capital sentence. Government v. Tulce and others. 28th Jan. 1806. 1 N. A. Rep. 98.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

119. On a charge of murder, the only direct proof being the confession of one of the prisoners, implicating the other two; and that confession appearing to have been extorted by the police by intimidation and blows, it was considered inadmissible, and the prisoners were acquitted. Jan Moohummud v. Deenut and others. 24th April 1806. 1 N. A. Rep. 104.—Harington & Fombelle.

120. On a charge of murder of his wife, the only evidence against the prisoner being his own confession, in which he declared that he had no intention of killing the deceased, his offence was held to amount to culpable homicide, and he was sentenced to imprisonment for five years. Government v. Shaikh Mangal. 12th Aug. 1806. 1 N. A. Rep. 110.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

121. The only evidence against the prisoner being his own confession, which contained a legal justification of the homicide (that he killed his wife and her paramour in the act of adultery), the Court held that the whole confession must be taken as it stood, and accordingly acquitted the prisoner. Government v. Thundee. 4th Dec. 1806. 1 N. A. Rep. 130.—Harington & Fombelle.

122. The prisoner was acquitted on the charge of murdering his infant child, the only evidence against him being his own confession, which he subsequently stated to be untrue and obtained by violence, and there being no proof of the birth of the child. Government v. Muncie Ram. 21st April 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 143.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

123. Where a man confessed a homicide, and in his different statements assigned various pleas of justification, and there being presumptive proof that the homicide was malicious, it was held to be murder. The prisoner was, under such circumstances, convicted of murder, and sentenced to capital punishment. Mt. Mughnee v. Ohariya. 28th April 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 144.—Harington & Fombelle.

124. The prisoner confessed that he killed the deceased while in the attempt to commit adultery with his (the prisoner's) wife. The homicide was considered justifiable, and the prisoner released. Mt. Bhooreen v. Rooder. 30th July 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 156.—Harington & Fombelle.

125. The prisoner confessed that he had unintentionally killed the deceased with a blow; but the marks and scratches on the throat of the deceased, and the concealment of the ornaments of the deceased by the prisoner, afforded strong presumption that the homicide was wilfully committed by strangulation. The prisoner was therefore convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Blugut Ram v. Ahil Mahomed. 24th Dec. 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 16.—Harington & Fombelle.

126. When there is no evidence against the acknowledger of an act, but his own confession, by Istihsan, or an approved construction of the law, he is not required to prove any exculpatory plea which such confession may involve. The prisoner was found to be insane, and acquitted. Government v. Pran. 12th May 1809. 1 N. A. Rep. 192.—Fombelle.

127. The prisoner having confessed that he killed the deceased while in the act of violating his patron's wife, the homicide was held to be justifiable, and he was acquitted. Munsaram Rajpoot v. Muna and others. 22d

July 1812. 1 N. A. Rep. 240.—Burgess.

128. A confession made by a prisoner, after having been promised his release by a police officer, is not entitled to any credit. The prisoner was, under such circumstances, acquitted. Bikao v. Anoop Dosad. 17th Feb. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 251.—Fombelle & Rees.

129. It is not regular to convict a prisoner of an offence solely on his own confession; but evidence must, under Sec. 6. of Reg. IX. of 1793, be taken as to the actual commission of the crime with which he is charged. Kheree v. Duleep Pashan. 12th March 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 255.—Fombelle & Rees.

130. The deposition of a witness to the confession of a prisoner cannot be received in evidence against him, unless it be taken in his presence. Government v. Mungaleea. 13th Sept. 1814. 1 N. A. Rep. 300.—Fombelle & Rees.

131. A confession of rape retracted by a prisoner was not considered by the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut as sufficient proof against him. The Court convicted him on his proved confession. Sentence, 39 korahs, and imprisonment for seven years. Mt. Rookman v. Ramsook. 29th March 1819. 1 N. A. Rep. 381.—Fendall & Goad.

132. The principal evidence against the prisoner, a boy of twelve or thirteen years of age, being furnished by his own voluntary confession, that evidence was declared by the law officer to be insufficient for his conviction by reason of his non-age. This doctrine was overruled by the Court, and the prisoner fully convicted of murder; and there appearing no circumstance in his favour but his minority to render him a proper object of mercy, and it being proved that he was doli capax, he was sentenced to imprisonment in transportation for life. Mt. Sahib Koonwur v. Sudasookh. 28th Jan. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 2.—Fombelle & Goad.

133. A prisoner, found guilty by the Futwa of the law officers of privacy to a Dacoity on his own confession in the Mofussil, and before the magistrate, was released by the Nizamut Adawlut; the persons whom he named as his accomplices having been acquitted of the charge of Dacoity. Government v. Narain and others. 6th April 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 21.—Leycester and Goad.

134. A prisoner was convicted of murder on his own confession, corroborated by circumstantial evidence; the circumstance of his having been desired by the police officers not to fear to tell the truth not being held to be a sufficient reason for rejecting the confession. Sentence, imprisonment for life. Government v. Huresingha. 9th Aug. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 33.—Goad & C. Smith.

135. The prisoner confessed at the Thanna that he killed with an arrow a person who had come to him for a debt, and who would not let him eat or drink. He subsequently stated before the magistrate that the homicide was accidental. The Circuit law officer declared that this statement should be received as most favourable to the prisoner. The law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut convicted him of murder, and declared him liable to Kisas. Sentence, imprisonment for life. Mt. Soojurmune v. Heeraram Cheith. 22d Aug. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 39.—Goad & Leycester.

136. The prisoner confessed that he killed his sister and her paramour in the act of fornication. The Futwa declared the act justifiable, and the Court acquitted the prisoner.<sup>1</sup> Go- vernment v. Gholam Mullick. 22d Sept. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 48.—Goad & C. Smith.

137. It is not sufficient that the confessions of a prisoner be verified before the magistrate, but it is necessary that the original confession be taken and written down in the presence of the magistrate or his assistant. The Court rejected the confessions, not so taken in this case, and released the prisoners. Gocoolchund Lal v. Cashce Manjee and others. 31st March 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 70.—Dorin & Goad.

138. The prisoner confessed that he killed his wife, not in the act of adultery, but on receiving abusive language when begging her to desist from her criminal intercourse with another man. Mr. C. Smith convicting the prisoner of murder, first proposed a capital sentence, but concurred in commuting it to perpetual imprisonment, which was the sentence passed. Government v. Phoolchund. 8th May 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 79.—Dorin, C. Smith, & Goad.

139. The prisoner confessed to a murder, and pointed out human bones, which he alleged to be those of the person murdered. The Court held, that as the bones did not admit of identification, this was not a sufficient finding of the body to warrant a capital sentence. Sentence, imprisonment for life. Keelal v. Chundru. 31st May 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 82.—Goad & Dorin.

140. The only evidence of murder by poison being an alleged village confession, and the body of the missing person not having been found, the Court, on proof that the missing person was last seen in the prisoner's company, sentenced him to imprisonment for life, or until the missing person should be found, or his existence subsequently to his parting with the prisoner should be ascertained. Juygoo v. Chaitoo Telee. 16th June 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 84.—Leycester & Goad.

141. The prisoner confessed in the Mofussil, and before the magistrate, that he killed a boy for his ornaments, and produced the ornaments worn by the deceased. On proof that the prosecutor promised not to prosecute if the prisoner would restore the ornaments, it was held not to be sufficient to bar capital punishment. Sentence, death. Bostun v. Kuntheerum.<sup>1</sup> 27th Aug. 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 96.—Leycester.

<sup>1</sup> This would not be the case now. In Sec. 5. of Reg. IV. of 1822, it is expressly declared that "the justificatory plea that the person murdered was the mistress or relation of the prisoner, and detected in criminal intercourse with another man, or that the murdered man was found in criminal intercourse with the prisoner's mistress or relation, or, generally speaking, detected in fornication," shall not be upheld in bar of capital punishment.

142. The prisoner confessing that he killed the deceased because he had for months carried on a criminal intercourse with his (the prisoner's) wife, capital punishment was committed to imprisonment for life. Government v. Kumloput. 11th Sept. 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 98.—Leycester.

143. The Thanna confession being the chief evidence against the prisoner, who was charged with the murder of her two infant children, by throwing herself and her two children into the river, when the latter were drowned; and it containing an expression which might be construed to mean that she accidentally fell into the river, the Court held that she was entitled to the benefit of the favourable interpretation, and accordingly acquitted her. Government v. Mt. Kurraya. 28th Feb. 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 147.—J. Shakespear & Elliott.

144. The Futwa convicted the prisoner of Dacoity on his own confession; but it appearing that he had been induced to confess by the police Muharrir promising that he should be pardoned and appointed a Barhandaz, the Court rejected the confession and released the prisoner. The Muharrir was dismissed from office. Government v. Netra and others. 26th April 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 166.—Goad & J. Shakespear.

145. The prisoners were convicted of highway robbery. The Thanna confession (not borne out by evidence on the record) that the prisoner had two other associates was not considered sufficient evidence of a "gang" to bring the case within the provisions of robbery by open violence, as defined in Sec. 3 of Reg. LIII. of 1803. Sentence, fifteen korahs and imprisonment for five years. Government v. Lal Sing and another. 20th May 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 172.—Leycester.

146. The prisoner confessed that he killed his brother seven years before, after having been struck by him with a club. The Futwa found the offence to be homicide in self defence, and declared the prisoner entitled to his release. The Court inferred wilful murder, and sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment for life. Pohup v. Runjeet. 10th June 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 183.—C. Smith & Goad.

147. It is irregular in a Judge of Circuit to enter into any examination of a prisoner as to his confession, beyond his simple avowal or denial of the same. The prisoners were convicted of gang robbery, attended with torture by burning. Sentence, thirty-nine korahs and imprisonment in transportation for life. Kardee v. Sham Harce and others. 10th June 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 185.—Goad and J. Shakespear.

148. There being no evidence against the prisoner but his own confession, in which he admitted having killed his wife by repeated sword wounds, after she had wounded him, and his person exhibiting two wounds, the Court deemed his defence probable, and convicted him of culpable homicide. Sentence, imprisonment for five years. Government v. Incha Kallee. 28th April 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 256.—Leycester & J. Shakespear.

149. A confession made voluntarily before a police officer at the village where the prisoner was apprehended was held not to be invalidated by the fact of a former confession having been made to a person, not a police officer, under promise of release, nor by the non-observance of the rule contained in Cl. 3. of Sec. 19. of Reg. XX. of 1817, which requires that whenever a confession may be taken at night, or at any other place than the police Thanna, the special reason for its having been so taken shall be stated in the Daroghah's report. Sentence, death. Government v. Elhadussee Kandee. 27th Sept. 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 291.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

150. In the case of a prisoner confessing, it is requisite that the confession should be read and explained to the prisoner at the time of taking the answer "Guilty or not guilty;" and that the prisoner should then be questioned as to its authenticity or otherwise. It should also be read and explained to the subscribing witnesses. Apartee Dasce v. Mt. Source. 24th Dec. 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 351.—C. Smith & H. Shakespear.

151. The prisoner confessed killing his wife in the act of adultery. There being no positive proof besides his confession, and the circumstantial evidence being rather in support of, than against it, the Court directed his release. Government v. Chait Ram. 14th July 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 408.—Sealy and J. Shakespear.

152. The only evidence against the prisoner being his own confession that he killed the deceased while in the act of adultery with his (the prisoner's) wife, the Court held, that the confession should be taken altogether, and the prisoner released. Sentence, acquittal. Chunna v. Parshadloo. 24th May 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 456.—Leycester & Dorin.

153. The prisoner, being apprehended on the charge of murdering his wife, confessed at the Thanna having killed her in the act of adultery. The Futma of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut found the fact to be justifiable homicide. The Court convicted the prisoner of murder, he having denied his Thanna confession, and pleaded ignorance as to the manner of his wife's death both before the magistrate and the Court of Circuit, and sentenced him to imprisonment for life. Government v. Mootea. 7th Sept. 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 472.—Dorin & Ross.

154. The only evidence against the prisoner being her Thanna confession, that she threw her child into a well, the Court deemed it insufficient for conviction. Sentence, acquittal. Government v. Mt. Dhunhouree. 23d April 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 23.—Dorin & Leycester.

155. The prisoner confessed his having been in company with the deceased, when he was murdered by a third person, and concealing the fact, having received part of the property as hush money. The prisoner was convicted of being a principal in robbery and murder, and sentenced, the body not having been found, to imprisonment for life. Permodhe Bukhal v. Churn Kandoo. 12th May 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 43.—C. Smith & Dorin.

156. A prisoner was convicted, on his own confession, of the murder of a boy for his ornaments. The Court held that a promise to the prisoner not to prosecute him should not operate to bar a capital sentence, such promise not affecting the credibility of the evidence generally. Sentence, death. Pearay v. Nunneh. 2d Aug. 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 69.—C. Smith & Dorin.

157. A mere Thanna confession of privy to murder, repeated before the magistrate, but unsupported by circumstances, was not held to constitute sufficient proof of guilt. Sentence, acquittal. Necloo Aduk v. Gour Conrah. 7th Feb. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 97.—Leycester & Rattray.

158. A prisoner was convicted, on her own confession, of the murder of a girl for her ornaments; but the confession having been obtained by a police officer from the prisoner under a promise of pardon, the Court held that circumstance to be a sufficient cause to exempt her from capital punishment. Sentence, imprisonment for life. Government v. Mt. Unjun-

nee. 16th June 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 156.—Sealy & Rattray.

159. When a conviction rests on the confession of a prisoner, any palliating circumstance contained in that confession should be received in mitigation of punishment. The prisoner, charged with the murder of his wife, confessed that he killed her on her attempting his life. The Court convicted him of aggravated culpable homicide, and sentenced him to imprisonment for fourteen years. Mt. Joymance v. Shunker. 15th Jan. 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 207.—Sealy & Leycester.

160. A prisoner was convicted of poisoning her husband; but as her confession, the only evidence against her, contained mitigating circumstances, she was sentenced to imprisonment for seven years. Government v. Mt. Rookhnee. 11th June 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 236.—Turnbull & Ross.

161. A prisoner was convicted of perjury, in having denied on oath his attestation of a Thanna confession, whereas, by his own confession on trial, he was present and signed the confession. The justificatory plea of perplexity of mind was set aside by the Court. Sentence, imprisonment for three years. Government v. Kauder Durjee. 18th June 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 238.—Leycester & Turnbull.

162. The prisoners were originally tried for highway robbery and acquitted; but no charge of rape was preferred against them by the prosecutrix on that occasion. Four of them acknowledged themselves, and implicated the fifth prisoner, as concerned either as principals or accessories in a rape on her person. On these confessions they were all indicted for a rape; but no other evidence appearing against them they were acquitted. Government v. Ramkishan Sing and others. 12th April 1830. 3 N. A. Rep. 325.—Leycester & Turnbull.

163. A prisoner was convicted, on her own confession, of the murder of a child, for the sake of its ornaments; but as it appeared that she had originally been induced to confess by a promise of impunity, capital sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life. Koornee Moorlee v. Mt. Uga-ree. 30th June 1830. 3 N. A. Rep. 337.—Sealy & Ross.

164. A prisoner was convicted, on his own confession, of privy to murder and concealing his knowledge of it. Sentence, imprisonment for seven years. Government v. Ruggoo Junna. 14th July 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 54.—Turnbull & Ross.

165. The prisoner having confessed that he wounded the deceased "with intent to kill," and the fact being also proved by evidence, the circumstance of the deceased having survived the infliction of the wound for two months was held in no way to lessen the guilt of the prisoner, who was accordingly sentenced to death. Rughoo Das v. Gokhai Mullich. 20th July 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 243.—Rattray & Walpole.

166. The Session Judge objected to a confession being received against a prisoner, because it had been obtained by cross examination as to a Mofussil confession, which had not been proved. The Court held that the magistrate was quite regular in questioning the prisoner as to the fact of the Mofussil confession, to give him an opportunity of denying it, or of explaining whether it had or had not been obtained by improper means. The prisoner was convicted of Dacoity, and sentenced to twenty-five rattans and imprisonment for seven years. Rugoo Ram Sing v. Lushkerree. 3d Aug. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 245.—Walpole & Rattray.

167. Held by the Nizamut Adawlut, that to read over a confession to a prisoner on trial, before it was verified by the attesting witnesses, is irregular. The prisoner was convicted of robbery attended with wounding, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. Kartick Jenna v. Rughooah

Bugah. 20th March 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 54.—Braddon.

168. A prisoner was convicted on his own confession, corroborated by circumstances, of having murdered the deceased and sunk her body in the river, because she threatened to drown herself, and he was apprehensive that the body, if found floating, might lead to his being suspected of the murder. Sentence, death. Woojaul Bewah v. Goohee Chashate. 17th May 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 61.—Money & Braddon.

169. The prisoner's confession to a murder, alleged to have been committed many years before his apprehension, in the absence of any other proof that the murder was actually committed, was held to be insufficient for conviction. Sentence, released. Government v. Sna Pa San. 26th Nov. 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 103.—Rattray & Money.

18. Conspiracy.

170. In an indictment for conspiracy to defame, by preferring a false charge, it was considered necessary that the party against whom the conspiracy was formed should appear as prosecutor. Sentence, released. Government v. Mungoo Kahar and others. 19th Aug. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 171.—Leycester & Rattray.

171. On a trial for conspiracy, it was held by the Nizamut Adawlut that exciting discontent among the Molangis, by false statements to the prejudice of Government, was a punishable offence; the sentence of the local authority of one year's imprisonment was confirmed. Government v. Joogul Pauter. 5th May 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 232.—Leycester & Sealy.

172. It was ruled that as the provisions of Sec. 2. of Reg. XIV. of 1827 are precise, and the penal acts liable to be the cause of a civil action detailed, and conspiracy not being one of them, damages arising from conspiracy cannot form the subject of litigation in a Civil Court. Narroo Gun- nesh v. Govindrao Bhiccajee; Buggoobae v. Same; Juggonath Sumbajee v. Same. 31st Jan. 1840. Sel. Rep. 228.—Marriott, Bell, & Greenhill.

19. Contumacy of Proclaimed Offenders.

173. The period for attendance under a proclamation prescribed by Reg. IX. of 1808<sup>1</sup>, is reckoned from the day on which it is promulgated, not from that on which it is dated. Government v. Sheru Budhek. 6th Aug. 1811. 1 N. A. Rep. 224.—Fombelle & Stuart.

174. A prisoner was convicted of opposing and fighting with the police, and of contumacy in not appearing when cited by a proclamation issued under Sec. 3. of Reg. IX. of 1808. Sentence, imprisonment for fourteen years. Government v. Futtch and another. 28th April 1817. 1 N. A. Rep. 342.—Rees.

175. The prisoners were acquitted of contumacy (but ordered to be tried for Dacoity) in consequence of proclamation not having been duly promulgated. It is essential on a charge of contumacy, that it be proved that the proclamation was made by beat of drum at every Thanna within the magistrate's jurisdiction; and on a trial for this offence, a Futwa of the law officer is not required. Proclaimed persons having been tried on a charge of Dacoity and murder, for which they were proclaimed, and not on the charge of contumacy, and the Court having ruled that they should have been tried on the latter charge first, it was determined, that, on being acquitted of the charge of contumacy, they should be tried de novo, on the charge of Dacoity and murder. Government v. Akaloo and another. 30th July 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 87.—Leycester & Goad.

176. Held, by a majority of the Court, that the promulgation prescribed by Reg. IX. of 1808, does not apply to a case of robbery and murder, originating in a private feud, where plunder was not the primary object of the offenders. But it was held, nevertheless, that the proclamation having been issued, the prisoners were entitled to the benefit of the old rule in the Regulation above cited, by which they were exempted from capital punishment, and declared liable to the penalty of contumacy only. Sentence, imprisonment in transportation for life. Government v. Purtab and others. 12th April 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 248.—Leycester, Dorin, & Martin.

20. Corporal Punishment.

177. On conviction of wounding with intent to kill, it was held, that to award stripes would be inconsistent with the order declaring corporal punishment generally inapplicable in cases of culpable homicide. Government v. Jachmun Gcer. 22d May 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 269.—Leycester & C. Smith.

178. In a case of assault, attended with homicide and beating, the Circuit Judge recommended that stripes should be inflicted; but the Nizamut Adawlut, deeming that punishment inappropriate, sentenced the prisoners to imprisonment only. Dewan Ghazee v. Jeevan and others. 4th June 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 323.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

21. Corruption, Extortion, Bribery, &c.

179. By Sec. 11. and 12. of Reg. XXII. of 1793<sup>1</sup>, police officers are prohibited from suffering accusations of theft, &c. to be settled by private adjustment; and are required to bring all such cases to the knowledge of the magistrate. The prisoner, a police Daroghah, was charged with corruption in allowing a thief to compound his offence; but his motive in doing so not being considered corrupt, he having officially reported his act, he was sentenced to be reprimanded. Government v. Mahomed

180. A police Daroghah was convicted of extortion, and sentenced to imprisonment for one year without labour. The law officers held that those who had contributed to the extortioner's demands could not be admitted as witnesses, they being, in point of fact, plaintiffs in the case. The Court overruled this doctrine. Government v. Moomtaz Ali. 9th Nov. 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 341.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

181. In a case of extortion attended with violence, the Court overruled the opinion of the circuit law officer, that the evidence of the eye-witnesses, who were co-sufferers with the prosecutors, was insufficient for conviction. Heeramun Tecarry v. Ram Sing Bunkundaz and another. 15th April 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 286.—J. Shakespear.

22. Culpable Homicide.

182. A prisoner was convicted of culpable homicide, in striking a person whom he wished to press as Bai-giri, who, in endeavouring to escape, fell into a well and was drowned. Sentence, imprisonment for five years. Panchuma v. Dowlat. 24th May 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 396.—C. Smith & Sealy.

Sentence, imprisonment for fourteen years. Nuffee Mundul v. Muthoor Ghose. 1st Sept. 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 96.—Rattray & Money.

23. Dacoity.

184. A prisoner was acquitted, he having been induced to confess privacy to the Dacoity, by a promise from the Muharrir of the Thanna of being pardoned, and appointed a Barkandáz. Government v. Netra and others. 26th April 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 166.

185. A gang of twenty men, armed with clubs, secretly entered into a house and afterwards maltreated the inmates. Held, that this is sufficient to constitute robbery by open violence, as defined in Cl. 1. of Sec. 3. of Reg. XIII. of 1803. The prisoners, convicted of being of the gang, were sentenced to imprisonment for fourteen years in the Alipore jail. Hurree-nath v. Oopashoo and others. 3d Dec. 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 217.—Dorin & Goad.

186. In a case of burglary attended with violence, by a gang of more than three armed men, it should always be specified in the charge whether the violence was simultaneous with, or subsequent to, the entry; as in the former case the crime is Dacoity, as defined in Cl. 1. of Sec. 3. of Reg. XIII. of 1803. Mt. Chumpa v. Mudden Sena. 22d May 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 271.—Leycester & Ross.

24. Decrees.

187. It appearing, in the course of a criminal trial, that a decree had been obtained in a civil suit by means of fraud, the Court did not think proper to cancel the decree, but directed that a copy of their sentence should be presented to the Court of Appeal, with a view to prevent unjust execution. Government v. Dulgunjun and others. 3d Jan. 1823. 3 N. A. Rep. 93.—Leycester & Rat-tray.

25. Dhurna.

188. A prisoner was charged with Dhurna, but acquitted, the circumstances against him not being sufficient to constitute the act. He sat sixteen days without eating or drinking ought but sherbet, not at the door of the house of the party whom he wished to compel to do him justice, but at a Modi's shop 100 paces from the house. Government v.

26. Duel.

189. The prisoners having been arraigned as principals and seconds in a fatal duel, were declared by the Muhammadan law to be liable to discretionary punishment. But no punishment was awarded in addition to the imprisonment they had suffered before they were brought to trial, it appearing that the surviving principal had received gross insults from the deceased, and that the seconds had used every endeavour to effect an accommodation. Government v. Beaufort and others. 7th Aug. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 277.

190. By the French law, there is no specific punishment for a second, as the term is understood in England. Ib.

191. By the Muhammadan law, homicide by duelling, though wilful, being authorized by mutual consent, does not subject the person committing it to the act of wilful murder. But provision is made for such cases, when a prisoner may appear deserving of punishment, by Sec. 3. of Reg. VIII. of 1799. Ib.

192. A magistrate is authorized to commit all parties in a fatal duel to take their trial for murder; and, to authorize the commitment, it is not requisite that a complaint should be made by a private prosecutor. Ib.

27. Embezzlement and Fraud.

193. Rep. 82. — Goad & Dorin.

April 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 286.—H. Shakespear.

230 a. 230 b. The Judge of Circuit, after concurring with the Futwa, which acquitted the prisoners of murder, proposed to examine another witness for the prosecution. The Court observed, that the Judge should have examined the witnesses, or, having doubts of the propriety of doing so, referred the question to the Court before taking a Futwa; but that having taken one, and not dissenting therefrom, he should immediately have issued a warrant for the release of the prisoners. Government v. Nujuf Ali and another. 16th June 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 404.—C. Smith & H. Shakespear.

230 c. 232 a. On trial for forgery, the Judge, on the prisoner pleading not guilty, took no evidence for the prosecution, but immediately proceeded to take the prisoner's defence. Bukhtanur*. 29th April 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 454.—Leycester, C. Smith, & Sealy.

236. A prisoner was acquitted of the charge of being one of a gang, who committed a desperate robbery by open violence, the evidence of an approver, and the admission of three convicted accomplices, being held insufficient legal proof for conviction. Government v. Jooma Ghazi. 20th Dec. 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 335. — Ratray.

Balgovind.* 8th May 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 23.—Leycester & Goad.

283. A prisoner was convicted of highway robbery, attended with assault. Bajeed Sheikh.* 24th July 1840. 5 N. A. Rep. 172.—Lee Warner & Rattray.

38. Indictment.

291. A prisoner may be convicted as an accessory when arraigned as a principal; or of a less offence, when under arraignment for a greater of the same nature, and founded on the same facts; but not if the crime established be totally unconnected with that charged against the prisoner. Government v. Langra and others. 20th March 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 257.—H. Colebrooke.

292. On a charge of forgery the Futwa convicted of fraud. This being a minor offence, and distinct from that charged, the Court directed the release of the prisoners, observing, at the same time, that they were still liable to be brought to trial on the minor charge. Government v. Ramnemaux and others. 7th Oct. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 50.—Leycester & Goad.

293. The Futwa, acquitting the prisoners of the murder charged, convicted them of conspiracy, &c.: the Circuit Judge concurring, referred the trial. Held, that as the Futwa convicted of an offence distinct from that charged, and the Circuit Judge concurred in acquittal of the offence charged, the prisoners ought at once to have been released. Government v. Gurhooa and others. 9th July 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 50.—C. Smith & Sealy.

294. On a charge of procuring abortion, the Futwa convicted of causing the death of the infant by exposure. Held, that this would be to convict of a greater offence than was charged, and essentially distinct. Government v. Mt. Zynd. 12th July 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 56.—Leycester & Dorin.

295. The term used in the indictment being Haláhat or homicide, the offence charged being described as manslaughter in the margin of the letter of reference; and it appearing that the prisoner had been irregularly tried on a charge of murder, of which offence the Judge of Circuit deemed him convicted; the proceedings were returned, with directions that the trial should be held in the mode prescribed for murder, and that a fresh defence should be taken from the prisoner as to the murderous intent charged, and a fresh Futwa taken from the law officer on that point, the evidence already taken being deemed sufficient for the prosecution; but the prisoner to be permitted to summon any other witnesses in his own defence. Mt. Sheokorcee v. Ram Singh Rajpoot. 25th Sept. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 188.—Leycester & Rattray.

296. The prisoner was charged with perjury, and convicted of embezzlement, and sentenced by the Circuit Judge to five years' imprisonment. The proceeding was held by the Nizamut Adawlut to be irregular, and the sentence annulled. Government v. Nunnoo Tirundaz. 19th May 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 234.—Leycester & Rattray.

297. The prisoner having been committed on a charge of "severe wounding;" it was held that it was not competent to the Commissioner to convict and sentence him for the more serious offence of "wounding, with intent to murder:" and the Court being of opinion that the prisoner ought to have been committed on the latter charge, annulled the former commitment and proceedings on the trial, and ordered him to be committed and tried de novo for the graver offence of "wounding, with intent to murder." Government v. Hurrochunder Chuckerbutty. 20th July 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 59.—H. Shakespear & Turnbull.

298. The prisoners having been charged with "theft, attended with severe wounding," the Session Judge, considering them guilty of being "concerned in an affray," would have sentenced them accordingly. But it was held, that as the prisoners could not be convicted of an offence for which they had not been tried, they were entitled to their release. Government v. Choonee. 27th Aug. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 246.—Rattray.

299. Held, that a prisoner charged with culpable homicide cannot be convicted of being an accomplice in an affray, the conviction being founded on the same transaction as that which gave rise to the charge. Mohur Pandeh v. Sheodyal Pandeh. 12th Sept. 1836. 5 N. A. Rep. 28.—Braddon.

300. The prisoner was charged with murder, but convicted by the Session Judge of theft, attended with murder. The Court held that the conviction was technically wrong; but having the power to pass sentence on the prisoner for either offence, they did not, under the circumstances of the case, deem it necessary to return the proceedings to the Session Judge for re-trial, and sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment for life. Sheodyal Pande v. Jhuria Boonia. 3d March 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 53.—Hutchinson.

301. On the principle that a prisoner cannot be convicted of an offence to which he has not been called upon to plead, the Court refrained from convicting a prisoner of wounding, with intent to kill, because the Session Judge, in calling on him to plead, omitted to state to him that part of the charge which denoted the aggravating circumstances of his crime. Government v. Sheikh Mud-dun. 18th Jan. 1840. 5 N. A. Rep. 162.—Reid & Lee Warner.

39. Infanticide.

302. A prisoner was convicted of destroying his infant daughter, and sentenced to suffer death. It appearing that the proclamation for restraining the murder of new-born children, directed by Sec. 11. of Reg. III. of 1804, had not been published in the Pergunnah in which the prisoner resided, and the Magistrate had but recently interfered in the police of the Pergunnah, so that it was not improbable that he might have been ignorant of the prohibition of the British Government, the Court recommended the Government to pardon him, which was done. Government v. Bussanun. 26th March 1810. 1 N. A. Rep. 209.—Harington & Fombelle.

40. Insanity.

303. A prisoner was convicted of wounding six persons, and a plea of insanity being overruled, he was sentenced to imprisonment for life. In cases of homicide, maiming, and wounding, suspicion of temporary derangement is sufficient to bar Kisâs and Di'at, but does not preclude the imprisonment of the offender to prevent danger to society.<sup>1</sup> Government v. Bhunwan Singh. 1st April 1818. 1 N. A. Rep. 357.—Fendall.

304. A prisoner was charged with murdering a boy for his ornaments; but appearing to be insane at the time of his trial, was ordered into confinement, with instructions that, on recovery of his reason, the evidence taken against him should be explained to him, his defence taken, and the law officer called upon for a fresh Futwa. Ajoodhea Pershad v. Zora. 17th Feb. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 12.—Leycester & Goad.

305. In a case of supervenient insanity after the commission of murder perpetrated by the prisoner while sane, the Court did not think fit to apply the rule contained in Reg. IV. of 1822, the offence having been committed long prior to that enactment; but, deeming the prisoner unfit to be set at liberty, directed his detention. Suroopchand Agardance v. Oodit Agardance. 31st July 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 189.—Leycester & Dorin.

306. The same rule was applied in Government v. Bunnarce. 9th Jan. 1823. 3 N. A. Rep. 233.—Goad & C. Smith.

307. The prisoner was proved to have beaten a girl on the head with a stone, which caused her death. No malice being proved, or probable cause assigned, and the prisoner becoming mad shortly after, the Court attributed the act to insanity, and directed his detention. Arjoon Manjhee v. Lakhun Manjhee. 1st May 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 260.—C. Smith & Dorin.

308. Under the Court's Circular Orders, it is not necessary to refer the cases of insane persons charged with murder where the fact of killing may not be proved. Mt. Lotia v. Goolaboo. 21st April 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 383.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

309. A prisoner was convicted of being an accomplice in murder, and his standing mute was held to be by way of contempt. In case of a prisoner standing mute, it is not sufficient, under the Circular Orders, that the deposition of the surgeon be taken as to his sanity or otherwise; but he should be examined specifically as to the cause of his standing mute. Sentence, imprisonment for life. Government v. Kandharee and another. 24th

Sept. 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 416.—C. Smith & H. Shakespear.

310. In all trials for crimes which are referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, even if the sentence be declared by the Futwa to be barred in consequence of the insanity of the prisoner, the proceedings must be referred for revision and final sentence of the Court under the Circular Orders. Government v. Gopal Dass. 7th Dec. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 264.—J. Shakespear.

311. The prisoner was put on his trial when in a state of insanity, contrary to the Circular Orders, and acquitted by the Session Judge. The Court quashed the trial, and directed the local authorities to proceed in the manner prescribed by the Circulars. Government v. Moulree Addool Allee. 18th June 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 138.—Reid & Tucker.

41. Intoxication, offences committed in a state of.

312. In cases of homicide and wounding, a plea of intoxication is not admitted, by the Muhammadan law, to bar exemplary punishment; but in the present case, the special circumstances, particularly the youth of the prisoner, who was only seventeen years of age, were considered a ground of mitigation by the Nizamut Adawlut. Sentence, imprisonment for seven years. Seedharee and others v. Mehrbaun. 31st Aug. 1812. 1 N. A. Rep. 247.—Harrington & Fombelle.

vernment v. Khuruk Sein and others. 21st July 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 153.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

314. In cases of property being plundered or destroyed, the power of the Criminal Courts is restricted to the punishment of the offenders for a breach of the peace, and they are expressly prohibited from adjudging pecuniary compensation, or damages, for losses sustained, which must be sued for by the suffering party in the Civil Courts. Appoo Pillay v. Moottoo Sadaseva Moodely. Case 18 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 192.—Scott & Greenway.

315. The offence of Dacoity taking place within the British territory, and part of the plundered property being found in the prisoner's house out of the British territory, this was not considered sufficient proof of receipt within the British jurisdiction. Sentence, released. Mt. Hureen v. Jumai and others. 22d May 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 80.—C. Smith & Dorin.

316. Khekur.* 2d Oct. 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 205.—C. Smith & Dorin.

318. It is not competent to a Magistrate, without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, to commit individuals to take their trials for whom he had obtained a conditional pardon from the Court; but he having done so, it is competent to the Judge of Circuit to renew the offer of pardon.

320. The prisoners were tried for robbery and murder by Thuggi; but the crime having been committed in an independent territory, and the authority for the trial of the prisoners required by Reg. V. of 1809 not having been previously obtained, the trial was held to be illegal, and annulled, and the Magistrate ordered to apply for permission to commit the prisoners for re-trial at the ensuing Sessions. Chynsookh v. Umra Lodh and others. 18th May 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 393.—C. Smith & Sealy.

321. Held that a British subject, committing an offence in a foreign territory, being seized in such territory, and forcibly brought into the British provinces, is not amenable to the Company's Courts under the provisions of Reg. V. of 1809, those provisions giving jurisdiction only when a person charged with having committed an offence in any place out of the limits of the British provinces should be found in any part of such provinces. The proceedings were quashed as irregular; and the Court ordered that the prisoner should be taken back to the place where he had been apprehended, and there enlarged; and that he should be brought to trial de novo, in the event of his being found thereafter in any part of the British territory.<sup>1</sup> Government v. Pranoolah. 17th Jan. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 95.—Leycester & Sealy.

323. The Company's Courts have no jurisdiction over offences committed by foreigners in a foreign territory, nor over British subjects, if apprehended in such foreign territory. The same order was passed as in the two preceding cases. Government v. Ashrufa and others. 7th Feb. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 110.—Leycester & Turnbull.

324. Property plundered in a Dacoity having been found in the houses of two persons who were natives and inhabitants of the Oude territory, the Court determined that they were not amenable to the Company's Courts for the offence of receiving plundered property, it being presumable that the offence was committed where the property was found, and not where the Dacoity was perpetrated. Sentence, acquittal. Government v. Tunsook and others. 21st May 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 149.—Leycester, Turnbull, & Ross.

325. Sentence, acquittal. Dhuno v. Jurbundhun. 11th June 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 151.—Leycester & Turnbull.

326. The prisoner having been convicted of receiving stolen property, which was found in his house, within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, the Nizamut Adawlut determined that the offence was not cognizable by the Calcutta Court of Circuit. *Mt. 327. A subject of the British Government committing a crime in a foreign territory, and forcibly brought into the British jurisdiction, was held not to be amenable to the Company's Courts under the provisions of Reg. V. of 1809, because those provisions give jurisdiction only when the British subject so charged shall be found in any part of such (British) territory. The Court, therefore, proposed to direct the prisoners to be delivered over to the nearest Admil of the foreign territory (Oude), the Magistrate making over to that officer a copy of the proceedings held in their cases, taking his official receipt for the same, and furnishing the Resident at Lucknow with a statement of the transaction, in order that he might adopt the necessary measures to secure the punishment of the offenders; and the Government having sanctioned the measure, the necessary orders were issued. Government v. Lulack Singh and others. 3d April 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 218.—Court at large.

328. It appearing that the prisoner, a native of a foreign territory (Rampore), had committed the crime in that territory, the Nizamut Adawlut, with the sanction of Government, directed the same course to be pursued as in the preceding case, and the prisoner was made over to the Rampore Government.<sup>1</sup> Seravain v. Wizerah. 3d April 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 220.—Court at large.

329. A Commissioner is not competent to admit a prisoner, who has been put upon his trial before him, to give evidence as an approver. In a case in which this had been done the

<sup>1</sup> These cases gave rise to the enactment of Reg. VIII. of 1829, whereby "the rules contained in Reg. V. of 1809, and Sec. 6. of Reg. I. of 1822, are declared applicable to native subjects of the British Government charged with criminal offences committed in places out of the limits of the British provinces, who shall be delivered into the custody of a Magistrate in any of those provinces whensoever such British subject may have been apprehended."

Court annulled the proceedings as regarded the prisoner, and directed that he should be tried on the charge on which he had been committed by the Magistrate. The prisoner was subsequently tried and convicted of being an accomplice in the murder and robbery charged. Choonar Lal v. Kuchowa and others. 7th May 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 32.—Ross & H. Shakespear.

330. A Magistrate who has not taken the oath of qualification of Justice of the Peace can take cognizance of complaints against European British subjects to the extent specified in the 53d Geo. III., and his proceedings in such cases are not open to review by the Court of the Commissioner. Ahbur Ali v. Moham Chander Battoorjeah and another. 12th June 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 41.

331. A trial having been held in Assam before the magistrate, and referred to the Nizamut Adawlut by the Commissioner, on a revision of the Magistrate's proceedings without holding a fresh trial; it was held that it was competent to the Court to pass sentence on the prisoner in the absence of such trial by the Commissioner. Government v. Kesundow and others. 25th July 1835. 5 N. A. Rep. 8.—Shakespear.

332. Ameer Barhandaz*. 10th Dec. 1836. 5 N. A. Rep. 43.—Ratray & D. C. Smyth.

333. A Magistrate is not competent to recall an offer of pardon, under Reg. X. of 1824, made to one of the prisoners in a case of Dacoity, and duly accepted; but he is bound to report to the Session Judge the non-fulfilment of the conditions, and to be guided by the instructions of that authority. Jumal Oostagur v. Roopchand Bagdee and others. 9th Oct. 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 76.—Hutchinson.

334. On the trial of the prisoner, a Moonsiff, charged with corruption, it appeared that the Civil Judge conducted the whole of the preliminary inquiry on the commitment of the prisoner, leaving it to the Magistrate only to submit the proceedings to the Sessions Court. Held, that the Judge should have confined himself to a preliminary inquiry, and have ordered the Government pleader to prefer a charge of corruption before the Magistrate. The Court accordingly quashed the proceedings, and directed the Judge to follow the course indicated. Government v. Abool Hussen. 20th Dec. 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 151.—Dick, and Court at large.

43. Justifiable Homicide.

Rep. 15.—Ratray & Stockwell.

338. The prisoner, a Chókidár, killed a person in the act of committing a burglary. Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the homicide was justifiable, and the prisoner was accordingly released. Go-

Gurbhoo Chomheedar.* 7th Dec. 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 150.—Reid.

340. The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut declared the homicide justifiable, the prisoners having killed the deceased on sudden irritation at finding him in bed with their sister. 342. The prisoners (Hindús) were tried for the murder of a Muhammadan, who had been carrying on an intrigue with the sister of one of them. The Court considered this almost to amount to a case of justifiable homicide under the Muhammadan law; and, with reference to all the circumstances of the case, and the provocation given, sentenced the principal to imprisonment for life, and the accessory to imprisonment for seven years. Government v. Doolaul Roj-bungsee. 14th April 1832. 4 N. A. Rep. 130.—J. Shakespear & Walpole.

343. The prisoner was acquitted of murder, in having, under the influence of gross provocation, in consequence of dishonour done to his family by the forcible violation of his sister by the deceased, wounded him with a sword, which caused his death a fortnight after. Juggun Sing v. Shewchurn Sing. 24th Nov. 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 99.—Rattray.

The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut considered the killing of his wife justifiable, but convicted the prisoner of erroneous homicide in killing the other two; and declared him liable to Diyyat, and discretionary punishment by Siyásat. The Court concurring with the Fatwa, sentenced the prisoner to two years' imprisonment. Kuramat Khan v. Ghosoo. 9th July 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 151.—Harington & Fombelle.

346. A prisoner was acquitted of the murder of his wife and her paramour, whom he found sleeping together. Jey Ram Mahato v. Chonna Ram Koeri. 10th Jan. 1840. 5 N. A. Rep. 158.—Lee Warner & Braddon.

347. The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut considered the prisoner justified in killing the deceased, finding him in a situation which warranted the presumption that he was attempting to commit adultery with his wife. The Court concurring with the Futma, released the prisoner. Mt. Bhoen v. Roudor. 30th July 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 156. — Harington & Fombelle.

348. The law officer declared the prisoner justified in slaying a person whom he detected in the act of adultery with his wife, though he was aware of his wife's elopement, and of her living in a state of adultery with the deceased. The Court concurring, directed the release of the prisoner. Mt. Panchee v. Gocul Naik. 26th April 1814. 1 N. A. Rep. 208.—Fombelle & Rees.

349. The prisoner killed the deceased, having lain in wait for that purpose, while sleeping with the prisoner's wife, who had, with his knowledge, been living with the deceased for a period of thirteen years. The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut deemed the act of the prisoner justified; but the Court convicted the prisoner of wilful murder under circumstances of peculiar aggravation, and sentenced him to suffer death. Government v. Kummur oo Deen. 29th Oct. 1819. 1 N. A. Rep. 389.—Rees & Goad.

350. A prisoner was convicted of the murder of the wife of his brother; but the presumption being that he put her to death while in the act of adultery, this, though it did not justify the prisoner, was held to extenuate his guilt, and he was accordingly sentenced to imprisonment for life. Government v. Buhsha Dhanook. 24th Sept. 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 419. — C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

351. The only evidence against the

352. The law officer of the Court of Circuit having found the fact that a man was killed by the prisoner while in the act of adultery with the prisoner's wife, declared him liable to Diyat for the homicide, though it was justifiable. The Court deeming the Futma to be contradictory, directed the release of the prisoner. Wazeer v. Moosun Gwala. 6th Aug. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 169.—Turnbull & Leycester.

353. Of two prisoners, No. 1 was charged with murder; but the Court, on the presumption that the deceased met his death while carrying on an adulterous intercourse with his (the prisoner's) wife, ruled that the deliberate cruelty and torture inflicted upon the person of the deceased rendered the prisoner deserving of severe punishment, and accordingly sentenced him to imprisonment for life. No. 2 was acquitted and released. Mt. Jhapri v. Pucha and another. 8th March 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 292.—J. Shakespear & Braddon.

354. The prisoner destroyed his wife and her paramour, whom he found in the act of adultery. The homicide would have been held to be justifiable but for certain acts of aggravation on the part of the prisoner. Sentence, imprisonment for two years, and a fine of Rs. 100, commutable to labour. Government v. Jaggernauth Deogurra. 29th June 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 65. — Hutchinson & D. C. Smyth.

355. The prisoner killed the deceased under strong grounds of provocation, for the violation of his wife, though he did not find him in the act. The Court held that the imprisonment already undergone by the prisoner was fully adequate to his offence, and directed his release. Go-

356. The prisoner detecting his wife in the act of adultery at a short distance from his own house, went back to his house for a sword, with which he returned; and finding the parties still in the position in which he left them, wounded the adulterer and a woman who acted as procuress, and killed his wife. Sentence, released. Government v. Muddan Patur. 30th June 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 90.—Rattray & Braddon.

357. The law officer of the Court of Circuit convicted the prisoner of Katl-i-umt, but declared Kisās barred by a strong doubt whether the homicide was not justifiable, and Diya only incurred. The Court, in concurrence with the Fatwa of the law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut (which found that the prisoner had caused the death of the deceased in defence of her honour, and declared her justified), directed the release of the prisoner. Molookram v. Mt. Bochun. 13th May 1829. 2 N. A. Rep. 233.—Leycester.

358. The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut found that the prisoner killed the deceased in self-defence, in an attack on him by the deceased, occasioned by jealousy, and declared him entitled to his release. The Court concurring, released the prisoner. Government v. Hagroo Naik. 14th April 1832. 4 N. A. Rep. 132. —Walpole.

359. Of several prisoners, No. 1 confessed that he killed the deceased in attempting to ravish the prisoner No. 2, the wife of his master; No. 2 declared that the deceased attempting to ravish her, she cried out, and that No. 1 came to her assistance and slew the ravisher; Nos. 3 and 4 assisted in concealing the body. The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut declared Nos. 1 and 2 entitled to their release, and Nos. 3 and 4 liable to slight punishment by Tazir. The Court acquitted and released Nos. 1 and 2; and though considering Nos. 3 and 4 liable to punishment, did not sentence them to any imprisonment beyond what they had already undergone. Munsuram Rajpoot v. Muna. 22d July 1812. 1 N. A. Rep. 240. —Burgess.

360. The prisoners having killed a Barbandáz, after the deceased and another Barbandáz had in cold blood put to death a villager, whom they had seized on a criminal charge, after they had slain a person who came to his rescue, and while they were under no reasonable apprehension, the Court, deeming the homicide justifiable, released the prisoners. Government v. Hurdoo and others. 19th June 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 327.—J. Shakespear & Ahmuty.

361. In a case of assault and wounding, referred to the Nizamut Adawlut by the Judge of Circuit, on a doubt as to whether certain of the prisoners, who were Sepoys, were not justified, they having acted under the order of a Jamaddár, their superior officer, the case was returned for sentence, and the Judge informed, that though the fact noticed might operate in mitigation of punishment, it could not justify a gross infraction of the peace. Bhowanny Pershad and another v. Moonowar and others. 28th April 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 128. —Leycester & Turnbull.

44. Killing Sorcerers and Witches.

362. A prisoner was convicted of Katl-i-umt, in having killed the deceased under the impression that he was a sorcerer, and that his wife, son, and father had been destroyed by his magic spells; but the sentence of death, to which the prisoner was liable under the provisions of Sec. 34. of Reg. VII. of 1803, was mitigated by the Court, under all the circumstances of the case, to imprisonment for three years. Mt. Ladhoo v. Sheikh Saadut. 20th April 1816. 1 N. A. Rep. 318.—Fombelle & Ker.

363. A native of Chota Nagpore was convicted of aggravated culpable homicide of the deceased, who met her death in consequence of ill-usage and confinement by the prisoner, or under his orders, under the imputation of being a witch. Sentence, imprisonment for seven years. Ruttun v. Jagjeet Singh. 22d July 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 188.—Dorin & C. Smith.

364. A prisoner was convicted of wilful murder in killing a person for the supposed exercise of witchcraft by him; but capital punishment was remitted by the Court, in consideration of the circumstances of the case and the uncivilised part of the country (Kumaon) in which the crime was committed. Sentence, imprisonment for life. Nuthoo Brahmin v. Keshwa Dome. 31st Aug. 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 196.—Leycester & Goad.

365. A Garrow of North-East Rungpore was convicted of the murder of the deceased, who, with his family, were destroyed on suspicion that they practised witchcraft. Taking into consideration the uncivilised state of the country where the crime was committed, and the possible evil tendency of capital punishment, the Court deemed it proper to mitigate the sentence to imprisonment for life. Mt. Subnee v. Denook Garrom. 30th March 1822. 4 N. A. Rep. 128.—Walpole.

366. A prisoner was convicted of the murder of two women (his sisters), under a conviction that his two brothers had died in consequence of the charms and incantations practised on them by those he killed. The Court, advertiug to the extreme superstition of the people of Chota Nagpore, sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment for life. Government v. Chander. 14th Jan. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 221.—J. Shakespear.

367. Where a Garrow was convicted of the murder of a man, under the impression that he had transformed himself into a tiger, and carried off his (the prisoner's) daughter; the extreme superstition of the Garrows was considered to form good grounds for mitigation of punishment. Sentence, imprisonment with labour for seven years. Rickson Garrow v. Churram Garrow. 21st Feb. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 224.—H. Shakespear.

368. The prisoner, a Garrow, was convicted of killing the deceased, supposing him to have caused the deaths of his wife and daughter by witchcraft. A Panchágit of five Garrow chiefs declared that by such act the prisoner had committed no offence; and, under the circumstances, the prisoner was sentenced to imprisonment for seven years. Government v. Ramrung. 9th Jan. 1836. 5 N. A. Rep. 19.—Hallid.

369. A prisoner was convicted of having killed a woman, under the impression that she was a witch, and sentenced to imprisonment for life, as the offence had been committed in a part of the country in which, though the belief of sorcery was prevalent, the crime had been expressly declared to be murder, and punishable as such. Government v. Damon. 12th Nov. 1836. 5 N. A. Rep. 35.—D. C. Smyth & Braddon.

45. Kisís.

370. Retaliation for homicide is not demandable under the Muhammadan law of Kisís when a person is killed at his own request; but discretionary punishment may be inflicted in such cases, which is provided for by Sec. 3. of Reg. VIII. of 1799, and Sec. 16. of Reg. VIII. of 1803. Government v. Huvgorind. 9th Jan. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 1.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

371. Kisís is barred in wilful homicide by plea of adultery. Government v. Sonaram. 12th Jan. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 5.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

372. Death occasioned by a blow with the wooden handle of an axe, or other similar instrument, is not considered by Muhammadan lawyers to be wilful homicide; nor is it by Abú Hanífah, if the blow be struck with the iron back of the instrument. But Abū Yūsuf and Imām Muḥammad maintain it to be equally murder, whether occasioned by the iron back of such instrument or the edge of it. Ib.

373. Retaliation (Kisās) is considered as a private right devolving on the heirs of the person murdered. The evidence, therefore, of near connexions is insufficient legal proof for a sentence of Kisās, but sufficient, in corroboration of other evidence, for conviction on strong presumption, as well as for a sentence of discretionary punishment. Government v. Hurrah. 22 Jan. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 7.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

374. Kisās being the private right of the person murdered, and devolving on his legal heirs, when the heir of the slain was the child of the murdered woman, and also the child of the prisoner, the enforcement of Kisās was held to be barred by the regard allowed to parentage. This, however, has been provided for by Sec. 2. of Reg. VIII. of 1799, and Sec. 15. of Reg. VIII. of 1803, which authorize the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to pass a capital sentence in such cases. Government v. Bula. 8th May 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 24.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle. Government v. Rampershad. 24th April 1800. 1 N. A. Rep. 103. Hapoo v. Pullanoo. 1st July 1812. 1 N. A. Rep. 231.—Harington & Burges.

375. Where the evidence is merely presumptive, sentence of Kisās is barred. Doorga v. Sanhur Jogee. 4th March 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 11.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

376. To warrant a sentence of Kisās in cases of murder, the Muhammadan law requires either the confession of the accused, or the testimony of two competent eye-witnesses of ascertained or apparent credit. Where such evidence is not adduced, and there appear to be sufficient grounds for conviction, from the whole of the evidence on the trial and the circumstances of the case, the conviction is stated to be upon Ghālib-uz-zann, Akhar-ur-rāi, Shibeh-i-kawīq, or Shadid, meaning strong or violent presumption. Bulram Chung v. Balik Ram. 9th May 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 26.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

377. Kisās was held to be barred by the terms of the prisoner's confession, which did not state the prisoner to be the active perpetrator of the murder; but he was declared liable to discretionary punishment, extending to death. Rannoo v. Bhyrab Roe. 25th July 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 35.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

378. The deceased, having detected the prisoner in the act of adultery with his wife, killed her, and, attacking the prisoner with the same weapon, was stabbed to death by the prisoner in self-defence. The law officers declared, that as the deceased was justified in putting the prisoner to death, the prisoner acted illegally in opposing him; and having shed his blood, was liable to Kisās at the demand of the heirs. But that if the deceased attacked the prisoner after he had ceased to commit the criminal act of adultery, Kisās would be barred, and the prisoner liable to discretionary punishment. Government v. Dhunjee. 9th July 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 39.—Harington & Fombelle.

379. The plea of adultery was not held, by the law officers, to justify the prisoner killing the deceased in the act of running away; but he was declared liable to Kisās on the legal demand of the heirs. Ruhcem v. Hisabooddeen. 25th Sept. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 71.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

380. Kisās was held to be incurred by the prisoner killing the deceased on finding his sister in his (the deceased's) house, he being well aware that his sister had quitted her husband's house, and was living in adultery with the deceased. The plea of adultery, in justification of homicide, is confined to cases in which the party slain may have been seen in the act of adultery, or found in the house of the husband or relative. Sheikh Mooradun v. Mihr Ulee. 5th Nov. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 78.—Court at large.

381. A person finding his wife in bed with a strange man is justified in putting her to death, the situation being such as to afford presumption of adultery. Kuramut Khan v. Ghosoon. 9th July 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 151.—Harington & Fombelle.

382. Attempt to commit adultery with the wife, according to Muhammadan law, justifies the husband in putting to death, at the instant, the person attempting. Mt. Bhooeen v. Rooder. 30th July 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 156.—Harington & Fombelle.

383. By the Muhammadan law, the killing of a wife and her paramour, they not being at the time in the act of adultery, subjects the husband offending to Kisás, notwithstanding he establish the existence of an adulterous intercourse between the parties. Government v. Rujjooh. 27th Oct. 1809. 1 N. A. Rep. 197.—Fombelle & Stuart.

384. Kisás against a prisoner tried for the murder of his wife was held not to be barred by suspicion of adultery. Government v. Abdoolah. 21st Sept. 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 100. —Leycester.

385. Murder by strangling does not render the murderer liable to Kisás, according to the doctrine of Abú Hanífeh, but it is punishable as wilful murder according to the two disciples. Neel Munee Dos v. Gour Dos. 1st Aug. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 41.—II. Colebrooke & Harington.

386. According to the uniform opinion of Abú Hanífeh and his disciples, killing by poison, in whatever manner it may be given, is not deemed wilful homicide. The fine of blood is payable, as for manslaughter, if the poison be compulsively put by another into the mouth of the deceased. But if the deceased took the poison into his own hands, and ate or drank it without compulsion, though he did know it to be poison, the giver is liable to discretionary punishment only. Sundan Shah v. Joora Shah. 10th Sept. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 58.—II. Colebrooke & Harington.

387. The two disciples, Abú Fú-suf and Imám Muhammad, consider Kisás to be demandable by the heirs of the slain, when death was occasioned by blows with a large club. According to the doctrine of Abú Hanífeh, the weapon not being considered a mortal one, the prisoner is only liable to Díyat, or the price of blood.<sup>1</sup> Kuma Singh v. Umrao. 20th Sept. 1805. 1 N. A. Rep. 65.—II. Colebrooke & Harington.

389. Homicide by compulsion (Ihráh), under menaces which induce a fear of death, is not strictly punishable under the Muhammadan law. But the penalty of Kisás, according to the opinion of Abú Hanífeh and Muhammad, is transferred to the compeller; and the compelled person is considered rather the instrument than the author of the homicide, yet not altogether free from criminality, as the act is unlawful, and subject to discretionary punishment, if the circumstances of the case appear to require it.<sup>2</sup> Bodlum v. Ratra. 30th Jan. 1806. 1 N. A. Rep. 101.—Harington & Fombelle.

<sup>1</sup> All opinions appear to agree in considering an intention to kill the essential ground of distinction between Katl-i-umd, or wilful murder, and Shibeh-i-umd, or wilful-like homicide or manslaughter. 392. A person being charged with murder, and the Futwa exempting him from Kisás, partly on account of the deceased not having been Zi frásh, or bedridden, from the time of the beating till death ensued; this ground of extenuation, as it affects the nature of the offence, was held not to be within that species of legal exception, under the Muhammadan law, which is overruled by the provisions of Cl. 4. of Sec. 2. of Reg. VIII. of 1803, which apply merely to cases where the penalties of Hadd and Kisás are barred, under the Muhammadan law, by some special exception, or scrupulous distinction, not affecting the nature or criminality of the offence. *Government v. VIII. of 1800, and the prisoner was sentenced to death. Mt. Motee v. Saeetul Rai. 31st May 1815. 1 N. A. Rep. 309.—Fombelle.

396. Suspicion of temporary derangement is sufficient to bar Kisás and Diyat in cases of homicide and wounding; but does not preclude the imprisonment of the offender to prevent danger to society. Government v. Bhuram Singh. 10th April 1818. 1 N. A. Rep. 357.—Fendall.

397. The Futwa declared Kisás barred by the slain being the daughter of the prisoner, but Diyat incurred. This is provided for by Reg. VIII. of 1803. Government v. Ram Lal. 30th Dec. 1818. 1 N. A. Rep. 370.—Rees. Government v. Boonda. 24th April 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 161.—Dorin & C. Smith.

Phuldar*. 22d April 1822. 2 N. A. Rep. 160.—Dorin & C. Smith.

The Court of Nizamut Adawlut did not concur in the Fatwa, but judged themselves incompetent, under the existing law, to punish, and therefore released the prisoner. Such cases have been since provided for by Sec. 3. of Reg. IV. of 1822. Jutte Ram v. Jye Munnee. 20th July 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 29. —C. Smith & Leycester.

Wuzzer Khan and another*. 7th April 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 122.—Leycester & Sealy.

415. The prisoners were convicted of having attacked and wounded and violently abducted certain persons, who had since been missing. Kebul and others*. 28th March 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 21.—Rattray & D. C. Smyth.

416. In a trial for murder, in which it appeared that the deceased, whose body had not been found, was last seen in company with the prisoners, and on whom a violent presumption rested of having murdered the deceased, the Court thought it objectionable to adhere to the former practice of passing conditional sentence in such cases, as it tended to throw a doubt on the evidence on which the sentence was grounded, and sentenced the prisoners to imprisonment for life. Anand Mundul v. Thakoor Doss Chuckerbattee and others. 5th Nov. 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 147.—Tucker & Dick.

The prisoner having been convicted of theft of money and effects of his master to the value of Rs. 1500, was sentenced, by the Circuit Judge, to thirty-nine stripes, Tashhîr, and imprisonment for five years. The case having been called for, it appeared that the legal sentence would have been imprisonment for seven years. As, however, the Court presumed the corporal punishment and Tashhîr to have been already inflicted, they did not deem it necessary to interfere with the sentence passed, but informed the Judge that Tashhîr should not be inflicted for theft, or in any case not expressly authorized by the Regulations. *Rujceem Bulhish v. 25th June 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 89.

579 a. #### 75. Trial.

(a) Conduct of, by the Sessions Court.

582. When further evidence is taken in criminal trials under the orders of the Nizamut Adawlut, the prisoners should be called upon for their defence, after taking such additional evidence, in like manner as on the original trial. Government v. Delas and another. 17th Aug. 1812. 1 N. A. Rep. 245.—Fombelle.

583. A prisoner being charged in two cases, the first with murder by poison, the second with poisoning unattended with fatal consequences, the Judge of Circuit, considering him convicted of the first offence, thought it unnecessary, under Reg. XV. of 1814, to proceed to the trial of the second. The Court postponed passing sentence in the first, until the second trial should be completed, and submitted by the Judge of Circuit. By-jeda v. Kulwa. 13th Nov. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 51.—Leycester.

584. When a prisoner is charged with two or more distinct offences, the record of each trial should be kept separate, and a Futwa taken on each individual case, and not on the whole collectively. Mt. Peerbulsh and others v. Chooma. 31st Dec. 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 140.—Leycester.

585. The Judge of Circuit having declined to put a prisoner on his defence on account of his youth, the Court ruled that his proceeding was irregular. Government v. Chetram and others. 8th Jan. 1824. 2 N. A. Rep. 310.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

586. In a case of abduction and subsequent murder of a woman in a foreign territory, it appeared that the Commissioner who tried the prisoner was the officer who conducted the preliminary inquiry as Magistrate, and originally applied to Government for permission to commit him for trial on the above charge, although he did not actually make the commitment. The Nizamut Adawlut were unanimously of opinion, that the proceedings held on the trial were virtually in contravention of the law, and accordingly quashed them, and ordered the prisoner to be tried de novo by a competent officer. Dhonkha v. Thakoorreea. 19th June 1830. 3 N. A. Rep. 334.—Court at large.

587. In a trial for murder, in which the evidence was defective, it was ruled that it was not competent to the Court to pass a conditional sentence of acquittal, rendering the prisoner liable to a second trial in the event of further evidence being procurable. Ramjee Doss v. Ramchurn Potedar. 25th July 1836. 5 N. A. Rep. 25.—Court at large.

588. The prisoner was charged with bribery and corruption on seven different counts, and tried by assessors sitting with the Session Judge. After the plea of the prisoner to five counts had been recorded (two counts having been abandoned), and witnesses examined in support of the first three of them, the Session Judge called in other assessors in lieu of those who first sat with him. On the conclusion of the trial, the verdict on three counts was delivered by the first set of assessors, and on the remaining two counts by those who sat last. Held, that the employment of two different sets of assessors, under the circumstances mentioned, was irregular. Government v. Kishen Chund Roy. 7th May 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 87. Hutchinson & Money.

(b) Referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut.

589. In a case of conviction by the law officer of robbery with attempt to murder, the Judge must refer the trial, whether he concur in or dissent from the Futwa. Government v. Umerodh Pande. 7th May 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 264.—Court at large.

590. All trials must be referred to the Nizamut Adawlut wherein the Circuit Judge may differ from his law officer on any other grounds than those especially provided for in the Regulations. Government v. Nandee. 30th April 1829. 3 N. A. Rep. 230.—Leycester & Turnbull.

591. A person having been convicted by the Commissioner, of robbery and administering noxious drugs, and sentenced to thirty-nine rattans and imprisonment for fourteen years, the Court considered the crime proved against the prisoner to amount to robbery, accompanied with an attempt to poison; and that, in such case, the Commissioner was not competent to pass any other sentence than that prescribed by Cl. 4. of Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1817, i.e. imprisonment in transportation for life. They therefore annulled his sentence, but, deeming the punishment awarded sufficient, passed a sentence to that effect on the prisoner. Government v. Kishen Singh. 17th May 1830. 3 N. A. Rep. 333.—Ross & Ratray.

592. In a case of murder, the Futwa of the Commissioner's Court acquitted the prisoners of the murder, but found them guilty of having attacked the house of a missing person, and seized and carried off and beaten him till he became insensible, and had not since been heard of. The Commissioner, in concurrence with his Futwa, sentenced the prisoners to temporary imprisonment; but, in his abstract statement of prisoners punished without reference, remarked, that he had no doubt that the missing person died under the cruel treatment he received. The Nizamut Adawlut being of opinion that this apparently vitiated both the conviction and sentence, called for the case; and, on a revision of the trial, convicted the prisoners of being accomplices in murder, and sentenced them according to their respective degrees of guilt. Kalu Aund v. Pierre Aller and others. 13th April 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 15.—Ratray & H. Shakespear.

593. In all trials for crimes which are matters for reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, even if the sentence be declared by the Futwa to be barred in consequence of the insanity of the prisoner, still the proceedings must be referred for the revision and final sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut. Government v. Gopal Dass and another. 7th Dec. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 264.—H. Shakespear.

594. All trials for burglary, attended with corporal injury in such a degree as to endanger life, must be referred, under Cl. 4. of Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1817, for the final orders of the Nizamut Adawlut. Jye- kishen Mehtee v. Needhee Mullick and others. 15th March 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 284.—H. Shakespear.

(c) Not referrible to, and returned by, the Nizamut Adawlut.

595. The Session Judge referred the trial, for mitigation of the sentence of three years' imprisonment, passed by him on a prisoner convicted of uttering a forged receipt. Held, that as the Regulations fix no minimum punishment for the offence of uttering forged deeds or papers, the reference was not necessary; the Judge being competent, under Sec. 10. of Reg. XVII. of 1817, to pass any sentence he might think proper not exceeding seven years. Sheo Lal v. Amaun Ali and another. 12th March 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 244.—C. Smith, J. Shakespear, & Dorin.

596. Under the Circular Orders, it is not necessary to refer the case of an insane person, charged with murder, where the killing may not be proved. Mt. Lotia v. Goolaboo. 21st April 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 383.—C. Smith & H. Shakespear.

597. Under the provisions of Cl. 2. of Sec. 3. of Reg. XVI. of 1825<sup>1</sup> it is incumbent on the Judge of Circuit to pass the prescribed sentence on prisoners convicted of robbery by open violence, before reference, even though he should see cause for mitigation. The trial was returned, with instructions to the Judge to proceed in conformity with the Rule cited. Government v. Ruhmut and others. 20th Feb. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 101.—Leycester & Turnbull.

598. A case of burglary and theft having been referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, together with a case of Dacoity, in which the same prisoner was concerned, and he having been acquitted in the latter, the former was returned to be disposed of by the Circuit Judge. Moohummud Waishee v. Puhloo Rai. 19th March 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 119.—Sealy & Turnbull.

599. The Judge of Circuit concurring with his law officer in convicting the prisoner of culpable homicide, though he should be of opinion that the sentence of seven years' imprisonment, which he is competent to pass, is insufficient, is bound to pass sentence without reference; the supposed inadequacy of punishment being expressly declared by Sec. 7. of Reg. XII. of 1825 not to be a legitimate ground of reference. The three cases were returned that the proper sentence might be passed. Mt. Kandiree v. Boodharoo. 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 147.—Leycester. Government v. Benedial Singh. 30th June 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 162.—Leycester. Poonit Roy Rajpoot v. Roop Sing Roy and another. 4th Feb. 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 272.—H. Shakespear.

600. The Session Judge having referred a case in which he convicted a prisoner of being concerned in an affray attended with homicide, under Sec. 4. of Reg. II. of 1823, was informed that the concluding part of that Section is modified by Sec. 2. of Reg. XII. of 1825; and that, under the last cited Rule, inadequacy of punishment is not a legal ground of reference, and he was directed to pass the sentence within his competency. Deonarain Goala v. Narain Dutt. 13th April 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 227.—Walpole.

601. A Session Judge ought, under Cl. 3. of Sec. 4. of Reg. IX. of 1831, to pass sentence on those prisoners in whose conviction he may concur with the law officer; suspending, however, the execution of the sentence until the final orders of the Nizamut Adawlut should be received in regard to the prisoners whose cases he referred, because he differed from the Futwa of his law officer acquitting them. A case in which the Session Judge had not proceeded in this manner was returned, that the omission might be supplied. Beesoo Sahoo v. Jukheeah and others. 19th Nov. 1834. 4 N. A. Rep. 330.—Braddon.

602. In a trial for Dacoity, attended with murder, in which the principals had been previously convicted and sentenced by the Nizamut Adawlut, it is not necessary for the Session Judge to refer the trial, if he deem the prisoners under trial convicted of privity only. Bholanath Shuh v. Dhora. 9th Dec. 1835. 5 N. A. Rep. 17.—Stockwell.

603. A Session Judge having referred a case to the Nizamut Adawlut, because the Futwa of his law officer convicted of Shibeh-i-umid, or culpable homicide, and he considered the prisoner convicted of aggravated culpable homicide; the Court held, that this was not a difference of opinion which rendered a reference necessary. The case was, however, disposed of by two Judges of the Court. Sona Gazee v. Snuddeooddeen and others. 24th June 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 63.—D. C. Smyth, Harding, & Braddon.

604. Under the provisions of Reg. XVI. of 1825, the case of a Chohidâr, or village watchman, convicted of Dacoity, is not necessarily referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut. Government v. Amanut Sheikh and others. 22d July 1837. 5 N. A. Rep. 68.—Court at large.

605. Held, that a Session Judge is bound to pass sentence on a prisoner to whose case the provisions of Sec. 7. of Reg. XII. of 1825 are applicable, notwithstanding a prisoner implicated in the same offence had been previously convicted and sentenced by the Nizamut Adawlut. Government v. Dhunna Roy. 9th March 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 86.—Court at large.

606. The Session Judge, concurring with his law officer in convicting the prisoners of culpable homicide, is not justified in referring the trial to the Nizamut Adawlut, because he considers the punishment he can award insufficient. The case was sent back under the provisions of Cl. 1. of Sec. 7. of Reg. XII. of 1825. Bharam Khan v. Amanut Khan and others.

8th March 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 115.—Court at large.

607. A case of conviction of administering intoxicating drugs, with a view to rob, is not necessarily referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut. The provisions of Cl. 4. of Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1817 are held to be applicable to cases of administering poison. Ticca Doss v. Muddoo Purra. 17th May 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 121.—Tucker.

608. In a case of culpable homicide, in which several prisoners were concerned, the Session Judge differing from his law officer as to the guilt of only one prisoner, referred the case against the whole of them for the orders of the Nizamut Adawlut. Held, that the Session Judge should have passed sentence upon the prisoners convicted by himself, but have withheld execution until the receipt of the Court's orders on the reference, which ought to have been made in regard to the single prisoner, regarding whose guilt there was a difference of opinion between the Session Judge and his law officer. The Court disposed of the case of the single prisoner, and returned the trial, with instructions to the Session Judge to pass sentence on the other prisoners. Boolum Bewah v. Buddcenath Bund and others. 31st July 1839. 5 N. A. Rep. 139.—Rattray.

609. The Session Judge, concurring with his law officer in convicting a prisoner of wounding with intent to kill, is bound, under the provisions of Reg. XII. of 1829, to pass sentence, leaving it to the Nizamut Adawlut to call for the proceedings, should they consider the punishment inadequate. Soorjun Doss v. Telokee. 5th Oct. 1840. 5 N. A. Rep. 176.—Court at large.

(d) Revision of, by the Nizamut Adawlut.

610. In a case of four prisoners charged with Dacoity, the second Judge of the Nizamut Adawlut voting for the acquittal of three, and the conviction of one; the fourth Judge for the conviction of all; the Officiating Judge, differing from both his colleagues, voting for the acquittal of three, and the conviction of one as a receiver only; sentence was issued under the signature of the three Judges on the several prisoners, conformably to the majority of opinions. Ramchunder and another v. Attaboodeen and others. 5th Sept. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 40.—Court at large.

611. Two Judges of the Nizamut Adawlut, fully concurring in all points of a trial, are competent to pass sentence at variance with the opinion pronounced by two other Judges, who differ from each other. Orr v. Mukarrim and others. 10th Dec. 1821. 2 N. A. Rep. 121.—Court at large.

612. There being only four Judges present in the Nizamut Adawlut, and differing in opinion as to a criminal sentence; it was held that there is no legal objection to the exercise of his casting voice on the part of the Officiating Chief Judge, by a modification of his opinion in favour of the prisoners. Government v. Assud Ali and another. 26th April 1825. 2 N. A. Rep. 384.—Court at large.

613. A petition having been presented to the Nizamut Adawlut for the release of a prisoner formerly sentenced by the Court, the majority of the Judges held that they had no power to interfere with the sentence, on the ground of their entertaining a difference of opinion as to the merits of the case, or as to the quantum of the punishment awarded. Mt. Jymunee v. Kumul Musshalchee. 16th Sept. 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 477.—Court at large.

614. In the case of two prisoners, there being three Judges of the Nizamut Adawlut for the conviction, and one for the acquittal of the first, and two for acquittal, and two for the conviction of the second; the fifth Judge took up the proceedings with reference to the latter prisoner only;

and being of opinion that he should be acquitted, an order for his release was issued, and, in deference to the majority, was signed by two Judges, one of whom had originally given his voice for conviction. Government v. Ootum and another. 28th Oct. 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 483.—Court at large.

615. In a trial for murder, in which there were two prisoners, four Judges of the Nizamut Adawlut having given their opinions, and there being a difference as to one prisoner, a fifth Judge took up the case, and pronounced his opinion with reference to that prisoner only; subscribing, however, the sentence on all the prisoners drawn out according to the opinion of the two Judges, with whom he partially concurred. Bhugran Das v. Shunker Das and another. 31st Oct. 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 485.—Court at large.

616. In a case of nine prisoners, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut not being able to decide by a majority of voices as to the sentence to be passed on all, one of the Judges modified his opinion by reducing the term of imprisonment proposed by him to be awarded to one of the prisoners, in order to admit of the issue, against each individual, of a sentence by a majority of the Court. Ramnarain Singh v. Dabee Katchee. 13th Sept. 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 76.—Court at large.

617. On the reference of a case of assault and murder, perpetrated fifteen years before, it was discovered that two prisoners implicated in the same transaction had, thirteen years before, been regularly tried, convicted, and sentenced as for a case of simple affray. The Court of Nizamut Adawlut held that it was not expedient to direct their re-apprehension, with a view to their being tried and sentenced to a punishment conformably to the real merits of the case. Nunhey v. Puchoreh Sodah. 2d July 1828. 3 N. A. Rep. 164.—Court at large.

618. In a case where a prisoner had evaded justice at the time when his accomplices were tried, but, being afterwards apprehended and brought to trial, circumstances came out which induced the belief that the offence previously charged had been exaggerated, it was decided that the Judge of the Nizamut Adawlut, who had passed sentence on the first trial, is competent, with the concurrence of his colleagues, to revise and modify the order passed by him without the interference of another Judge. Government v. Choonce. 27th Aug. 1833. 4 N. A. Rep. 246.—Court at large.

619. It is competent to the Nizamut Adawlut to enhance the sentence of the Sessions Court, even to death, in cases in which this penalty may be legally inflicted under the Regulations. Government v. Jowahir and others. 15th Oct. 1835. 5 N. A. Rep. 11.—Court at large.

620. Imprisonment in transportation beyond sea for life was held to be a more severe sentence than imprisonment for life in the Allipore jail, and to require two voices in the Nizamut Adawlut when the Session Judge may recommend the latter sentence. Nyne Koeree v. Ramdial Bhoonia and others. 9th Jan. 1838. 5 N. A. Rep. 80.—Reid & Halhed.

76. Trove.

621. Under the Muhammadan law, a Multahit, or finder, failing to make public advertisement of Luktah, or trove property, subjects himself to discretionary punishment.<sup>1</sup> Chundoo v. Sheikh Roopun and others. 15th May 1815. 1 N. A. Rep. 308.—Fombelle & Ker.

<sup>1</sup> Luktah, or trove property, is considered as a trust in the hands of the Multahit, or finder, when he has called persons to witness "that he takes such property in order to preserve it, and that he will now restore it to the proprietor," because this mode of taking it is authorized by law, and is even the most eligible conduct.—2 Hed. 264.

77. Tashkir.

622. Tashkir cannot be inflicted for any offence not expressly authorized by the Regulations. Rujeem Buksh v. Yar Mohummud. 26th March 1811. 1 N. A. Rep. 223.—Harington & Fombelle.

78. Warrant.

623. When it shall incidentally appear to a Magistrate that there are grounds for searching a person's house for stolen property, it is not necessary that, previous to the issue of a search warrant, oath should be made to its containing stolen property. Ramkishore Paul v. Ram Singh. 13th Sept. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 273.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

624. It is provided by Cl. 4. of Sec. 11. of Reg. I. of 1811 that search warrants for the recovery of stolen property shall not be issued, unless the complainant or informer shall make oath, or subscribe a solemn declaration, that a robbery has been actually committed, and that he has a reasonable cause to suspect that the effects stolen are lodged in such a house or place, or unless it shall appear incidentally from any proceeding holden by a Magistrate that stolen property is there deposited. Ib.

625. Sec. 4. of Reg. IX. of 1807 expressly authorizes the issue of a warrant to apprehend persons charged with serious offences, upon credible information, without written complaint or deposition upon oath. Government v. Beaufort and others. 7th Aug. 1813. 1 N. A. Rep. 277.—H. Colebrooke, Fombelle, & Stuart.

626. A warrant of release should always follow an acquittal, even though the prisoner may have been previously convicted on another charge. Anundee Singh v. Kunhia Singh and others. 16th Feb. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 10.—Leycester.

79. Wounding.

627. The prisoner was convicted of wounding the prosecutor with a sword; and sentenced, under Sec. 4. of Reg. XVII. of 1817; in opposition to the Futwa which acquitted him on the ground of there being but one eye-witness (besides the prosecutor) to the charge. Sentence, imprisonment for seven years. Casheeram v. Chundeedeen. 6th March 1823. 2 N. A. Rep. 239.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

628. In a case of a prisoner committed for trial on a charge of "severely wounding," the Court of Nizamut Adawlut held that it was not competent to the Commissioner to convict and sentence him for the more serious offence of "wounding with intent to murder." But being of opinion that the prisoner ought to have been committed on the latter charge, they annulled the former commitment and the proceedings on the trial; and ordered him to be tried de novo for the graver offence of "wounding with intent to murder." The prisoner was accordingly re-tried, and sentenced by the Commissioner to fourteen years' imprisonment, under Cl. 3. of Sec. 2. of Reg. XII. of 1829. The Court, deeming the prisoner convicted of deliberate intent to commit murder, annulled the sentence as inadequate, and sentenced him to be imprisoned for life. Government v. Harrochunder Chuckerbutty. 20th July 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 59.—Turnbull & H. Shakespear.

629. The prisoner having been convicted by the Commissioner of wounding with intent to kill, and sentenced to imprisonment for fourteen years, the Nizamut Adawlut, on a revision of the proceedings, deemed the sentence inadequate, and sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment for life. Mt. Goohee Haree v. Bungsee Haree. 26th Aug. 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 81.—Ross & H. Shakespear.

630. The Futwa of the law officers found that the prisoner wounded the prosecutor, with intent to kill, while in the act of adultery with the prisoner's wife, but declared the prisoner entitled to his release. The Commissioner was of opinion, that as the prisoner lay in wait for the parties with a deadly weapon, with a deliberate intention to destroy the prosecutor, he was deserving of punishment. But the Court, concurring with the law officers, released the prisoner. Ramchand v. Kunal Baydee. 10th Nov. 1831. 4 N. A. Rep. 98.—Sealy & Rattray.

631. In a similar case, the Court deemed a sentence of imprisonment for seven years inadequate, and sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment for life. Mt. Sukhoo v. Baboo Ram. 13th Oct. 1832. 4 N. A. Rep. 175.—Rattray & H. Shakespear.

80. Young Persons, offences committed by.

632. A boy of twelve years of age, was convicted of the murder of a child of five years for its ornaments; but in consideration of his not having attained the age of maturity when he committed the crime, he was, in conformity with the Futwa, sentenced to thirty lashes and imprisonment for five years. Seedhoo v. Roopa. 18th June 1807. 1 N. A. Rep. 148.—Harington & Fombelle.

633. The principal evidence against the prisoner, a boy of twelve or thirteen years of age, who was arraigned for the murder, for the sake of the ornaments, of one of his companions, a few years younger than himself, being furnished by his own voluntary confession, that evidence was declared, by the law officer, to be insufficient by reason of his non-age. But this doctrine was overruled by the Court, and the prisoner declared fully convicted; and there appearing no other circumstance than his minority in his favour to render him a proper object of mercy, and it being proved that he was doli capax when he committed the crime, he was sentenced to imprisonment in transportation for life. Mt. Sahibhonnur v. Sudasoolh. 20th Jan. 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 2.—Fendall & Goad.

634. The prisoner was charged with cutting off the membrum virile of the prosecutor. The law officer of the Nizamut Adawlut acquitted the prisoner in consequence of the Ibraa of the prosecutor, and the non-age of the prisoner; the wilful act of a person supposed to be in her non-age being, in the Muhammadan law, considered to be (Khatāa) accidental. The Court of Nizamut Adawlut did not concur in the Futwa, but judged themselves incompetent, under the existing Regulations, to punish, and therefore released the prisoner. Juttee Ram v. Jye Munnee. 20th July 1820. 2 N. A. Rep. 29.—C. Smith & Goad.

635. The prisoner, a youth, was punished, on conviction of carnally knowing a girl aged eight years, at which age her consent was immaterial, with fifteen rattans and six months' imprisonment. Mirooa v. Tullooa. 10th April 1826. 2 N. A. Rep. 452.—C. Smith & Sealy.

636. A boy only ten years old being convicted by the Futwa of rape on a girl only three years old, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut viewed it as an attempt only, and punished it, as a misdemeanour, with one year's imprisonment. Kureem Noorbaf v. Meeun Noorbaf. 14th Nov. 1827. 3 N. A. Rep. 87.—Leycester & Dorin.

CURATOR.

1. To justify the appointment of a curator of the estate and effects of a deceased under Act XIX. of 1841, the affidavit must satisfy the Court that the possession is wrongful, and not merely disputed. In the goods of Hurrookistno Paul. 24th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 83. In the goods of Sreemutty Okilmoney Dossee. 7th Nov. 1842. 1 Fulton, 90.

2. To justify the appointment of a curator, it must be shewn on the affidavits that there is danger of waste or misappropriation of the property; and such danger will not be inferred merely from a dispute as to the succession. In the goods of Shaik Nathoo. 24th July 1844. 1 Fulton, 483.

Held, that, by the permanent settlement, the Government transferred to Zamindárs (with certain specified exceptions) the proprietary

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

1. It appeared that where the plaintiff did not allege any particular kind of "rupees" in laying the damages, the damages might be given in Sicca rupees when those were the currency of the country.<sup>1</sup> Ramder Mitter v. Nunduloll Mitter. 16th July 1779. Mor. 237.

2. Per Ryan, C. J. — The measure of damages in an action for non-acceptance of goods is the difference between the price at which the goods were sold and the market price at the time the contract was broken. Where no evidence of this has been given at the trial, the Court will reduce the verdict to nominal damages, but without costs. Bullub Doss v. —. 11th July 1839. Barwell's Notes, 86.

1. Generally.

3. In a suit by a dependent Talookdár against a Zamindár for damages, for having refused him Dákhilahs, or receipts, on his payment of several years' rent, the Zillah Court, under the provisions of Sec. 63. of Reg. VIII. of 1793, adjudged to the plaintiff damages equal to double the amount paid; but this judgment was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the ground that the plaintiff demanded receipts for an Istimrári, or fixed rent, without any title on his part to a fixed rent being proved or appearing probable; and that, therefore, the Zamindárs were justified in refusing receipts as for a fixed rent; and that having so done, they were not liable to the penalty specified in Sec. 63. of Reg. VIII. of 1793. Lala Gobind Lal v. Srinairain Rai and another. 31st July 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 304. — Fom-belle & Stuart.

4. The plaintiffs sued as dependent Talookdárs, to obtain from the Zamindár receipts for rent paid by them. The Zamindár was willing to grant receipts to the plaintiffs as Ijarahdárs, but not as Talookdárs. The Courts, on the proof that the plaintiffs were Talookdárs, decreed that the Zamindár should grant them receipts as such; but the cause of the refusal to grant receipts being a dispute concerning the tenure, the provisions of Cl. 1. of Sec. 63. of Reg. VIII. of 1793 were not considered applicable to the case.<sup>2</sup> Sheonairain

IV. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

13. A person having taken a lease of a village for twenty-one years from the proprietors of the village, in order to repay himself a debt due from them, was, after time, ejected by them, and claimed a right of occupation during the remainder of the term. But it having been proved that the lessee of the village had sufficiently remunerated himself during his actual enjoyment of the village, the Court dismissed his claim. Vcesajee Gopaljee Jala v. Barajee Bulhajee and others. 2d Sept. 1814. 1 Borr. 99.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

14. Pársis were held not to be liable for a father's debts, unless they received his property, as they are entitled by the Regulations, and particularly by Sec. 42. of Reg. III. of 1800, to the benefits of the English law.<sup>1</sup> Lulloo Bhaee Girdhardass v. Sorabjee and another. 2d Sept. 1814. 1 Borr. 121.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, Elphinston, & Bell.

15. A debt is contracted by B, the mother of A. A enters into a written agreement to discharge it out of a pension granted to him by the Honourable Company, which pension he mortgages as security. He dies without paying the debt, or any part of it, and before it or any part of it becomes due. The pension is continued by the Company to C, D, and E, the sons and widow of A: it did not appear that C, D, and E inherited any property either from A or B. The Court considered the question to be such as, by Sec. 16. of Reg. III. of 1802,<sup>2</sup> does not require a reference to their law officers, but such as common equity might determine without infringing any particular law; and it was held, that, as the Honourable Company granted the pension first to A, and afterwards to his widow and sons, it may have been chiefly his property during his life, but certainly was exclusively theirs after his death: at his death, the property out of which the debt was to be paid ceased to form any part of his estate. C, D, and E were also held not to be responsible, out of property acquired by themselves, for a debt which they neither contracted nor engaged to pay; and moreover, that the pension alone, having been mortgaged for the debt, no other property of A, possessed by him, or inherited from him by C, D, and E, could have been responsible for it, either during his life or after his death. Shureef Akhund v. Fakker Sahib and another. Case 4 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 280.—Harris & Graeme.

16. A restriction in an ex parte decree, confining execution to the property of the absent debtor, was set aside by the Superior Court, no cause appearing, under the circumstances, for warranting execution only against his property; and the debtor was made liable, both in person and property, for the amount of the decree of the Zillah Court, and its costs, together with half those in the Superior Court. Mihirwanjee and another v. Lukmeeram Goolabraee. 6th Sept. 1821. 2 Borr. 136.—Elphinston & Ironside.

18. A creditor is not at liberty to charge interest by the custom of Surat until two months after delivery of the goods, whether interest were agreed for or not; and if the goods are paid for within that time, a charge for interest will not be allowed. Ib.

<sup>1</sup> The application of this law in the present case appears to be erroneous, as the Regulation refers only to criminal cases, and the Section referred to merely provides for a reference to the Governor in Council when the Court or Magistrate "feels at a loss on the proper application of the English law in the instance of the trials of Christians or Pársis." There is nothing explicit in the Regulations on the subject.—Borr. This Regulation was rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. I. of 1827.

21. A Mukhtár námeh, or power of attorney, accepted by a creditor from his debtor for the collection of outstanding debts to a certain amount, was held to be a complete acquittance for that amount of his claims against the debtor; but of such assigned debts some privately collected by the debtor were decreed to the creditor. *Brijbhoo-hun v. I. HINDÚ LAW.

1. Construction and Operation.

1. A Hindú, having no son, executes a deed, whereby he grants to his senior widow all his acquired property, in the event of no son being born; but otherwise, to such son. Held, that no son being born, the widow takes the estate under the deed, with power to alienate it.<sup>1</sup> Kishen Govind v. Ladlee Mohun Thakoor. 30th Aug. 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 309.

2. The widow and great nephews, by the mother's side, of a deceased Hindú, having agreed to a certain division of his property, and signed an Ikh-tiyár náme to that effect, the widow having previously executed a deed of gift disposing of the whole property; it was held that such Ikh-tiyár náme annulled the deed of gift, the later being the only valid document of the two. Mt. Unroot v. Kulyandas. 5th July 1820. 1 Borr. 284. — Elphinston, Colville, Bell, & Prendergast.

2. Fraudulent and Void.

3. In a suit by a Hindú widow against the brothers of her husband, who died childless, to which the defendants pleaded a conveyance from the brother to them, executed during mortal sickness four days before he died, it was held that the only question was, whether, in point of fact, he was in sound mind at the time; and the deed was rejected on failure of proof to this point. Judgment went in favour of the widow as heir to the estate of her husband, revertible at her death to the husband's next heirs.<sup>2</sup>

Where a Hindú woman had executed a deed alienating lands, and it appeared that her signature had been obtained by fraud or other undue means; and it was also proved, that very soon after the execution of the deed she had protested against it, as having been fraudulently imposed upon her; it was held that such deed was void, on the ground that the deed was not what the subscribing party had intended, or had agreed to sign; and costs were given against the parties who had obtained possession of the lands under the deed, and they were ordered to account for the profits of the lands during their illegal possession.<sup>3</sup> *Shankar Dutt Ojha and another v. 5. A Niyam-patra, or declaratory deed, executed by a Hindú widow, reciting that she had adopted a son under authority from her husband, and declaring that the estate was to remain with her during her life, and to go to the adopted son at her death, is of no avail in law as regards the widow's claim to retain possession; for immediately on the adoption of a son by the widow, under due authority, the estate to which she succeeded, in default of male issue, becomes the property of the son adopted. *Mt. 6. 7. An Ikrár námeh, executed by a Hindú in favour of his mother, for her maintenance, on condition of her binding herself not to alienate it, but to leave it to his son on her death, was held not to terminate his right in the soil, or its profits after her death; nor does it then originate such right in his son, because the right vested in the mother by the Ikrár námeh only extended to the enjoyment of the profits of the soil, and that during her life, and never to possession of the soil, or to disposal of the profits thereof after her death; and because an Ikrár námeh, such as was executed in the present instance, is not one of the modes of alienation of property recognized by the Shastras, and therefore creates no title. Kumla Kaunt Chuherbutty v. Gooroo Govind Chowdree and others. 20th Jan. 1829. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 322.—Leycester.

8. Where a Muhammadan granted property by deed to the widow of his late father, who sold it to a third person, the sale was held to be valid (although the deed was not in the regular form of a Hibeh námeh), as it contained the words dádeh shud, "it was given (by me)." Moohammad Umeer Khan v. Jumadar Bucha Bhaee. 9th Jan. 1822. 2 Borr. 179.—Romer.

9. A deed of gift, for a consideration bonâ fide, executed by a trader to his wife, such trader not being shewn to be in debt at the time, or that he executed it in contemplation of insolvency, is good against subsequent dispositions of the property. Such a deed will, by the Muhammadan law, be construed according to the rules affecting the laws of sale; and the validity of a sale is derived, not from the seizin, but from the contract.<sup>1</sup> Doe dem. Ramtonoo Mookerjee v. Bibee Junut. 1st Term 1843. 1 Fulton, 152.

2. Fraudulent and Void.

10. Semble, A deed, termed a deed of Bay-bil-wafâ, executed on land for a sum of money, in favour of a person through whom, not from whom, the money was borrowed is not valid in Muhammadan law.<sup>2</sup> Beebee Jugun v. Bakir Ali and others. 7th May 1804. 1 S. A. Rep. 78.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

11. Deeds of release founded on an invalid deed of assignment were held not to be binding. Mt. Khanum Jan v. Mt. Jan Beebee. 13th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 210.—Leycester & Doring.

12. A deed containing a provision contrary to an express ordinance of the Muhammadan law is void and ineffectual under such law. Muhammad Yakub v. Wajid un Nissa. 28th Jan. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 262.—Rattray & Walpole.

13. A Râzi námeh and admission of the plaintiff's claim, executed by her aunt, turning on a deed of her grandfather which had been declared invalid, was held to be inoperative.—Id.

14. A, a Musulmán, by a deed, assigned to his wife B, in satisfaction of her dower, whatever Zamindari properties and personal effects he owned and held. Held, that the quantity of the consideration being undefined and unknown, the deed was inoperative and illegal, so that the dotal obligation remained in force against the husband.<sup>1</sup> Aiman Bibi v. Ibrahim Khan. 9th May 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 304.—Barwell & Walpole.

III. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

15. Deeds purporting to be final will not be set aside on suggestions of fraud, or of an improper advantage taken; nor will they be construed as having been meant to be provisional only, unless upon strong and unexceptionable evidence. Shaikh Devaljee v. Maury Chitty. 7th Aug. 1809. 2 Str. 23.

16. A deed coming out of the hands of the party who claims an interest under it, after notice to produce it, need not be proved by the subscribing witness. Kissenchunder Chund v. Munnee Raur. 31st Mar. 1815. East's Notes. Case 33.

17. Where a defendant had pleaded a release, the Court compelled him, on oyer, to furnish the names of the attesting witnesses, as well as the other parts of the deed. Dhinnomoney Dabre v. Muddoosoodun Sandiel. 11th April 1839. Clarke's Notes, 125.

IV. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY

1. Execution.

18. The validity of a deed was upheld, to which a surreptitious addition, purporting that it was void, had been made by the subscribing party; it appearing from the evidence of the subscribing witnesses that the latter, at the time of executing the paper, had declared it to be binding as well as voluntary on his part, and that the word declaring it to be void was not observed by them on the paper when they attested it.<sup>2</sup> Pudum Nath Rai v. Ranees Jadesree. 2d May 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 132.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

19. A deed of sale witnessed by only one person, whose interests it materially affected, and wanting the usual requisites of boundaries and indifferent witnesses, was declared to be an informal document, and invalid. Lar Bace v. Ichharam Gopal. 27th June 1822. 2 Borr. 309.—Romer, Sutherland, & Inrside.

2. Construction and Operation.

20. A and B laid claim to certain landed property in the Hydr Poora. A, in support of his title, exhibited a deed of sale, by which he held property in the Hydr and Sulabut Pooras, containing, however, no such minute description as to identify the ground litigated; whereas B's title arose out of a deed of gift granted many years previously by the then Nuwab of Surat to the ancestors of C, acknowledged by the adjacent householders; and upon a mortgage bond executed by C, and duly registered, by which, as clearly appeared from a description therein of it, the piece of ground was conveyed to B, and this bond was authenticated by the seal of A's father, who would not, by such an act, have recognized the title of C, had he had any claim to the property. The Court, considering these deeds as valid, decreed, that as the piece of ground in dispute was originally transferred in gift by a Nuwab of Surat to the ancestor of C, who mortgaged it to B, the land should belong to B. Meer Wuleeood-deen Hoossain v. Nihalchund Bhaec Shah. 15th Nov. 1820. 1 Borr. 273. — Hon. M. Elphinstone, Bell, & Prendergast.

21. A deed of sale of a house, whether collusive or not on the part of the vendor, is binding; as, if it were fraudulent, he could not be allowed the benefit of his own wrong. Rajaram Keshowram v. Khoobchund Moolchund. 6 Feb. 1821. 2 Borr. 13. — Elphinstone.

22. Where the date of a certain instrument appeared stated according to the Samvat era, as far as regarded the day of the month, whilst the year mentioned was the Fasli year, and consequently the English date of the sale of the stamped paper being then ostensibly a day posterior to the engrossment of the instrument, it would therefore be rendered invalid. The Court, seeing reason to presume that the person who engrossed the document intended to insert the Samvat instead of the Fasli year, and having found that such an alteration would render the dates of the instrument correct; and moreover the evidence of its execution appearing to be satisfactory, declared such instrument to be valid. Agrud Race v. Rughoonath Sahyr. 14th July 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 32. — Rattray.

3. Fraudulent and Void.

23. Where parties had been tried and acquitted in the Court of Circuit of a charge of forging a certain instrument, the Court observed that it did not follow from such acquittal that the deed was genuine; but it appearing, so far as the evidence taken on such trial was before the Court, that the prosecutor had failed to prove the forgery of the deed, and the further evidence subsequently produced in the Civil Court to this point being equally unsatisfactory, the Court decided that the instrument was valid. Talloory Javikaraudoo v. Vassereddy Vencatadry Naid. Case 7 of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 41. — Scott & Greenway.

24. A deed executed by A, by which he bound himself to grant to B certain land so soon as he, A, should succeed to a certain Zamindari and which deed was sold by B to C, an European, was held not to be sustainable as a ground for recovering such land by C, the Regulations prohibiting a Zamindar from making such a grant, and Europeans being disqualified from holding lands beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Madras without the sanction of the Governor in Council. Rajah Vencata Permal Rauze v. Abbot and another. Case 16 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 66. — Scott, Greenway & Stratton.

25. A claim to certain villages made by A against B and the heirs of C, was adjudged in favour of A, it appearing that the claim of B and C to the lands in question rested on deeds of sale which were held to be illegal, inasmuch as they were in violation of Sec. 3. of Reg. XXXVIII of 1793, which prohibits Europeans from holding land without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, and were also not sufficiently distinct to give a title to the villages in question. Fairlie and others v. Mahesh Ram Chowdry. 18th Jan. 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 285. — Blunt.

26. A, by a deed of agreement, acknowledged the receipt of a sum of money from B, and promised to repay the same. A pleaded that B had not paid him the money, and a counter deed, by which B agreed to perform certain conditions previously to becoming entitled to receive the money; but its execution being denied by some of A's witnesses, and the first deed being confessedly executed, and not taking notice of any counter deed; it was held that B was entitled to recover the money on the original agreement; as, if A had not received the money, he ought not to have given the acknowledgment; and if he had, at the same time, entered into a counter the conditions should have been specified in the first deed. Gollapooddy Sastri v. Madabooshee Ramanooja-charloo. Case 12 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 310.—Harris & Gowan.

27. Where a deed had been declared inadmissible by a Zillah decree, from which an appeal was preferred, but subsequently withdrawn by Rāzi nāneh, it was held that the production of such decree is not sufficient to preclude inquiry into the authenticity of the deed in a subsequent suit. Debnath Mujmoodar v. Kishenpershaud Goseen. 14th Jan. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 200.—Goad & Dorin.

28. A sued B to recover certain lands which he alleged B had relinquished by deed in his favour, in lieu of a monthly stipend of Rs. 50. B repelled the action as an attempt to defraud her of her property. The Zillah Judge dismissed the claim on defect of proof. A appealed to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which affirmed this decision, because B had not been made a party in writing to the deed of relinquishment, the omission of which had rendered it inoperative and void. Mirza Lateef Hosain v. Ozeeroon Nissa Begum and others. 26th Jan. 1842. 1 Sev. Cases 133.—Dick.

4. Registration.

29. Semble, A registered deed has no priority over a previous unregistered deed, if the vendee of the second knew of such prior deed. Prannath Chaudhari v. Chandramani Devi. 25th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 328.—Braddon.

5. Stamps on Deeds.

30. A Taksim nāneh, or deed of division, was held to be valid when part only was written on stamped paper, the remainder being on plain paper, unstamped. Mt. Ladlee v. Sugul Ghoolam Shujaut and others. 8th Mar. 1824. 2 Borr. 479.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

DEFAMATION.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS, 1.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally, 3.
2. Publication, 6.
3. Action for Defamation, 7.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. It was held that a letter addressed to Government complaining of an alleged grievance, apparently true, and praying redress, and written bonâ fide, though containing injurious imputations on the plaintiff which he might not deserve, is not the subject matter of an action, the circumstances rebutting the presumption of malice. Hayes v. Graham. 29th Jan. 1818. East's Notes. Case 74.

2. A letter in a newspaper imputing dishonourable acts to an individual, extended to him by an inuendo only in the declaration, and not pointing out such individual by name, was held to be no libel. Macnaghten v. Dwarkanauth Tagore. 24th Oct. 1838.—Barwell's Notes, 9.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

3. Where A sued B for damages for loss of character, caused by B's living in the same house with A's daughter-in-law, the suit was dismissed, it being proved that A had been absent twenty-eight years, and had never seen his daughter-in-law; and, moreover, that it was common in the Cast of the parties for persons to live together in the same house; consequently A, who had proved nothing more, could not have suffered in his reputation. Roopchund Tilukchund v. Phoolchund Dhurmchund and another. 27th Dec. 1823. 2 Borr. 616.—W. A. Jones.

4. Where an action was brought by a member of a Cast (Dosa Desawa Banyans) for defamation of character by slanderous words, it was held by the Assistant Judge (Prescott) that the defamation was proved, and was, moreover, unfounded; and it was decreed in his favour. This decision was reversed on appeal to the Judge (Grant), who decided that words spoken in a moment of irritation do not affect men's characters, and that the effect of the slander was to exclude him only from a part of, and not the whole of, the Cast. But on appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the Judge's decree was reversed, as the appellant's original suit was on the score of the calumny promulgated against him, and not for restitution to his Cast. The Court therefore held that it was necessary for him to prosecute, in order that it might be proved that an injury had been done him; as, until that was settled, it was impossible to say how far the slanders circulated against him were injurious to his character, and awarded him one rupee damage, carrying with it all costs in all Courts. Petamber Nuratum v. Mukundas Koaber. 8th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 91.—Ironside, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

5. The Court will not assess or award damages on questionable and conflicting evidence adduced by the plaintiff for alleged defamation of character. Ram Taruf Sawunt and others v. Golaum Alea and others. 14th Sept. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 115. 2 Sev. Cases 19.—Reid & Barlow.

5a. Damages for defamation are assessable only when the person defamed is of reputed good character, and unblemished reputation. Ib.

2. Publication..

6. In an action for defamation of character brought by A against B (a police officer), for having, in a report to his official superior, made statements against A's character that he, B, was not able to substantiate, it was held that a police officer cannot be considered liable for a statement made by him on information that he has cause to believe to be true, although not eventually proved to be so. Shreenewas Rao v. Yesmunth Rao Wittul. Sel. Rep. 198.—Bell, Giberne, & Pyne.

3. Action for Defamation.

7. A suit cannot be entertained for damages for loss of Cast, caused by an alleged defamatory writing, where no proof exists that such writing had occasioned the loss of Cast, or that it was ever made use of. The Court observed in this case that the writing was in the shape of a deposition before the Pancháyit held to inquire into the conduct of the complaining party, and there was great probability that it was drawn up for the use, and with the authority, of the Pancháyit, to assist in the investigation, but from accident was never made use of. The suit was therefore dismissed with costs, reversing the decree of the Zillah Judge (Hale.) Bhuvanee Shunkur v. Radhu Baee. 4th April 1824. 2 Borr. 576.—Barnard.

8. An action for damages on account of defamation of an Avignat Nayr, who died whilst the suit was pending, cannot be prosecuted by his successor in the office, it not being shewn that the acts complained of by the late Avignat Nayr did, in their consequences, survive the deceased, and operate to the successor's own prejudice. Peratt Namboodry v. Pyoormulla Avignat Nayr. Case 15 of 1824. 1 Mud. Dec. 491.—Grant, Gowan, & Lord.

9. A made a charge against B, an uncovenanted judicial officer, accusing him of corruption in the discharge of his official duty. A prosecuted the case unsuccessfully from the Zillah to the Sudder Court. B afterwards sued A for damages for the libel, and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut confirmed the decree of the lower Court, which awarded to B damages to the amount of Rs. 1000. Bhyrub Chunder Bhowe v. Thomas. 4th Aug. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 97.—Barwell & Braddon (Hallid, dissent.)

10. Where, in an action brought on account of defamation of character, the plea of justification of the libel was not sustained, yet as there were strong suspicions that attached to the conduct of the plaintiff, mitigated damages were allowed, with costs. Bace Gunga v. Sukharam Cristnajee. 28th Jan. 1840. Sel. Rep. 225.—Marriott & Bell (Greenhill<sup>1</sup>, dissent).

11. Held, that words otherwise actionable in themselves as defamatory and libellous, are not so when used in a defence made by a party to a suit in a judicial proceeding. Hedger v. Maha Rani Kamal Kumari, and vice versa. 22d April 1841. 1 Sev. Cases, 115. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 29.—Warner & D. C. Smyth.

12. A party using opprobrious language in a defence, filed in a Magistrate's Court, may be fined for contempt, under Clause 2. of Sec. 5. of Reg. XII. of 1825.<sup>2</sup> Id.

13. In an action for the recovery of damages for defamation, in consequence of the defendants having, in a petition, charged the plaintiff, who was postmaster at Tirhoot, with having clandestinely opened a parcel containing certain papers, the principal Sudder Ameen dismissed the claim, for (as observed by the Court) very unsatisfactory reasons; and the Court reversed the decree, and awarded Rs.

10,000 damages, with costs, against the defendants. M'Kinnon v. Mahomed Tukee Khan and others. 15th Jan. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 149.—Rattray, Tucker, & Barlow.

DEPOSIT.

1. Where A, one of three brothers, deposited jewels in the hands of D, with the knowledge of B and C, his elder and younger brothers, and for the general interest of the family, and D established their restitution to B, the eldest brother and head of the family, to the satisfaction of the Court, such restitution was held to be sufficient as against any claim by A and C for the jewels. Such deposit not having been made separately by each brother on their separate accounts, the restoration of the jewels to any one of the brothers was legal. Total

II. of 1805, but is subject to the ordinary rules of limitation. Catchick Mackertick v. Aratoon Harapiet Aratoon. 15th May 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 161.—Gordon.

1. A distrained B's house for arrears of revenue, and caused it to be pulled down and sold. Held, that such distraint and sale were illegal, as, under the provisions of Sec. 2. of Reg. XXVIII. of 1802, real property is exempted from distraint and sale for arrears of rent and revenue; and according to the provisions of the above Regulation, A was adjudged to reimburse B the value of the property so disposed of. *Pachyandy Naik v. ### DUES AND DUTIES.

1. The proprietary dues levied on iron ore, manufactured, do not necessarily belong to the proprietor of the soil, if it should have been the usage to consider such property as distinct from the soil. Gooroopershad Bose and others v. Bisnoochurn Heyra. 31st July 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 337.—Harington & Stuart.

2. A Zamindár had been in the habit of making collections on account of lands held by his farmers previously to and after the permanent settlement. The latter claimed exemption, alleging the lands to be Lákhiráj, and averring that the collections had been made by force; but as this averment was not supported by evidence, and no documents were produced to prove the exemption of the lands from revenue, the Court held that the defendants had failed in establishing their title to the exemption which they claimed. Rajah C. Vencatadry Gopal Jugganadha Rao v. Khajah Shumsooddeen and another. Case 16 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 179.—Scott & Greenway.

3. A claimed a right to demand a fee upon every Bighá of land watered from a certain well belonging to him. B denied that A had any proprietary right in the well; but it being deduced from the evidence that the well was calculated to water sixty Bighás of the surrounding land, out of which B possessed thirty-five and a half, which he had accordingly watered from this well, free from all imposts in the shape of fees, but subject to charges in that proportion for its repairs; that A held one and a half Bighá, and no more, but that he had been in the habit of receiving a fee for irrigation of one rupee per Bighá upon the remaining number of Bighás belonging to other persons. It was held that A was entitled to levy a fee for every Bighá beyond thirty-five and a-half, the quantity belonging to B, watered from the well in dispute, the expense of its repairs being defrayed in equal proportions by the sharers in it. Narayandas Soorjee v. Patel Kaleedas Wusundas and others. 8th April 1819. 1 Borr. 422.—Elphinston, Romer, & Sutherland.

4. A claim by the appellants to the privilege of levying duties on Golaks, erected by Baipáris on the lands of a third person, was disallowed, all such exclusive privileges having been put a stop to by the abolition of the Sayer duties. Mt. Dooleh Dibia and another v. Raja Oodwint Sing and another. 29th June 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 303.—Leycester.

5. A Thakoor refusing to pay a triennial Péshkash to the East-India Company, on the ground that the exaction of it by the late Government of the country was an act of oppression, was compelled to pay it, together with the costs of the suit, on proof being adduced of payment of the Péshkash to the former Government. Rana Ubhee Singh Raja v. The Collector of Brouch. 14th Feb. 1821. 2 Borr. 44.—Elphinston.

6. A claim by a Patél for a Hakk, or fee, annually from each fishing-boat in the village was dismissed, on proof that the Hakk belonged to the Government and not to the Patél. Bapoojee Rughoonath v. Sinwar Kana and others. 19th Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 342.—Barnard.

7. Where a farmer of a village claimed a government fee upon exports by the villagers, he was nonsuited for want of proof of the existence of the fee. Hurjeevun Poonjiya v. Kesoor Sugul and others. 26th March 1823. 2 Borr. 494.—Romer.

8. By the Hindú law, as current in Behar, the profits arising from sacrificial fees are not fit subjects of transfer. Nundram and others v. Kashee Pande and others. 30th June 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 232.—Leycester & Dorin.

9. It was held, that, since the permanent settlement, a claim for Mukaddamí, Chaudhrai, or Chakladári dues will not lie against any Zamindár. Kulian Chowdhree v. Raja Ithal Ali. 19th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 215.—Leycester & Dorin.

10. It was held, that when cattle or goods arrive from the interior at any of the bunders, for the purpose of crossing the narrow channel from the mainland to Salsette, the duties taken, and all matters connected therewith, can only be considered as transit duties, the same as taken on droves of cattle or merchandize passing any river in the interior; nor can they be seized under the provisions of Reg. XX. of 1827,<sup>1</sup> as it would be absurd to apply to a mere ferry the rules of a sea custom-house. Wittoba Denjee v. Syed Boodun and others. 6th July 1830. Sel. Rep. 35.

11. Cattle drovers having paid the transit duty were held to be at liberty to use any ferry from the mainland to Salsette, it not being proved that, either under the former or the Company's government, there was any custom, order, or law whatever setting forth that particular ferries or ports should be used. Ib.

12. Where a Zamindár had paid certain allowances to Gosayens, the payment of which had never been confirmed by the Revenue Authorities on a sale of the Zamindári for arrears of revenue; it was held, that though the former Zamindár might have paid such allowance, being competent to concede to the Gosayens what they levied by a title, good or bad; and though, by such concession, the Gosayens might have derived a right whilst the conceder's right existed; yet, as the Zamindári right is extinguished by the sale, the auction purchaser has a right to receive all the Zamindári dues. Radha Gobind Singh v. Gorachandra Gosain. 15th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 290.—Halhed.

13. A claim by a Kāzi to fees for the solemnization of a marriage was dismissed, as being repugnant to the provisions of Sec. 8. of Reg. XXXIX. of 1793. Zenutoollah Caze v. Nujeeboollah and others. 6th July 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 31.—Stockwell.

14. A suit having been brought for the amount of one year's Moghulāi, or government dues, and amended by claiming, under Sec. 3. of Chap. 2. of Reg. IV. of 1827 of the Bombay Code, ten years' dues, was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to be a suit for the title to the dues, as well as for the dues themselves. Romanjee Muncherjee v. Syud Hoossain Abdoolah. 7th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 494.

15. In order to entitle persons in possession of the offices of Majmūah-dār, Parah, and Mehta, in the Bombay Presidency, to the fees incident to such offices, it is not essential that the duties of the offices should have been performed by the persons so possessed, if they were prepared to discharge such duties when required. Beema Shunkur v. Jamasjee Shaporjee and others. 9th Dec. 1837. 2 Moore Ind. App. 23.

16. In a suit, however, for the recovery of the fees, such claim is limited, by Sec. 4. of Reg. V. of 1827 of the Bombay Code, to a period of twelve years.—Ib.

17. Where A and B sued C to recover from him the amount of a certain tax called Karni, due for two years, which they had asserted they had paid to Government on C's account, also for their Sukri fees due to them as Patéls for the same period, C resisted the claim, by alleging that they had paid the amount to Government in part payment of a debt they owed him. It was held that A and B had no authority to sue at all for dues belonging to Government, which, moreover, it appeared had never been paid by them for C, and the claim for the Karni tax was therefore thrown out; but as the Sukri was a personal claim, it was agreed that a decree should be given for it, with costs in proportion. Girdhur Ganinahat and another v. Sorabsha Talcyarkhan. 1837. Sel. Rep. 193.—Bell, Pyne, & Greenhill.

18. Where a person brought an action against the Collector of Customs for the recovery of the value of certain Hahhs, disallowed by the Collector on the ground that the transit duties, having been abolished by Reg. IV. of 1834,<sup>1</sup> all Hahhs dependent thereon must cease; it was held that, by Act XX. of 1839, the authority of the Government was required, by means of a proclamation, before the rights of individual Hahhdárs could be interfered with, and the Collector was declared liable for the amount claimed. Pelly v. Nusserwanjee Pestonjee. 13th Feb. 1840. Sel. Rep. 231.—Marriott & Greenhill.

19. Where a suit was brought to recover certain Hahhs due on the occasion of a marriage, it was held that it was optional with the parties, at the time of the marriage, to adopt all or any of the ceremonies enumerated, and for which Hahhs were due; but that Hahhs were recoverable for those ceremonies admitted to have been performed. Pandoorang Succaram v. Balumbhut. 6th Feb. 1839. Sel. Rep. 174.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

20. Where a person claimed exemption, to a certain extent, from Customs in right of Sheti Watan, and sued for the recovery of Grám detained by the farmer of the Customs in satisfaction of alleged duties claimable thereon, it was held that the privileges of Shetis varied according to local usage, and that the plain-

DUMBÁLAH.

1. Holders of lands, partly or wholly exempted, in the villages throughout the country, have never, from time immemorial, taken away their produce without a Dumbáláh, or permission. The object of this prohibition was to secure the Government, the Zamíndárs, and the renters, from being defrauded of a portion of their taxes on the partly exempted lands, and of their produce, or revenue on the Málguzárilands, lying contiguous. Vencata Narsimha Naidoo and another v. Panoomurtee Letchemputy Shastrooloo. Case 2 of 1819. 1 Mad. Dec. 219.—Harris & Cherry.

2. Dumbáláhs, or permissions to reap, should be granted by the sub-renters: the issue of a Dumbáláh by a Zamíndár, or head-renter, is supererogatory; and a sub-renter, by withholding the permission, was decided to have withheld the produce, and to be liable to refund the value of such produce, the head-renter not being liable. Ib.

1. It seems doubtful whether the East-India Company are grantees, under the Charter, of the property of intestates leaving no next of kin. In the matter of Captain Nanny Wynne. 20th Aug. 1802. 1 Str. 165.

2. Per Grey, C. J.—The East-India Company can be sued on bills of exchange and promissory notes although they are a Corporation. Nor will they be exempt from being sued even as to matters of Government. Bank of Bengal v. The East-India Company. 17th Jan. 1831. Big-nell, 118.

3. Quære, Whether the East-India Company are liable for the securities for the territorial debt; and whether such securities are not contracts, on behalf of the Sovereign, for which the agents are not responsible? Ib.

4. Per Grey, C. J.—There is nothing in the statutes that can afford any inference that the East-India Company are not to be liable as principals for the payment of the interest on promissory notes for the territorial debt. Ib.

5. Per Grey, C. J.—It may be presumed that the Company intended to render themselves responsible, as principals, to pay promissory notes for the territorial debt; 1st, Because the Board of Commissioners cannot interfere in the matter; 2dly, Because, on the authority of Davis v. The Bank of England, it is doubtful whether an action on the case would lie against them at all events; and, 3dly, Because the form of the notes might lead parties to believe that the Company intended to render themselves liable. Ib.

I. FOR WHAT IT LIES.

1. Lands occupied by persons not subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, but the rents of which are collected by a British subject, were held subject to the jurisdiction for the purpose of bringing the ejectment.<sup>1</sup> Doe dem. Colvin v. Ramsay. Mor. 148.

2. Ejectment will lie for lands out of Calcutta, being the property of a native inhabitant of Calcutta, if defence be taken for them.<sup>2</sup> Doe dem.

—Mor.

Dampton v. Petumber Mullick. 29th Oct. 1830. Sm. R. 84. Bignell, 24. Mor. 400.

3. An heir-at-law, proving himself to be such, and establishing the possession and title of his ancestor, will recover land in an action of ejectment.<sup>3</sup> Doe dem. Gaspar v. Doss, cited in 1 Moore Ind. App. 344.

II. LESSOR'S TITLE.

4. The demise in an ejectment must be laid in the name of the person in whose name the Potta appears to be made out, even if it be Benami. Doe dem. Tilluck Seal v. Gour Hurry Day. Hyde's Notes. 30th March 1778. Sm. R. 74. Mor. 249.

5. The demise in an ejectment may be laid in the name of a single member of a joint Hindú family, in whose name alone the Potta has been made out; and he, though the second of several sons, having got such Potta, it must be understood to operate as completing a title which no person could impeach but his brothers, and to be a good title against all persons excepting them. Doe dem. Nundoo Bysack v. Souchey Raur. Hyde's Notes. 29th July 1778. Sm. R. 75. Mor. 251.

6. Prima facie title being shewn by the lessor of the plaintiff, it will not be sufficient, in answer for the defendant, to state his title to be a grant from the Honourable Company without Potta. Doe dem. Huzzoorree Mull and others v. Cossinuth. Hyde's Notes. 16th Jan. 1779. Sm. R. 76. Mor. 252.

7. A Potta dated subsequently to the sale under which the lessor of the plaintiff claims will be held to have relation back to the time of sale. Doe dem. Goculchund Mitter v. Indronarain Paul. Hyde's Notes. 5th Feb. 1799. Sm. R. 76. Mor. 252.

8. Where, on evidence, it appeared there were five joint tenants, and the demise was alleged by one only, there was a nonsuit, with costs. Doe dem. Pramnaut T'ewarry v. Choitun Seal. 20th Dec. 1799. Sm. R. 76.

9. The possession of one member of a joint Hindú family is the possession of all; and in ejectment, the demise must be laid in the names of all. Doe dem. Ramnaut Seal v. Bulram Chunder. Hyde's Notes. 6th July 1780. Sm. R. 76. Mor. 80.

10. Quere, Whether one member of an undivided Hindú family can maintain an action of ejectment against another?<sup>1</sup> Doe dem. Conformah v. Conformah. Hyde's Notes. 22d Nov. 1780. Mor. 81. note.

11. The members of a joint and undivided Hindú family may make a partition of their land while they are out of possession, and then bring ejectment either jointly for the whole, or severally for their shares. Doe dem. Choyton Churn Seat and another v. Joynarain Ghosal. Hyde's Notes.<sup>2</sup> 11th Jan. 1782. Sm. R. 77. Mor. 81.

12. Where it appears, in evidence, that the lessor of the plaintiff is the wife of the defendant (the parties being Hindús or Muhammadans), it is no ground of nonsuit that it does not appear, by the plaint, that the parties are Hindús or Muhammadans, and that such an action may be maintained by their law. Doe dem. Sree Oodoj Comer v. Mohun Lall Bussey. Chamb. Notes. 1st Dec. 1790. Mor. 82.

13. Where a Hindú purchased an estate in another's name, and permitted that other to hold the title-deeds for eighteen years, so as to give him an ostensible title to the world; it was held, that a purchaser under him might maintain ejectment for the premises, notwithstanding the possession and receipt of rents had been continually in the family of the real owner since the original purchase. Doe dem. Gorooopershad Sookool v. Gourmonce Dossee. January 1815. East's Notes. Case 15.

III. BETWEEN LANDLORD AND TENANT.

14. A landlord may come in and defend on a petition signed by his Gumáshtah, the landlord being absent. Doe dem. Hunnah Bibee v. Cagual. 15th Nov. 1821. Cl. R. 1829. 211.

IV. DECLARATION.

15. Where a defendant, in an action of ejectment, had entered into the common rule to confess lease and entry and ouster, the Court, at trial, would not allow her to shew herself out of possession of the premises sought to be recovered, evidence having been given, by the lessor of the plaintiff, that, five days previous to the filing of the plaint in ejectment, the defendant had been actually put into possession of the premises under a writ of hab. fac. poss., which she had obtained under judgment in a former action in the Supreme Court.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> If the same rule be to be applied in the case of joint members of a Hindú family as in cases of joint tenants and tenants in common, it should seem that one member may bring an action against another where there has been an actual ouster, but not otherwise.—Mor.

<sup>2</sup> The circumstances of this case are not fully stated in the learned Judge's note; but it seems that there were several members of the Seat family; that they made a partition of the land among themselves while they were out of possession; and that the ejectment was then brought by two of the family only for their shares, against the party who had evicted them before the partition. Impey, C. J., in giving judgment, remarked that this decision determined nothing about Hindú brothers, the members of a joint and undivided family, being obliged to join in the demise or not, in ordinary cases of suing for their land.—Mor.

<sup>3</sup> The Court, notwithstanding this opinion, did not disallow the general rule, that it is part of the plaintiff's case, which he has to make out at trial in ejectment, that the defendant was in possession or oc-

Where a person, on entering into the common rule, had been admitted to defend in the room of the casual ejector, and the lessor of the plaintiff had omitted to file a new plaint against such person, the lessor of the plaintiff was nonsuited. Doe dem. Bolaki Sing v. Robertson. Chamb. Notes. 10th July 1797. Sm. R. 242.

V. PROCEEDINGS IN.

16. Where a rule nisi had been obtained for the defendant, that judgment of non pros. might be entered up against the lessor of the plaintiff, the Court said, "The 65th rule on the plea side does not relate to actions of ejectment; we must observe the practice in England." Doe dem. Bolaki Sing v. Robertson. Chamb. Notes. 10th July 1797. Sm. R. 83.

17. The defendant not appearing at the trial, to confess lease entry and ouster, the Court held that the plaintiff need not go into proof of his case, but that the defendant should be called to confess lease, entry, and ouster; and, on his not appearing, that the lessor of the plaintiff must be nonsuited; and that, upon the cause of nonsuit being entered on the record, he would be entitled to his judgment against the casual ejector. Doe dem. Tassooduck Hussan v. Ramtonoo Dutt; and Doe dem. Orme v. Broders and others. 7th July 1801. Lewin's Notes. Sm. R. 83.

18. But the defendant having entered into the common rule for part of the premises, and pleaded, issue was joined, and the cause came on for trial. No one appeared on the part of the defendant. The Court ordered the petition and the identity of the land to be proved, and gave judgment for the plaintiff; and signified that this should be taken as a precedent for such cases in future. Doe dem. Anundo Raur and another v.

cupation of the premises in question at the time the action was brought.

But the next morning the Court mentioned that these cases were irregularly disposed of under the words of the rule of the Court. N.B. On further consideration, the Court thought that the particular rule did not apply to these cases: the judgments, therefore, stood as given; and on the same day, in another ejectment case, Mr. Lewin proceeded in this manner.

20. A rule to set aside proceedings in ejectment, on the suggestion of the premises belonging to a native sovereign, was refused. Doe dem. Sultan Boody Begum Soobaroy Pillay and another. 3d Feb. 1806. 1 Str. 219.

23. In an ejectment for a Mirási village, the lessors of the plaintiff were nonsuited for want of proof of possession in the defendants. Doe dem. Mootoopermall and others v. Tondaven and others. 26th Sept. 1808. 1 Str. 300.

24. The tenant in possession being absent at Madras, and notice being served upon the premises, then in the occupation of his servants, his Gumáshtah, or agent, applied, by petition, to enter into the common rule; but he not being able to produce written authority, the application was refused. The proceedings were, however, stayed until next term, upon an affidavit of the tenant's absence, that the agent might, in the meantime, get written powers to constitute him the agent, and that the tenant might come in himself. Doe dem. Jehon Kistno Byaúk v. Hedger. 15th Jan. 1810. Sm. R. 45.

26. In a plaint in ejectment, premises being described as situated in a certain place, and it coming out, on proof, that they were situated elsewhere, the variance was held to be fatal, and the plaintiff was nonsuited. Doe dem. Zoolphuar v. Mirza Jaffier Ally. 1st Term 1828. Sm. R. 118. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 46.

27. Dictum of Ryan, C. Shearman v. Preston.* 19th June 1837. Mor. 286.

28. Plea rule 5th, Trial and Judgment,<sup>2</sup> does not authorise the granting an immediate writ of possession in ejectment. The last plea rule<sup>3</sup> does not apply, as it refers only to matters of mere practice. Doe dem. Emanuel Bux v. Hilder. 15th Feb. 1839. Mor. 293.

Ramshankur Rajaram*. 8th Feb. 1839. Sel. Rep. 181.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

ESTOPPEL.

1. A widow of a Musulmán claimed the estate of her husband, who died twenty-six years before, under a gift from him in lieu of dower. There had been no possession on her part since his death; and her son, in the interval, by her directions, had sued and obtained judgment as heir to his father's estate. Such having been the case, it was held that the widow was estopped from claiming under the gift, though she might come in, as one of the heirs, for her share. Meer-Nujeeb Ullah v. Mt. Kuseema. 18th Nov. 1795. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 10.—Sir J. Shore, Speke, & Cowper.

2. The widow of a Musulmán alleged a deed of gift of the landed estate of her husband, in a suit by the heirs against the alleged donee. The deed was set aside as a fabrication; and afterwards, on her suing for lands in satisfaction of dower, her claim was declared by the law officers to be barred by estoppel, because she, by her allegation of gift, had virtually declared that the lands were not the estate left by her husband, and could not claim them as being so.<sup>1</sup> Bebee Munwan v. Meer Nusrub Ali. 6th June 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 64.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

3. A person pleaded a will, and that being rejected as a forgery, afterwards pleaded a gift, which she had formerly denied. It was held that such plea was estopped by repugnancy (Tanikuz) in Muhammadan law. Rhano Bebee v. Emaan Buksh. 5th Aug. 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 68.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

4. A plaintiff having denied that the defendant was a daughter of the deceased proprietor, and, on her death, having admitted it, and claimed the estate as her heir, such claim is estopped in Muhammadan law, on the ground of Tanikuz, or repugnancy. Shah Abadee v. Shah Ali Nukee.—12th Oct. 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 73.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

5. Where the plaintiff, a Hindú woman, first denied her conversion to Muhammadanism, but subsequently claimed the property of a deceased Musulmán, as his widow and heir-at-law, it was held that, by reason of repugnancy in her statements, her claim was estopped under the Muhammadan law. Mt. Chootun v. Ramzan Allee and another. 15th March 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 20.—Barlow.

Cossinauth Paul Chowdry.* 19th March 1816. East's Notes, Case 48.

<sup>1</sup> The Hindú law of Evidence, though not expressly reserved to Hindú parties, is occasionally applied. The following cases appear to have been decided mainly, and some entirely, according to that law. For full information on this curious and interesting branch of the Hindú law, see 1 Coleb. Dig. 21, 22. Macn. Cons. H. L. 328. 1 Macn. Princ. H. L. 239. 2 Do. 183. 317 et seq.

5. Where a Hindú made a disposition of his property by writing, and also verbally, if such be contradictory the writing will prevail, as being more certain evidence of the testator's disposition. Sree Muttee Berjessory Dossee v. Ramcommy Dutt. 26th July 1816. East's Notes, Case 54.

2. Presumptions.

6. The evidence of witnesses to the fact of an adoption being contradictory, and not supported by circumstantial proof; and the person claiming to have been adopted not appearing, in a public document, to have been designated as the son of his alleged adoptive father; the presumption will be that the claim is unfounded. Mt. Sabitreea Dace v. Sutar Ghun Sutputtee. 4th Aug. 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 21.—Harrington & Fombelle.

7. In no case will evidence of adoption be allowed unless it be free from all suspicion of fraud, and so consistent and probable as to give no occasion for doubt of its truth. Sootrugun Sutputty v. Sabitra Dye. 9th April 1834. 2 Knapp, 287.

8. Where A, a Hindú, absented himself from his home and family, and was not heard of more, his wife (before twelve years had elapsed, so as to furnish a legal presumption of his death) joined with the grandson by a daughter deceased, and next heir, in a conveyance, reciting the death of A, and conveying the property to a purchaser for a valuable consideration. It was held, in an ejectment brought by such grandson, and next heir, after twelve years, that his recital of A's death should be taken as presumptive evidence against him that A was dead when he conveyed, and that he could not recover against conflicting evidence, not balancing in his favour, that he was under age at the time of his joining in such conveyance and recital of the fact of A's death, especially as there was also reasonable evidence of a sale, founded upon the necessity of the family. Doe dem. Gunganarain Bonnerjee v. Bulram Bonnerjee. 20th July 1818. East's Notes, Case 85.

9. By the Hindú law, twelve years are allowed for the re-appearance of a missing person: after the lapse of that period he will be considered to be dead.<sup>1</sup> Mt. Ayabutte v. Rajkishen Sahoo. 25th April 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 28.—Fendall & Rees. Ramlochan Pridhan v. Hurchundur Chowdree. 13th Aug. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 98.—Barwell & Stockwell.

10. But by the law, as current in Benares, fifteen years will be allowed for re-appearance, if the absentee, at the time of his departure, was under fifty years of age.<sup>2</sup> Note by Sir F. Macnaghten in Doe dem. Gunganarain Bonnerjee v. Bulram Bonnerjee. 20th July 1818. East's Notes, Case 85.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.<sup>3</sup>

1. Generally.

11. A deed was admitted, in conformity with the opinion of the law officers, on the testimony of the Kázi, whose seal was affixed to it (not his signature), and of the Munshi who drew it, though there were no subscribing witnesses. Another deed (of marriage settlement), to which the above apparently referred, but to the execution of which there was not the requisite proof, provided that, in lieu of her dower, the wife should take all the property the husband "then possessed, and might possess thereafter." The law officers declared that this could only have conveyed the property possessed by him at the time. Musnud Ali v. Khoorshed Banoo. 14th Aug. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 52.—Lumsden & Harrington.

12. The declaration of a person of unsound mind is insufficient to establish parentage, or even of one of sound mind, where the parentage is claimed by another.<sup>4</sup> Rujub Ali Khan v. Ramkunder Chutoorjee. 10th April 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 23.—C. Smith.

13. According to the rule of Muhammadan law, it is necessary that the plaintiff should adduce evidence to prove his claim on simple denial by the defendant; but when any special plea is urged the onus probandi rests with the defendant.<sup>5</sup> Hukeem Wahid Ali v. Khan Beebee. 6th Aug. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 102.—Goad.

2. Presumptions.

14. Where a Muhammadan man and woman live together as husband and wife, they will be presumed to be man and wife, though not publicly married, where nothing appears to invalidate that presumption; and a son born under such circumstances inherits equally as a son in proved wedlock, and is not divested of his right as one of the heirs to the estate

<sup>4</sup> It is a well-known rule of Muhammadan law, that a declaration by a person of his being the father of such a child is sufficient to establish the fact, provided there be nothing manifestly to repel the presumption. Here, however, there was sufficient for that purpose, independently of the disordered state of the intellects of the declaring party, the first husband of the woman, whom he claimed as his wife, and the mother of his children, being alive, and no divorce having taken place between her and such first husband, who also claimed the parentage of her children. — Macn. 3 Hed. 168, 169. And see Macn. Princ. M. L. 61, par. 33. 132. 299. Intro. to Do. xxiii. xxiv. Baillie, Inh. 35.

<sup>2</sup> But it is stated, in a precedent by Sir W. Macnaghten, that, by the law of Benares, the wife of a person who has been missing for fifty-five years has no right to claim his share of joint property. 2 Macn. Princ. H. L. 27. Case ix.

15. Where one witness stated that he conjectured that the mother of the plaintiff was married to A, but admitted that he was not present at the marriage, and that he never heard A acknowledge the marriage; and the defendant, denying the marriage, acknowledged that the plaintiff's mother was the Haram, or concubine, of A; it was held that such expression, in conjunction with the conjectural evidence of one witness, cannot raise a presumption in favour of the marriage. Huheem Wahid Ali v. Khan Beebee. 6th Aug. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 102.—Goad.

16. According to the Muhammadan law, continued cohabitation and acknowledgment of parentage form sufficient presumptive evidence of wedlock and legitimacy. Mirza Qaim Ali Beg v. Mt. Hingun and others. 15th April 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 152.—Leycester & Dorin.

17. And the same point was decided by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in Khajah Hidayat Oollah v. Rai Jan Khanum. 2d Aug. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 295.

18. The fact of a Musulmán woman's having suffered forty-two years to elapse since the death of her alleged husband, without advancing any claim to her share of his property, although many suits had been brought in this interval by the other heirs, was held to furnish strong presumption that she was not lawfully married to him. Mt. Shumsoonisa v. Meer Gohur Ali and others. 27th Nov. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 283.—Sealy.

19. Filial relationship, including right of inheritance, to a Musulmán, in the child of his domestic concu-bine (such child affirming, if capable of speech), is established by his unretracted recognition; provided, however, that paternity be not commonly imputed to another man. Khairat Ali and another v. Zakuran Nissa. 15th March 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 17.—Rattray.

19a. A child born in wedlock is presumed to be the child of the father; legitimacy following the marriage-bed. Jesvunt Singjee Ubby Singjee and another v. Jet Singjee Ubby Singjee. 5th Feb. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 245.

20. According to the Muhammadan law, the death of a missing person may be presumed when ninety years from his birth have elapsed, after which his estate may be divided among his heirs. Mt. Mani Bibi v. Mt. Sahibzadi. 15th April 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 108.—Turnbull & Rattray. Dwvresh and another v. Shekhum and another. 1820. 2 Borr. 20.—Elphinston, Romer, & Sutherland.

21. The mere fact of a Musulmán and his wife living separately is not sufficient evidence of a divorce to enable the wife to recover dower not exigible (Muwajjal). Noorunissa Begum v. Narvaib Syed Mohsin Allee Khan. 26th June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 40.—Tucker.

III. SIKH LAW.

21a. Where it was proved that the widow of a deceased Sikh had allowed another person (who claimed as adopted son of the deceased) to light the funeral pile of her late husband, and that she was not even present at the ceremony; and it also appearing that the deceased had been in the habit of calling him his son; it was held to be strong presumptive evidence of adoption. Doe dem. Kisenchunder Shaw v. Baidam Beebee. Jan. 1815. East's Notes. Case 14.

IV. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

22. In an action of assumpsit, grounded on the judgment of a Court of Justice at Chandernagore, it was held that evidence of collusion and partiality in the Judges was admissible.<sup>1</sup> Bhowanneechurn Day v. Bodinaut Baroodja. 21st Nov. 1797. Mor. 271.

23. The Court seemed to think that the 37th plea rule, directing no special matter to be given in evidence without leave of the Court, then only applied to cases attended with difficulty, arising from the necessity of setting out a Hindú or Musulmán title.<sup>2</sup> Anon. 30th Oct. 1804. Sm. R. 91.

24. A defendant admitting a charge is not restricted in equity to any particular evidence in his discharge. Pecramah Syrang v. Nineapah. 16th Aug. 1808. 1 Str. 283.

25. On questions of contract or inheritance between natives the Court will investigate according to the English, and not according to the native rules of evidence. Syed Ally v. Syed Kullee Mulla Khan. 19th Jan. 1813. 2 Str. 191.

26. A subsequent promise by the payee or indorsee of a foreign bill of exchange to pay the bill, was held to be evidence of a regular protest of its dishonour by the drawees. Richardson v. Betham. 26th Nov. 1820. East's Notes. Case 89.

27. Evidence of justification under general issue can only be given in trespass vi et armis. Buckingham v. Larkins. 2d Term 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 214.

<sup>2</sup> Now, by the 53d plea rule, no rule, or order, shall have the effect of depriving any one of the power of pleading the general issue, and giving the special matter in evidence, in any case when authorised by the Statute. 2 Sm. & Ry. 68.

28. Evidence of trading in Calcutta, or other ground of constructive inhabitancy, is receivable under the general allegation of "inhabitancy," laid in the plaint as the ground of jurisdiction. Ramcullian Mundell v. Ramchunder Seal and another. 12th Feb. 1840. Mor. 203.

2. Presumptions.

29. A demand of a sum of money deposited with the defendant thirty years previous to the filing of the bill, but sworn by the answer to have been paid over according to the directions of persons whom the plaintiff represented, was dismissed, but without costs; it being presumable, from the lapse of time, that the demand had in some manner been satisfied or released. Chintadry Petta Peeramah Syrang and others v. Nineapah. 16th Aug. 1808. 1 Str. 283.

3. Attendance of Witnesses.

30. The absence of a material witness for the plaintiff was proved, by an affidavit, to be the reason of his not going on to trial; and the affidavit also stated that he had given notice of trial for the sittings after the term. Judgment, as in case of a nonsuit, moved for by the defendant, was refused.<sup>3</sup> Gyachund Shaw v. Mirza Mahomed Cazim Ally Khan. Hyde's Notes. 16th Jan. 1778. Sm. R. 250.

31. When the Supreme Court see that a witness is kept out of the way, they will allow the plaintiff to save the notice of trial, and, if necessary, will let him put off the trial from time to time until the witness appear. By the Charter, the Supreme Court is empowered to punish the absence of witnesses, not only by fine and imprisonment, but by punishment not extending to life or limb. Grand v.

<sup>3</sup> But on the same affidavits a rule was granted to shew cause why the plaintiff should not pay costs for not going on to trial.

Francis. Hyde's Notes. 18th Jan. 1779. Mor. 263.

32. All persons commorant within the provinces are within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, as witnesses, and subject to a subpœna ad testificandum. Doe dem. Buddinanth Ghosaul v. Deverall. 29th March 1839. Mor. 184.

32 a. And in the event of disobeying such subpœna, a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum can be granted by the Court, to bring up the body of the disobedient witness. Anon. 16th June 1800. Mor. 146.

33. The Court awarded a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum to the gaoler of the twenty-four Pergunnahs, directing him to bring up the body of a prisoner, to give evidence in the cause which stood for that day, but was adjourned till the morrow. Doe dem. Brujesehree Seatanny v. Ramnarain Misser.<sup>1</sup> 16th June 1800. Sm. R. 148.

34. Habeas corpus ad testificandum will issue to the gaoler of a Mofussil Court. The Queen v. Shanee and others. 23d Oct. 1843. 1 Fulton, 328.

35. On a reference, the non-attendance of witnesses is no excuse for default. Kistnouundo Biswas v. Prawnkissen Bismas. 19th Jan. 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 300.

36. A copy of a subpœna, inclosed in an envelope to a witness, who sends his Salâm in reply, was held to be good service, although the original was not shewn to him. Palsgrave v. Worral. 1st Term, 1833. Cl. R. 1834. 146.

<sup>1</sup> On an application by the Company's attorney to Sir W. Russell, C. J., in the vacation after the 3d Term, 1832, for a habeas corpus, to be directed to the Sheriff to take a prisoner in his custody, on mesne process, before a Commissioner, to give evidence on a special commission of inquiry into certain disturbances, the C. J., after communicating with the other Judges, expressed an opinion that the Court had not any authority to issue the writ in such a case, or to give evidence in any other Court than their own, according to the spirit of the Stat. 43d Geo. III. c. 140., and the provisions of the 44th Geo. III. c. 102.

37. The Supreme Court will require distinct and definite grounds to be stated, and an affidavit to be made by the party himself, or his attorney, where a postponement of the trial is moved on the ground of alleged absence of material witnesses. Ramdhone Ghose v. Ramanund Ghose. 21st June 1838. Mor. 287.

4. Examination of Witnesses.<sup>2</sup>

38. Should a witness prevaricate very much, the Court will direct the Prothonotary to make a minute that the Court entirely rejected the evidence of such witness, on the ground of his having contradicted himself in material parts of his statement; and they will direct that an order to this effect shall afterwards be drawn up, and, in case of appeal, sent with the rest of the proceedings to England. Ramnarain Tagore v. Kistnopersaud Chowdry. Hyde's Notes. 29th Nov. 1777. Mor. 268, note.

39. In all appealable cases, where the native witnesses appear to prevaricate and to evade questions put, the advocates are at liberty to examine the interpreter as to the mode in which the witness gave his testimony, so that the evidence before the Court of Appeal may be as nearly as possible the same as before the Supreme Court. Nanderah Begum v. Bahauder Beg and others. Hyde's Notes. 8th Dec. 1778. Mor. 268, note.

40. The Court will not direct a Commission to examine witnesses in a cause where the purpose for which such testimony is sought is against good faith and conscience, and contrary to law; and where such defect appeared upon the face of the bill, it was held to be useless to direct an examination of witnesses under such circumstances. Anon. 28th Jan. 1814. East's Notes. Case 6.

41. The Court will refuse an order for a prisoner in execution under civil process to be brought up in order to make affidavit of matters in a cause in Court, but will authorize the Under Sheriff for the time being to take affidavits of prisoners in custody. Ex parte Reid. 25th Oct. 1819. East's Notes. Case 107.

42. Female witnesses for the trial of an issue, whose rank and Cast will not permit them to appear in public, may be examined by a commission granted by the Court for the purpose, subject, however, to having their depositions suppressed at the issue, if it were shewn that the Cast and rank of the women would have permitted them to appear. Gourbullub v. Jugurnauth Persaud Mitter. 4th Term 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 247. 2 Sm. & Ry. 9, note. Mor. 277.

43. The examination of witnesses must commence within twelve days after the interrogatories are filed; and merely swearing them will not prevent the bill from being dismissed for want of proceeding. Secus, if the examiner had certified that he was prevented from examining the witnesses by other business. Sreemutty Doyamoney Dabey v. Joygopaul Roy Choudry. 20th Dec. 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 283.

44. A witness who has been in Court, after an order that he should withdraw, cannot be examined. This is, however, sometimes discretionary with the Judge in civil cases, but never in cases where the proceedings are between the Crown and the subject. Kissenmohun Sing v. Collypersaud Dutt. 1st Dec. 1830. Cl. R. 1834. 32. The King v. Rajah Buddinanth Roy. Cl. R. 1834. 32.

45. On the Ecclesiastical side, the promouvent's witnesses are to be examined by the Ecclesiastical Registrar on the allegations of the libel only, and no interrogatories are to be filed. In the matter of the will of George Page. 16th Jan. 1836. Mor. 284.

46. The Court refused to grant a commission to take an affidavit of the service of a certain order of the Irish Rolls' Court, and of process, and of a copy of the bill, upon a party defendant in a cause pending in the said Rolls' Court. Walsh v. Slater and others. 25th March 1839. Mor. 295.

47. Rules for the examination of witnesses de bene esse must be drawn up for the examination to take place before the Prothonotary. East-India Company v. Radahissen Bysack. 6th Feb. 1844. 1 Fulton, 406.

48. The rule for the examination of a witness de bene esse must be on payment of costs. Ib.

49. The Court ordered the Ecclesiastical Registrar to attend the Commissioners appointed to examine a party as to the execution of a will. But Ryan, C. J., observed, "We will in this make the order, but not as a precedent for cases which may occur hereafter. We cannot say that the Registrar should attend a Commissioner in the most distant parts of India, and yet the Ecclesiastical Court is very unwilling to give up possession of its wills." Unnopoornah Dabee v. Ranee Kolochomoney and others. 17th July 1839. 1 Fulton, 83.

50. A commission for the examination of witnesses operates as a stay of proceedings: in every such commission a term is to be specified for its return. Machellar v. Wallace. 26th Jan. 1842. 1 Fulton, 145.

51. The rules of evidence are the same in India as in England, and no allowance is made for the character of the natives. Sreemutty Nubbooomary Dossee v. Goursoonder Seal. 24th June 1842. 1 Fulton, 15.

52. Six months is not too long a time for a commission for the examination of witnesses in England to be outstanding. Machellar v. Wallace. 12th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 16.

53. A commission to examine witnesses at Jubbulpore, out of the jurisdiction of the Court, was allowed to be directed to the junior assistant political agent as the party performing the judicial duties in that district, such a direction being conformable to Act VII. of 1841, which gives the Court the power to issue a commission. Ramchund v. Nicholson. 1 Fulton, 16.

53 a. A Musulmán husband was admitted to give evidence in favour of his own wife.<sup>1</sup> Bibee Ameeran v.

Shaik Darwood. 1st Term 1843. 1 Fulton, 143.

54. If a commission to take an answer be made returnable on a day certain, the Court has no power to enlarge the time. Chisholm, Executor, v. Gibson and others. 14th March 1843. 1 Fulton, 146.

5. Documentary Evidence.

(a) Judicial Documents.

55. The minute of the Registrar on the office copy of an answer is the proper evidence of the time of its delivery to the plaintiff. Ranganaichaloo v. Rama Naich. 8th March 1802. 1 Str. 151.

56. Under the Indian Press Act, the original declaration filed in the Supreme Court is a record, and as such proves itself. Macnaghten v. Tandy. 24th Oct. 1838. Mor. 289.

57. A Bill of Sale from a Mofussil Court is a record, and is admissible on proof of its seal. So is an exemplification thereof. Thakoo Sarap v. Smoult. 1st Term 1843. 1 Fulton, 136.

(b) Accounts and Entries.

58. A Muharrir of the Jamabandi office of the Collector of Calcutta produced a Chitta book, containing the measurement of lands; but it was not allowed to be read in evidence, as the witness could not tell who wrote it, had been thirty-five years in the office, and thought it was not written by any one who was in the office when the book appeared to have been written. Doc dem. Loll Sing v. Guddadhur Sein. 23d March 1791. Sm. R. 81.

(c) Production of Documents.

59. Where letters had been addressed to the Government, complaining of a grievance which the defendant appeared to have suffered, and praying redress; it was held that such letters are not compellable to be produced in Court upon an action for a libel, without the assent of Government, or of those who represent it in the public offices. Hayes v. Graham. 29th Jan. 1818. East's Notes. Case 74.

60. By the Indian Press Act, the copy of a newspaper is evidence of the publication of such copy by the person whose name is subscribed to it. Macnaghten v. Tandy. 24th Oct. 1838. Mor. 288.

61. The production of documents, mentioned in an answer, must be moved for before the cause is at issue. Mirzahee Begum v. Moonshee Fuz-zubul Kurreem. 27th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 84.

62. Quere, Whether they should be produced in the Registrar's or Examiner's office? Ib.

(d.) Translated Documents.

63. Translations from the Persian are inadmissible in the Supreme Court, unless made by the sworn interpreter of the Court. Doe dem. Olijah Raur v. Luscarree Butcher. Hyde's Notes. 11th Mar. 1782. Mor. 267.

64. Where the translation of a Persian document bears the seal and signature of the sworn interpreter of the Supreme Court, the Court will not inquire into the mode in which the translation was made, but will always receive it as prima facie correct at all events. If the defendant can shew that the translation is incorrect in any particular he is at liberty to do so. Golaubchund v. Premsook. April 1840. Mor. 268, note.

(e.) Untranslated Documents.

65. The interpreter may be examined as to appearance of forgery on the face of a Persian instrument produced in evidence.<sup>1</sup> Doe dem. Olijah Raur v. Luscarree Butcher.

Hyde's Notes. 11th July 1782. Mor. 267.

66. Generally speaking, no papers will be received as evidence which have words upon them not translated; but there may arise cases where the Court would give time for making translations, as where the papers are in the possession of the opposite party. Murrochunder v. Lomrie. 3d Term, 1828. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 47. Mor. 278.

67. It has been refused, by the Supreme Court, to allow untranslated Persian papers to be put into the hands of the witness, even to prove the signature, though the counsel for the party producing them undertook to have them translated before the trial was over, and stated that the production had only been rendered necessary by matters elicited in the cross-examination of the witness. Ranee Rajesoorce v. Ranee Solachanumoney. July 1839. Mor. 278, note.

68. Where exhibits, produced for the first time in the Examiner's office, are required to be translated, the practice is, to move that the interpreter may attend at the Examiner's office. Woomaclurn Doss v. Ross-money Dossee. 13th Jan. 1840. Mor. 303.

69. Where no particular reason occurred why the necessity of a translation of documents might have been foreseen, and as the expense of the translation would have been great had it been unnecessarily incurred, the Court allowed the interpreter to translate the document viva voce. See-rary Mistry v. Colly Kinker Paulit. 18th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 22.

70. An instrument in one oriental language, signed in another, is admissible on proof of the party signing being able to speak the language of the instrument, and without proof of his being able to read it, or of the instruments having been explained. *Thahoe Sarap v. 74. A notary's seal upon a power of attorney, without proof that the person purporting to be a notary was such, nor any thing to prove signatures of attesting witnesses, beyond the statement on paper of that notary, is insufficient to prove the execution of such power. Anon. 4th March 1837. 1 Fulton, 72.

V.—IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY

1. Generally.

78. Where, at the formation of a triennial settlement for the conquered provinces, in 1210, F. S., A stood forward as proprietor of an estate, and, entering into engagements with Government, held possession for that period; and B, the real proprietor, then appeared, and sued to recover the profits received by A, alleging that A acted on her behalf in making engagements for the lands, and under an agreement to leave B in possession of her proprietary rights and profits, but had fraudulently applied them to his own use; B's claim was dismissed, as no written or other specific engagement between the parties had been adduced. Rance Bhudorun v. Hemunchul Singh. 15th May 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 59.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

79. Where the head of a village claimed remuneration from the Thahoor of a neighbouring village, by the custom of the country, in consequence of thieves having escaped from the village of the former and being traced to that of the latter; the claim was dismissed, it not being strictly proved, by the evidence adduced, that the footsteps of the thieves had been traced to the Thahoor's village, nor that property to the amount laid in the petition had been stolen; and it being necessary to prove every circumstance in cases of this nature, in order to avoid cases of Jhúthá Puglá, or fictitious robbery. Ram Singh Guj Singh v. Ubhe Singh Guj Singh. 15th Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 354.—Romer & Barnard.

79 a. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal having refused to set aside a deed of Rázi námeh for compromising an appeal then pending from that Court to the King in Council, alleged to have been obtained by fraud and duress; it was held on appeal, by the Judicial Committee, that the onus of proving such fraud and duress lay upon the appellant, in proceeding upon his petition in the Court below; and their Lordships being satisfied that full opportunity for such proof had been afforded him, confirmed the judgment of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, but, under the circumstances, without costs. Motee Lal Opudhiya v. Jugurnath Gurg. 26th Nov. 1836. 1 Moore Ind. App. 1.

80. A composition, the terms of which have not been fulfilled by one of the parties to it, cannot be admitted in his favour as proof of the amount of the claim of the other party. Pertab Singh Dugar v. Anundram Jani. 27th April 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 160.—Braddon & F. C. Smith.

81. Gross fraud and imposition are not to be imputed upon mere suspicion; and unless the charge be proved a party cannot be released from an agreement entered into by their own act. Rajunder Narain Rae and another v. Bijai Gorind Sing. 20th Dec. 1839. 2 Moore Ind. App. 181.

82. The onus of shewing that a compromise has been fraudulently obtained by intimidation and false representation, is cast upon those who seek to impeach the validity of their own deed. Ib.

83. A decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in a suit between two Armenians, whereby they and another person, then deceased, were declared to have been equally entitled to a certain estate, was held to be sufficient evidence of the amount of the said deceased person's share in the estate, in a subsequent suit at the instance of a party claiming directly under his will, and alleging him to have been entitled, by the Armenian law, to the whole. Gasper Malcolm Gasper v. Hume and others. 30th Nov. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 54.—Tucker & Barlow.

84. In an action for possession of real property on a sale absolute, but in reply to which the defendants pleaded a conditional sale, the plaintiff could not produce a bill of sale; but the return by the defendants to the plaintiff of the Ikrár námehs drawn out when the sale was only conditional was held to be conclusive proof of an unconditional sale. Sheik Dhunnoo Shalgur v. Sheik Boorhan. 19th Sept. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 181.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

2. Admissions.

84 a. A sued B and C, his brother and nephew, to recover the moiety of an estate, alleged by him to have been acquired while the family was undivided; and it appeared that A had withdrawn a previous suit for the same property, being induced, by a written promise of B, to make an amicable surrender of the moiety sued for; this was construed to be a virtual admission of A's right, as member of an undivided family. Jadoo Ram Das v. Obhje Ram Das. 28th Aug. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 77.—Colebrooke & Fombelle.

85. An admission obtained in a Lower Court from a party who appeared personally, and was unduly pressed by the Judge, was treated as null. Raja Gris Chandra v. —. 17th Feb. 1814. Cited in Sarup Chand Sarhar v. Raja Gris Chandra and others. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Stuart & Fombelle.

3. Presumptions.

86. Where a decree had remained unenforced for twenty-four years, and during that time no application had been made for its enforcement, and no reason given why such application had not been made; it was held, that the presumption was, that such decree had been satisfied. Mirza Husun Ali v. Mirza Shureef and others. 5th March 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 317.—Harington & Fombelle.

87. The fact of a person not having been heard of for fifty years warrants the presumption that he is dead. Bulraj Rai v. Pertaub Rai and others. 17th March 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 4.—Harington & Stuart.

88. Where one of two brothers, A and B, purchased an estate in the name of C, his nephew, and son of B; and it was proved that A and B had no property in common, and that the whole of the purchase-money was defrayed by A; it was held, that A, having been in possession of the estate for seven years after the purchase, and having enjoyed all the profits resulting therefrom, the presumption was, that he had purchased it solely on his own account, and not for his nephew; and the Court decided in his favour accordingly.<sup>1</sup> Sheooram Ghose v. Dataram Ghose. 13th April 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 53.

89. Where A had performed the duties of Karnam for the space of forty years, without having had his possession disturbed or objected to, and he was certified by the Collector as having been Karnam, but without date; it was held that A's grandson was entitled to the office in opposition to the claims of B, who alleged that A was only a Gumáshtah of B's grandfather, who was the former Karnam, the Court observing that A could not have been a Gumáshtah for so long a period; and that this, together with the Collector's certificate, formed convincing evidence that, whether conferred upon him by the Government of the Zamíndár, or abandoned to him with their consent by B or his grandfather, A was not a Gumáshtah, but the actual holder of the office of Karnam. Diggavelly Parumamah v. Coontamookala Surrauze. Case 1 of 1819. 1 Mad. Dec. 214.—Harris & Cherry.

90. In the absence of all proof to the contrary, it will be presumed that possession was given to a donee under a Hibeh námeh, in conformity with an express declaration in the deed to that effect. Shah Ghoolam Mohee-oodeen Sahib Shootary v. Rukmut-oon Nisa Beebee and another. Case 1 of 1820. 1 Mad. Dec. 254.—Harris & Grame.

91. The circumstance of bonds and contract paper being in the hands of the obligee must weigh strongly in favour of the claim of the obligee for payment, whilst the allegation of the obligor of its being the practice to leave bonds with creditors after payment can weigh nothing on the other side. Rajah Soobanadry Apparao v. Numboory Vencataputty. Case 10 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 304.—Harris & Gowan.

92. Where there is no formal separation of interests between brothers, and the parties have lived together as an undivided family till five years after the death of one of the brothers, the presumption is, that a trade carried on by the brothers is a joint one. Bairi Cundappah Chitty v. Bairi Cristnamah Chitty and another. Case 3 of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 372.—Grant & Gowan.

<sup>1</sup> It was not the question before the Court how far the purchase was regular or otherwise, under Cl. 3. of Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799, which provides, that "all purchases of land at the public sales are required to be made in the names of the persons actually purchasing the same, without any fictitious substitution of the name of any other person whatever." It is declared that any evasion of this rule will render the lands purchased in opposition to it liable to confiscation to Government, or to such other penalty as the Governor-General in Council, on consideration of the circumstances of the case, may think proper to impose. But the discretion thus reserved to Government could not affect the rights of the parties in the cause before the Court, nor could the decision in this case bar the full exercise of the powers reserved to Government by the Regulation.—Macn.

Cl. 3. of Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799, has been rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. XI. of 1822.

93. A claim to a small portion of the land, situate in the city of Benares, was dismissed, on presumption that it had been resumed by the former Government, it being proved that it had been occupied by the Company for full twenty years. Sheopershad and another v. The Collector of Government Customs at Benares. 17th May 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 354.—Ahmuty.

94. Where parties claimed to share in certain landed property, as being descended from a common ancestor, with those in possession, their claim was dismissed; as, though the parties were proved to be descended from the same ancestor, it appeared to be probable that the property had been alienated from the family, and re-acquired by a different branch; and it not appearing that there was any trace of proprietary right or possession on the part of the claimants since the Company's accession to the Dewanny. Birja Sahee and others v. Itopun Sahee and others. 16th Jan. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 99.—C. Smith, Leycester, & Dorin.

95. Where a decree had been passed by the Patna Provincial Council for the restoration of an estate (which had been illegally sold) to one member of an undivided Hindú family, on re-payment of the purchase-money, and it being presumable that the right of the other branches of the family had always been kept alive, their respective shares were decreed to them without subjecting them to payment of any part of the purchase-money, which, it was presumed, had been defrayed out of the produce of the joint property. Suda Sheo Singh v. Hur Lall Singh. 20th June 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 165.—Leycester & Dorin.

95a. Where property had been left by will to two absentees, brothers of the testator, and the interest was directed to be paid to the poor until their appearance to claim it, and thirty-five years had elapsed previous to the making of the will since their proved absence from the birth-place of the testator, the Court held that the legacy had lapsed, as the presumption was, that the legatees had died previously to the death of the testator. Durand and another v. Boilard and others. 15th Feb. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—C. Smith & Rattray.

96. Where A and B claimed an estate, under bills of sale from C, that to B was set aside, though bearing an anterior date, the possession of the titles by A, and other circumstances, creating strong presumption of fraud on the part of B and C. Chaudhuri Inayat Ullah v. Alexander & Co. 20th Jan. 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 341.—Braddon.

97. Where, in an alleged adoption, it appeared that there had been no acknowledgment in writing, no notice given to the ruling power, and that the neighbouring Zamindárs had not been invited to be present at the ceremony; it was held, that although, by the Hindú law, such omissions did not invalidate an adoption, still, as it was usual for persons in the situation of life of the adopter in this case not to omit such forms, the omission afforded presumptive evidence that the adoption had never taken place. Sutroogun Sutputty v. Sabitra Dye. 7th April 1834. 2 P. C. Cases, Case 4.

98. Though the registers made pursuant to the Bengal Regulations are not at all of the nature of conclusive evidence of title (the Regulations themselves providing against that), yet as the act of registration, after a proclamation, amounts to a public, open, and notorious assertion of title, on the one side, the omission to register, unexplained by proof of the ill health of the claimant, or absence in a distant country, or ignorance, affords equally strong presumption of the non-existence of any title on the other. Where, therefore, a party sought to obtain possession of certain property, called a Madad-i-madsh, against a defendant, whose adverse possession had existed from 1761, upon the allegation that such adverse possession was in the character of agent to the plaintiff; the Judicial Committee held (affirming the judgment of the Court below) that the proof of such agency lay on the plaintiff; and the balance of evidence being in favour of the defendant's right to possession, the circumstance of his having registered himself as owner in 1797, without any opposition or subsequent claim to register on the part of the plaintiff, and having continued in undisturbed possession from that period, was conclusive against the claim set up by the plaintiff. Meer Usd-oollah v. Mt. Beebee Imaman. 30th Nov. 1836. 1 Moore Ind. App. 19.

99. A claim to mesne profits of certain lands which had been adjudged to the plaintiffs under a decree founded on an award of arbitration, preferred nearly twelve years after the date of the decree, was dismissed, on the presumption that the arbitrators had adjusted all differences between the parties respecting the disputed lands. Raja Rughoonundun Sing and others v. Mt. Noorut Pauree and others. 19th Jan. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 3.—D. C. Smyth & Dick.

100. In the event of joint succession by a Hindú family to ancestral property, joint tenancy will be presumed until the contrary be proved. Mt. Joraon Koonwur v. Chowdree Doosht Dowun Singh and others. 19th April 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 26.—D. C. Smyth.

100 a. A compromise will be presumed to be valid, unless proved to have been obtained by unfair means by the party seeking to impeach the validity of his own act. Rajunder Narain Rae and another v. Bijai Govind Sing. 20th Dec. 1839. 2 Moore Ind. App. 181.

100 b. The presumption of the law is, that the whole of the property of an undivided Hindú family is in coparcenary. The onus lies on a member of such family to prove that it was separately acquired. Dhurum Das Pandey and others v. Mt.

Shama Soondri Dibiah. 8th Dec. 1843. 3 Moore Ind. App. 229.

Attendance of Witnesses.

101. Held, that before an order of dismissal on default is pronounced by the Lower Court, in consequence of the non-attendance of witnesses, it is the duty of the Zillah Judge, according to construction No. 1126, dated the 26th Jan. 1838, to satisfy himself by evidence, on oath, that the defaulting witnesses were material to the cause. Durjya Dhan Saha and another, Appellants. 11th Aug. 1840. 1 Sev. Cases, 105. —Reid.

101 a. A plea of disgrace, incurred by a personal attendance in Court, urged by a party summoned to give evidence, was held by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to be inadmissible. Mt. Inderjeet Konwur, Petitioner. 2d May 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 30.—Reid.

5. Examination of Witnesses.

102. A Musulmán refusing to be sworn to prove the execution of a note, alleging that he was a Munshi, and could not take an oath, but, in fact, because he wished to defeat the action, was severely reprimanded by the Court. The Court, in addition, told him it was fortunate for him that the plaintiff had established his demand without his assistance; for had he failed for want of it, it would have been the duty of the Court to have considered what ought to have been done. Bantleman v. Aujoo Lubby Maistry. 5th Feb. 1807. 1 Str. 225.

103. The inadmissibility of near relations of principals to give evidence to prove claims on books of account, or promises of adjustment of such claims by one party to the other, was held not to extend to a cousin by the mother's side, or a brother's father-in-law. Khooshal Kishundas v. Luksmedass Kishundas. 2d Aug. 1813. 1 Borr. 104.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinstone.

104. Held, that when the amount of rents of a village or villages are at issue before a Court, it is the province of such Court, under the general rules prescribed in Sec. 10. of Reg. XV. of 1816, to instruct the litigants to require the Karnams of those villages as witnesses, with directions to attend with their official accounts for the period in dispute, or to account for their not being able to produce them. Rajah Vassareddy Venkata-dry Naidoo v. Rajah Vassareddy Jugganada Bauboo and another. Case 6 of 1822. 1 Mad. Dec. 343.—Ogilvie, Grant, & Gowan.

105. The evidence of a partner in a firm cannot be admitted in a cause instituted for the recovery of a debt due by the firm. Nihalchund Jaechund v. Shookul Umbachunder. 11th July 1822. 2 Borr. 286.—Romer, Sutherland, and Ironside.

106. Where the Zillah Court had not thought it necessary to take the evidence of a certain witness called by one of the parties, the sitting Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on appeal, admitted such witness to give evidence under the circumstances. Mt. Sooruj v. Milapchund Hurukchund. 11th July 1822. 2 Borr. 289.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

107. Where twenty out of ninety-five defendants confess the justice of the appellant's (the original plaintiff's) right to certain Serva Māniyam land in their village, such partial admission cannot avail him, unless he can otherwise prove such right, or unless the whole body of Mirāsādars equally admit it, the village being a Samādāyam or Pasungearei village, i. a village whose entire lands are either held and cultivated in common by the joint proprietors of the whole village, or are divided, at some fixed period, according to established custom among them. Appoo Mooyen v. Durmarajah Naraina Ramien and others. Case 1 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 431.—Ogilvie & Gowan.

108. A claimed a sum of money from B, on a bond alleged to have been executed by him. The bond was produced by A; and though the attesting witnesses were dead, its execution and identity were proved by four witnesses on behalf of A. B brought five witnesses, who asserted that though a bond, similar in amount and date, was executed by B to A, the bond produced in Court differed in its terms, and was not the same bond they attested and saw executed by B. Held, that the admission, by B's witnesses, of the existence of a bond, similar in amount and date, independent of other considerations, gave to the evidence a manifest preponderance in favour of A; and B was accordingly decreed to pay the amount due on the bond with interest. Narasimma Chetty v. Wheatley. Case 2 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 435.—Grant & Gowan.

109. A claim to recover money on a bond was dismissed, the Court not believing the evidence of the witnesses of the plaintiff, chiefly owing to their want of respectability. Sydani Saleh-oonissa Chowdrayn v. Bhobun Monun Lahari and another. 21st Sept. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 90.—Sealy.

110. Where witnesses to the fact of certain property having been constituted Wakf, deposed vaguely, yet their evidence (corroborated by circumstances) was considered to be legally sufficient. Abul Hasan v. Haji Mohammad. 17th Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 87.—Leycester & Ross.

111. The evidence of a single witness, corroborated by circumstances, is sufficient to prove a compromise. Bireswar Dyal Singh v. Jai Nath Singh. 7th April 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 107.—Turnbull.

112. In a suit for possession of a Zamindāri and other estates, by a party claiming as son and heir of the deceased Zamindār, the defendants denied the title of the plaintiff, alleging that he was a spurious and supposititious child, and tendered fifty-eight witnesses to prove that fact. The Zillah Court, having taken the depositions of thirty of these witnesses, refused to permit the remaining twenty-eight to be examined, on the ground that, being to prove the facts deposed to by those already examined, it was unnecessary to take their depositions, and ultimately decided in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants appealed to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bombay, which refused to examine the witnesses rejected by the Zillah Court, and affirmed the decree of that Court. On appeal to Her Majesty in Council, the Judicial Committee remitted the case back to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, being of opinion that the refusal, by that Court, to admit the examination of witnesses tendered, was irregular, and that no decision could be come to upon the merits under such circumstances. Jeswunt Singjee Ubby Singjee v. Jet Singjee Ubby Singjee. 7th June 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 424.

113. In the case of a suit transferred from the Court of the Sudder Ameen to that of the principal Sudder Ameen, it was held that the latter was bound to take the evidence de novo, instead of deciding on the evidence taken by the Sudder Ameen. Doorga Dutt v. Dirgopal Sing. 24th Mar. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 78.—Tucker & Reid.

113 a. The examination of witnesses by the Register of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut must be taken in the presence of both parties, or their Vahils, of which due notice by the Register must be given for their attendance before him, conformably to Sec. 16. of Reg. VI. of 1793. Cowie v. Rambaksh Mhetah and another. 27th Aug. 1842. 2 Sev. Cases 99.—Rattray & Reid.

114 a. The citation and examination of absent witnesses under Act VII. of 1841 do not extend to provinces beyond the Honourable Company's territories, and the personal appearance in Court of a witness may be dispensed with under special circumstances. Saheberpehlaut Sein v. Chontereah Runmerden Sein and others. 26th Feb. 1844. 2 Sev. Cases, 29 b.—Reid.

114 b. A foreign potentate cannot be called upon to give evidence in the Honourable Company's Courts. Saheb Pruhllad Sein v. Chuttooreeah Kurmurden Sing and others. 26th Feb. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 57.—Reid.

114 c. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on cause being shewn, will direct a lower Court to issue a commission to take the evidence of absent witnesses, as prescribed by Act VII. of 1841. Muhammud Hussain, Petitioner. 7th Nov. 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 40.—Reid.

114 d. The evidence of a native subject of rank should be taken by a commission under Act VII. of 1841. Saheb Pruhllad Sein v. Chuttooreeah Kurmurden Sing and others. 26th Feb. 1844. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 57.—Reid.

114 e. Kazis, or law officers of the Lower Courts, are not to be permitted to take the evidence of witnesses in a civil suit; but the principal native officers of the Zillah and City Judges' Courts may be employed in taking down the depositions of witnesses whom the Zillah Judges may have no time to examine themselves; such depositions to be taken before the parties, or their pleaders, and to be signed by them in testimony of their having been present. Madhabchandro Mujmoondar and others, Petitioners. 29th April 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 183.—Tucker & Reid.

6. Documentary Evidence.

(a) Judicial Documents.

115. Decrees of the Supreme Court are admissible as evidence in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on plain unstamped paper, there being no regulation to the contrary. Petrus Nicus Pogose, and the Receiver of the Supreme Court. 9th April 1840.

116. A case having been decided by the principal Sudder Ameen and the Zillah Judge entirely by a reference to records of other cases, regular and summary, previously disposed of, the Court set aside both decisions as illegal, and remanded the case, with instructions that the suit should be restored to the file of the principal Sudder Ameen, and tried de novo, the plaintiffs being required to file their own evidence in support of their claim. Ram Sahae Chobee and others v. Enaiet Ali and others. 22d Aug. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 130.—Rattray, Tucker, & Barlow.

Dulala Rai.* 1st Aug. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 245.—Harington & Fombelle.

119. An Ihrár námeh, or written agreement, alleged to have been executed by a female, was held not to be admissible in evidence of a conveyance, where it was in direct opposition to strong circumstantial evidence. Tejchund v. Jugmohun Rai. 16th Sept. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 257.—Harington & Fombelle.

120. Where A had executed a deed, giving away a certain Mírásí, and A signed the deed as “by consent of B,” and it appeared, by the decision of the Collector, that such consent was not duly conveyed to A, the form transmitted by B to A being also declared by the Collector to be invalid; it was held, that such decision, passed by a competent authority, was conclusive as to the inadmissibility of the document. Narsimmarauze v. Caroomboo Moodely and others. Case 12 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 92.—A. Scott & Stratton.

121. Where the seals affixed to two documents alleged to have been executed by the same party were different, it was held that it was incumbent on the person claiming under such instruments, and producing them, to shew, by evidence, that the party who was alleged to have executed the deeds was in the habit of using one or the other, or both of these seals. Husan Ruza Khan Bahadoor v. Mohammud Muhdee Khan. Case 12 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 167.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

123. A claim to an estate by a Mamlúk of the deceased proprietor, under an alleged deed of gift, was dismissed with costs, as the document had not been produced in a former action, brought by the widow against the present claimant, when, on his plea of adoption proving untenable, a deed had been filed in Court, by which he admitted her right to succession; which deed, although now disclaimed by him, had been duly recorded and carried into effect, without opposition at the time. Chundun Koonwaree v. Sheo Ratna Singh and others. 22d Dec. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 275.—C. Smith.

124. An Ihrár námeh, or written acknowledgment, from the defendant to the plaintiff, that the latter is proprietor of a portion of the estate belonging to the former, was held to be good evidence of the transfer, although no consideration was proved; an at-

The Collector of Purnea, for the Court of Wards.* 2d July 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 80.—C. Smith.

(c) Accounts and Entries.

126. Entries of part payments in the commercial account-books of a debtor, purporting to have been paid towards liquidating a bond debt, and produced in evidence by his heir, were not admitted as sufficient proof of payment; the creditor denying the receipt of the sums entered, and none of the alleged payments being indorsed on the bond, or otherwise acknowledged in writing to have been received, or proved by witnesses. Mt. Mukhun v. Mohunt Rampershaud. 15th July 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 242.—Harington & Fombelle.

Gregory Johannes.* 24th Feb. 1818. 1 Borr. 262.—Sir E. Nepean, Bell, Prendergast, & Warden.

128. It was held that entries in the books of a banker, unsupported by other proof, are not sufficient evidence to prove a debt. Bunsee Dhur Nundee v. Mirza Moohumund Shureef. 15th Sept. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 271.—Blunt.

129. A merchant's books, if taken against him in evidence, must also be taken in his favour, unless some good reason to the contrary can be shewn. Goolabchund Prutab v. Manikehund Bhoodur. 24th July 1823. 2 Borr. 583.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

Brijpal Das and others.* 1st Dec. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 417.—Leycester & Harington.

131. Devi Dayal.* 21st Dec. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 154.—Turnbull & H. Shakespear.

133. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal ought not to affirm a decree of a Provincial Court in a case respecting a balance of partnership accounts without examining the original account-books of the firm, if they were tendered in evidence before it, although they were not produced before the Provincial Court. Baboo Benee Suharee and another v. Baboo Hurkishen Doss. 8th Feb. 1834. 2 Knapp, 255.

134. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bombay having, on the hearing of a cause, permitted an account current to be proved by the entries in the plaintiff's Daftars, or account-books, and decreed the defendant to pay the balance upon that evidence, unsupported by oral testimony, and notwithstanding the denial of any sum being due by the defendant in his answer; it was held by the Judicial Committee, that, under such circumstances, the books of account of the plaintiff ought not to have been used singly as evidence against the defendant, and that the decrees founded thereon must be reversed. Sorab-jee Vacha Gunda v. Koonnur-jee Manih-jee. 1st Dec. 1836. 1 Moore Ind. App. 47.

(d) Other Documents.

135. The respondent claimed certain shares of his father's estate for himself and the other heirs, the whole estate being retained by his brother, the appellant. Partition was decreed by the City Court, according to the Muhammadan laws of inheritance; but on appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the appellant produced a will alleged to have been executed by his father, and which made a partial distribution of the property. This will, however, contradicting the plea on which the appellant had relied for his original defence in the City Court, and, moreover, having been withheld for so long a time, was not considered by the Court as competent to preclude a judgment on the case according to the law of inheritance. Sufdur Hosein v. Enayut Hosein. 25th Nov. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 111.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

A's claim was dismissed for want of evidence, the presumption being that B was entitled, by reason of occupancy and actual possession, and under the Sanad of the Collector. Case of Padre George Manente. Case 9 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 19.—Casamajor, Scott, & Hurdiss.

137. A receipt, purporting to be an acquittance for the balance of a bond debt, was produced by the obligor two years after issue was joined, and subsequently to the death of the obligee, whose deed it was alleged to be, the suit having been carried on by his widow: the parol evidence in support of the receipt appeared to be unworthy of credit, and judgment was given against the obligor, who was adjudged to pay all costs. Anon. Case 8 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 129.—Scott & Stratton.

138. Under any circumstances the production of documents after a decision has been passed, and when the weak parts of the case are fully disclosed, must be looked upon with suspicion; and in no case can documents so produced be admitted, without the clearest proof of the party's inability to produce them before. Seeva Naih v. Subaputty Moodeliar. Case 3 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 150.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

139. Where Sanads were exhibited in a boundary dispute, the Sanad of a superior officer was held to overrule those of an inferior, although the latter were of more recent date, as they were not acts of an authority competent to affect the validity of the former one, and could not be allowed to interfere with it. Ragho Lakhshun Juvul v. Hoossuen Huedur Khan Surgoorow. 2 Borr. 592.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

140. A person claiming as agent of a certain pagoda for an annual donation granted under a Koul, affirmed by a Sanad, was nonsuited, as the Koul was neither signed, sealed, nor attested, and was quite unauthentic in every respect; and there was no proof of the assignment having been paid, according to the tenor of the Sanad said to be founded upon it, since the accession of the Company's Government. Sioram Sudaseo Rannure v. Bhaskur Rannchunder Koolhurnee. 5th April 1823. 2 Borr. 561.—Barnard.

142. Where certain L land was claimed, and the quantity was differently stated from what it had been in a former summary suit, nine years having elapsed since the dismissal of that suit; it was held, under the circumstances, that the production of the Taidad was not sufficient proof to uphold the claim, as, moreover, the claimant was unable to prove that he had possession of the land under a valid Sanad. Ram Koomar Rai v. Rampershad Bulea. 15th March 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 36.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

Ramkishen Geer*. 26th Jan. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 108.—Sealy.

144. In a claim to hold certain lands rent free, there being no Sanad, and no proof of the lands having been held as Lákhiráj since 1765, the Court rejected a document purporting to be an order from the Collector in 1771, on the grounds that it was either a forgery, or had been obtained by fraud or misrepresentation. Ram Pershad Sirkar v. Nuvab Soulut Jung and others. 27th June 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 168.—Leycester & Dorin.

146. A bond executed in Calcutta on plain paper on the 27th Feb. 1824 was put in evidence by the plaintiffs, and had been generally admitted by the defendant in his answer. Held, that it was not receivable in evidence, unless stamped, under Reg. XVI. of 1824,<sup>1</sup> and it was returned to the exhibiting party that he might get the proper stamp affixed. Sarajnarayan v. The Assignees of the late firm of Palmer & Co. 5th March 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 271.—Rattray & Halhed.

Carapiet Archbishop and another.* 26th Aug. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 39.—Rattray, Barwell, Stockwell, E. Harington, & Braddon.

150. The draft of an acknowledgment of a debt, and an agreement to pay the same, which was sworn to have been drawn up in the presence of the debtor, but was not signed by him, was admitted as evidence of the debt by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and a decree made in the Lower Courts upon such evidence was affirmed, with costs. Edu-l-jee Fram-jee v. Abd-oolla Ha-jee Cherah. 5th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 461.

tain property under a Hibeh námeh, and did not produce the deed, alleging that it was lost, and giving various frivolous reasons for such loss, he was nonsuited, with all costs against him. Zamíndár of Carvateenagar v. — Case 12 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 133.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

154. A Zamíndári was transferred by A to B, and the transfer was registered by the Collector. A asserted that the transfer was in the nature of a mortgage, and referred, in support of his allegation, to a letter addressed by him to the Collector, which was the letter on the receipt of which the Collector made the registry of the transfer. He also alleged that he transmitted a copy of an agreement by B, to restore the land on payment of the mortgage money, for the information of the Collector. B denied having executed the agreement. Held, that a copy of such letter to the Collector could not be admitted as evidence to prove any controverted fact, and much less could the Court admit the copy of a copy of an instrument which the other party denied that he ever executed. Anon. Case 7 of 1816. 1 Mad. Dec. 136.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

155. It is not absolutely necessary to register an Inám sanad in the Collector's Kach'hári; and if it be produced in Court it will be admitted as evidence, the registry being a question between the grantee and the Government, with which the other party has no concern. Zamíndár of Carvateenagarum v. — Case 8 of 1816. 1 Mad. Dec. 138.—Scott & Greenway.

156. A, claiming a right of pre-emption under a certain mortgage bond, said that he had given the original deed to B, who was in league with his adversaries, but begged that he might be allowed to produce a copy of it as evidence. The Court held, that the copy, being admitted by A to be unauthenticated, could not be received in evidence. Meeya Na- gur v. Bhaeddas Bhookundas. 1822. 2 Borr. 352.—Sutherland.

157. Although, in the law of evidence, it is a general rule that copies of papers authenticated by an authorized officer are good evidence of the contents of the originals, without any proof of their being examined copies; yet when such copies are from originals, in a language foreign to that of the authenticating authority, it is desirable that witnesses, who had examined such copies with the originals, should be heard in proof of their accuracy, particularly in cases where the opposite party may contest their correctness. Cotaghery Boochiah and another v. Rajah Vutchavoy Vencataputty Rauze. Case 4. of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 381.—Ogilvie, Grant, & Gowan.

158. Where a claimant to certain lands, as rent free, produced a Sanad of the Zamindár, dated 1196 B. S., purporting to be a renewed one in consequence of the destruction of the former title deeds; it was held that, as there was no other proof of the claim, it was inadmissible, and was dismissed accordingly. Radanath Chatoorjea v. Neel Komul Paul Chowdree and others. 6th March 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 228.—Leycester & Dorin.

159. A copy of a deed of mortgage, alleged to have been executed sixty-five years previously to the institution of a suit against parties who held possession, as they asserted, under a bill of sale, but which bill of sale they did not produce, nor even a copy of it, was held to be evidence of the mortgage, though only supported by hearsay evidence. Rai Hurnarain Sing and another v. Aduh Sing. 16th March 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 24.—Robertson.

160. Semble, Copies of documents, for the originals of which no proof was given of search, cannot be received as secondary evidence. Meer Usd-oollah v. Mt. Beebee Imaman. 30th Nov. 1836. 1 Moore Ind. App. 19.

161. The recital of a power of attorney in a will, affecting to transmit the authority conferred by it, is not sufficient evidence of the contents of such an instrument, in the absence of proof of its loss or destruction. Boman-jee Muncher-jee v. Syud Hoosain Abd-oollah. 7th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 494.

162. Debt on Bond. The defendant, by his answer, denied his execution of the bond. The plaintiff, in his reply, stated the accidental destruction of the bond, and prayed leave to put in evidence a registered copy thereof, which the Court allowed, and, at the same time, ordered the fragments of the original to be produced. At the trial the plaintiff produced the fragments, and, under Sec. 2. of the Madras Reg. XVII. of 1802, put in as evidence a registered copy of the bond. The Court admitted the registered copy as evidence, and found for the plaintiff. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on appeal, reversed this finding, on the ground that the registered copy, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of the destruction of the original bond, was improperly admitted as secondary evidence. Syud Abbas Ali Khan v. Yadeem Ramy Reddy. 16th June 1843. 3 Moore Ind. App. 156.

8. Evidence in Appeals.

163. The Court will receive fresh evidence in appeal, on clear and unquestionable proof<sup>1</sup> that it could not be discovered until after the decree of the Provincial Court. Nubkishen Sein v. Kishen Mohun Sein. 1st Sept. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 159.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

164. Where the plaintiffs, in an action in the Zillah Court for the recovery of a village, stated that they had lost their Dánapatram, or deed of gift, under which they claimed, but mentioned, in their reply in the Sudder Adawlut, when the proceedings had nearly been brought to a conclusion, that they had recovered the same, and prayed the Court to receive it with other documents; the Court would not allow them to be produced in evidence, the plaintiffs having failed otherwise to shew any title to the estate, and the production of such documents, at such a period, being necessarily to be looked on with suspicion.<sup>1</sup> Anon. Case 9 of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 43.—Scott & Greenway.

165. The Court of original jurisdiction is the Court in which the defence is to be made, and a party in a Court of Appeal can claim the admission of further evidence, whether documentary or parol, only on the ground of his inability to produce such evidence in the Lower Court; and such inability must be most satisfactorily established, for otherwise the Court of Appeal would be liable to admit evidence fabricated for the express purpose of meeting the decree appealed from. Rajah Vencata Permal Rauze v. Abbot and another. Case 16 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 66.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

166. A fact brought forward in the petition of appeal to the Sudder Court, and of which the appellants must have been previously aware, was held not to be admissible as evidence, as it was incumbent on them to have brought the fact in issue in the Lower Court. Arnachellum Pillay v. Iyasamy Pillay. Case 5 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 154.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

167. Copies of examinations taken by the Zillah Judge at the original hearing of the suit in appeal, the whole of the proceedings in that case having been quashed, cannot be admitted as evidence by the Sudder Adawlut: in such a case, the Court remarked, nothing but proof of the death of the witnesses could at all warrant the admission of their former examinations on the record as evidence. Veeraraghoovien and others v. Toppa Moodely and others. Case 11 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 158.—Scott & Greenway.

168. In the case of an appeal, defended by the assignees of an insolvent firm, appointed under the 9th Geo. IV. cap. 73. the evidence of one of the partners was received in appeal. Surajnarayan v. The Assignees of Palmer & Co. 5th Mar. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 271.—Rattray & Halhed.

169. Evidence tendered to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal, on a petition of review, which was refused, and the order of refusal not appealed from, though forming part of the transcript, cannot be referred to in the argument upon the appeal from the original judgment. Sheikh Imdad Ali v. Mt. Kootby Begum 25th June 1842. 3 Moore Ind. App. 1.

170. A defendant not having appeared in the first instance before the Zillah Court, and the case having been heard, in consequence, ex parte, has no right, on appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, to bring forward evidence to set aside that adduced by the plaintiff.<sup>2</sup> Suheenah Khatun v. Imbach. 5th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 76.—Braddon & Stockwell.

<sup>2</sup> In the judgment in this case the Court observed, "The reception, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, of documents which were not only not tendered in the Lower Court, but rather wilfully withheld, would tend to render this a Court of first resort instead of a Court of Appeal; and such a practice, if allowed, would be fraught with mischief, particularly in cases like the present, where the defendant, in her appeal, acknowledged having neglected to defend the suit after receiving the usual notice."

<sup>1</sup> No explanation was afforded by the plaintiffs of the time when, the place where, or the manner in which the Danapatram was recovered, and no satisfactory reason was assigned for not filing the other documents in the Zillah Court.

1. A motion was made to set aside an execution, under which a house had been seized and sold, on the ground that the house (together with some jewels) was pledged to a third person for more than it was worth, and therefore that it could not be considered as the defendant's property. 5. Where the posterior of two judgment creditors sued out execution, and delivered his writ to the Sheriff, and got it executed before the prior judgment creditor had stirred, he was held to be entitled to the preference, although the prior judgment creditor had first of all issued his writ which was returned nulla bona. Ib.

6. Dictum of Sir F. Macnaghten: "Lands in Calcutta have been sold in execution ever since the establishment of this Court, and for more than ten years before the decision of that case, in which they were declared to be fee simple." Joseph v. Ronald. 27th March 1818. Cited in 1 Moore Ind. App. 326.

<sup>2</sup> In this case Mr. East attempted to take a distinction between judgments confessed and adverse judgments, on the grounds that the time allowed for charging in execution after judgment was a mere favour to the defendant, and that by voluntary cognovit he had merely abandoned his claim to that favour; sed non allocatur.

10. Company's paper, belonging to a defendant, being extended in the Accountant-General's hands, under execution at the suit of the plaintiff, the Court refused to make any order that it should be paid over to the Sheriff; and after the Sheriff received the paper the Court refused to make any order that he should indorse it to the plaintiff, or sell it and pay over the proceeds. Russickchunder Neoghy v. Hurripersaud Ghose. 5th Nov. 1838. Mor. 289.

11. It was held to be doubtful whether the salary of a Government servant could be seized under a writ of execution. Rajbullub Seal v. Muchenzie. 8th July 1839. 1 Fulton, 82.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY, 107.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Appointment of Executors.

1. The appointment of an executor, though dehors the will, will be confirmed by the Court, where the intention of the testator can be collected. In the matter of the will of Wise. 6th Dec. 1809. 2 Str. 75.

2. A motion for a commission to swear in an executor at Lucknow was refused. It did not appear, from the affidavit, whether the party were or were not a British subject; but it was sworn that there were goods to be administered within the local limits of the Supreme Court's jurisdiction. In the goods of William Trickett. 4th Nov. 1835. Mor. 75.

2. Grant of Administration.

(a) To Next of Kin.

3. The next of kin applying for administration must be the next of kin in the whole world, in order to be preferred to a creditor. In the goods of Peacock. Hyde's Notes. 10th Jan. 1782. Mor. 7.

4. But if the next of kin should consent to letters of administration being granted to the Ecclesiastical Registrar, the Court will not allow such next of kin to revoke the administration taken out with such consent, nor will it commit the administration to any of the next of kin who had notice, and consented expressly or tacitly. In the goods of Astruchatur Malcolm Manuck. 28th June 1839. Mor. 26.

5. The citations in such a case need not be served personally. Ib. Mor. 28.<sup>1</sup>

6. A next of kin, who has been adjudged an insolvent by the Insolvent Court, and who has not obtained his final discharge, will not be allowed to administer. In the goods of Mary Jackson. 29th Oct. 1840. Mor. 28.

7. In applying for administration, under a power of attorney from the next of kin, out of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, a strictly legal proof of the execution of the power is not essential, provided always that the Court be fully satisfied of its genuineness, but not otherwise. In the goods of Macgowan. 8th Feb. 1841. Mor. 370.

8. A mere surmise of the existence of a will, and without actual proof of its existence, will not be sufficient to prevent administration from being granted to the next of kin. In the goods of Murray. July 1841. 1 Fulton, 31.

9. But if any will should ever be produced, the administration would of course be revoked. Ib.

<sup>1</sup> But if the next of kin, or creditors, be absent at the time of the return of the citation, the Court will grant administration, if the application be made within a reasonable time. 1 Sm. & Ry. 96, 97.

(b). To Creditors.

10. Administration may be refused to the husband of a legatee, as, although he is a creditor of the estate of the deceased, he cannot be considered a creditor according to the meaning of the Charter. In the goods of Collins. Hyde's Notes. 8th March 1777. Mor. 2.

11. The Court is not bound to weigh nicely the debts due to creditors contesting the rights of administration, and may grant administration to any applicant. In the goods of Ambrose Roche. Hyde's Notes. 19th Jan. 1779. Mor. 2.

12. Administration will be granted to the principal creditor in degree, and not the greatest creditor in sum. In the goods of Peacock. Hyde's Notes. 12th Nov. 1781. Mor. 6. In the goods of Kellican. 1st Term 1786. Mor. 10. In the goods of Lovejoy. Chamb. Notes. 31st Oct. 1787. Mor. 12.

14. A bond creditor petitioning for administration is entitled to preference to any next of kin who is not the next of kin in the whole world. In the goods of Peacock. Hyde's Notes. 10th Jan. 1782. Mor. 7.

18. Creditors who are entitled to administer in preference to the Registrar must be substantial legal creditors. In the goods of Porteous. 27th Sept. 1842. 1 Fulton, 76.

(c) To Friends, &c.

19. Where the petitioner for administration applies as "a friend" of the deceased, the Court has a right to inquire into his general character, and to refuse administration if such inquiry should prove unsatisfactory.<sup>1</sup> In the goods of Whiffen. Hyde's Notes. 27th March 1783. Mor. 8.

20. Held, that the Court would grant a limited administration to a person of its own nomination, rather than allow the prohibition of the 6th Geo. IV. to prejudice a creditor who was not himself, by the rules of the Court, in a condition to take out letters of administration. In the matter of the will of Gordon. 26th Aug. 1833. Perry's Notes. Case 3.

21. The Chila, or disciple, of the deceased (a religious devotee) will be refused administration, although the deceased may not leave any relations. Anon. 1 Feb. 1837. Mor. 25.

<sup>1</sup> Administration is now never granted to friends of the deceased. The 39th & 40th Geo. III. c. 79. sec. 21., enacts that all letters ad colligenda, or of administration, shall, in such cases, be granted to the Registrar of the Court.

22. Semble, The Registrar of the Court cannot take out letters of administration to a deceased Musulmán, whose laws of inheritance and succession are saved by the 21st Geo. (d) To the Registrar.

23. A military officer dying on service with his regiment, leaving a will, but no executor, within the jurisdiction, but leaving assets within the jurisdiction (besides such property as was immediately connected with his military character), the Court will grant administration to the Registrar of such assets not so connected; the word 'effects' in the 6th Geo. IV. c. 61. s. 1., being considered by the Court as meaning military effects. In the matter of the will of Gordon. 26th Aug. 1833. Perry's Notes. Case 3.

23a. Where a military man had died in camp, and the surplus of his property, after paying his regimental debts, had been remitted to the Military Secretary at Bombay, under the 3d & 4th Vic. c. 37. s. 52.; administration, notwithstanding such act, was granted to the Ecclesiastical Registrar, under the 39th & 40th Geo. 29. Not even where there is a probability of a will. In the goods of Murray. 1 Fulton, 31.

30. But where an executor, residing without the jurisdiction, appointed certain parties as his agents for the management of the testator's estate, letters of administration were granted to the Ecclesiastical Registrar, who sued the agents for certain notes in their hands; it was held, that the Stat. 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79. s. 21. and the Stat. 55th Geo. III. c. 84. s. 2. do not apply, and that the Court has no power to grant such letters of administration, although the executor may be absent, as such executor may appoint an agent. Turton v. Smith. 30th June 1842. 1 Fulton, 4.

31. A person appointed under a power of attorney (executed before the death of the testator) to act in place of the executor is entitled to administration in preference to the Registrar. In the goods of

40. Probate was granted to an executor upon the affidavit of a person, who, though not an attesting witness, was present at the time of the execution of the will, and who swore that the requisites of the Statute had been complied with; the Court considering that such a person was competent to prove that the solemnities required by the Statute had been complied with, the attestation clause being defective in that respect. In the goods of Blenman. 24th Jan. 1843. 1 Fulton, 127.

European executor to a native's estate would not. Ib.

82. The executor of a Hindú testator was held not to be entitled to commission. Joygopaul Bysack and others v. Ramanauth Bysack. 18th March 1837. 1 Fulton, 113.

83. Native executors generally attempt to charge a commission of five per cent. upon the assets collected; but the Court, thinking that the reason for giving commission to European executors (who are very frequently mere strangers to the deceased) does not apply to natives, have always resisted it. Cursondass Hunsraz v. Ramdass Hurridass. 26th July 1842. Perry's Notes, Case 4.

84. An agreement obtained by an executor from the sole next of kin and heir-at-law, for commission, is not such a contract between two independent parties as the Court will sanction or enforce. Ib.

(3) Of the Registrar.

85. The Registrar of the Court was held to be entitled to commission as administrator of an illegitimate intestate, against the nominee of the Crown, such nominee being considered by the Court to stand in the same condition as any other representative of a deceased. Howard v. Hemming. 13th Nov. 1818. East's Notes. Case 88.

(c) Sale.

87. Per Chambers, C. J. — In the case of personal estate left by a British subject, the executor is a trustee after the payment of legacies for the residuary legatee, and when the residue is not bequeathed for the personal representatives among whom he must divide it, according to the Statute of Distributions. In the case of land the executor is trustee, and, if he sell the estate, must hold the produce thereof, after payment of debts and funeral expenses, in trust for the devisee when the land is duly devised by will, or, if there be no such devisee, in trust for the heir-at-law, first making satisfaction to the widow for her dower, where it has not been barred. Doe dem. Savage v. Bancharam Tagore. March 1785. East's Notes. Case 63.

88. Per Anstruther, R. — At Bombay an executor or administrator may sell the lands and houses of the last owner on the mere authority of the probate or letters testamentary. Doe dem. de Silveira v. Salvador Bernardo Teixeira. Perry's Notes. Case 1.

89. It was held that the executors of an Armenian or British subject could not sell the realty, or make any title, notwithstanding the Charter of 1774, which gives the Court a power of seizing lands in execution for debts, &c.; the words used in the Charter are "after judgment," so that though the Court may so do at their discretion, executors or personal representatives cannot mero motu, and certainly can have no power to sell where there are no debts of the testator.<sup>1</sup> Doe dem. Aratoon Gaspar v.

Paddolochun Doss. 9th Nov. 1815. East's Notes. Case 19.

90. Fergusson's Act, 9th Geo. IV. c. 33. authorises an executor or administrator to mortgage as well as sell for the payment of debts. All of the executors need not join in the conveyance. Doe dem. Cullen and others v. Clark and others. 23d Jan. 1840. Mor. 76.

4. Liabilities.

91. A bonâ fide purchaser, from an executor, of lands of a British subject, for valuable consideration, was held to be secure, even before the passing of Fergusson's Act. Doe dem. Savage v. Bancharam Tagore. Mar. 1785. East's Notes. Case 63.

92. The remedy lies against the executor of a Hindû disposing of property unlawfully, and not against the purchaser from such executor. Aushutos Day v. Moheeschunder Dutt and others. 8th July 1840. 1 Fulton, 380.

93. An executor was relieved from his executorship, upon fully accounting and bringing the money belonging to his testator's estate into Court. Gorindechund Bysack v. Cossinanth Bysack. 14th Oct. 1808. Macn. Cons. II. L. 78.

As to all other monies the payment to one executor is good. Arnachellum v. Venkoo and others. 25th Sept. 1815. 2 Str. 316.

95. Where an executor and trustee, under a will, took possession of real property of the testatrix, and kept it in his own hands, and set up, in answer to a bill for an account and

<sup>1</sup> In the case of Josephus v. Ronald judgment was given on the 27th March 1818, when the question concerning the tenure of estates was fully entered into and held to be estates of inheritance, whether fee or customary, but liable to debts, in the hands of executors and administrators, by the 13th and 15th clauses of the Charter.—Note by Sir E. H. East; and see infra p. 299, note 2. and p. 250, note 1.

delivery up of the property filed by the residuary legatee, an alleged will of A, stated to have been found among the papers of the deceased, and by which he contended that the testatrix had only a life interest in the premises, and that, therefore, the heir at law of A (if any there were), whom he did not name, was entitled; it was held by the Court that it did not lie in the mouth of an executor or trustee, who had received property from his testator, to dispute his title to it, and thereby appropriate it to his own use: that he might relinquish, and even restore to the right owner that which he could not lawfully retain, but if he kept it himself he must account.<sup>1</sup> Lumsdaine and others v. Lumsdaine. 8th April 1816. East's Notes. Case 51.

5. Assets.<sup>2</sup>

96. Proof of assets seems to have been required in all cases where not <sup>1</sup> This judgment was confirmed by the Court, in the 4th Term, 1816. The will stated that the testatrix possessed and enjoyed the property in her own right.

<sup>2</sup> By Fergusson's Act, real estates in India are assets in the hands of the executor or administrator, for the payment of debts; but the Act does not alter the tenure. 9th Geo. IV. c. 33. s. 6. See per Lord Lyndhurst in Freeman v. Fairlie. 1 Moore Ind. App. 305. Clarke Ad. R. 1829. 32. And see Gardiner v. Fell. 1 Jac. & W. 22. 1 Moore Ind. App. 299. Mr. Longueville Clark, in a note to his edition of the 9th Geo. IV. c. 33., has the following remarks (p. 107): "A mistake, as important as singular, appears to have been made in framing this Act; important as it regards the numbers and opulence of those whom it affects, and singular because the Bill is known to have been prepared by Mr. Robert Cutlar Fergusson. The Act directs that the real estates of British subjects situated within the general civil jurisdiction of the King's Courts shall be assets in the hands of executors. Now the civil jurisdiction of these Courts, in respect to British subjects, extends over the three Presidencies; and all real estates situated within these limits, and possessed by this description of persons, are, therefore, to be governed by this law. The Act is also applicable to all real estates situated within the local limits of the civil jurisdiction of the Su-admitted by the plea. Sealy v. Kissen Porreah. Hyde's Notes. 27th July 1778. Sm. R. 32.

97. A debt due to the estate of a deceased seems to be considered as bona notabilia, in the place where the person of the debtor happens to be in custody. In the goods of Pattalum Custoorj Rungiah. 8th April 1801. 1 Str. 73.

98. But the Court afterwards refused applications of this nature under similar circumstances. In the matter of the will of Turul. 2d Oct. 1815. 2 Str. 326.

99. It was held that a deed of conveyance, executed by one who was at the time indebted to simple contract creditors, with intent to prejudice such creditors, though void as against them, is sufficient to convey the title as between the grantor and grantee; and therefore, on the death of the grantor, the estate does not descend to his representatives, so as that the creditors suing can charge them with the value as assets, but the creditors must take judgment of assets quando acciderint, and then bring ejectment for the land; or if the land were bonâ fide mortgaged to the grantee before the creditors' debt accrued, and only the equity of redemption were conveyed afterwards in the lifetime of the grantor, the creditors, after taking preme Courts, and which do not belong to Mahomedans or Gentoos; and therefore the provisions of the Bill do not apply to property which lies beyond these limits, and which is not held by British subjects. Hence it follows that the creditor of any deceased person, who is neither a British subject, nor a Mahomedan, nor Hindoo, may sell his debtor's property, which lies to the west of the Circular Road, but he will lose the benefit of the Act over such parts of the estates as are situated on the opposite side." See infra. Pl. 103. By a draft Act, intitled, "An Act for the Improvement of the Administration of Justice in the Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal," (read in Council, for the first time, the 13th March 1847), it is proposed that all the assets of a deceased shall be equitable assets, and that estates shall be administered accordingly.

judgment of assets quando, against the grantor's representatives, must file their bill in equity to reach his equity of redemption as equitable assets. Gobind Doss and another v. Parbuttychurn Bose and others. 26th Jan. 1816. East's Notes. Case 41.

100. Semble, Lands are not made assets generally, in the hands of executors and administrators, by the Charter, but only sub modo, under a writ of execution issued by the Court for debts recovered by judgment.<sup>1</sup> Marcu Zora v. Moses Cuchecarraky. 21st March 1816. East's Notes. Case 49.

101. But it was afterwards held that land and houses situated in Calcutta, although an estate of inheritance, which descends to the heir, are nevertheless assets in the hands of administrators for the payment of debts. Jebb v. Lefevre. 4th Term 1826. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 56.

102. A debt, due by an agent to a military officer dying on service with his regiment, leaving a will but no executors within the jurisdiction, on a private account, will not be included in the "effects, &c." for which the 58th Geo. III. c. 73. and the 4th Geo. IV. c. 81. s. 49. provide. In the matter of the will of Gordon. 26th Aug. 1833. Perry's Notes. Case 3.

103. The Stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 33. respecting the liability of real estates, as assets in the hands of executors and administrators, applies only to the case of persons strictly and technically described as British subjects, except where the lands are situated within the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. It does not, therefore, affect the case of lands of an Armenian Christian in the Mofussil.

<sup>1</sup> It was decided in the Court of Chancery (Froeman v. Fairlie. 17th Nov. 1828. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 21. 1 Moore Ind. App. 305), that land and houses in Bengal are freeholds of inheritance, and are not chattels real, and they were held not to pass to the executor or administrator. And See *Gardiner v. A suit was brought in the Recorder's Court at Madras, by an executor of a widow, against the executors of her deceased husband, upon a Cadjan given to her by him, and for which a suit had been commenced in the Kach'hari before the establishment of the Recorder's Court, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, which was afterwards affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council. *Chittra Pillay v. 1. Where an order had been obtained to pay over to the Sheriff a sum of money, which had been extended in his hands, and that he, when he should receive it, should pay it over according to the priority of the writs, and no notice of the rule had been served on the other parties; it was held that it was the Court, and not the Sheriff, who ought to determine which of the parties ought to be paid (according to the 15th Sec. of the Charter), and they would not do this in their absence. The parties might have to object, not only to the right of the party applying to be paid at all, but also to the amount of costs incurred, which, under the 15th Sec. of the Charter, were directed to be added to the original debts. The Court, considering that the rule nisi had been obtained regularly, directed it to stand over, with liberty to serve it on the other parties, and that service on their attorneys was to be good service. Gopce Do v. Bishennath Bose. 7th Feb. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 125.—Harington & Fombelle.

2. In a summary suit for possession of a Balook under Reg. XLIX. of 1793, at the express desire of the parties the question of right was taken up by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; and on proof of the right resting with the respondent, the alleged dispossessor, judgment was given in his favour. Pitamber Bhurtacharij v. Ramjee Banajah. 3d July 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 195.—Harington & Fombelle.

3. On a demand by a farmer on two under-renters, for possession of lands for which they were in balance, at the end of the first year of a lease which had been granted to them, and refused to give up, summary judgment was given for the farmer by the Zillah Court, under Reg. VII. of 1799, and was confirmed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. Jagesur Mustofee v. Shammohun Rai. 3d Aug. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 206.—Harington & Fombelle.

4. The claims of Government to lands included in the Decennial settlement are subject to the cognizance of the Courts of Judicature; and no individual can be legally dispossessed from such lands unless a decree of Court have been given against him. Costs against Government were given in a case in which this principle had not been observed, and the plaintiffs, who had been irregularly dispossessed, were at the same time allowed the full benefit of the rule of limitations for the cognizance of civil suits.

Government v. Rajesree Dibia and others. 30th Aug. 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 156.—Harington & Fombelle.

5. In a suit to eject the appellant from a house and premises bought by the respondent, and of which he had taken forcible possession, the appellant produced documents alleging him to be a purchaser of the property; but failing altogether in proving their authenticity, the suit was dismissed with costs. Kishundas Muloochand v. Nonerozjee Manchurjee. 10th June 1819. 1 Borr. 342.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Bell, & Prendergast.

6. A Zamindár in Cuttack holding his estate under a five years' engagement, was dispossessed by the Collector during the last two years of his term, on the grounds of oppression towards the tenantry, and of the engagements not having been sanctioned the superior revenue authorities.

Id., in an action for recovery of possession and mesne profits, that, under the circumstances, the Collector was not justified in ejecting the plaintiff, and the Court awarded to the latter the mesne profits for the unexpired period of his engagement; but the Court passed no order in regard to the possession, the term of the engagement having expired. Government v. Sheikh Fukeerullah. 20th June 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 171.—Braudon & Hutchinson.

absence, B urged that the house had come into his possession as Khote in the regular way, on A's leaving the village; and it appearing that the writing produced by A had been fraudulently altered, and, moreover, that it was declared illegal by the law officer, the claim was thrown out. B admitted that A had originally built the house, and the Sudder Ameen had allowed the value of the materials; but this was reversed on appeal, as the materials had long ceased to exist, and B had renewed the house. Pandoorung Padya v. Narroo Padya. 8th Feb. 1839. Sel. Rep. 186.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

8. In an action for certain lands, held under a Potta, alleged by the lessee to convey a lease in perpetuity, but declared by the lessor to be conditional, the Potta itself not having been produced; it was held, under the circumstances, that the lessor had not the power of summary ejectment, but should have sued to set aside the lease. Tetoo Ram Huddar and others v. Panoo. 17th June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 37.—Tucker & Lee Warner.

9. In a suit for the recovery of various portions of land, from which the plaintiff alleged that he had been forcibly dispossessed at different times, but did not specify the particulars; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut held that he was rightly nonsuited in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen, and rejected his petition accordingly. Syud Akbar Ali Khan, Petitioner. 14th March 1842. I. GENERALLY.

1. A suit was filed against the respondent, as heir to his father deceased, to recover from him the amount of four respondentia bonds passed by the father to the appellant for money advanced on a trading voyage: the claim was clearly proved, but the appeal was dismissed on the respondent subsequently confessing that it was a collusive one, made with a view of defrauding other creditors of his father out of the assets left. The Court also ordered that the appellant should be prosecuted at the Sessions for forging the bonds on which he sued. Racechund Poorshotum v. Moolla Muh-mood Hashum; and Myaram Dytaram v. The Estate of Moolla Hashum. 9th June 1813. 1 Borr. 48, 49. —Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

FUNERAL RITES.

- I. OF HINDÚS, 1.
- II. OF SIKHS, 10.
- III. OF PARSÍS, 12.

I. OF HINDÚS.<sup>1</sup>

1. The mere act of performing the funeral rites of a deceased Hindú can give no title of succession without proof of right.<sup>2</sup> Dattnaruen Sing v.

<sup>2</sup> In this case the claim of the appellant, grounded on the circumstance of his father having performed the obsequies, as he alleged, of an uncle who died childless, was founded on passages of Hindú law, which intimate that the succession to the estate and the right of performing the obsequies go together. But those passages do not imply that the mere act of celebrating the funeral rites gives a title to the succession, but that the successor is bound to the due performance of the last rites for the person whose wealth has devolved on him.—Coleb., see 3 Coleb. Dig. 545, 546.

Ajeet Sing and others. 14th Feb. 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 20.—Cowper.

2. Where a man, who had been expelled from his Cast (Rajputs) for the improper performance of the funeral ceremonies of his aunt, filed a suit against the Cast for damages, the Court decreed, that when he had performed the ceremonies required he should be re-admitted to the Cast, but not before. Ghelajee Nana Bhace v. Umar Singh and others. 19th Feb. 1812. 1 Borr. 389.—Crow & Day.

3. The eldest son of a deceased Hindú shall, according to the Shastia, make all expenses consequent upon the death of his father, and deduct the amount from the estate, dividing the balance equally among the other sons.<sup>3</sup> And where the widows of a younger son of a Hindú deceased having seized the estate left by him, and the elder brother sued them, and obtained a third share of the whole, minus the sums laid out by the widow and younger son on the funeral expenses; the elder son then sued for recovery of what he had laid out for the same purpose; and it was held that he was entitled to two-thirds of the amount expended by him. Rookhminee and another v. Tooceram. 27th May 1814. 1 Borr. 124.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

4. Performance of funeral ceremonies belongs exclusively to the eldest son, who must celebrate them out of the common property; and should a younger son take upon himself to perform them when his brother was present, he could not be allowed remuneration or deduction out of the estate. Laroo v. Manikchand Shamjee. 3d July 1818. 1 Borr. 418.—Elphinston, Keate, & Sutherland.

5. The funeral expenses of a Hindú widow are chargeable on the share or estate of her late husband, and not against her daughter, on the pretence of her inheriting the Stridhana of her mother. Sheolal v. Ichha. 17th Feb. 1820. 1 Borr. 429.—Elphinstone, Romer, & Sutherland.

6. One of three persons, each entitled to inherit equal shares of certain property, had taken possession of the property under a will of the last incumbent, and had expended thereout certain monies for his obsequies. On the will being declared invalid, and a partition decreed, such expenses were directed to be taken out of the whole estate previous to the division. Hareemulab Khan v. Keshoram Sheodas. 26th Feb. 1822. 2 Borr. 6.—Romer.

7. A grandson through a deceased daughter is entitled to perform religious ceremonies for the benefit of the soul of his deceased grandfather, on the failure of a trustee, in preference to a daughter, who is a childless widow, these two being the only issue of the deceased.<sup>1</sup> Sibchunder Mullick v. Sreemutty Treepoorah Soondry Dossee and others. 20th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 98.

8. The eldest son of the eldest daughter of a Hindú dying and leaving four daughters him surviving, is entitled to perform the Shrád of the deceased. Sandial v. Maitland. 29th July 1844. 1 Fulton, 475.

9. A bequest of a sum of money for the performance of the annual Shrád will be upheld. Ib.

II. OF SIKHS.

10. Semble, By the Sikh law, if a man die, leaving a son, or an adopted son, such son must perform all the funeral ceremonies; but if he leave no son, then the widow must perform such ceremonies. Doe dem. Kissen-chunder Shaw v. Baidam Beebee. Jan. 1815. East's Notes. Case 14.

11. Semble, By the Sikh law, a widow who is a Pardah woman may appoint a Mukhtár to conduct the ceremonies of her Cast; but it seems that the touching the body and lighting the pile at her husband's funeral must be done by the widow in spite of Pardah. Ib.

III. OF PÁRSÍS.

12. Semble, Among the Pársís any person may stand up and perform the Watumna on the third day after death, without prejudice to the title of the heir. Nawee Buhoo v. Pesh-tungee Loola Bharee. 15th Dec. 1802. 1 Borr. 1.—Duncan, Cherry, & Lechmere.

13. And where one of two adopted sons of a Pársi asked permission of the other to be allowed to perform the Watumna, it was held to be an acknowledgment by him of the other's right to inherit. Ib.

4. According to the law of Benares, the gift of property to a brother's son is valid, notwithstanding the existence of a daughter, provided the property be undivided. By Bengal law it would be valid whether the property were divided or undivided. Baboo Sheodas Narain v. Kunnul Bas Koonour. 5th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 234.—Goad & Dorin.

5. A gift of property to a woman by her relation is her Sudayima, or gift from affectionate kindred, and as such is at her entire disposal.<sup>1</sup> Ib. Gosaen Chund Kobraj v. Mt. Kishennunnee and another. 8th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 77.—Halhed.

2. By Widows.<sup>2</sup>

6. In a claim under a deed of gift executed by the widow of a Hindú Zamindár of Bengal, who died childless, for the Zamindári formerly possessed by him, which at his death devolved on the widow, it was held that the widow could not alienate the estate, which at her death must pass to the husband's heirs. And the plaintiff, a collateral relative of the husband, having shewn that he was heir-at-law, judgment was passed on this ground in his favour, or, rather, in favour of his daughters, his heirs, he having died before the suit was decided.<sup>3</sup> Mahoda and another v. Kuleani and others.<sup>4</sup> 14th March 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 62.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

7. A gift by a widow after the death of a son adopted by her, without issue, to the son of her younger daughter, was set aside as prejudicial to the rights of a daughter, who at the time of the gift had not, but afterwards had, male issue.<sup>5</sup> Mt. Bijja

<sup>3</sup> A reference to the following passages of Jimutá Vahana will confirm the correctness of the grounds on which the decision of this cause rested. (Dáya Bh. c. ii. s. i. 56. 59. and s. vi. 9. and Sríkrishna's note in the summary or recapitulation, Dáya Bh. at the end of c. xi. s. vi.) It has been declared by the law officers of the Courts, in other suits, that a widow's gift of the estate to the next heir is good in law, though she be restrained from making any other alienation of it. This opinion, though not founded on any express passages to that effect in books of authority, seems reasonable, as such a gift is a mere relinquishment of her temporary interest in favour of the next heir. It may, however, happen, that the person who would have been entitled to take the inheritance at her decease may be different from the one who obtained it under the gift or relinquishment to him as presumptive heir; and if the title be either preferable or equal, it may invalidate such gift in whole or in part.—Coleb.

<sup>5</sup> An intricate question of Hindú Law was determined in this case, relative to the power of a widow, on whom property had devolved by the death of her husband, or of her son, to alienate it by gift, without the consent of the heir-at-law. The Pandits differed in opinion, and the difference arose from the following considerations. The succession to property which has devolved on a widow passes to daughters, for the sake of the male issue which they have, or may have. The son of the youngest daughter (the eldest being then childless) was, therefore, the person contemplated in the inheritance. A gift to him might be deemed beneficial to the deceased, and, consequently, legal; or the donation in favour of him who finally was to be heir in regular succession could not be considered as made against the consent of heirs, since his consent to a gift in his own favour might be assumed. In

Dibeh v. Mt. Unpoorna Dibeh.<sup>1</sup> 26th Sept. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 162.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

7 a. A widow cannot, by the law of Mithila, Bengal, or Benares, make a gift of her deceased husband's immoveable property without the consent of his heirs, except for certain special reasons; viz. funeral expenses, her own subsistence, and the like. Sreenarain Rai and another v. Bhyajha. 27th July 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 23.—Harington & Stuart.

7 b. But according to the Mithila law, she can consume, or give, or sell, in her lifetime, the moveables which may have devolved upon her by the death of her husband; but she has not, by such law, any power over the immoveables beyond frugal enjoyment.<sup>2</sup> Id.

the present instance the presumption was, that a son had been adopted by the widow, and that the estate consequently reverted to her on his decease without issue: it was, therefore, a case of property devolving on a mother by the decease of her son, and it was questioned whether a woman was restricted from alienating land so inherited by her. The law officers of the Sudler Dewanny Adawlut dissented from the doctrine which maintains the woman's right of alienation, and held that the rules concerning property devolving on a widow equally applied property devolving on a mother. In both cases the woman is restricted from alienating unless for her necessary subsistence, or for pious purposes beneficial to the deceased, and that only to a moderate extent. A gift of the whole property does not fall within one exception. Nor could this donation be considered as one made in favour of the heir-at-law, the immediate heirs being the daughters; and the exclusion of the further issue, which might be born between the period of the gift and that of the woman's demise, being illegal. They were therefore of opinion that the gift was void, and that the succession devolved on the two daughters, both of whom had male issue at the time of their mother's decease.—Coleb. And see the Dāya Bh. c. xi. s. i. 64. 2 Str. H. L. 403—410. 2 Macn. Princ. H. L. 48. 299. Steele, 42.

<sup>2</sup> This is according to the Chintāmani and the Retnacārī. According to the law of Bengal the widow has only an usufructuary interest in the moveables as well as

8. A widow cannot, under any circumstances, alienate the whole landed estate devolved on her by the death of her husband, nor can she alienate a part (except under special circumstances) without the consent of all her late husband's heirs, notwithstanding she may have obtained the consent of the nearest heirs; and a deed of gift executed by her in favour of a stranger, to be valid, must be attested by all her husband's heirs as consenting parties. Mohun Lal Khan v. Ranees Siroomunnee. 31st Aug. 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 32.—Harington & Fombelle.

9. Semble, A widow may give away in her lifetime personal property derived from her husband, but she cannot will it away.<sup>3</sup> Jushadah Raur v. Juggernaut Tagore. 12th Feb. 1816. East's Notes. Case 47.

10. Semble, Where a widow gave up property by her will to her nephew during her lifetime, on condition that he should maintain her during her life, and defray her funeral expenses, and keep the balance himself, it was held not to be a religious charitable gift. She might have made a gift, not only of moveable but immoveable property, to Brahmans, and the deed would have been valid and legal<sup>4</sup>; but in this instance the gift was held to have been made through partiality, and therefore improper: if she gave away the personal property, the gift the immoveables. See Inheritance, Pl. 51, 52, notes. Dāya Bh. c. xi. s. i. And see 2 Str. H. L. 408., where Colebrooke upholds the power of a widow over moveables in a case occurring in Vizagapatam.

<sup>3</sup> Such a gift would only be valid with the consent of the heirs of her late husband, unless such personal property were her Stridhana; and under such circumstances, or in the absence of heirs, the Supreme Courts would, I imagine, uphold a will as equally valid with a gift made by the widow in her lifetime. There is no distinction in the books from which the conclusion arrived at by the Pandits in this case, and mentioned in the above Placitum, can be drawn. It is to be observed that this case was decided without argument at the bar.

was valid, provided it was not of the nature of obstructed heritage.<sup>1</sup> Mt. Unroot v. Kulgandas. 5th July 1820. 1 Borr. 284.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Colville, Bell, & Prendergast.

11. The widow of a Hindú who died without children was held to have the power of making a gift of a portion of her late husband's property for the payment of his debts, for the support of his family, for her own subsistence, and for the performance of his exequial rites. She may also make a gift, proportioned to the extent of her late husband's property, for the benefit of his soul. And if these objects (payment of debts, &c.) cannot be effected without the sale of all his property, she has the power of disposing of the whole of it; but she may not alienate, by gift or sale, the whole or any part of his property, solely at the suggestion of her own will and pleasure.<sup>2</sup> Ramchander Surma v. Gungagorind Buhhojiah. 1st Feb. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 117.—Ross.

12. A Hindú widow has the power of alienating, by gift, from one to three-sixteenths of her late husband's property, for the benefit of his soul. Ib.

13. Where a party claimed to retain possession of certain lands, on the plea of gift from a Hindú widow, by whom they had been taken on her husband's death on a division among the heirs; it was held that the plea was not proved, and that, at all events, the gift would have been invalid without the consent of the heirs. Bindrabun Chund Rai and others v. Bishun Chund Rai. 25th April 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 143.—Leycester & Dorin.

14. A Hindú widow has no right, by the law of Mithila, to alienate any part of her late husband's estate, except for religious purposes; and the daughter of the deceased, whose right of inheritance is weaker, that is, who only succeeds on failure of the widow, à fortiori has no power to alienate, by gift, her ancestral property, to the detriment of the other heirs of her father. Mt. Gyan Koonur and another v. Dookhurn Singh and another. 3d Feb. 1820. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 330.—Rattray.

15. By the Hindú law, as current in Bengal, the gift by a widow of the property derived from her late husband to her daughter (being the next in succession) and her daughter's husband is valid. Beer Inder Narain Chowdree and another v. Subhoma Dibbea and another. 6th Aug. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 36.—Braddon.

16. And Semble, That if it should be considered that such daughter's husband had any right to separate from his wife in the gift, and he should happen to be a Brahman, the legality of that right may be upheld as a gift made to a Brahman. Ib.

18. By the Hindú law, as current in Bengal, a co-parcener may give or alienate his own share of joint property. A gift by A to his son of a Talook, which he had received from his father while sole Zamindár, was upheld by the Court; as the gift of the Talookdári tenure, which is distinct from the Zamindári right, and usually held as a dependency, paying rent to the Zamindár, did not destroy the right of the brother of A in the Zamindári.<sup>1</sup> *Anundchoud Rai v. VIII. of 1793, and accordingly instructed the appellant to take measures for its separation.—Coleb. ##### (a) Validity and Operation.

21. In a claim, by the respondent, to recover his estate from the appellant, his adopted son, who had been entrusted with the care of it, a deed of adoption and gift, pleaded by the appellant, was construed not to entitle him to possession during the life of the respondent, and judgment was therefore given in favour of the claim.<sup>2</sup> *Siddh Narayan v. 22. Where A and B, the heirs of a Zamindár, claimed part of his estate from C, who had possessed himself of it, under an alleged deed of gift from the widow of the Zamindár; it was held that the deed of gift was invalid, as the widow had only a life interest in the estate; but C's possession was upheld on proof that he had been adopted by the widow under a written authority from her husband for that purpose. Nundkomar Rai and another v. Rajindarnarayan. 2d Dec. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 261.—Harington & Fomelle.

On the death of the father his widow took a life interest therein, without power of alienation.<sup>3</sup> Kishen Gorind v. Jaullee Mohun Thakoor. 30th Aug. 1819. 2 S. D. Rep. 309.

(b) Deed of Religious Gift.

30. Property bequeathed in Krishnarpan by a childless widow, in favour of her sister's sons, was maintained as against the legal heir to the same property; but the donees were declared incompetent to take or disburse sums set apart for the performance of the donor's funeral ceremonies, which could only be performed by the legal heir. Juggeeran Nuthoojee and others v. Deosunkur Kaseeram. 27th Aug. 1812. 1 Borr. 394.—Crow & Day.

30a. A Krishnarpan cannot be annulled, nor property assigned by it resumed. Ib.

31. A Sirarpan was held to be void where a previous decision of the Court of Appeal had fixed the succession of the property attempted to be conveyed, and had declared that the present possessor had only a life interest in it. Alienation of the property, therefore, by such present possessor was clearly illegal. Um-bashunkar Mungubram and others v. Tooljaram Dagaram. 27th July 1813. 1 Borr. 400.—Crow & J. Smith.

32. A widow of a Hindú, who died without male issue, may give away her husband's property in Krishnarpan, notwithstanding the existence of her sister's son, provided she herself have no son, or other near heir of her own, whose rights would be affected by such gift of their inheritance to another.<sup>1</sup> *Kupoor Bhuranee v. 33. In a dispute between the widow of a son and the sons of a daughter of a Hindú deceased, whose estate the grandsons claimed under a Krishnarpan, executed in their favour by their grandfather, the Court set aside the Krishnarpan in favour of the widow (or daughter-in-law). It may be remarked that in this case the evidence brought forward to prove the execution of the Krishnarpan was extremely unsatisfactory. Muhu Lakmee v. The Grandsons of Kripashookul. 29th July 1817. 2 Borr. 510. — Prendergast & Sutherland.

34. A, B, and C laid claim to the estate of a deceased Hindú, A being his Kul Gar, and claiming under a Krishnarpan, B being his widow's niece, and claiming under a will of the widow, and C, a great grandson, in a different branch, of the person from whom the estate came, claiming as heir and nearest relation. It was held that A was best entitled to the property, as the right of possession passed away by the deed from the donor to the donee, and consequently the heir of the donor had no longer any right to bequeath it to B, and the right of C to the property was clearly annulled by the Krishnarpan. Keshoor Poonjiyar v. Mt. Ramkoonnur and another. 11th June 1822. 2 Borr. 314.—Romer.

35. A Krishnarpan executed by a Hindú, to take effect after the death of his widow, need not be signed by the widow. Ib.

36. Property given to certain persons by a Krishnarpan, to take effect after the death of the widow of the donor, cannot be made liable for her funeral expenses. Ib.

36a. A Krishnarpan was held to be valid, although the donor lived and ate in the same house as the donee (his maternal grandson) till his death, as it did not appear that he supported himself out of any of the property given in Krishnarpan, he having other means of subsistence. Kaseeram Kripuram v. Mt. Ichha. 24th

<sup>1</sup> May. c. iv. s. viii. 1. This is a striking case, and quite conclusive as to the power of a widow to alienate property. It was not the claim of an heir to recover property already given away, and in the possession of the donee, but the latter sued the legal heir, enjoying his full rights over the property, strengthened by possession, annulled those rights, and ousted him in virtue of a deed of gift.—Borr.

5. Possession.<sup>1</sup>

37. Semble, A near relation may be in possession of a gift, for any period, without its operating to transfer the right of property from the proprietor to the possessor. Baboo Sheodas Narain v. Kamrul Bas Koonwur and others. 5th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 234.—C. Smith.

37 b. Semble, Possession of any other house than the donor's dwelling is made over in gift by giving the donee the key of the house, having first taken out all the chattels. Ib.

37 c. Semble, Possession of iron and copper vessels, jewels, cattle, and chattels, is taken by the donor's making them over to the donee, and his taking them away. Ib.

6. Verbal Gift.

38. Semble, According to the law as current in Mithila, a verbal gift of immoveable property is invalid, where the donee has never been in the possession of the property. Sham Singh v. Mt. Umraotee. 28th July 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 74.—H. Colbrooke & Stuart.

Semble, Where a Brahman has been heard to express himself openly, in the presence of his family, in favour of his sister's sons succeeding to his fortune, either by nuncupative will or present gift, according to what might be the construction of the words employed, it would be considered by the Court to be a good disposition of his property, although it is contrary to Hindú law for a Brahman to adopt his sister's son;<sup>2</sup> but the Court would not give credit to vague and unsatisfactory evidence of such expression of will, or gift, even where the nephew had performed his uncle's funeral ceremonies, the latter leaving a childless widow. *Doe dem. invalidated by the marriage, on occasion of which the dower was settled, proving illegal by the return of the wife's former husband, supposed to have been dead. Newazee Feraush v. Mt. Atlassee and another. 26th Nov. 1800. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 31.—Speke.

43. Where a Muhammadan had transferred, by gift, all the property in his possession to his wife, in lieu of dower, it was held that such gift did not bar an action against his estate, for property which had come into his hands as executor.<sup>1</sup> Ruzia Begum v. Aha Moohammed Ibrahim. 8th Aug. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 150.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

44. Held, that notwithstanding the difference of opinion in the Muhammadan law books as to the effect of an invalid gift being conjoined with one that is valid, such gift is valid so far as regards the thing which is a fit subject of gift. Shah Ghoolam Mohee-ood-deen Sahib Shootary v. Ruh-mut-oom-Nisa Beebee and another. Case 1 of 1820. 1 Mad. Dec. 254.—Harris & Graine.

45. In a gift of partible property, division is essentially necessary prior delivery. Mt. Khanum Jan v. Mt. Jan Beebee. 13th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 210. — Leicester & Dorin.

46. Semble, There is no difference with regard to gift between the heirs of a Musulmán and a stranger. Me-gajee Alleebhoy v. Metha Nuthoo and another. 8th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 80.—Ironsides, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

2. Definiteness.

47. It was declared by the law officers that a gift of land, forming part of joint property, to be valid must be distinct, and the boundaries and extent of the property given be known.<sup>2</sup> Jaffer Khan v. Hubshee Beebe. 31st March 1796. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 12.—Speke & Cowper.

48. To render a gift valid by the Muhammadan law, it is necessary that the subject of it be defined and distinct, and separated from all other property not intended to be conveyed, or which cannot lawfully be conveyed by gift: and where four out of twelve parts of certain property intended to be transferred were devoted to religious purposes, and which, therefore, could not legally be transferred by gift, it was held that the gift of the eight portions was invalid, as they were transferred simultaneously with the four portions, the transfer of which was illegal. Meer Ubdool Kareem v. Fukehroonisa Begum. 2d Aug. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 44.—C. Smith & Goad.

49. Held, that the Muhammadan legal objection of indefiniteness does not apply to a gift under which possession has been held for upwards of twelve years.<sup>3</sup> Syud Shah Basit Ali v. Syud Shah Imamoodeen. 19th

In the case of a gift made to two or more donees the interest of each must be defined, either at the time of making the gift, or on delivery. See Macn. Princ. M. L. 50. There was another objection against the gift in this case which was not noticed by the parties, but which would have equally operated against the appellant; namely, that the donor did not relinquish possession during his lifetime. Another suit between the same parties for the personal property was decided in favour of the respondent on the same grounds.—Macn.

Nov. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—Goad & Dorin.

50. In the case of a gift, under the Muhammadan law, specification of the property is not requisite, where the gift comprises the whole property of the donor, and is made in favour of only one donee. Mt. Saheebun v. Sheik Khoda Buxsh. 10th Nov. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 44.—Rattray & Robertson.

3. Confusion.

51. A gift is vitiated by confusion. Mir Nur Ali v. Majidah and others. 30th July 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 136.—H. Shakespear & Sealy.

52. But, Semble, the Court will consider that a gift for a consideration is, in effect, a sale and purchase, and is not vitiated by confusion of property, or defect of possession, according to the Muhammadan law. Sayid Husain Ali Khan v. Fiqaz Uddin Haider. 28th Nov. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 239.—Walpole.

53. The Muhammadan law recognizes a distinction between a gift for a consideration (Hibeh-bil-ineaz) and a gift on consideration of a return (Hibeh ba shart-ul-ineaz<sup>1</sup>); the latter is, the former is not, vitiated by confusion and non-possession. Imdad Ali v. Kadir Baksh and others. 24th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 296.—Walpole.

4. Possession.

1. Generally.

54. Seisin of the donee is not requisite by the Muhammadan law, in order to render a Hibeh-bil-ineaz, or gift for consideration, valid. Meer Nujeeb Ullah v. Mt. Kuseema. 18th Nov. 1795. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 10.—Sir J. Shore, Speke, & Cowper.

55. In a suit for lands, to which the defendant pleaded a title under a gift from his wife, lately deceased, made some years previous to her death, the question was, whether there had been possession under the gift sufficient to give validity to the gift in Muhammadan law. Held, that delivery of seisin was sufficient, and continued possession was not necessary. Jafier Khan v. Hubshee Beebee. 31st March 1796. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 12.—Speke & Cowper.

56. The gift of a portion of landed property, without distinct allotment of it, and delivery of seisin to the donee, is not valid in Muhammadan law. Azimooddeen v. Fatima Beebee. 27th June 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 24.—Cowper. Kishoor Khan v. Jeevan Khan. 9th Aug. 1799. Ib. 25.—Cowper. Casim Ali v. Furzund Ali.<sup>2</sup> 27th Nov. 1805. Ib. 113.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

57. Possession is an indispensable part of a gift, which is not valid without it. Sheikh Humeedood Deen v. Nazarood Deen. 19th Jan. 1824. 2 Borr. 648.—Romer.

58. Semble, A gift made at the point of death is not valid, even to pass one-third of the property, without possession being given. Megajee Alleebhoy v. Metha Nuthoo and another. 8th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 80.—Ironsides, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

59. Under the Muhammadan law, seisin by the donee is essential to the validity of a gift. Neermutee Beebee Chondrain and another v. Assudonissa Beebee. 20th April 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 286.—Rattray & Lee Warner.

<sup>1</sup> For the definition of this and the preceding kind of deed, see Macn. Princ. M. L. 217.

<sup>2</sup> According to the Muhammadan law, as ascertained in this case, seisin, or possession by the donee, is indispensable to the complete effect and validity of the gift in his favour. Another point of law which came under consideration, but which did not influence the decision, is the validity of a joint gift without discrimination of shares. The authorities of Muhammadan law differ on this question, but the prevailing authorities admit the validity of such a gift. But it would not be valid for property included in, or inseparably attached to, that of another person (so as to be undefined).

5. Revocation.<sup>1</sup>

60. An unconditional gift, without consideration, is valid, though the donee be not of kin to the donor, and cannot be retracted where a transfer has been made by a donee to a third person, or where the donee has improved the gift, or where the donor and donee are spouses. Shah Mahmud Bakhsh v. Lutf Ali. 26th April 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 355.—Braddon & Robertson.

61. If, after the execution of a deed of gift, possession be also given, the gift cannot be revoked. Mt. Bummoo v. Mt. Hedayut and others. 9th Jan. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 16.—Robertson & Stockwell.

62. If none of the legal obstacles to the resumption of a gift exist<sup>2</sup>, the Civil Court, on application being made by the donor, will grant permission to resume the gift, and not call for evidence as to the cause of desire of resumption; and such permission given is legal and valid. Sheik Jectoo v. Mt. Buddun Bibi and another. 7th Nov. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 189.—Braddon & Hutchinson.

6. Deed of Gift.

63. The widow of a Musulmán claimed the estate of her husband, who died twenty-six years before, under a gift from him in lieu of dower (Hibeh-bil-ineaz), dated two years before he died. There was no possession on her part since his death; and her son, in the interval, by her direction, had sued and obtained judgment as heir to his father's estate. Such having been the case, the law officers held that, under the circumstances, the widow was estopped from claiming under a gift from her husband, though she might come in for her share as one of the heirs. Meeer Nujeeb Ullah v. Mussunnaut Kussama. 18th Nov. 1795. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 10.—Sir J. Shore, Speke, & Cowper.

64. A deed of gift from a father to his minor son for property, of which possession was not delivered at the time of the gift, or during the father's life (about four years beyond the date of it), was held valid; for the son being a minor, it was presumed that the father was trustee for him. One-fourth of the property conveyed by the gift was adjudged to the son's widow, as his heir, in addition to her dower. Nurazee Feraash v. Mt. At-lussee. 26th Nov. 1800. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 31.—Speke.

65. At the suit of a widow against the brother of her husband, for her husband's estate, under a deed making a gift to her of all his property in lieu of dower, it was adjudged that the widow was entitled to take under this deed all property possessed by the husband at the date of its execution, and, in the property subsequently acquired, had a right to share as an heir. Musnad Ali v. Khoorshed Banno. 14th Aug. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 52.—Lumsden & Harrington.

66. A deed of gift by a woman to a minor, received into her family as an adopted son, for property of which possession was not delivered at the time of the gift, or during the life of the donor, who retained possession of it in behalf of the said minor, was held to be valid and complete in law, notwithstanding that the father of the said minor was alive; but a claim under that instrument to a portion of a joint undivided estate was rejected, the gift of such property being invalid according to the Muhammadan law. Mt. Banno Beebee v. Fakherodeen Hosein. 3d May 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 180.—Harrington & Fombelle.

<sup>2</sup> The Kāzi stated that the legal obstacles to the resumption of a gift are seven: 1. The incorporation of an increase with the gift. 2. The death of either of the parties to the gift. 3. A return in consideration by the donee to the donor. 4. Alienation of the gift. 5. The parties being husband and wife. 6. Relation within the prohibited degrees of marriage. 7. Destruction of the thing given. And see 3 Hed. 301.

67. Where a deed was not in the form of a Hibeh námeh, and was in its language obscure, yet as it contained the words dádeh shud, "it was given" (by me), the deed was declared to be good and valid. Moo-hummud Umeer Khan v. Jumadar Bucha Bhace. 9th Jan. 1822. 2 Borr. 179.—Romer.

68. Where a widow claimed for recovery of her late husband's effects from the widow of her stepson; the latter produced a deed of gift by the husband in her favour, in reversion from his own daughter, and an acquittance from the mother-in-law. It was held doubtful whether the deed of gift was not invalid, as not being followed by possession, or whether it might not come under the denomination of a will, as providing for the disposal of property. The majority of the authorities were against the validity of the deed, and the Court reserved the point, holding that the claim of the mother-in-law was untenable on account of the Faríkhkhatt. Noor Beebee v. Mt. Ruheema. 28th March 1822. 2 Borr. 153.—Romer & Sutherland.

69. A filed a suit for the removal of a notice of mortgage laid by B on a house bestowed in gift by the former owner under a Hibeh námeh to A. B urged that the donee only held the house in mortgage of B's ancestors; but failing to produce any documentary evidence in proof of the alleged mortgage, the Hibeh námeh (in which the former owner declared the house to be his, and which was proved to have been executed in a public manner many years back) was declared to be valid, and it was decreed that the notice of mortgage should be removed, and B restrained from all further molestation to A's rights of ownership. Shurfood Deen and others v. Shumsood Deen Shaqur. 30th May 1822. 2 Borr. 269.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

70. Where a widow claimed, under a Hibeh námeh by her husband in her favour, to prevent the sale of her husband's house, attached in execution of a decree against him; it was held, that as the property given had not been transferred to the possession of the donee, but had remained until the attachment partly in the hands of the donor and partly in those of his cousin, the Hibeh námeh was invalid. Shekh Ummud Shekh Ruheem v. Mt. Hafeez Buhoo. 26th July 1823. 2 Borr. 611.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

71. A Hibeh, or gift, is fixed by the Ijáb-i-kabúl, or "acceptance of the verbal gift," and a Hibeh námeh in which the Ijáb, or "verbal offer," alone is written, not the acknowledgment, or Kabúl, and which is not followed by possession, is invalid, and cannot be executed. Ib.

72. Land, being joint property, cannot be bestowed by a Hibeh námeh; but if the donor, having separated his share, should give it away, and the donee should take it in possession, the gift would then be valid; for by the Muhammadan law possession is an indispensable part of a gift, which is not valid without it. And where, in a suit by a Muhammadan against the heirs of a woman deceased for her Wazífeh lands, his property under a deed of gift executed by her in his favour, the Court held that possession of the lands by him was not proved, or that he enjoyed any income from them, and the suit was dismissed. Shekh Humeedood Deen v. Nazur-ood Deen. 19th Jan. 1824. 2 Borr. 648.—Romer.

73. A deed executed by a Musulmán during an illness of which he dies is good only for one-third. Case of Moonshee Hassan Ali. Barwell's Notes, 91.

74. Where a third of certain property had been decreed to a Musulmán by the Zillah Judge (Jones), he claiming the whole under a deed of gift passed to him from his brother-in-law previous to his decease; the Provincial Court (Sutherland and Taylor) reversed the decree, on the ground that the donee had not exercised ownership, and was not entitled even to the one-third share; but on appeal it was held, that as the donee was now left in a worse position than he was in before he appealed, and as the Provincial Court had decided on a point not referred to them, the decree of the Provincial Court should be amended, so far as to confine its operation to two-thirds of the property, the claim to which had been thrown out by the Zillah Judge's decree, deciding that the donee was not entitled to possess those two-thirds; but with regard to the remaining one-third it was decided, that as neither party had appealed from that part of the decision it should remain in force until brought before the Court in a regular form. Costs in the Lower Courts were decreed to be discharged from the estate, but in the Upper Court to be defrayed by the appellant. Meyajee Allerbhoy v. Metha Nuthoo and another. 8th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 80.—Ironsides, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

75. Semble. A Musulmán making a deed of gift upon his death-bed, the deed cannot hold good further than it may be considered bequest, by which a man who has heirs can bequeath only one-third of his property to a stranger, and then the party in whose favour it was passed would be entitled, without the consent of the heirs, to one-third of the property, whatever it might be, after all other claims on the estate had been liquidated. Ib.

76. Semble. If one of the heirs of a Musulmán passing property by deed of gift to a stranger admit the gift, it will hold against his share. Ib.

77. A sued B for a share of certain properties, under a deed of gift, for a consideration executed by B's mother. B alleged that a forged deed in this form had been substituted for a gift in the ordinary form, because the latter was vitiated by confusion and defect of possession. He further alleged that the consideration was fictitious. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut decreed A's claim on proof of the deed, and did not try the fact of consideration. Sayud Husain Ali Khan v. Firguz Uddin Haidar. 28th Nov. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 239.—Walpole.

78. A Kabín námeh, or deed of marriage settlement, containing a gift by the husband to his wife of the whole property possessed by him, or which thereafter might come into his possession, is valid in regard to the property in the actual possession of the husband at the time of the execution of the deed, but not in regard to property acquired subsequently by him, non-existent property not being capable, under the Muhammadan law, of being made the subject of a gift. Oojudhea Beebe and others v. Mohan Beebe and another. 30th June 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 30.—Braddon & Stockwell.

79. Held, that a deed of gift of real property, legally executed, is valid against a deed of dower, previously executed by the same individual in favour of his wife, in which a sum of money is specified as dower due to her, without mention of a pledge of real property as security for the dower debt. Mt. Saffaroonisa v. Agesha Bibi. 18th July 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 177.—Rattray & F. C. Smith.

80. A deed of gift for a consideration bonâ fide executed by a trader to his wife, such trader not being shewn to be in debt at the time, or that he executed it in contemplation of insolvency, is good against subsequent dispositions of the property. Such a deed of gift, by the Muhammadan law, must be construed according to the rules affecting the laws of sale, and the validity of a sale is derived, not from the seisin, but from the contract. Doe dem. Ramtonoo Mookerjee v. Bibee Jeenut. 1st Term 1843. 1 Fulton, 152.

80 u. A deed of adoption by a Musulmán, declaring that the adopted son should "succeed to his property and title," was held, on appeal, to be inoperative and void, either as a deed of gift, or as a testamentary disposition, no delivery of possession and relinquishment by the donor, or seisin by the donee, having taken place. Jeswant Singjee Ubbay Singjee v. Jet Singjee Ubbay Singjee. 5th Feb. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 245.

7. By the Imāmīyah Doctrine.<sup>1</sup>

81. By the law, as received by the Shīa sect, gift of an aliquot part of an undivided whole is valid.<sup>2</sup> Mirza Kāsim Ali v. Mirza Muḥammad Hosen. 29th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 213.—Rattray & Walpole.

82. According to the law of the Shīa sect an undefined gift is valid. Id. as cited in Ramrutton Ray v. Furrook oon Nissa. P. C. Cases.—Walpole.

III. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

83. A gift, intended as such, by a father to his natural son, though advanced to him as a loan by way of precaution for good behaviour, and afterwards disavowed by the father as a loan, does not affect any provision by a subsequent will. Burt and others v. Wood and others. 11th April 1816. East's Notes. Case 52.

GOVERNMENT FUNDS.

1. A deposited a sum of money in the treasury of the Collector, as a loan to Government, but died before the promissory note to the amount of the deposit had been made over to him; A's heirs claimed against the Collector for re-payment of the deposit to them, but the Court held that it was not competent to the Collector to refund the money which, having been deposited as an investment in the public funds, could not be repaid without the orders of Government; and it was decreed that the promissory note should be obtained from the Accountant General, sold at the market rate, and the proceeds, after payment thereof of the costs of suit, divided amongst the heirs of A, according to their respective shares. Collector of Chittagong v. Mt. Mal-laha Banno. 2d Feb. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 13.—Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

<sup>1</sup> There is no translated work on the Imāmīyah law of gift. Baillie's Digest, unfortunately, not having reached that division of the Shīa law.

<sup>2</sup> In a former case (Azeemoodin v. Fatima Beeber. 27th June 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 24.) the law officers of the Court, after propounding the doctrine of the Sunīy Jurisprudents as to gift of part of an undivided whole and possession, cited these extracts from the Sharā'ia al Islām as shewing the doctrine of the Shīa doctors on the same subjects—"As to immoveable and non-deliverable property, possession arises from abandonment of the donor. In regard to moveable and deliverable things, it arises from delivery and transfer. Gift of undivided property is valid, like that of divided, and possession thereof is established by the surrender of the whole to the donee. But if the tenant in common refuse, let the donee direct him to appoint him to be agent for possession; should he refuse, let the ruler appoint an agent to hold for both, to whom the donor may then transfer. The gift is not valid of that of which possession cannot be given—for instance, of a bird in the air, and of a fish in the river." "If he give what the donor already holds, it is valid, and there is no need for the permission of the donor to take possession, nor that the time during which possession is possible should have passed. But to this latter position some jurisprudents scarcely incline."

2. The power of altering the public assessment is not vested by the Regulations in the Civil Courts of Judicature, but is reserved exclusively to the Governor-General in Council. Bhorranny Pershaud Chuckerbutty v. Mt. Coroonn Mye. 7th June 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 242.—Ker & Oswald.

3. Per Grey, C.J.—The Governor-General in Council can only act according to the provisions of the Statutes, and he cannot delegate an authority to any one to say what is a genuine act of Government. The Bank of Bengal v. The East-India Company. 17th Jan. 1831. Bignell, 144.

Nincapah*. 1816. 2 Str. 333.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

2. Grants obtained in Farsi, or fictitious or substituted names, are not illegal by the Muhammadan law; and the property conveyed by such grant is vested in the person to whom the grant is actually made, and not necessarily in the person whose name is made use of. *Sheikh Buhader Ali v. 2. Where a Hindú claimed against his brother's fourth wife, and a daughter by his first, to prove his right to the guardianship of the minor son of his brother by a third, separation having taken place between the brothers; it was held that the boy's stepmother was his legal guardian, and in the event of her resigning, then the uncle, his claim being preferable to that of the half-sister.<sup>2</sup> Lukmee v. Umur-chund Deochund. 17th Dec. 1821. 2 Borr. 144.—Elphinston, Romer, & Ironside.

3. A stepmother resigning the guardianship of a minor is incapacitated by her own act, which she cannot afterwards revoke, and the right of guardianship goes to the next entitled in succession to such right. Ib.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.<sup>3</sup>

4. By the Muhammadan law, a widow appointed guardian by her husband of their infant child is entitled, in case of injury or disseisin done to the infant's property, to sue in the infant's name alone, or coupled with her own as guardian. Anon. 4th Term 1813. East's Notes. Case 1.

III. IN THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

4*a*. Pending a suit for partition by a widow, she adopted a son, by the direction of her late husband; by the Hindú law the act of adoption diverted the property from the widow and vested it in the adopted son, subject to the maintenance of the widow. Notwithstanding the adoption, however, the suit was prosecuted in the widow's name, and a decree was made directing her to be put in possession. It was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that, in such circumstances, she prosecuted the suit

IV. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Appointment of Guardian.

5. The power of appointing guardians is part of the prerogative granted to the Supreme Court, and belongs neither to the equity nor the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. In the matter of Ann Butler. Hyde's Notes. 2d July 1778. Mor. 262.

6. The mother of an infant widow was appointed her guardian, and a competent monthly allowance was ordered to be paid out of her husband's estate for her support during her infancy. Hurrosoondery Dossee v. Cossinanth Bysack. 1815. Maen. Cons. H. L. 83.

7. The Supreme Court will not appoint a guardian resident out of its jurisdiction, but a person resident at Calcutta may be appointed guardian pro tanto, to receive and remit the money allowed for the infant's maintenance to England, and to be responsible for its application, the infant being in that country.<sup>1</sup> Coverdale v. Greenway. 27th Oct. 1830. Bignell, 11.

2. Liability of Guardian.

8. A release by a minor to his guardian soon after his coming of age will be set aside, if it should appear, from the circumstances of the case, that the release was improperly obtained, with reference to the particular time and occasion of his signature to it: such signature it would seem, upon the general principles of the Court, independently of circumstances, cannot be held binding, but must be declared void.<sup>2</sup> Gillon v. Mitford. 26th Oct. 1808. 1 Str. 324.

9. A Hindú guardian was ordered to pay into the hands of the Accountant-General such part of the personal estate of his infant ward (being personal estate of an undivided Hindú family) as he had in his own hands, and over which he had the legal disposition, viz. Company's paper, part of which was in his own name, and therefore capable of being transferred by his own indorsement. Ex parte Lokemann Mullick and others. 20th March 1815. East's Notes. Case 30.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

10. Where A had managed the estate of B, a minor aged fifteen years, and took from B a conveyance, by way of gift, in consideration of an alleged debt for expenditure on his account, which appeared grossly extravagant; it was held that the conveyance should be set aside with reference to this and the minority of B, without prejudice to A's recourse on B for any claim for money expended on B's account. Lachman Das v. Rup Chand. 26th April 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 114.—Scaly.

2. Right of Guardianship.

11. In a suit by Parsi minor through his guardians, his great uncle and cousin, for recovery (together with its rent) of a house of his mortgaged by two of the respondents, who claimed, under an alleged will, to be trustees of the estate, and the appellant's guardians; it was held that the great uncle and cousin, his nearest relations, were his natural guardians, the claim of the respondents not being confirmed by any positive deed; but the mortgagee was declared to be responsible to the appellant in the first instance, and was ordered to deliver up to him the house in dispute, with the rents and mesne profits received by him as mortgagee, he bearing all costs of the suit. Gooshtusp Suhoorabjee v. Kanoosjee Kala Bhace. 18th Dec. 1816. 1 Borr. 317.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingale, & Elphinston.

3. Appointment of Guardian.

12. Held, on a reference from the Zillah Court, that the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut has the power, under Reg. I. of 1800, of interfering summarily, and of appointing a co-guardian and manager to act conjointly with the guardian and manager of a minor's estate, under Reg. V. of 1799, when the actual guardian, or manager, may be disqualified, from a total ignorance of the language, want of knowledge of Zamindari accounts, and advanced age. Jordan, Applicant. 22d June 1840. 1 Sev. Cases, 37.—Tucker, D. C. Smyth, & Reid.

12a. Held, that a claim against a guardian appointed under Reg. I. of 1800, by his ward, who had recently attained his majority, cannot be summarily enforced. Issen Kishnur Acharge, Petitioner. 9th May 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 30.—Reid.

4. Liability.

13. A guardian was held to be responsible for all claims arising out of transactions during his management; and to him, therefore, must claimants look for the satisfaction of their demands, and not to the minor whose estate he manages. Anon.

Case 1 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 51.—Scott & Greenway.

14. But the estate of a minor is responsible for all just debts incurred on his account; and his guardian, having rendered full and fair accounts, would be entitled to recover from the estate any sums that might appear to have been borrowed from necessity, and for the evident benefit of the minor. Ib.

15. It was held that a person officiating for a minor, whose guardian he was, in the capacity of Tahsildar, and borrowing money in his own name to discharge the public revenue, will be solely responsible, in the first instance, for the repayment of it, even after his removal from the office, and the minor's succession to it; but that, on an adjustment of accounts, he is entitled to be reimbursed by the latter, should the debt appear to have been really incurred on his account, and bona fide chargeable to him. Neek Singh and another v. Anoopun Das and another. 22d May 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 154.—Harrington & Stuart.

16. In a suit instituted against a minor landholder and his guardian, jointly, to recover rents unduly levied during the minority of the former; it was held that the latter is alone liable in the first instance, notwithstanding that the former had attained to majority before the final decision of the suit, with liberty, however, to sue for reimbursement, should he think fit. Joneahir Singh v. Chandernarain Rai and others. 26th March 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 83.—Goad & Dorin.

17. A Hindú married woman claimed to recover from her father-in-law certain property left in his charge by her mother for her benefit. The woman and her husband were both minors, and the father-in-law was her guardian, but he had been obliged by the Court to resign her guardianship to her uncle because he ill-treated her. She thereupon sued him for her property, but the suit was dismissed, as there was no sufficient proof adduced that her father-in-law had received the property. Oottumram Dhoolubhram v. Mt. Dhannce. 5th May 1821. 2 Borr. 16.—Elphinston, Romer, & Sutherland.

18. A Hindú widow, having an infant son, and having taken upon herself the management of her late husband's affairs, was held to be personally responsible for his debts, both on this account and as guardian to her son. Oottumram and another v. Mt. Bhanee and another. 14th March 1822. 2 Borr. 166.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

19. A decree for damages for defamation of character, by a charge of corruption against A, who alleged himself to be the guardian of B and C, and to have made the charge in their behalf, they being minors, and therefore not liable, was held by the Court to be personal, and not to confer on A any exemption from liability, nor to subject the estate of B and C to be sold in execution thereof. Bhaira Chandra Bose v. Thomas Gurn Das Ray, Applicant. 29th Jan. 1839. 1 Sev. Cases, 85.—Reid & Braddon.

HABEAS CORPUS.

I. GENERALLY, 1.

II. POWER OF THE SUPREME COURT TO ISSUE THE WRIT OF.— See JURISDICTION, 166 et seq.

I. GENERALLY.

1. Where habeas corpus is issued to a distant place, it may be advisable to move immediately for a rule to return the writ, in order to save time.

The Judge who issued the writ may grant an attachment for disobedience to the rules, either in term or in vacation.<sup>1</sup> In the matter of Coza Zachariah Khan and others. Hyde's Notes. 15th Jan. 1779. Mor. 263.

2. A return to a writ of habeas corpus, stating the cause of the filing, signing, and detention, to be that he was a British subject residing and trading in Calcutta, not being in the service of the King or East-India Company, or the Governor-General in Council, and that the Governor-General had ordered him to be seized and sent to Europe in the first of the Company's ships that should sail in the ensuing season, and to be kept in custody of the town-major in the meantime, unless he should give security, and that the said town-major was ordered by the Governor-General in Council to seize and detain him without any warrant of commitment, it will be presumed that the order (which need not be under seal) was in writing, and signed by the chief Secretary, as required by the Stat. 26th Geo. III. c. 16. s. 12.<sup>2</sup> The King v. Gordon. 16th June 1791. East's Notes. Case 126.

2*a*. ### I. RIGHTS, POWERS, AUTHORITY, AND LIABILITY.

1. Generally.

1. A Hindú widow is barred by incontinence (proved on evidence) from recovering in ejectment as heir to her husband.<sup>2</sup> Doe dem. Rada-money Raur v. Nielmoney Dass. Chamb. Notes. 3d July 1792. Sm. R. 81.

2. In a suit by the widow of a Hindú as joint Zamindár of an estate in right of her husband, who died without issue, for a share of Mushá-hara, or proprietary income, judgment was passed in her favour. A Rafa náme set up by the defendant, importing that the plaintiff gave up the income rightly due to her, and agreed to receive about a third of it, was rejected as not established; but the Pandits gave an opinion, that if duly executed by her it would have been valid against her and her husband's heirs. See quare de hoc.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Mit. c. ii. s. i. 30, 36—39. s. x. 14, 15. 3 Coleb. Dig. 458, 478, 479. 1 Str. II. 1. 136, 163, 172, and note 241. 2 Do. 269, 270, 272. Dáya Bh. c. xi. s. i. 2. 2 Maen. Princ. H. L. 20, 21. Dáya Cr. San. c. i. s. ii. 3. May. c. iv. s. viii. 2. 4. 6. 8, 9. Steele, 42.

<sup>3</sup> The opinion delivered by the Pandits, purporting that the deed of relinquishment, if genuine, might have been binding on the heirs of the husband and successors of the widow, as well as on the widow herself, who executed it, is questionable, as importing that it would be binding on them beyond the period of her life, because it was voluntarily executed by her. Being successors not only to the Zamindári held by her for her life, but to the savings accumulated by her during her possession of it, and, on the other hand, obliged to support her should she become destitute, they might have pretensions to resist an improvident relinquishment by her of a part of her income. If, however, she reserved a sufficiency for her maintenance, they could not be admitted to contest at law her voluntary and deliberate acts upon this ground, any more than to recall any improvident expenditure or gift of a part of her income after it had come into her hands, the controul over a woman who is enjoined to make a frugal use of her husband's property, which has devolved on Sheochund Rai v. Lubung Dasee. 14th Feb. 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 22.—Cowper.

3. One of two widows of two full brothers sued the other for the estate of her late husband, detained by the defendant under a plea of a will by the plaintiff's husband in favour of his brother, to the exclusion of the right of his own children further than for a maintenance. The claim was adjusted by a reference to the law officers of the Zillah Court; but on appeal to the Provincial Court, the right of the plaintiff, then respondent, was recognized. On a subsequent appeal to the Sudder Court, the right of the children of the respondent (respondent being dead) to their father's property was fully confirmed, the award of the Zillah law officers being declared to be illegal under Sec. 15. of Reg. II. of 1800.<sup>1</sup> Deo Bace v. Wan Bace her for want of male issue, not extending to this length. (Dāya Bh. c. ii. s. i. 56. 60.) But she could not, by her act, bind the successors to relinquishment of part of their due share of the estate after her death. On the other hand, if the relinquishment of a claim to a greater income than the assets of the estate would afford were bonâ fide made on real and sufficient grounds, the transaction might be unexceptionable; but no doubt, if it proceeded on a false suggestion, it could not conclude either her or the heirs. As the deed itself was considered not to have been proved, and the decision did not turn on the question of the widow's power to bind the heirs, the opinion of the law officers on that point must be taken with limitation and caution.—Coleb.

<sup>1</sup> The law officers of the Zillah Court in this case appeared to hold a middle course, neither declaring separation to have taken place nor granting respondent a share, to which she would have been entitled if division had been effected, but allowing her all the property noted in the Tahsīl nāmeh as "her own and her mother-in-law's," and a maintenance. In their opinion, therefore, separation had not taken place; and the opinion of the law officers of the Court of Appeal only applies to a case where separation had taken place. Thus the law officers were completely at variance, whilst none of the decrees declare whether partition had or had not been made. 1 Borr. 35. note.

Sec. 15. of Reg. II. of 1800 was rescinded by Reg. I. of 1827.

and others. 22d Dec. 1810. 1 Borr. 27.—Duncan, Lechmere, & Rickards.

4. A Hindú widow is not bound to live with her husband's relatives after the death of her husband; nor does she forfeit her right of succession by removing from the family dwelling-house.<sup>2</sup> Cossinauth Bysack v. Hurosoondery Dasse. 11th Aug. 1819. Cl. R. 1834. 91.

5. Where separation has taken place between brothers, and a Pārīkhhatt passed by one brother for the amount of his share, his widow was held to have no claim whatever on his brother and nephews, it having been established that her husband had received his share long previously to his death. Mt. Sheo Bace v. Goveerund Huramund. 1st Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 289.—Sutherland & Barnard.

6. Where A claimed from B, a Hindú woman, in consequence of her second marriage, the recovery of a room in a house, and of the dower given by A's nephew, her first husband, who died about thirty-three years before; it was held, on proof that no separation had taken place between A and his brother, B's father-in-law, that A was entitled to possession of the room. The liability of a widow to return the dower of her first marriage on contracting a second was admitted by the Court;

<sup>2</sup> But this separate residence by the widow, though perhaps not a sufficient cause for exclusion from inheritance, does not seem to be justified by the text books. Menu says: "A woman is never fit for independence," meaning that she should always be under protection. Menu, B. ix. v. 2. et seq. And see Dāya Bh. c. xi. s. i. 56, 57. 64. Dāya Cr. There is, however, no doubt that the mere fact of living apart from her relations does not in any way affect a widow's right to maintenance. A particular account of the proceedings in this case will be found in Macn. Cons. H. L. 78 et seq.; and the learned and elaborate judgment delivered in the Supreme Court by East, C. J., is reported in Vol. II. of this work, p. 198.

Where certain ornaments had been delivered to a Hindú widow under a will of her husband, subsequently declared to be invalid; it was held, that if the sons of the deceased considered themselves entitled to share therein, and she neglected to resign them to the common estate, they, or any of them, might bring the point to an issue by suing her. Mt. Munchat and others v. Brijboohun and another. 27th May 1824. Sel. Rep. 1.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

9. A Hindú widow being jointly entitled with her son, he, with her consent, borrowed money for family purposes, but granted notes in his own name only. On these he was sued, and judgment and execution obtained, under which the Sheriff sold "all his right and title" to a purchaser under whom the defendant claimed. 10. Where a Hindú widow had, during the minority of her sons, compromised to their prejudice a case regarding the property of her deceased husband, and her sons, on attaining their majority, petitioned to have the compromise set aside, it was set aside accordingly, as, by the Hindú law, she had not authority to act, and could not so dispose of property in which she had only a life interest. *Ram Kewal Biswas and others v. 11. It was held that a widow takes only a life estate in moveable property bequeathed to her by the will of her husband. A Hindú widow cannot make a sale of her late husband's landed property in perpetuity, neither will such her conveyance carry the estate even for her life, upon the principle of the sale being without ownership, which renders it void ab initio. She has no unlimited proprietary right over any part of her husband's property, but merely a general usufructuary right over the whole indiscriminately, and therefore cannot convey in perpetuity; nor can she convey the interest which she possesses, which (independently of its not being transferable) is an interest of a totally different nature from that of proprietary right.<sup>3</sup> Note by Sir F. 37. A widow may alienate houses or real property inherited from her husband, provided it be for paying his debts or defraying his funeral expenses, or for any other good and religious object, but always with reservation of any rights possessed by any other persons in the same. Takmeeram and others v. Khooshalee and another. 17th March 1818. 1 Borr. 412.—Elphinston & Sutherland.

39. Debts incurred by a Hindú widow for charity in honour of her deceased husband, provision of necessities or subsistence, maintenance of any trade or business left by the husband to his widow's management or engaged in by her, and charity on her own account, are recoverable from the heirs after her death, but they are not liable for any debts unnecessarily incurred by her.<sup>2</sup> *Umrootram Byragee v. 40. A widow has full power over the effects of her late husband so long as she does not contract a second marriage. And where a widow had appropriated such property to the payment of the debts of her deceased husband, and to the expenses incidental to his funeral rites, through the instrumentality of the Muhaddams or Patels of their Cast, previously to her contracting a second marriage, the heir of her deceased husband claiming the property from the Muhaddams, as reverting to him on her contracting a second marriage, was nonsuited, as it was shewn by them that the property had been legally applied as aforesaid by the directions of the widow, and it did not appear to have remained in their hands, or to have been expended for their use, or in any way that should make them answerable for it: and it moreover appeared in evidence that the widow made over to the heir, on her second marriage, the whole of the jewels, &c. that she had in her possession, and for which he gave her a receipt in full: it was not therefore likely that he would have done this without having received his dues from her. Bhoolal Khooshal v. Sheolal Koobar and others. 15th April 1822. 2 Borr. 264.—Romer.

41. A debt incurred, on her own account, by a widow, a member of a Hindú family, holding joint and undivided property, is not recoverable from the joint estate, but from the widow personally, or from her separate property. *Mt. I. HINDÚ LAW.<sup>1</sup>1. Marriage Contract.

1. No marriage contract is valid, by the rules of Cast and the laws of the Shashtra, unless the consent of the parents of both the contracting parties be first had and obtained to the contract. Nandlal Bhugandas v. Tapeedus and another. 9th May 1809. 1 Borr. 14.—Duncan, Leclimere, & Rickards.

2. A contracted to give his sister in marriage to B, brother-in-law of C, on condition that C would either take A to Burhanpoor at his own expense, and get him there married to D, or else give him his own daughter in marriage. On the strength of this contract A's sister was given up to B, but C not only refused to take A to Burhanpoor, but endeavoured to get his daughter clandestinely married elsewhere. C admitted the contract, but alleged that A had broken it by having refused to accompany him to Burhanpoor, on the ground of inability to pay his expenses. The <sup>1</sup> It is remarkable that there have been no cases relating to the Hindú law of husband and wife reported in the Presidencies of Bengal or Madras: the reader will perceive that, with one exception (a case in the Supreme Court at Calcutta), all the placita refer to cases decided in the Adawlut Courts of Bombay. "On the subject of marriage," says Sir W. Maenaghten, "it may be presumed that it has not often constituted a matter of litigation in the Civil Courts, from the circumstance that points connected with it do not appear to have been referred to the Hindú law officers. Disputes connected with this topic, as well as those relating to matters of Cast generally, are, for the most part, adjusted by reference to private arbitration. It is otherwise in the Provinces subject to the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, where many matrimonial disagreements and questions relative to Cast have been submitted to the adjudication of the established European Courts." For the Hindú law relating to husband and wife, see 2 Coleb. Dig. 377 et seq. 1 Str. II. L. 35 et seq. 2 Do. 28 et seq. 1 Macn. Priuc. II. L. 57 et seq. 2 Do. 126. 204. May. c. xix. xx. law officers decided that the contract was valid, as C had engaged to pay A's expenses; and, moreover, as the girl at Burhanpoor was admitted to be under the age allowed of by the Shashtra for betrothal, that C was liable to give his daughter in marriage to A. The Court decided that C should therefore, agreeably to the spirit and letter of his engagement, either give his daughter to A or procure him another wife, or, failing to perform either of these conditions within six months, pay him the sum of Rs. 500. C refusing to surrender his daughter, and A declining a bride procured for him, because her dower was too high, C paid the Rs. 500 and costs. Atmaram Kesoor v. Sheolal Muloohchand and another. 16th Sept. 1809. 1 Borr. 358.—Grant & J. Smith.

3. Under an award of arbitration, a Mangni between two persons of the Khumbaiti Morh Banyans was declared and decreed to be void, it having appeared that the female had taken back the dower jewels which she gave, under a promise to return them in fifteen days, and as she failed to do so the contract became void. Huree Bhae Bhuvaneedus v. Chandan. 12th May 1812. 1 Borr. 392.—Crow & Day.

4. A majority of the Cast of Khumbaiti Morh Banyans declared it was allowed by their customs to break off a contracted marriage by mutual consent or death. Ib.

4. A Mangni cannot be set aside, in the Cast of Dusa Nagur Ahmadabadkar Banyans by the uncles of the female. And in a case where they endeavoured so to do, the Court having referred it to the whole Cast, the Mangni was declared to be valid, and the uncles were bound in penalties not to marry the female, who was under their guardianship, to any other person than the one to whom she was betrothed. The girl, however, was clandestinely married to another person, and the one to whom she was betrothed (the respondent) recovered damages for loss of character in the Cast, and the amount of the penalties was carried as a fine to the account of Government. This last marriage being declared legal by the Cast, the Court left the respondent to seek redress if he chose, leaving him to find out the proper course himself. Khooshal and others v. Bhugwan Motec. 24th Feb. 1815. 1 Borr. 138.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

5. A breach of a marriage contract is not permitted in the Cast of Khattris. Deochand Natha v. Juehur Behchur. 24th July 1823. 2 Borr. 528.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

6. But where a marriage contract was broken, and the father of the girl had married her to another person, and damages had been awarded by the Zillah Judge (Jones) to the other contracting party, the Court held, under the circumstances, that since no case had been made out by which the father of the girl could be justly charged with damages, he had incurred no obligation to discharge by throwing any legal impediment in the way of the marriage; and as the execution of the marriage contract was then impossible, the contract must be annulled, and the Zillah decree reversed. Id.

7. Where A sued B to compel the performance of a written contract of marriage, B urged that a Mangni was dissoluble by the rules of their Cast (Sonis), when either party was unwilling to fulfil it; but after various contradictory evidence, the Court decreed that B should proceed, according to the contract, to marry his daughter to A, the latter performing all the conditions to which he might be subject under it. Kaseeram Jee-taram v. Bhugwan Poorshotam. 17th July 1823. 2 Borr. 432.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

8. A contract entered into by a brother, with his mother's consent, for the marriage of his sister, was held to be valid, according to the custom of the Dasa Morh Madaliya Baiyan Cast. Mt. Ruliyat and another v. Madhoojee Punachund. 9th March 1824. 2 Borr. 680.—Romer.

9. Where one of two united brothers dies, leaving a widow and a daughter, but no son, the surviving brother has the right of contracting his niece in marriage in preference to the mother; and where the mother had contracted her daughter in marriage in her father's house, alleging that it was done with the consent of her daughter's uncle, the contract was declared void, as had he given his permission for the mother to contract, it ought to have been celebrated at his house. Kumla Bahoo and another v. Munceshunkur Ichhashunkur. 3d May 1824. 2 Borr. 687.—Romer.

10. Marriage contracts may be set aside by either party in the Cast of Vurngur Nagur Brahmans; as, for instance, on failure of payment of dower, or dispute of any kind. Id.

2. Actions by and against Husband and Wife.

(a) For recovery of the person of a Wife.

11. Where it was found that the appellant had enticed away the respondent's wife, and had been the cause of her not returning to live with the respondent, and since the respondent was a fine healthy young man, free from any defect of mind or body—which alone, according to the Shashtra, would warrant a divorce—it was decreed that his wife should be sent back to him on his giving security to treat her with kindness, and that the appellant should pay the damages sued for by the respondent for the loss of his wife, together with the costs of the suit. Hurba Shunkur v. Racejee Munohur. 3d Aug. 1809. 1 Borr. 353.—Grant & J. Smith.

(b) For Defamation.

12. An action cannot be maintained for loss of character by a wife against her husband under the Shashtra, because a woman's husband is like unto her God, and she must remain obedient to his orders, and conform to his will. Deokooncur v. Umbaram Lala. 14th Aug. 1811. 1 Borr. 370.—Crow, Day, & Romer.

3. Divorce.<sup>1</sup>

13. The respondent betrothed his daughter to the appellant, who, having afterwards contracted a second marriage (by the rite called Natra) with another woman, the respondent came forward to compel the appellant either to consent to a divorce from his daughter, or to dissolve the second marriage, and admit his daughter to her rights. It was urged in defence that the appellant was full grown, and the respondent's daughter not arrived at years of puberty; and that, under those circumstances, a second marriage was permitted by the rules of their Cast (Lewa Koonbi). It was held that the appellant's conduct was justified by the rules of the Cast and by the laws of the Shastra; and that the Court could not grant to the respondent either a divorce for his daughter, or an order annulling the second marriage contracted by the appellant with the other woman, and dismissed the suit with costs. Huree Bhace Nana and another v. Nuthoo Koober. 20th May 1814. 1 Borr. 59.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, Elphinston, & Bell.

14. A divorce is permitted to a wife, according to the rules of the Kunsara Cast, in case of ill treatment. Kaseeram Kriparam v. Umbaram Hureechund. 29th Oct. 1811. 1 Borr. 387.—Crow, Day, & Romer.

14a. A divorce will be granted to a woman on account of her husband's dissolute life and bad character, if it be proved to be permitted in such case by the Cast, though the Shastra does not admit of divorce under any circumstances. Kasee Dhoollubh v. Rattun Bacc. 31st Dec. 1816. 1 Borr. 410.—Prendergast & Sutherland.

15. A member of the Gandharva Cast having married a second wife, the first wife sued for a divorce, or repudiation of the second wife: the Court declared, that unless there were good cause, Natra was not permitted amongst them. If both the wives agreed, he might keep them both; but if not, the husband must grant a divorce to the dissenting one. The Court therefore granted a divorce to the first wife.<sup>2</sup> Munashunkur Khoshal v. Mt. Oattum and others. 5th Sept. 1822. 2 Borr. 524.—Romer.

4. Dower.

16. An assignment in lieu of dower is valid; and where, in a suit filed to compel performance of the terms of a conditional deed of sale of a house, by delivering up the house to the appellant, the holder of the deed, passed to him by the respondent, a prior assignment by the respondent's father of the house in question to his own wife, for the sacrifice of her dower jewels to relieve his wants, was pleaded in bar of the claim under the deed in the appellant's possession; the conditional deed of sale of the house at the time belonging to the widow, executed by her stepson, the respondent, to the appellant, was declared to be illegal, and the house was directed to be restored by him to the respondent, on the receipt of the sums advanced by him on the original mortgage. Nuthoo Bhace Prannullub v. Laldass Jugdeesh. 20th May 1808. 1 Borr. 8.—Duncan, Lechmere, & Richards.

17. It was held that a Hindú widow cannot imperatively demand her Pulla, or dower jewels, from her father-in-law, without assigning cause, until she has attained the age of thirty years, when she is entitled to possession of it. The Pulla is her sole property; but until she attains the above age it is to be taken care of by the paternal relation of her late husband; if none survive, then it must be taken care of by her parents; and if they also be dead, then by some trustworthy relations, Ich'ha Lukshumee v. Anundram Govindram. 21st Feb. 1814. 1 Borr. 114. — Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

18. But this decision was afterwards overruled under the Vyarashta of the same law officers; and the Court acknowledged the inherent right of a woman to employ her dower for her own use, without being subject to the controul of her relations, so long as she spends it in a good and reasonable manner. Dhoolubhdas Brijbhokhundas v. Larkhoonwur. 17th June 1818. 1 Borr. 423. — Elphinston & Romer.

19. It appears that excessive dower is sanctioned by old age in the bridegroom. Ib.

20. The father of a woman is bound to restore his daughter's dower to her husband in case of her death without living issue, as the husband in such case is the heir to his wife. Huree Bhaee Umbaee v. Jaceedas Keshoordus. 8th May 1812. 1 Borr. 393. — Crow & Day.

21. Two sons being joint heirs of a Hindú, who also left a daughter unmarried at his death, were held to be bound to furnish her dower out of the family property, to the extent of a twelfth part of the whole. Laroo v. Manikchand Shamjee. 3d July 1818. 1 Borr. 418. — Elphinston, Keate, & Sutherland.

22. Where a Hindú sued his wife and father-in-law for the production of her dower jewels, which, since their marriage, had never been forthcoming, it was held that they were bound to produce dower jewels to the amount originally agreed upon in the marriage contract, the wife being permitted to retain them in her own custody as her exclusive property. Muyaram Rajaram and another v. Govind Ruttunjee. 18th March 1822. 2 Borr. 245. — Romer.

23. Where the son of a person who had put away his wife on a separate maintenance claimed to oblige her to give security for her dower, which he suspected was being expended and made away with, his claim was disallowed, on the principle that a woman is sole mistress of her dower. Manukchand Premchand v. Mt. Premkoonwur. 18th June 1822. 2 Borr. 321. — Sutherland.

24. A Hindú widow is liable for the return of the dower of her first marriage to the heirs of her first husband should she contract a second marriage. Trechumjee Laljee v. Mt. Laroo and another. 15th Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 361. — Romer, Sutherland, & Barnard.

25. A claim by a wife against her husband, from whom she had separated, for a maintenance, and the recovery of her dower jewels taken from her by him, was allowed, the wife proving her case, and the husband failing to substantiate the assertions made in his pleadings. Wulubhrum Oomayashunkur v. Bijlee. 18th Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 440. — Romer.

26. Credit given by a bride's father in his accounts to the bridegroom's family for his daughter's dower was held not to amount to delivery of the dower. Manukhardas Boolakheedas v. Lukmeedas Tooljaram. 26th March 1823. 2 Borr. 629. — Iroside.

27. Dower actually paid by the father-in-law may be demanded on his daughter's death. Ib. — Anderson.

5. Marriage of Lunatics.

28. By the Hindú law, the marriage of a lunatic à nativitate is immoral, but valid by the consent of the parents. But if the party become lunatic after his birth, and marry during his lunacy, such marriage, under any circumstances, is good, even though without family consent. Dabychurn Mitter and others v. Radachurn Mitter. 10th Feb. 1817. East's Notes. Case 60.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.

1. Marriage.

(a) Generally.

29. Supposing a Muhammadan to have married four slave girls, and then a free woman, the last marriage is good, and is not a fifth marriage, for marriage with slave girls is of no effect in law.<sup>1</sup> Ghulam Husun Ali v. Zeinub Beebe. 20th July 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 48. — Lunsden & Harington.

30. A man may not marry his wife's sister, his wife being alive: no defect, however, arises in the first marriage from the invalidity of the second; and on the death of the husband the whole dower of the first wife is claimable out of his property.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> For the prohibited degrees, that is to say, of women whom it is lawful to marry, and of those with whom marriage is lawful, see 1 Hed. 76 et seq. Macn. Princ. M. L. par. 9, 10. A similar case to the above is given by Sir W. Macnaghten, Princ. M. L. 257, case x.; and in a note the learned author says, "Had the two sisters been married by the same man at the same time, or had the priority of one or the other marriage not been ascertainable, they would both have been invalid. This supposes the former wife to be alive, and the marriage not to have been dissolved. There is no objection, in the Muhammadan law, to a man's marrying the sister of his deceased or divorced wife. The above doctrine is contained in the Mohheet-

32. A second marriage of a woman during her first husband's lifetime is invalid, if no divorce have taken place; and such second marriage forms no bar to the recovery of her person by her first husband, on civil action, notwithstanding her unwillingness to go back to him.<sup>4</sup> Mt. Ameenah and others v. Kuttoo Khan. 20th April 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 27. — Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

2. Marriage Contract.<sup>5</sup>

34. It appears that a Mangni between Muhammadan parties will be annulled where the woman is unwilling to fulfil the contract. The evidence of the Cast (Musulmán goldsmiths) in this case as to the legality of annulling a Mangni was extremely contradictory. The law officers declared, that if, at the time of contract, the girl were willing, but not of perfect womanhood or understanding; or if being of perfect womanhood and understanding, words signifying agreement and consent had not passed between her mother, herself, and her oo-Surukhsee, cited in the Futawa-i-Aulunggerce." And see 1 Hed. 79. as to marrying two sisters.

proposed husband, in the presence of two witnesses; and if afterwards she should be unwilling to celebrate the marriage; then the contract was void; for this reason, that the consent of the woman is one of the points necessary to perfect a marriage.<sup>1</sup> Jumal Bhace Kumal Bhace Sonee v. Sahib Buhoo. 1st May 1820. 2 Borr. 556.—Anderson.

35. A Muhammadan woman, of her own accord, contracted herself to A, and lived with him six months, and, together with her mother and sister, was maintained by him: she afterwards left A, and got married to B, to whom she had been previously contracted. It was held that she was liable for the repayment of all monies expended on her during her residence with A. Talun Buhoo Sonarin v. Jecum Hashum Sonee. 3d July 1823. 2 Borr. 553.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

36. It was held that a Muhammadan girl, when she arrives at the age of puberty, is at liberty to marry whom she pleases; and if her parents have previously contracted her in marriage, and she should not, on arriving at such age, approve of such <sup>1</sup> A girl not having attained the age of puberty cannot contract herself in marriage without the consent of guardians; but she may do so without such consent, if she have attained such age. Macn. Princ. M. L. 58, par. 14, 16. But should she have contracted herself, not being of nubile age, the guardians should interfere before the birth of issue. Ib. par. 17. A damsel under age, contracting herself in marriage to an equal, and the guardian afterwards allowing such marriage, may annul the contract immediately on becoming of age, but not afterwards. Ib. 264. Nor if she had, during her minority, been married by her father, or paternal grandfather. Ib. 58, par. 18, 265, case xvi. The distinction between the case of a female who has attained the age of puberty contracting marriage, and one who has not attained that age, is, that in the former case the marriage is valid, but voidable by the guardians where inequality appears; and that in the latter case the contract is void ab initio, if entered into without the consent of the guardians; but such consent may be implied as well as express. Ib. 268, note.

marriage, the contract would not be good in law.<sup>2</sup> Kureem Jeenu v. Mt. Mariyum. 5th July 1821. Sel. Rep. 56.

37. Where a Muhammadan girl had been contracted in marriage by her mother, and, on arriving at the age of puberty, had refused to fulfil the contract, it was held that she was justified in refusing, but that the betrothed husband was at liberty to sue the mother for breach of the engagement made by her to marry her daughter to him.<sup>3</sup> Ib.

38. According to the Muhammadan law, a Nikāh, or betrothal, made by a father of his daughter during her minority, cannot be set aside by her on coming of age; but she is justified in not leaving her parents without first receiving the exigible dower.<sup>4</sup> Mt. Fakhronissa and another v. Shah Ally Ruzzah. 24th June 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 293.—Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

3. Marriage Settlement.

39. A Kabin nāmeh, or deed of marriage settlement, containing a gift by the husband to his wife of the whole property possessed by him, or which might thereafter come into his possession, is valid, under the Muhammadan law, in regard to the property in the actual possession of the husband, but not in regard to that which is non-existent.<sup>5</sup> Oojudhea Beebe and others v. Mohunbeebe and another. 30th June 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 30.—Braddon & Stockwell.

40. A Kabin nāmeh is invalid in

<sup>5</sup> The deed, in this case, was looked upon as simply a deed of gift, and justly so: the decision proceeded, therefore, on the ground that, by the Muhammadan law, property non-existent cannot be made the subject of gift, whether in lieu of dower or otherwise.

respect to property not in the possession of the husband at the time of the execution of the deed. Noor Buxsh Chowdhree v. Mt. Arif Chowdhree. 10th March 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 123.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

40a. It was held that a Kabin nimeh is invalid if the property conveyed by it be not specified. Kadir Dad Khan v. Nooroomissa. 17th April 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 158.—Reid & Barlow.

4. Actions by and against Husband and Wife.

41. A husband may recover the person of his wife by civil action.<sup>1</sup> Maulai Abdul Wahab v. Mt. Hingu and another. 5th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 200.—Turnbull & Ross.

42. Where a Muhammadan woman had obtained a decree against her husband for the recovery of her dower, but which decree had not been executed, nor the dower paid, and he brought an action against her to compel her to come and live with him against her will; it was held, that, according to the Muhammadan law, it is not imperative for a wife to reside with her husband until her dower is paid; and the husband was nonsuited and made liable for all costs.<sup>2</sup> Mt. Dosun Beebee v. Sheik Munoo Sheik Uechun. 9th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 103.—Ironsides, Baillie, & Henderson.

43. A contract made by a man with a first wife not to marry a second wife is not illegal, and an action may be sustained if damages can be proved. Beebee Hurron v. Shaik Kheproollah. 16th March 1838. 1 Fulton, 361.

44. A second marriage of a woman, during her first husband's life, and without having been divorced by him, is no bar to the recovery of her person by her first husband, on civil action, notwithstanding her unwillingness to return to him. Mt. Ameenah and others v. Kutto Khan. 20th April 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 27.—Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

5. Divorce.

(a) When demandable.

45. By the Muhammadan law, divorce is not demandable as a right, by the wife, on payment of a consideration.<sup>3</sup> Maulai Abdul Wahab v. Mt. Hingu and another. 5th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 200.—Turnbull & Ross.

6. Dower.<sup>4</sup>

(a) Generally.

46. Where A claimed half of his late father's estate, but it appeared that the deceased had settled a dower of 300,000 gold mohurs on the mother of another son, B, which at her death (before her husband) was demandable by her heirs; it was held that the husband, one of those heirs, takes ten annas of her property (i.e. of the dower due), and B, her son, six annas; these six annas, therefore, of the dower, were now demandable by B from the paternal estate; and as the amount was greater than the whole estate, and claims of dower must be satisfied before partition of heritage,<sup>5</sup> A's claim of inheritance, in consequence, will not avail. Ghulam Husun Ali v. Zeinab Beebee. 20th July 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 48.—Lumsden & Harington.

47. The widow of a Muhammadan declared his landed estate to have been given by him in his lifetime to a grandson, in whose favour she fabricated a deed of gift, as from her husband, which deed was set aside in a suit brought by one of the other heirs against the grandson. Afterwards, at the suit of the widow for the lands, in satisfaction of dower, as being the estate left by her husband, which the defendant admitted they were, and pleaded that the widow had remitted her dower, the law officers declared the claim barred by estoppel, because the widow, by her allegation of the gift, had virtually declared that the lands were not the estate left by her husband, and could not now claim them as being so. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut doubted the application of the doctrine to the case; but on the presumption, arising from the widow's declaration of the gift, that she must have remitted her claim of dower, dismissed the suit. Beebee Munwan v. Meer Nusrut Ali. 6th June 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 64.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

48. A written acknowledgment of the husband to one of his wife's heirs, after her death, was held to be sufficient proof of the amount settled upon her as dower.<sup>1</sup> Ali Buksh Khan v. Kacem Beebee. 24th Aug. 1804. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 83.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

49. Judgment was given for the daughter of a deceased Muhammadan against the male relatives in possession of his estate for a half share of the dower of her mother, unpaid during the life of the mother, whom the father survived, such dower being in law the mother's estate, recoverable by her heirs from the property of the husband. Ib.

50. Where the heirs of a Musulmán deceased claimed a share of his estate against his widow, who took the whole estate in satisfaction of dower, the principal ground of the claim, viz. that the amount of the dower, which absorbed the whole estate, was excessive, and therefore illegal, was rejected by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as, by the Muhammadan law, excessive dower, however improper, is not illegal, and judgment was accordingly given, dismissing the claim. Wujih On Nisa Khanum v. Mirza Husun Ali. 30th Dec. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 266.—Harington & Fombelle.

51. The dower due to a widow, on her husband's death, is payable from his estate, in preference to all claims of inheritance. Ib.

52. Landed or other immoveable property left by the husband cannot be taken by the widow in satisfaction of her claim of dower, without the consent of the heirs or competent judicial authority.<sup>2</sup> Ib.

52a. Moveable property, however, may be taken by her, as far as the heirs are concerned, but not to the prejudice of other creditors, in payment of dower indisputably due. Ib.

53. One of the heirs of the husband, having for several years acted as manager for his widow, who had taken possession of her husband's landed estate in satisfaction of her dower, while none of the other heirs preferred any claim to the estate, may be considered as sufficient evidence of consent, on the part of the heirs, of the widow's right. Ib.

54. Where a Muhammadan, shortly before his death, made over his share of a Talook to his widow, in satisfaction of dower settled on her at marriage, and she held it till her decease (thirty-three years), without her title being disputed by any of the heirs of her late husband; it was held that her heirs were entitled to inherit such share, as having belonged to her. Mirza Moohummud and another v. Jarent Oz Zohra Begum and others. 22d July 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 243.—Harrington & Fombelle.

55. By the Sunnī doctrine, according to Abū Hanīfah, the extent of dower is not limited: the parties may extend it by agreement to whatever amount they please.<sup>1</sup> Omdutoun Nisa Begum v. Mirza Asud Ali. 19th May 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 276.—Crisp & Fombelle.

56. In a suit by an heir of the son of A against the widow of A for a share of his estate, as joint heir with the widow, to which the widow pleaded that the whole estate fell to her in payment of dower, there being proof that she had received, in part of her dower, the property possessed by the husband at his marriage, and that she afterwards remitted her claim to the residue; it was held, that under such circumstances the property acquired by A after marriage was his estate, hereditible by his heirs; and judgment was accordingly given for the claimant's obtaining the share due to him as an heir of the son of the deceased. Ahmad Ullah and another v. Behar Ullah. 7th Aug. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 284.—Harrington & Fombelle.

57. Where a claim had been preferred against the widow of a Muslimán, by his sister, for half the property left by him, which was finally adjudged to be her right, in lieu of dower; and twenty-one years after that decision the same plaintiff brought an action against the same defendant for half of the same property, on the plea that, even supposing the dower to have amounted to the sum claimed, she had realised the full amount from the profits of the estate; it was held that the claim was inadmissible. Sahib Jan Khatoon v. Dinnut Beebee and others. 9th Feb. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 12.—Fendall & Goad.

58. The heirs of a Muslimán recovered their shares in his estate, against his widow who had taken the same. The widow pleaded a set-off for dower debt equal to the value of the entire estate; but the Court were of opinion that the claim of dower was distinct and unconnected with the case under consideration, and should be brought forward in another suit. Ranee Bukhsh Beebe v. Nadir Beebee. 11th Dec. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 59.—C. Smith.

59. A instituted an action to recover from B (the widow of a Muslimán) her share of the deceased's estate, which she claimed by right of inheritance. B repelled the claim by a plea of dower due to her under a settlement which had exhausted the assets. The deed of settlement, however, appearing suspicious, it was held that the counterclaim of B for dower could not be satisfied, and judgment was passed accordingly, with costs, in favour of A, without prejudice to the right of B to establish her claim as dower creditor. Mt. Omdah Begum v. Mt. Hoseni Begum. 15th March 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 98.—Turnbull.

60. When marriage presents are sent and delivered by a Muhammadan to his wife, with due notice at the time that they are sent in lieu and satisfaction of dower, so far as their value extends, the formal acknowledgment to that effect, by the wife or her friends, was not held to be necessary. But where there was a want of proof on the husband's part of the delivery of the marriage presents, the

<sup>1</sup> In this case the law officers rightly stated that, according to the doctrine of Abū Hanīfah, ten Dirhems is the smallest dower. 1 Hed. 122. Macn. Priue. H. L. 59, par. 20. 276. case xxv; and they added that "amongst the Shias the lowest and highest rate is not fixed: any thing possessing a legal value may lawfully be given as dower; but the proper dower is 500 Dirhems: a greater sum is not illegal, although, according to some of the lawyers of that sect, it is improper."

Court held that the wife was entitled to obtain from him possession of her dower. Shekh Uzeez Oolla v. Ghuffoor Beebee. 23d May 1822. 2 Borr. 258.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

61. A Muhammadan may alienate land to his wife in compensation for her dower, and the heirs have no claim upon it; for this reason, that dowry is a debt, and debts must be first liquidated out of an estate. Mt. Beebee Sahib v. Dada Bhacee Rajun. 19th June 1822. 2 Borr. 520.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

62. In a disputed claim for land by Muhammadans, one party claiming under a deed of gift passed by the original possessor, and the other on the plea that the first owner had alienated it to his wife in lieu of dower, he being the heir of such wife; the Court decided, that as the deed was evidently a forgery, and as, though the alienation was not proved, it was probable, from the subsequent possession of the property in that line, that the party claiming under the alienation to his ancestor was entitled to the property. Ib.

63. Where the heir of a widow claimed her dower from her late husband's estate, under a deed executed by him before the Company's accession to the Divani; it was held that such claim was inadmissible, the truth of the demand not having been acknowledged within twelve years prior to the institution of the suit.<sup>1</sup> Moo- hammad Yar Khan v. Mookhammad Eesau Khan. 6th Jan. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 292.—Leycester & Harrington.

64. Where a claim was made to certain lands, in satisfaction of dower, there being no other assets, the Court awarded possession of them to the widow, if they did not exceed in value her proper dower,<sup>2</sup> or such as would be proportionate to the rank and circumstances of her family, although no deed of dower might be forthcoming. Uzeezoo Nisa v. Culub Ali Khan. 25th March 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 321.—J. Shakespear.

65. A verbal contract for dower is valid by the Muhammadan law, even by a minor who is an adolescent:<sup>3</sup> the use of deeds is only for a securer record. Abdul Karim v. Mt. Fazilat-un-Nissa. 13th Dec. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 75.—Turnbull & Sealy.

66. It is not imperative upon a woman to live with her husband until the amount of her dower has been paid; and where a Muhammadan possibly be considered to operate in her favour, agreeably to the doctrine of the Scotch law. See Erskine's Principles, 369. But with respect to the heirs of widows, or even, perhaps, to the case of widows themselves, who may have suffered a long period to elapse after the death of their husbands, the rules of limitation may be strictly applicable.—Macn. The Muhammadan law, however, exempts claims for dower, by the widow or her heirs, from any limitation as to time; and Sir W. Macnaghten's reservation in the above note, though perhaps politic and just, is at variance with the principles of Muhammadan law.

<sup>3</sup> It was presumed, from the evidence in this case, that the marriage had been consummated, notwithstanding the youth of the parties; otherwise only half dower would have been claimable. The opinion of the law officer as to the adolescent's power and liability was given without reservation; but it may be remarked, that, in this case, the uncles and tutors of the minor were present at the time of making the contract,—a verbal one,—and assented thereto.

<sup>1</sup> See supra, Pl. 49. In that case judgment was given for the daughter of a deceased Muhammadan against the male relatives in possession of his estate, for a half share of the dower of her mother, unpaid during the life of the mother, whom the father survived. But it appeared in evidence that the father, subsequently to his wife's death, and not twelve years before the institution of the suit, had acknowledged the debt of dower to be due. There does not appear to have been any case yet decided in which prescription from length of time has been held sufficient to bar the claim of a wife to her dower: should such case occur, the reverentia maritaj might woman had obtained a decree against her husband for recovery of her dower, but which decree had not been executed, nor the dower paid, and he brought an action to compel her to come and reside with him, he was nonsuited, and made liable for all costs.<sup>1</sup> Mt. Dosun Beebe v. Sheikh Munnoo Sheikh Uchun. 9th May 1832. Scl. Rep. 103.—Ironside, Baillie, & Henderson.

67. In an action brought by the widow of a Musulmán against his heirs for dower, they having ousted her from possession of his estate, which she had taken in satisfaction thereof; it was held that she was entitled to the amount claimed, though she had not sued until twenty years after the death of her husband.<sup>2</sup> Shaikh Bibi v. Rani Bakhs Bibi. 24th March 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 105.—Turnbull.

68. Held, that the widow of a deceased Musulmán cannot take possession of his real estate, in lieu of dower, without the consent of the heirs, or a judicial decree.<sup>3</sup> Mt. Wazeerun v. Mohammed Hossain Khan. 7th June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 34.—Rattray.

(b) Settlement in lieu of Dower.

69. A Kabín námeh, or deed of marriage settlement, by a Muham-madan to his junior wife, for a moiety of his estate, was held to be invalid, it appearing that he had previously settled his entire estate on his senior wife, in lieu of dower, and that the deed in question had been executed without her permission duly obtained. Mt. Banoo Beebe and another v. Fukherooden Hossain. 3d May 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 180.—Harrington & Fombelle.

<sup>3</sup> But had there been no dispute as to the dower, and no doubt that its amount entirely absorbed the estate, the law would have sanctioned a different decision. Macn. Princ. M. L. 275. case xxiii.

70. But if the senior wife had executed an Ikrár námeh in favour of the junior wife, thereby granting permission to their husband to make over a moiety of the property in lieu of dower to the junior wife, and he had accordingly settled such moiety on her, such act would have been legal and valid, it resembling the act of an agent confirmed by his constituent. Ib.

71. Where a Musulmán settled certain property upon his first wife in lieu of dower, but without specification in the dower deed, which merely stated "the whole of his property," and on her death married a second wife, to whom he executed a deed of Bay Mohasa, or barter, of a portion of the same property in lieu of the dower settled upon her; it was held, that as the property had been separated from the husband's estate, and transferred to the possession of the first wife before the second marriage took place, the Bay Mohasa was invalid; but that it would have been valid, and the second wife entitled to the portion of the estate mentioned therein, had no such separation taken place up to the period of the second marriage. Shaikh Futteh Ali v. Mt. Janwa. 18th July 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 178.—Harding.

(c) When demandable.

72. Where, in a marriage of two minors, the legal guardian of the husband not having been present at the marriage, and not having given his consent to the dower, and the husband on coming of age had not confirmed his acknowledgment of the dower; it was held that the dower was not demandable from the husband. Mt. Kureem-oo-Nissa v. Ruheem Ali. 8th March 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 233.—Oswald.

74. Unless the contrary be specified, dower must be considered as immediately demandable, and, till paid, cohabitation cannot be enforced. Abdul Karim v. Mt. Fazilat-un-Nissa.

13th Dec. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 76.—Turnbull & Sealy.

75. Semble, Before the consummation of a marriage half dower is only demandable from the husband. Ib.

76. But where the appellant admitted that the respondent was his wife, and that he had been in the habit of frequenting her residence, it was thought to be conclusive, and to render any inquiry unnecessary as to the fact of consummation. Ib.

(d) Exigible Dower.<sup>1</sup>

77. A girl, betrothed by her father during her minority, cannot set aside such betrothal on her coming of age. It is competent, however, to the woman to refuse to leave her parents without payment of the Mahr Maujil, or exigible dower, settled upon her at the time of her betrothal.<sup>2</sup> Mt. Fakhronissa and another v. Shah Ally Ruzzah. 24th June 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 293.—Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

78. Exigible dower, not demanded during the period limited by the regulations for the cognizance of actions, cannot be subsequently recovered. Meer Najib Ollah v. Mt. Doordana Khatoon.<sup>3</sup> 21st Aug. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 103.—Harington & Fombelle. Noorunnissa Begum v. Nawwab Syed Mohsin Allee Khan.

<sup>1</sup> On the subject of Mahr Maujil and Mahr Muwajjal, that is, dower, exigible and not exigible, sometimes also called prompt and deferred, respecting which there is much difference of opinion amongst the Doctors, see 1 Hed. 150, 151. Maen. Princ. M. L. 59. par. 22, 278, case xxix. and note.

<sup>3</sup> In this case the widow was held to be entitled to two-thirds of the dower claimed, one-third only being Maujil (or payable on her marriage), the recovery of which was barred by the rule of limitation, and the remaining two-thirds being Muwajjal (not exigible during the continuance of marriage), and payable on the death of her husband, which happened only six years before the action.

26th June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 40.—Tucker.

(e) Dower not exigible.

79. Dower not exigible (Muwajjal) is not recoverable until the death of the husband, or the dissolution of the marriage by divorce, which last must be proved; and the mere fact of the husband and wife living separately is not sufficient evidence. Noorunnissa Begum v. Nawwab Syed Mohsin Allee Khan. 26th June 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 40.—Tucker.

(f) Shia Law.

80. Where, on a marriage between parties of the Shia sect of Muhammadans, the sum of Rs. 500 was verbally specified as the amount of dower at the reading of the ceremony in the Shia form, but a deed of settlement was executed by the husband for a much larger sum; it was held that the sum specified in the deed was the sum demandable. Omdatoon Nisa Begum v. Mirza Asud Ali. 19th May 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 276.—Crisp & Fombelle.

81. Exactly the same point was subsequently decided in another case, in which the Court remarked, that, agreeable to the doctrines both of the Shia and Sunni sects, it is optional with the parties contracting a marriage to fix the amount of dower either before or after reading the marriage ceremony. Mt. Rahut Oonissa v. The Heirs of Mirza Hizabr Beg. 15th Nov. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 198.—Ker & Oswald.

82. Semble, Among the Shias the lowest and highest rate of dower is not fixed: any thing possessing a legal value may be given as dower; but the proper dower is 500 Dirhems; a greater sum is not illegal, although considered improper by some Shia lawyers. Omdatoon Nisa Begum v. Mirza Asud Ali. 19th May 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 276.—Crisp & Fombelle.

III. PÁRSÍ LAW.

1. Marriage.

83. A Pársí cannot contract a second marriage during the life of his first wife, unless there be a sufficient cause, originating either from disease, imbecility of mind, adultery, or incapacity from age, to justify the procedure. And where a Pársí had neglected his first wife, and contracted a second marriage, he was not only enjoined by the Court to receive his first wife into his family, to afford her his protection, and to reinstate her in all conjugal rights and privileges, but he was also required to put away his second wife, and keep her apart; and all costs were awarded against him. Mihirwanjee Nushirwanjee v. Awan Bacc. 16th March 1822. 2 Borr. 209. —Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

84. It appears, however, that a Pársí may contract a second marriage if his first wife be old and barren, and give consent to her husband marrying again, but not without. Kaoojee Ruttunjee v. Awan Bacc. 16th Dec. 1817. Cited in 2 Borr. 218.—Keate & Sutherland.

2. Marriage Contract.

85. A Mangní between two Pársís was declared, on reference to a Pancháyit including the Modí and Dastúr, to be indissoluble according to the customs of the Pársís, even where the betrothed husband was a notoriously bad character, and the woman, on that account, had the greatest repugnance to the match. Nowrojee Khoorshedjee v. Dhuna Bacc. 15th May 1811. 1 Borr. 382. — Crow, Day, & Romer.

3. Alimony.

86. Pársís being subject to English law generally, it follows, that as a Pársí husband is liable for the debts of his wife, and absorbs his wife's property, a Pársí wife is entitled to alimony on exactly the same principles as an English wife would be if she claimed it. Buchooboy v. Merwanjee Nasserwanjee. 8th Aug. 1844. Perry's Notes. Case 15.

87. Quere, Whether a Pársí husband can pronounce a divorce from his wife, she refusing to allow him to consummate the marriage? Ib.

88. In a suit for temporary alimony, brought by a Pársí woman against her husband, it was held that she, having neglected to examine witnesses to shew what were her husband's means, will be considered an assenting party to his affidavit as to their amount. Ib.

4. Dower.

89. A Pársí disagreeing with his wife cannot retain her clothes and jewels against her will. Kaoojee Ruttunjee v. Awan Bacc. 16th Dec. 1817. Cited in 2 Borr. 218.—Keate & Sutherland.

90. Nor can he compel his wife to enter into security for the amount of the value of dower in her possession, as the property in question belongs to her of right, and is not in its nature subject to the controul of her husband. Mihirwanjee Nushirwanjee v. Awan Bacc. 16th March 1822. 2 Borr. 209. Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

91. In an action by a Pársí to recover the dower of his deceased wife (from whom he had separated) from her brother, to whom she had bequeathed it, it was decreed that, in the absence of proof that the property constituting her dower was derived from her husband, and on the opinion of the Pársí Pancháyit that the will under which his brother-in-law claimed was valid, that the appellant should be nonsuited, and made liable for all costs. Burjorjee Bheemjee v. Ferozshaw Dhunjeeshaw. 10th Sept. 1839. Sel. Rep. 206. — Giberne, Pyne, & Greenhill.

IV. SIKH LAW.

92. A marriage of a Sikh Khyth<sup>1</sup> man and woman in Bengal, according to their own rites, is valid, and the offspring of such marriage will inherit. The essential part of a marriage appears to be the contracting part, the rest being merely ceremonial; and the Anand form of marriage, as practised by the Sikhs, was held to be a valid marriage in Bengal, although unknown to the Hindú law. Doe dem. Juggomohun Mullick and others v. Saumcoomar Beebee and others. 29th March 1815. East's Notes. Case 31.

V. ARMENIAN LAW.

93. An Armenian widow was decreed her dower out of lands in the Mofussil. Emin v. Emin. Cited in 1 Fulton, 227.

94. Where an Armenian woman, who had twice separated from her husband, claimed against him for a future maintenance, and payment of debts contracted during her former separation, the Court held that she was entitled to a maintenance proportioned to the fortune of the husband, to commence from the date on which she began to live apart from him the second time, but the payment of debts was not awarded against him. The husband was decreed, under Sec. 10. of Reg. 1. of 1816<sup>2</sup>, to pay one-third of the woman's pleader's fees, and half of the fees of his own pleader, each bearing the expense of their own stamped paper. Humrus v. Humrus. July 1822. 2 Borr. 496. — Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

VI. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

96. A marriage in the out-stations, in the year 1805, was held to be sufficiently proved by the production of the original certificates of the marriage in the handwriting of the officiating chaplain of the Company, sent down from Lucknow for the purpose of being registered in the books of marriages, &c., at St. John's Cathedral, at Calcutta, and taken off the file of such certificates. Cunliffe v. Loftus. 2d April 1818. East's Notes. Case 80.

97. The right of a widow to dower was recognized by the Court. De la Cruz v. Goorachund Seal. Cl. R. 1829. 335.

98. An action of trespass upon the case for criminal conversation is sustainable in the Supreme Court between Hindú parties. Soodasun Sain v. Lockenauth Mullick. 4th July 1839. Mor. 107.

VII. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

99. A decree in favour of a Jewess for dower against her bankrupt husband was decreed to be executed in preference to all judgments upon debts contemporaneous with the assignment of dower. Sookhlal Rattunchund v. Mt. Ruheema Buhoo. 24th July 1823. 2 Borr. 632. — Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside. Mt. Ruheema Buhoo v. Suhoorabjee Buharamjee. Ib.

100. Property settled upon a wife previously to her marriage, and placed in trust to her use and behoof in the hands of trustees under a deed of settlement, is barred from being taken in execution of a decree obtained against the husband. In the absence of such settlement, the claim of the wife, as a third party, to property seized and attached for sale in satisfaction of a decree obtained against the husband by a judgment creditor, was disallowed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on a summary appeal. Eliza Johnston, Petitioner. 23d Sept. 1844. 2 Sev. Cases, 129. — Reid.

HUZÚRÍ MAHÁLL.

1. At the decennial settlement several Zamindárs contracted in the same engagement for distinct villages, on which parts of the gross Jama were assessed. Ruled, that each parcel was a separate Huzúrí Maháll; and that were it otherwise, to sell the whole for an arrear, only two-thirds of the Sudder Jama, was excessive.<sup>1</sup> Rup Chand Sahu and another v. Jirani Lal Ray and others. 31st Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 168.—Rattray.

2. At the decennial settlement, A contracted for the revenue of a component part of his estate in distinct quotas; but subsequently, in 1808, under a general requisition, issued under the authority of Government, signed a consolidated agreement. Held, nevertheless, that each component part constituted a Huzúrí Maháll; and the sale of certain villages was set aside as illegal for the following defects; viz. excess of value of the estate selected (this was before Reg. XI. of 1822); previous inquiry having been omitted; misdescription and omission of details and particulars, of which notice and exhibition are prescribed by Cl. 2. of Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799, and Sec. 9. of Reg. I. of 1801; and notice of the postponement of the sale not being served, as required by Sec. 5. of Reg. XVIII. of 1814.<sup>2</sup> Maha Raja Mitir Jit Singh and others v. Babu Kalahal Singh and others. 24th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 192.—H. Shakespear.

3. Several Patidárs, A, B, and C, had distinct interests in villages in Benares, for which A contracted as a Huzúrí Maháll. Of the total revenue, part was made payable to the Jágirdár. When a sale was ordered to levy arrears of 1218 F. S., B and C paid the arrear demanded, and claimed to be put in possession by the Collector. In 1220 the estate was sold to recover the assigned and unassigned portions of the revenue, though B and C offered to pay the arrears. At their suit the sale was set aside as to their Patí, the revenue of which was distributable under the settlement papers; because, 1st, though B and C had brought an action to establish their proprietary right, in which they had succeeded, still they had tendered the amount of assigned revenue, and the Collector had not been moved by the Jágirdár to sell, and had not inquired if the assigned portion were in arrear; 2dly, the Collector, under Sec. 17. of Reg. VI. of 1795<sup>3</sup>, on deposit and tender, should have proceeded in the matter of possession claimed by B and C, their pending right of action notwithstanding. Kishu Dayal Singh and others v. The Collector of Benares and others. 2d Aug. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 223.—Ross & H. Shakespear.

4. Where a sale of a Benares Maháll was found illegal, A recovered his distinct Patí as a separate Maháll, the total Jama being apportionable. The Court provided, that, under Sec. 3. of Reg. I. of 1795, and the custom of Benares, A was only entitled to profits from the date of a judgment establishing his proprietary right, and one-tenth of the Sudder Jama as Málikánah prior thereto. Ib.

XI. of 1822, which last Reg. has been since rescinded, excepting Sec. 36. and 38. by Sec. 1. of Act XII. of 1841, and excepting, also, so far as such Regulation rescinds other Regulations, or parts of Regulations.

IV. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

4. A replication to a plea of infancy, by a Hindú defendant, that certain monies were paid for rent due by the defendant, as Zamindár, in respect of lands necessarily holden by him, and fit and proper for his rank, was held bad on demurrer. O'Donnell v. Maharajah Buddinanth. 10th July 1790. Mor. 84.

5. Where a decree for an account was made of a joint estate, divisible in certain proportions amongst four brothers, two of whom were minors when the bill was filed on their behalf, and the trustees were directed to divide the estate, and give it to the four brothers when the two minors came of age, if they did not agree; the Court refused a motion per saltum, by one of the minors when he came of age, to pay over to him his proportion (although, by the schedule annexed to the answer, there appeared to be ample funds to answer such payment, by calculating the amount of the several debts and credits, and cash and securities), leaving the plaintiff to the ordinary course of proceeding under the decree to account.<sup>3</sup> Woomischunder Paul Chowdry and another v. Isserchunder Paul Chowdry and others. 21st Nov. 1816. East's Notes. Case 57.

6. A plea of a former decree was overruled where the plaintiff (the defendant, and an infant) had not a day given to him to shew cause, after he came of age, against the decree, which, though nominally made against his mother (who only claimed title for her son), dispossessed the infant of his inheritance. Gowballub v. Juggernaut Persaud Mitter and others. 2d Term 1820. East's Notes. Case 116.

7. 8. Infant heirs of trustees of real estates in Calcutta have been directed to join in conveyances by the Court of Chancery in England. Jebb v. Lefevre. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 56.

9. The next friend of infant complainants is liable in the first instance for costs, as between him and the defendants, even where he is an officer of the Court. But where the suit has been bona fide instituted, he has ultimately a right to be compensated out of the infant's property. Stephen

<sup>3</sup> Fergusson remarked in this case, that till the fourth son came of age all was in the discretion of the trustees, though the Court might controul any abuse of such discretion by their decree, if called for.

<sup>4</sup> By the present equity rules, no bill can be filed for an infant, except by leave of the Court, or a Judge in Chambers, on affidavit stating why it is for the infant's benefit. This rule is peculiar to the Supreme Court. 2 Sm. & Ry. 130.

5. Where a Hindú claimed to obtain from his step-mother a half of his late father's estate, leaving the other half to her son, his younger brother, it was held that the sons were each entitled to one moiety, after deduction of one-twelfth share of the whole for their sister's dower,<sup>4</sup>

10. An hereditary Zamindári, ma-

<sup>3</sup> Sed quare de hoc. A judgment passed by a competent tribunal and Sanad granted by Government so far back as the Bengal year 1181, conferring the Zamindári in equal shares on the two widows, governed the Court in its decision. But according to the principles of the Hindú law (leaving out of consideration that prior judgment which must have been passed before the adoption took place or was completed), the succession passed from both of them to the adopted son, and judgment must have been given accordingly, if a claim had been preferred on the part of the adopted son for the property of his adoptive father held by the widows, provided the fact of a legal adoption, under the requisite sanction from the husband, were duly established. Both shares, which the widows held as heirs of their husband under the original judgment and Sanad of 1811 devolved then, of right, on the first adopted son, considered as son by adoption of their husband. Upon his death, and subsequent adoption by the second widow (supposing the adoption legal and valid), the property passed to this second adopted son. There can be no doubt that, according to the doctrine that prevails in Bengal, the step-mother would not inherit from her step-son. But it does not appear that the Pandits had sufficient authority for saying that, according to the doctrine of the Dakhin, a step-mother would inherit. If the second adoption were void, the succession would pass, on the death of the first adopted son, to the male issue of his adoptive father's whole brother, in preference to the issue of the half brothers; and the adopted son of the whole brother would take the succession on this ground in like manner as if he were linear issue. <sup>1</sup> Sir F. Macnaghten has a parallel case in his Considerations on the Hindú Law, p. 1, but this is governed by the law as current in Bengal. When compared with the doctrines of the Mitāśharā, which is the standard of law at Bombay, his work will be found to differ in many points, because founded on the doctrines of the Bengal school. It must be remarked, that the order of inheritance laid down therein applies only to the case of a man living separated, and dying without male issue. This order of inheritance is at variance with that of the Mitāśharā, but the principle above stated regulates both codes equally. — Borr. <sup>2</sup> In this case, as the father died before his son's death could be presumed, his son must have been considered entitled to inherit, and, through him, his widow. The case was not decided on this point, but on a matter of fact. If the father had outlived the twelve years beyond the time of his son's disappearance, the son's widow would not have been entitled to inherit her husband's share, which, in that case, would have gone to the next heirs of her late husband. A man absenting himself, and as to whom no intelligence arrives of his existence during twenty-four years (in case he should be under fifty years of age), or twelve years (in case he should be above that age), is to be considered dead. <sup>1</sup> The validity of this decision depends entirely on the point, whether the grandfather died before or after his son; for in the latter case, the daughter, and consequently her son, would inherit before the son's daughter or her son.

<sup>2</sup> A brother's daughter's son is a Sapinda, but not a Sagotra, of his grandfather and uncle, and consequently cannot inherit. This description of persons are not considered Sapindas generally, but only by Madhva-charjya, in his commentary on the Purasura Madhva, a treatise current in Benares. It is universally admitted, however, that they are not Sapindas for the purpose of inheritance, and that they do not rank even among the most remote description of heirs, as in the following text of Baudâyana, in Colebrooke's Digest: "The paternal great-grandfather and grandfather, the father, the man himself, his uterine brother by a woman of equal class with the father, his son, his son's son, and the son of that grandson, all these partaking of undivided oblations, sages pronounce Sapindas, or near kinsmen, allied by funeral cakes; those who share divided oblations they call Sacutya, or distant kinsman, allied by family; male issue by males being left, the estate of the father surely must go to them. On failure of Sapindas, the spiritual teacher, the pupil, or the priest usually employed at sacrifices, shall take the estate: on failure of them, the King."—Maen. Terválcára, however, expressly states the right of the brother's daughter's son to inherit in default of the father's daughter's son.—*Dáya Cr. 136. Held, that according to the law as current in Bengal, a stepmother does not inherit to her stepson.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The opinion delivered by the Pandits in this case must have been founded on a notion that the authorities of the law prevailing in Orissa are not those that are received in Bengal, but in the Dakhín; for in a law opinion delivered by the same Pandits in the same year (Naraince Dibeh v. Hirkishor Rai, 1 S. D. A. Rep. 39.) they take this distinction, declaring that, according to the books current in Bengal, the stepmother does not inherit, but the natural mother only; and according to the books of the Dakhín (as the Mitácshará, &c.), the single word "mother" (mâtá) is interpreted both "mother" and "stepmother." But as the authorities followed in Orissa are the same with those of Bengal, the grounds of the Pandit's opinion appear to be incorrect.

Nor do the books to which the Pandits refer (viz. the Mitácshará, &c.) allow that latitude of interpretation, when expressly treating of the succession of parents to their children, but in other places the question is different. From the text of the Mitácshará, and the argument on which the author prefers the mother before the father as successor to her son, it is apparent that he meant the natural mother, and not the stepmother (Mit. c. ii. s. iii. 32. 51.); nor is there any passage in books of authority, so far as research has gone, which expressly declares the stepmother's right of succession. Upon the death of the stepmother, which afterwards took place, the inheritance devolved on the grandsons, through females, of her stepson's paternal grandfather, and was adjudged to them against other claimants.—Coleb.

<sup>3</sup> It is remarked in a note on this case, that the property had been alienated by gift, and the widow of the giver, as his heir, had no legal pretension to the succession or reversion of such property on the death of a daughter of the person to whom it had been given. Her claim, therefore, was very rightly rejected. But in failure of what heirs, or in preference to what other successors a sister inherits, is a question on which difference of doctrine exists.—See Mit. c. ii. s. iv. l. note, in which Bálabhatta states, that the word "brethren" signifies "brothers and sisters," in the same way that "parents" have been explained "mother and father."—1 Str. of the father's daughter's son is conditional, on the existence, at the time of the death, of his maternal uncle, or of his mother, if she intervene as an heir, was supported by the Pandits in no less than four instances.

<sup>1</sup> It will be seen by the preceding cases, that much difference of opinion exists as to the right of a sister's son, born after the death of his maternal uncle, to succeed to ancestral property as a father's daughter's son. In this case a decree of Court had intervened prior to the birth of the infant, for whom the appellant claimed, fixing the shares of the several sister's sons in existence at the time of the death of the maternal uncle; and it was this circumstance, under the Pandit's exposition of the law, that governed the decision, the Judge remarking—"If a fresh division is to take place at each new birth, the 'vested right' of any member of the family is a misnomer." The Pandit stated, that the division of the property under the authority of the ruling power in conformity with the law could not be affected by any subsequent occurrence; and thus attempted to account for the discrepancies in his Vyavashitas in previous cases. He quoted Menu, B. ix. v. 47., and a text of Nārada, cited in the Vivāda Bhāṅgāra, and other works: "The subjects are under the authority of the ruler, and the ruler is at liberty to give orders to his subjects."

<sup>5</sup> Dāya Cr. San. c. i. s. x. 1. In this case the Pandit, in his Vyavashita, added, that should the sister have had no son, she would be entitled to hold possession as long as there was hope of her bearing one. The <sup>2</sup> The opinion of the Court in this case was, that the act of birth, or of conception of an heir in the womb, was one and the same thing in the eye of the Bengal law; only that the birth of the infant must be awaited; because, if the issue be a daughter, she would have no title: if a son, he would inherit.

<sup>3</sup> Sed quære de hoc. This case was adjudged, with reference to official opinions of some Pandits and unofficial opinions of others, contrary to some official opinions, that of the Pandit of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut included. point, however, was not ruled by the decision, as there was a son existing of the sister at the time of his maternal uncle's death. The majority of authorities and precedents are in favour of the right of succession to ancestral property of a sister's son, alive at the time of his maternal uncle's death, to the exclusion of the paternal uncles of the latter. Whether the right of succession of other existing heirs can remain in abeyance in the case of a childless sister, as trustee for future issue, is still doubtful.

<sup>2</sup> There is no doubt that the sister's son's sons were very distant indeed in the order of succession, and, in fact, are not included among the heirs by almost the whole of the law authorities. As, however, under no circumstances can a daughter succeed to ancestral property inherited by her mother, the Court considered, under the Vyavasthas of the Pandits, that the plaintiffs had the better right to the property of the common ancestor. The Pandit relied upon the authority of a text of Vishnu: "If a person die, leaving no nearer heir than his daughter's son, after him his daughter's son's son should perform the funeral obsequies of the deceased;" but he did not state where this text was cited.

On failure of the elder branch, the estate would regularly pass, after the death of the widow of the last possessor, to the heirs of her husband, and those were his uncle's sons, in preference to the grandsons of his great uncle (Dāya Bh. c. xi. s. vi. 9. and recapitulation by Sri-brishna, inserted at the close of that section). 204. Where a custom was alleged in abrogation of the law of inheritance, and the prevalence of such custom was not clearly established by the evidence, the Pandits declared that both the custom and the law were equally valid, but in their opinion the disposition under the law was the best; and the Court decreed (chiefly on a verbal report from the law officers, that the Cast had long tried to accommodate matters between the parties) that the property in dispute should follow the law of inheritance. Gunga v. Jeejee. 18th Nov. 1811. 1 Borr. 384.—Crow & Day.

205. A claim to an estate, on a plea of family usage, whereby a brother succeeds to a brother, to the prejudice of surviving sons, was disallowed, on proof that such was not the family usage. Pertaub Deb v. Surrup Deb Raihut. 19th Jan. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 249.—Ker.

Chumun Rai*. 20th Nov. 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 28.—Speke & Cowper.

207. Where a widow claimed a moiety of the estate of her late husband as his heir, from her husband's brother, her claim was dismissed on proof that he had succeeded to the whole estate (previous to the grant of the Dewanny) under a custom, by which it always devolved entire to one heir. Mt. Mahamaya Dibeah v. Gourcheant Chowdry. 23d May 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 236.

208. In a suit against the son of the late Rajah of Tipperah for the succession to the Tipperah Zamindári, there being proof that, by the usage of the family, the person appointed Jobráj is successor to the Zamindári, in preference to the next of kin, such usage was upheld by the Court, and judgment given accordingly.<sup>1</sup> Ramgunga Deo v. Doorgamunee Jobraj. 24th March 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 270.—Harington & Fombelle.

209. By the special usage of the principal Zamindári in the district of Tipperah, the person appointed Jobráj takes the inheritance, in preference to the next of kin; and the person appointed Burrá Thákur is considered next to him in succession, and takes the inheritance in his default, as well as on his death, provided the Jobráj, after becoming Rajah, has not nominated another person to be his Jobráj. Urjun Mani Thakoor and others v. Ramgunga Deo. 24th March 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Harington. Rance Soomitra v. Ramgunga Manih. 26th July 1820. 3 Do. 40.—C. Smith.

210. A claim by the uncle of the respondent to a share of an hereditary estate which had, prior to Reg. XI. of 1793, devolved entire on the respondent in right of primogeniture, agreeably to a custom of the family, was rejected, although the estate was not of the nature described in Reg. X. of 1800<sup>2</sup>; and it was held, that on the death of the present possessor the property should be distributed according to the law of inheritance amongst the respondent's children, but not retrospectively, so as to benefit his uncle, the original claimant, or his uncle's sons, the present appellants. Jugunnath v. Rughoonath

Das. 1st March 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 311.—C. Smith.

211. Where it appeared on evidence that the estate of a Hindú deceased had not invariably devolved entire on the chief heir, but had been taken by the most competent, and had been occasionally held by several heirs conjointly, the Court considered it to be divisible among the heirs according to the Hindú law of inheritance, and decreed partition of the estate in opposition to the claim of one heir to hold the same as an individual estate. Baboo Girdharree Sing v. Kulahat Sing and others. 19th Jan. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 9.—C. Smith.

213. This decision was confirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Girdharree Sing v. Koolahat Sing. 8th Dec. 1840. 2 Moore Ind. App. 344.

214. Where, in a disputed claim for a Zamindári in the Jungle Maháls, it appeared on the evidence that it was an estate that, by the family custom, had always been held by the chief male heir, the remaining heirs receiving only food and raiment, and that it never had been taken by a female; it was held that the brother of the deceased childless Rajah should take his estate, to the exclusion of his widows. The Widows of Rajah Zorawur Sing v. Koonour Pertee Sing. 21st April 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 57.—Harington & Martin.

215. If an estate has not invariably devolved entire to the chief heir, but has been occasionally held by several heirs conjointly, the plea of family usage in bar of a partition cannot be maintained. Rajah Sooramany Venkatapetty Rao v. Rajah Sooramany Ramachendra Rao.<sup>3</sup> Case 1 of 1825. 1 Mad. Dec. 495.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

<sup>2</sup> The former of these two Regulations was rescinded, as respects the Jungle Maháls of Midnapore and other districts, by the latter. The preamble of Reg. X. of 1800 declares the Regulation to be in force in all Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, but the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council ruled that it could only apply in Midnapore.

<sup>3</sup> From the decree of the Sudder Adawlut in this case an appeal was preferred to the Privy Council, but the appeal terminated in a Rázi námech being filed by the parties.

216. Where the nephew of a deceased Hindú and his father's widow claimed a moiety of his uncle's estate from his cousin, who had possessed himself of the whole property, he was nonsuited, it being proved that the estate had always devolved on the eldest son or nearest heir of the deceased proprietor, his other heirs being only entitled to food and raiment from the estate. Mt. Mahranee and another v. Beejee Pershad Rai. 3d May 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 62.—C. Smith & H. Shakespear.

217. Where, by the usage of the country and family of parties claiming certain prerogatives and property, it was customary that such should vest in the senior male of a particular branch of the family; it was held that a testamentary disposition in favour of any other member of the family, was void and of no effect. Mulosherry Kowilagam Rama Wurma Rajah v. Mootherakal Kowilagam Rama Warma Rajah. Case 5 of 1825. 1 Mad. Dec. 509.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

218. Held, that a Ghatwáli Maháll in Zillah Beerbhoom, with reference to the usual practice and the meaning and intent of the term Ghatwál, is not divisible, on the death of a Ghatwál, among his heirs, but should devolve entire on the eldest son, or the next Ghatwál.<sup>1</sup> Hurlal Singh v. Joramun Singh. 19th June 1837. 6 S. A. Rep. 169.—Rattray & F. C. Smith.

219. Semble, Among the Jumboo Brahmans, if a man die leaving a daughter and no male issue, the daughter and her daughter would inherit his property, even when undivided, and not his cousins or collateral relatives, who could only succeed on failure of all other heirs; as it is the custom of the Cast for women to succeed, whether the family be divided or undivided. Dessaces Hurreeshunkur and Roopshunkur v. Baees Manhoovar and Umba. 6th Sept. 1838. Sel. Rep. 122.—Gibberne, Payne, & Greenhill.

220. Agreeably to the family usage, the succession by primogeniture to an estate in Chota Nagpore (under the Agent to the Governor-General for Hazárá-Bágh) was upheld against a claim for division of the ancestral estate. Thakoorai Chaturdharce Singh v. Thakoorai Telukdharce Singh. 22d May 1839. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 260.—Money & Tucker.

221. By the usage of the Zamindárs of Pachete, the eldest son was held to be entitled to succeed to the Ráj, the other sons, as well as the minor branches of the family, being only entitled to maintenance. Maharajah Gurunarain Deo v. Umund Lal Singh. 24th Feb. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 282.—Rattray & Lee Warner.

222. In the case of an estate in Manbhoom, in the jurisdiction of the Governor-General's Agent at Hazárá-Bágh; it was held, according to the usage of the family, that the succession vested in the eldest son of the deceased Rajah, born of any of his wives, in preference to the eldest son of his Paát or first Rání. Rajah Rugho-nath Sing v. Rajah Hurrehur Singh. 8th June 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 126.—Tucker & Reid. (Barlow dissent.)

223. Where a party sued to recover the Ráj of one of the tributary Mahálls of Cuttack, as the son and heir of the late possessor, his claim was dismissed on the ground that his mother being a kept mistress, and never having resided in the Maháll Sarái, he was not entitled to succeed, according to the local and family usage. Rajah Jenardhun Ummur Sing Mahendar v. Ohhay Sing. 2d Sept. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 42.—Robertson & H. Shakespear.

224. The plaintiff sued to obtain possession of the Ráj of one of the tributary Mahálls in Cuttack, as heir to the late Rajah. Held, on proof that the plaintiff was the son of the late Rajah by a slave girl, he could not, as such, succeed to the Rāj according to the established usage. Bulbhuddur Bhowrbhur v. Rajah Juggernath Sree Chundun Mahapatur. 29th July 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 296.—Biscoe.

12. To Woman's Property.<sup>1</sup>

225. Property given by a Hindú to his daughter on the occasion of her marriage is Stridhana, and passes to her daughter at her death. At the daughter's death it passes to the heir of the daughter, like other property; and in this case the mother's brother was decided to be heir, in preference to a daughter who was a widow without issue.<sup>2</sup> Prankishen Singh v. M. Bhagwatee. 25th April 1793. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 3.—Lord Cornwallis, Speke, Cowper, & Graham.

226. According to the law as current in Bengal, the son of a maternal uncle of a woman is not heir to her peculiar property.<sup>3</sup> Sreenarain Rai

v. Bhya Jha. 27th July 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 23.—Harington & Stuart.

227. Property derived by a widow from her father was decided to pass to her own sister after her death, and not to the sister of her late husband<sup>4</sup>; and nieces, daughters of the sister of the widow, were held to be entitled to the property as her nearest relations and legal heirs, being descended in a direct line from her father, in preference to the grandson of the deceased husband's sister. Juggunauth Rughoonathdas v. Sheo Shunkur Jussomul. 14th Feb. 1814. 1 Borr. 91.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

228. Where a Hindú by his will left his wife a certain legacy, and she afterwards was burned on her husband's funeral pile; it was held that she was not constructively supposed to die with him, that the legacy should go to her daughters, and that it should not make part of the residue of the husband's estate. Debnath Sandial v. Maitland. March 1820. Maen. Cons. H. L. 371.

229. Where the claimants to a woman's Sudayien Stridhana are the son of the daughter's son of her paternal great-grandfather, and the son of a contemporary wife, the latter will inherit.<sup>5</sup> Gosaen Chund Ko-

<sup>2</sup> The property having been given to the daughter by her father on the occasion of her marriage, was undoubtedly her Stridhana (Dāya Bh. c. iv. s. i.), and should have devolved, upon her death, on her daughter, whether unmarried, married, or a widow (Ibid. s. ii. 9, 12, 22.). But on the death of that daughter, the land being, in respect of her, an inheritance, and not the peculiar property termed Stridhana, it would not pass to her daughter, being a childless widow (Ibid. c. xi. s. ii. 3.), but to the next nearest heir. This appears to be the ground of the opinion delivered by the Pandit in this case, and it supposes the childless widow to have been so at the time of her mother's decease; for if she had then been unmarried, or if her husband had been living, she would have succeeded to her mother's property, of every sort, in preference to the mother's brother or his son (Ibid. c. xi. s. ii.), who could only have come in after her decease (Ibid. c. xi. s. ii. 30.).—Coleb.

<sup>4</sup> 1 Str. H. L. 248. 1 Maen. Princ. H. L. 38. Mit. c. ii. s. xi. 2. By the authorities of the Eastern school, wealth devolving on a woman by inheritance is not classed as "woman's property." Dāya Bh. c. iv. c. xi. s. i. 8. In this case it appears that, according to the law current in the West, the property was considered as Stridhana.

13. To Offices.

230. Lands endowed for religious purposes are not hereditary: the management alone devolves on the heirs of the person who made the endowment.<sup>1</sup> Elder Widow of Rajah Chutter Sein v. Younger Widow of Same. 15th April 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 180.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

231. Held, that a claim to Sasun-birt, or fee received under a Sasan, or patent, including the exclusive privilege of performing, or causing to be performed, within certain limits prescribed by the grant of the Rajah, the ceremony of burning the dead, and of receiving the usual compensation paid for such service, is maintainable, notwithstanding the abolition of the Sáyir duties. The authorised hereditary privilege to which this perquisite was annexed, having the sanction of established custom, and of the Hindú law, which recognizes the grant of a Rajah in this and similar instances, the Court deemed it a legal private right fit to be sustained.<sup>2</sup> Kalachund Chukurbuttee v. Joogut Chukurbuttee. 2d June 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 279.—Harington & Stuart.

<sup>2</sup> This decision is important in its principle, which admits the validity, under the Regulations in force, of the grant of an exclusive privilege for the performance of the rites and ceremonies of the Hindú religion, when conformable to established usage, and sanctioned by the Hindú law. The fees arising from the privilege, confirmed in the present instance, however, were understood to be voluntary, and the precedent must be received with circumspection, as, in the preamble to Reg. XXVII. of 1793, one of the beneficial consequences expected from depriving the landholders of the power of imposing and collecting duties is stated to have been "the suppression of many petty monopolies and exclusive privileges, which had been secretly continued, to the great prejudice of the lower orders of the people."—Coleb.

232. A, a Hindú, dedicates certain land to the Deity and the maintenance of an idol, and by his will appoints his second son the manager of it; all the rest of his property the testator devises to his three sons, in the following proportions: five-sixteenths to the eldest son, six-sixteenths to the second son, and five-sixteenths to the third son. On the death of the appointed manager, no provision being made in the will for a successor; it was held, in conformity with the opinions of the Pandits, that the right of management descended to the several heirs of the three sons (two of whom had died in the lifetime of their ancestor), to be enjoyed by them according to the general proportions established by the will for the rest of the inheritance, and not in equal proportions according to the common Hindú law.<sup>4</sup> The Pandits also said that the sons of the appointed manager should have the first turn of management (which in fact they had taken under a claim of a continuing right); and it was decreed, that after a corresponding term of enjoyment by each of the other branches, according to their respective proportions, the future enjoyment might be regulated according to the convenience of the parties. *Nubkissen Mitter and others v. 233 a. Where A claimed the Zakat Sar Patéiki of a village against B, with the same law in the Hindú Code. This arises from the former being more defined, and based on more invariable principles, than the latter, besides being restricted in its application, in India, to the tenets of but two sects, viz. those of Abú Hanífeh and his disciples Abú Yúsuf and Muhammad, and those of the Imámíyah or Shia sect. The general law of the country is that of Abú Hanífeh, and no other is administered in the Supreme Courts in cases of Muhammadan Inheritance. The Imámíyah Code is now admitted by the Honourable Company's Courts, where both parties are Shias. Under these circumstances, I have not thought it necessary to refer constantly to the Muhammadan law books, but have only directed the attention of the reader generally to those places where the subjects illustrated by the decided cases are treated of by competent authorities. I have omitted to refer to the Sirájíyah, although the work is accessible to the English reader through the medium of Sir W. Jones's translation. This I have done advisedly, since (as observed by Sir W. Macnaghten) the style of the work, being a version of a scientific Arabic treatise, is necessarily so abstruse, that a knowledge of the original language is almost requisite to the study of the translation; and, moreover, the work itself, together with its commentary, the Sharífíyah, may be said to be embodied in a more intelligible form in Baillie's excellent treatise on the Law of Inheritance, and Sir W. Macnaghten's Principles and Precedents of Muhammadan Law. It may be remarked, that the term "heir" is used throughout these pages to signify any person who has a right to inherit any species of property whatever.

<sup>3</sup> The Court expressed some doubt at the time concerning the opinion of the Pandits on this point, but it was never mentioned again in Court; and as the parties appeared to have been finally satisfied as to the mode of managing the idol in future, the decree was framed accordingly on the basis of the Vyavashtha.

A suit was instituted by A for the recovery of property in the possession of B, inherited by her, as she alleged, from C, a Musulmání prostitute, deceased, and wrongfully possessed by B as adopted daughter, the latter being alleged, also, to be a Hindú. But it appearing that all the parties were Hindús, being of the Cast of dancing girls and prostitutes, though calling themselves Musulmánís, and that A's relationship to C was five degrees distant, and that B was her niece; the Court, under the circumstances, dismissed the suit. *Mt. Where a Musulmán died, leaving a widow and a nephew, who for some time had lived with him in the apparent capacity of his heir and adopted son; the widow claimed the whole estate of the deceased, under an alleged will, and the nephew made a similar claim as adopted son; the Provincial Courts directed a Kázi and two Muffís to investigate the matter; and on their reporting that neither claim could be considered as established, and that the inheritance should be divided according to the Musulmán laws, the Council confirmed their decrees, and, in accordance with it, held that the estate should be divided into four shares, of which one should be given to the widow, and three to the brother of the deceased, who was next of kin, and father of the nephew who claimed as adopted son. The Patna Case. 1777. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 195, note.—(Patna Provincial Council.)

266. Altamghá lands were granted to a mother for the support of her family, and remained to them (a son and two daughters) at her death. According to the law of inheritance, the lands will be divided into four parts, of which two will fall to the son, and one to each of the daughters: a pecuniary pension was similarly divided. Kulsoom Khanum v. Mirza Mehder. 29th March 1798. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 16.—Cowper.

267. The heirs of a Musulmán deceased being a mother and two sons, the estate will be divided into twelve parts, of which the mother will take one-sixth, or two, and the sons five each. Gholam Husun Ali v. Zeinab Beeber. 20th July 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 48.—Lumsden & Harington.

<sup>1</sup> It is presumed that the legal opinion, in this case, was induced by the fact (which was indeed deposed to by several of the witnesses) that the mother of the respondent was not only the concubine, but the slave of the deceased Zamindár. deceased being a widow, a mother, a son, and a brother, the estate will be divided into twenty-four, or seventy-two parts, of which the widow will take one-eighth, or three, or nine shares, the mother one-sixth, or four, or twelve, and the residue or seventeen, or fifty-one, will go to the son, the brother taking nothing. But the son dying, one-third of his share, viz.  $\frac{17}{72}$ , goes to his mother, the widow, and the residue to his uncle, his father's brother. Hence the division will be: the widow  $\frac{26}{72}$ , the mother  $\frac{12}{72}$ , the brother  $\frac{34}{72}$ . On the mother's death, her son would take her share, and have  $\frac{46}{72}$ . Musnud Ali v. Khoorsheed Banno. 14th Aug. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 52.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

269. Any male in whose line of relation to the deceased no female enters is residuary, and succeeds as such, preferably to any distant kindred (Zu al Ithram), or those in whose line of relation a female enters. Bhanoo Beebee v. Emaan Buksh. 5th Aug. 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 68.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

270. The heirs of a Musulmán deceased being a widow, a son, a daughter, and two brothers, the estate will be divided into twenty-four parts, of which the widow will take one-eighth, or three, the son fourteen, and the daughter seven parts: the brothers take nothing. Ib.

271. And being a mother, a sister, and father's brother, into six parts; of which the mother takes one-third, or two, the sister one-half, or three, and the uncle one share. Ib.

272. And being a husband, mother, son, and a daughter, into thirty-six parts; of which the husband takes one-fourth, or nine, the mother one-sixth, or six, the son fourteen, and the daughter seven shares. Ib.

273. A Musulmán deceased, leaving a son, a daughter, and three widows, his estate will be divided into twenty-four parts; of which the widows will take three, or one-eighth of the estate between them. Of the residue, fourteen, or two-thirds of the whole, will go to the son, and seven, or one-third to the daughter. Beebee Jugun v. Bakir Ali and others. 7th May 1804. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 78.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

274. And the first and third widows dying, the son takes two-thirds and the daughter one-third of the two twenty-fourths which fell to them. Ib.

275. The daughter of a deceased Musulmán, inheriting an unpaid portion of her mother's dower, and her heirs being at her death, her husband, a daughter, brother, and three sisters; the husband takes a fourth of her estate (viz. the unpaid dower), the daughter a half, the brother a tenth, and the three sisters a twentieth each. Ali Buksh Khan v. Kaleem Beebee. 24th Aug. 1804. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 83.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

276. The heirs of a Musulmán being a second wife, a son by a first wife, a son by a second wife, and a daughter of the second wife, the estate will be divided into forty, or nine-hundred and sixty parts, of which the second wife will take one-eighth, or five, or one hundred and twenty, each son fourteen, or three hundred and thirty-six, and the daughter seven, or one hundred and sixty-eight. The daughter subsequently dying, leaving a son and two daughters, her share is thus divided: one-sixth, or twenty-eight go to her mother, seventy to her son, and thirty-five to each of her two daughters. The second wife dying, her son takes her share. Hence the division is: son by the first wife  $\frac{336}{960}$ , son by the second wife  $\frac{484}{960}$ , grandson by the daughter  $\frac{20}{960}$ , and two grand-daughters by the daughter  $\frac{34}{960}$  each. Sufidar Hossin v. Enayut Hossin. 25th Nov. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 111.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

277. The heirs of a Musulmán being a widow and two sons, the widow takes an eighth, and the sons equal shares of the residue. Casim

Ali v. Furzund Ali. 27th Nov. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 113.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

278. The heirs of a Musulmán deceased being a son and two daughters, both married to the same person, the estate will be divided into sixteen parts, of which the son will take eight, and each daughter four. The son dying, his sisters divide his share equally, so that each has eight parts of the original estate. The second daughter dies, leaving her husband and two sons; the husband takes two parts, and the sons each three. The first daughter dies, leaving her husband and two nephews; the husband takes four shares, and the nephews two each. One nephew dying, his father takes his share. Hence the division is: the husband of the estate, and the nephew  $\frac{1}{16}$ .

Alt. Hyalee Khanum v. Mt. Kool-soom Khanum. 4th Sept. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 214.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

279. The heirs of a Musulmán deceased being a widow, a sister with one son, and another sister with two sons, the estate will be divided into sixteen parts, of which one-fourth, or four, will go to the widow, and the remainder equally to the two sisters, viz. six shares each. On the death of the sisters, the share of the first would go to her only son, that of the second to her two sons in equal shares. Had the sisters died in the lifetime of the proprietor, his wife would have taken her four shares, and the three nephews equal shares in the residue, that is, four each. Sheikh Bahander Ali v. Sheikh Dho-mun and others. 8th Aug. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 250.—Harington & Fombelle.

280. The heirs of a Musulmán deceased being a widow, a son, a nephew (son of a half-brother), and the widow's mother, the estate will be divided into twenty-four parts, of which the widow takes one-eighth, or three, and the son the remaining twenty-one parts. But on the death of the son, his mother, the widow, takes one-third of his twenty-one parts, or seven parts, and his half cousin the remaining fourteen; and on the widow's death her mother takes her share. Hence the nephew has  $\frac{11}{24}$ , and the widow's mother  $\frac{10}{24}$ . Ahmud Ollah and another v. Behar Ullah. 7th Aug. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 284.—Harington & Fombelle.

281. The share of a widow of a Musulmán, where there are no children or other descendants, is one-fourth of her husband's estate; but it being ruled by Fatwas that there is in modern times no Bait-ul-mál, or public treasury, regularly established, the other three-fourths also revert to the widow. Mt. Soobhance v. Bhet-tun. 11th Sept. 1811. 1 S. D. A. R. p. 346.—Harington & Stuart.

282. Where there is but one child of a marriage, or any larger number, the widow is entitled to one-eighth of her husband's property at his death. Anon. 4th Term 1813. East's Notes. Case 1.

283. A female dying and leaving a brother and sister, the brother takes two-thirds and the sister one-third of her ancestral property. Mt. Banoo Beebee v. Fulkherooddeen Hosein. 3d May 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 180.—Harington & Fombelle.

284. In collateral descent, children of the brothers of a deceased Musulmán will take two-thirds, and the children of his sisters one-third of the estate, if such brothers and sisters survive him. Doe dem. Golaum Aabbus v. Shaik Aameer. 15th Feb. 1820. East Notes. Case 113.

285. But if a Musulmán die leaving the son of a brother and the son of a sister, their parents having died in his lifetime, the son of the brother will take the whole property. Ib.

286. The heirs of a deceased Musulmán being his mother, his widow, and the son of his paternal uncle, the estate will be divided into twelve shares, of which the mother will take four, the widow three, and the son of the uncle five. Ib.

287. The claimants to a Musulmán's property being three widows, three daughters, a mother, and a brother, the property should be made into seventy-two, or two hundred and sixteen parts, of which the widows should get nine, or twenty-seven, the daughters forty-eight, or one hundred and forty-four, the mother twelve, or thirty-six, and the brother three, or nine; and one of the daughters dying before the distribution, her mother takes one-sixth of her share, or eight; two-thirds, or thirty-two, are equally divided between her sisters, who each get sixteen, and the residue goes to the father's brother, her uncle. Hence the division will be: mother  $\frac{36}{216}$ , first wife  $\frac{17}{216}$ , second and third wives each  $\frac{9}{216}$ , two surviving daughters each  $\frac{48}{216}$ , and brother  $\frac{12}{216}$ . Rajah Decdar Hoosein v. Rance Zuhooroonisa. 4th Aug. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 46.—Sir J. E. Colebrooke.

288. The preceding decision was according to the Sunnî doctrine; but in a later case between the same parties, in which the uncle claimed his brother's share of a Zamindâri, it was settled, that the parties being of the Shîa sect the law must be taken as received by that sect, and the brother (the uncle) was consequently held to be excluded by co-existing daughters: but what would be the legal distribution of his brother's estate was not settled. Same v. Same. 12th Aug. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 164.—Sir J. E. Colebrooke & Goad.

289. And in another case between the same parties it was decided, that though, in the distribution of heritage, both the Sunnî and Shîa sects recognize the same Farâz, or specific shares, they differ as to the distribution of the Radd, or residue, should there be any. The Shîas prefer the nearest kin, who divide it in proportion to their specific shares; the Sunnîs, on the contrary, give preference to the Asbah, or agnate kinsmen.

Same v. Same 18th May 1830. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 29.—Turnbull & Rat-tray.

290. This decision was confirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Same v. Same. 24th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 441.

Wilayatjee Begum.* 11th Dec. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 58.—Sir J. E. Colebrooke.

292. The heirs of a Musulmán being his widow, two sons, and four daughters, the estate should be made into sixty-four parts, of which the widow is entitled to eight, the sons to fourteen each, and the daughters to seven each; and being his mother, his widow, and three sisters, should be made into thirty-nine parts, of which his widow is entitled to nine, his mother to six, and his sisters to eight each.<sup>2</sup> Rance Bukhsh Beebee v. Nadir Beebee. 11th Dec. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 59.—C. S.

<sup>1</sup> Where a wife inherits from her husband, leaving children, her share in that case being one-eighth, and there are other claimants entitled to one-sixth, one-third, or two-thirds, the division must be by twenty-four.—Maen.

<sup>2</sup> In this case, although the Fatwa of the law-officer of the Zillah Court was so far correct that it did not operate unjustly in respect to any of the heirs, yet as it did not appear that any distribution of the property had taken place until after the death of one of the heirs entitled to share in the estate, the Fatwa ought to have been delivered according to the rules prescribed in a case of vested inheritance. This observation was made by the law-officers of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; but as it appeared that, by this mode of calculation, the result would be in substance the same, no further notice was taken of the omission.—Maen. 293. The heirs of a Musulmán being two widows, a mother, and a son, the estate should be made into forty-eight parts, of which the widows are entitled to one-eighth, or six, taking three each, the mother to one-sixth or eight, and the son to the remaining thirty-four shares. One widow and the mother dying, the son takes their shares. Hence he will have forty-five shares out of forty-eight. Mirza Qaim Ali Beg v. Mt. Hingun and others. 15th April 1822. 3 S. D. A. sulmán being two widows, three sons, and four daughters, his property will be divided into eighty shares, of which the widows will take ten between them, the sons fourteen, and the daughters seven each. Syed Iutf Ali and another v. Mt. Wasaum. 25th April 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 159.—Money.

304. The heirs of a Musulmán deceased being two widows, a mother, and three daughters, one by the first wife, and two by the second, the estate will be divided into two hundred and forty, or twelve hundred parts, of which the widows will receive fifteen, or seventy-five each, the mother forty-two, or two hundred and ten, and the daughters fifty-six, or two hundred and eighty each. Mt. Rabca Khatoon and another v. Budroomissa. 28th Dec. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 62.—Lee Warner & Reid.

305. But one of the daughters of the second wife dying before the distribution of the estate, leaving as her heirs her mother, her uterine-sister, and her half-sister, her share,  $\frac{280}{1260}$ , is thus divided: The second wife, her mother, takes one-fifth, or fifty-six, the half-sister one-fifth, or fifty-six, and the uterine-sister three-fifths, or one hundred and sixty-eight. Hence the division of the entire property will be: the first wife  $\frac{75}{1260}$ , the second wife  $\frac{121}{1260}$ , the mother  $\frac{210}{1260}$ , the half-sister  $\frac{56}{1260}$ , and the uterine-sister  $\frac{112}{1260}$ . Id.

306. Of two widows, on whom their husband had settled his property in equal proportions, one dying, the other has no right of inheritance, but the deceased widow's sister's son will take the property in default of nearer heirs.<sup>2</sup> Kali Khan v. Rajah Mitterjeet Sing.

<sup>2</sup> In this case the appellant (the son of the deceased widow's sister) came under the description of that class of heirs who rank third among the distant kindred, and who take the estate in default of those heirs who are technically termed legal sharers and residuaries. Macn. Princ. M. L. 8. par. 45.

19th May 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 90.
—Goad & Dorin.

6. By Custom.

307. Two sons of a deceased Musulmán in Malabar brought a suit against their late father's nephew to recover possession of certain paddy fields and outstanding debts, the property of their late father. The nephew claimed to succeed as heir to his uncle's estate in conformity with certain local usages of Malabar, observed chiefly by the Hindús there; but failing to prove that such custom prevailed in the family, the estate was adjudged to the sons according to the Muhammadan law of inheritance. Anon. Case 5 of 1809. 1 Mad. Dec. 29.—Scott & Greenway.

308. An illegitimate son of a Muhammadan, who, during his lifetime, had held a share of an office which was Watan, or hereditary, has no claim to such share on the decease of his father where the custom of the country does not allow bastards to succeed to hereditary offices; and although the Muhammadan law recognizes no Watan property, but classes all property under the term Tarikát, or "effects," and by that law an illegitimate son would therefore inherit and succeed to the office; yet, under Sec. 14. of Reg. II. of 1800,<sup>3</sup> which directs the customary rule of the country to operate, under certain circumstances, to the exclusion of the written law, such claim cannot be admitted where the custom of the country differs from the law. Mt. Humeedoon Nisa v. Ghoolum Moheedoon Deen Chondree. 21st Feb. 1821. 2 Borr. 33.—Sutherland.

309. The family usage, that a Zamindári has never been separated, but had devolved entire on every succession, though proved to have existed as the custom for many generations, will not exempt the Zamindári from the operation of Reg. XI. of 1793, which provides, in case of intestacy, for the division of the landed estate among the heirs of the deceased. Rajah Deedar Hossein v. Rane Zuhooroon Nissa. 12th Aug. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 164.—Leycester, Goad, & Dorin.

310. This decision was confirmed, on appeal, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Same v. Same. 24th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 441.

311. Reg. X. of 1800 does not apply generally to all undivided Zamindaris, in which a custom prevails that the inheritance should be indivisible, but only to the Jungle Mahalls, of Midnapore and other districts, where local customs prevail; and therefore only partially, and to that extent, repeals Reg. XI. of 1793. In a suit, therefore, by a party in possession of one moiety of a Zamindari, for recovery of the other, on the ground that the estate was, according to the family rule, indivisible, it was held, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that the property not being a Jungle Mahall within the provisions of Reg. X. of 1800, the family rule, if proved, was abrogated by Reg. XI. of 1793, and (the title deeds set up in the pleadings not being satisfactorily proved) that the descent must be governed according to Reg. IV. of 1793, by the law of the religious sect to which the disputants belonged. The Judicial Committee, in affirming the judgment of the Court below, held the Zamindari divisible among co-heirs of the deceased Zamindar, according to the laws of the Shīa or Imāmīyah sect to which they belonged.<sup>1</sup> Ib.

7. To Offices.

312. Where a Musulmán claimed the Sajjādeh-nishīnī, or right of superintendence of a religious establishment, together with the Tarbiyat, or trusteeship and management of certain rent-free lands attached to it, he being a lineal descendant of the original founder, as required by the original assignment, judgment was given in favour against one claimant, who was descended from the founder by the intervention of females, and another (a woman), who was prevented by her sex from holding the offices, under the provisions of the grant, but with a reservation for his obtaining a Sanad from Government.<sup>2</sup> Mt. Kyaon-Nisa and another v. Mofukir-ol-Islam. 17th Sept. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 106.—H. Colebrooke & Harrington.

8. Exclusion from Inheritance.<sup>3</sup>

313. Homicide, whether punishable by retaliation or expiable, is an impediment to succession to the estate of the person slain.<sup>4</sup> Shah Abudee v. Shah Ali Nukee. 12th Oct. 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 73.—H. Colebrooke & Harrington.

314. A person obtaining a grant in the name of another, with the intention of holding the property during his life, and securing the succession of the nominal grantee at his death, cannot thereby defeat the right of inheritance of his lawful heirs, who are entitled at his death to succeed to the property of which he died possessed as part of his estate. Sheikh Buhau-

<sup>2</sup> The decision on this case was governed by the special conditions of the endowment, no less than by the general law respecting pious appropriations. The offices of principal of the institution, and of trustee and manager of the lands, had been reserved by the original assignment for a lineal descendant of the founder. According to the prevailing authorities of Muhammadan law, lineal descent intends the male line; and a female descendant in the male line is disqualified by sex for one of the offices. It became therefore necessary to select a person from the male descendants of the founder; and the trust being of a public nature, it appeared proper that the nomination of the person to be appointed should have the sanction of Government.—Maen.

317. A Musulmán cannot inherit with his paternal uncle if his father died before his father's father; in other words, there is no right of representation recognized by the Muhammadan law. Ubdoo Rahman v. Mudaree Khan and others. 17th Aug. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 403.—C. Smith & Martin.

318. Where the original ancestor of the parties had been deprived by the then existing Government of estates, which were recovered under another Government by the descendants of one of his sons, it was held, that the descendants of another son have no right to participate. Ib.

319. A renunciation of inheritance during the lifetime of the ancestor was decided to be null and void; and it was held that a claim to such inheritance so renounced might be preferred at any subsequent period without limitation. *Mt. ### III. OF EUROPEANS.<sup>1</sup>

1. In the Supreme Courts.

320. Held, that lands of British subjects must be considered as descending, according to the English law, except so far as the Charter may have altered that course of descent. Joseph v. Ronald. 1 Moore Ind. App. 320.

321. It was held that the property of Europeans in land at Bombay follows the property of the person, or, in other words, that, like leaseholds in England, it is personal property for the purpose of succession and of liability for debt by execution or otherwise, and in other matters of title, and must therefore be as variable as the laws of the various Casts which compose the Society; and where A and B, two Portuguese, claimed the lands of a deceased lunatic, A claiming as heir-at-law, and B as only next of kin and administratrix, judgment was given in favour of the latter, the Court considering the lands to be personal property, and deciding that if A had any right to a part of the succession of the deceased, he might claim either his general distribution share, or his specific interest in the peculiar property which he might suppose to be liable to his claim. But his claim must be under the title of B, as administratrix.<sup>2</sup> Doe dem.

<sup>1</sup> By Act XXX. of 1839, the English law of inheritance contained in the Stat. 3d and 4th Will. IV. c. 106. was extended to the territories of the East-India Company, in cases which, but for the passing of such Act, would be governed by the English law of inheritance as it existed previously to the passing of the aforesaid Statute.

<sup>2</sup> In this case, Austruther R. observed—“There has been no instance of a succession of an eldest son of any English subject, to the lands or houses of the father situated in Bombay, to the exclusion of the younger children, although the division has, in two instances, been contested.” But it has been decided by the Court of Chancery in England, that lands of Europeans in the East Indies, held by a tenure of the nature of fee-simple, do not pass by an unattested will, but descend to the person who would

2. In the Courts of the Honourable Company.

323. It was held, that, by the Portuguese law of inheritance, one moiety of the estate of the husband devolves at his death on his widow, and the other moiety on his next of kin. According to this law, a distribution was directed to be made of the landed estate of a deceased person; but his wife dying, and several claims to her moiety being preferred, it was subsequently discovered that the deceased husband was a British subject. As he left no heirs, (the relations of a mother or a wife not being heirs to real property, according to English law,) it was decreed that the estate should revert to Government, by whom it was originally granted to the father of the deceased.<sup>1</sup> Joanna Fernandez v. Fell. 29th July 1819. 1 Jacob & Walker, 22.

<sup>1</sup> Had this case been decided according to the law of Portugal, the decision would have been the same; as it appeared, from a communication with some professors of the law at Goa, (who were latterly consulted,) that by a special law of Portugal, termed the Mental, and applicable to this case, all grants made by the Crown, and sub-grants made by any great donees of the Crown, become escheats on failure of the legitimate descendants of the original donee; relations not in the direct line being excluded. —Macn.

326. It was held by an award of the Dastúr, that among Pársís, if a son, after the death of his father, by his own free will and consent become the adopted son of mother, he is entitled to share both in the property of his real father and in that of the person who adopted him.<sup>2</sup> Ib.

VI. OF SIKHS.

329. Semble, By the Sikh law the widow inherits the property solely, if there be no children. Doe dem. Kissenchunder Shaw v. Baidam Beebee. Jan. 1815. East's Notes. Case 14.

330. Semble, Among the Sikhs there is no difference between the rights of inheritance of a Nikah or second wife, and of a woman who had been married only once; and therefore the widow of two husbands would inherit the property of her last husband, in the same right and manner as if she had never been married before. Ib.

331. Semble, By the law of the Sikhs, where an intestate dies leaving a widow and an adopted or natural son him surviving, the widow is entitled to five-sixteenths of the intestate's property, and the son to the remainder. Ib.

332. The son of a Sikh of the Khythy<sup>1</sup> Cast, and being a Hindú born of a slave, reputed to be of the same Cast, to whom the father was married by an inferior ceremony of marriage called Anand, (the Nikah of the Muhammadans,) was allowed to have a share equal to one-half of the share of another son by the same father, whose mother was regularly married to his father by the Baya form, and who in consequence was considered the superior wife.<sup>2</sup> Doe dem. Juggomohun Mullick and others v. Sauncoomar Beebee and others. 29th March 1815. East's Notes. Case 31.

<sup>2</sup> The Court in this case confirmed the evidence of marriage, and the right of the son of the Anand marriage to inherit one-third of the property in the proportion stated by the Pandits with respect to the illegitimate sons of Sûdras, the Sikhs not admitting, in strictness, of Cast; and this being an inferior species of marriage by their law, and the Pandits admitting the law of marriage as practised by the Sikhs in Bengal, though not known to the Hindus as such, by Anand. Sir Edward H. East remarks, in a marginal note to this case, "I am not clear that, upon the evidence, though slight, of the slave mother being a Khythy, the son ought not to have had a full share; for the Pandits seemed to consider their Cast as still subsisting, or at least dormant. But when it was first suggested, the defendant's counsel seemed satisfied."

<sup>3</sup> The decision in this case seems to have been passed, not so much with reference to the principles of the Armenian law regarding succession to property, as to the fact of the virtual acknowledgment by the respondent of the rights of the individual through whom the appellant claimed.—Macn.

2. Before default was made in repayment of the loan, Palmer & Co. were declared insolvent, under the Indian Insolvent Act, 9th Geo. IV. c. 73., by the 36th Section of which it was declared, that where there had been mutual credit given by the insolvents and any other person, one debt or demand might be set off against the other; and that all such debts as might be proved under a commission of bankruptcy in England might be proved in the same manner under the Indian Insolvent Act. At the time of the adjudication of insolvency, the bank were also holders of two promissory notes of Palmer & Co., which they had discounted for them before the transaction of the loan, and the agreement as to the deposit of the Company's paper. The time for repayment of the loan having expired, the bank sold the Company's paper, the proceeds of which, after satisfying the principal and interest due on the loan, produced a considerable surplus. In an action by the assignees against the bank, to recover the amount of the surplus, it was held that the bank could not set off the amount of the two promissory notes, and that the case did not come within the clause of mutual credit in the Bankrupt Act. *Young and others v. 1. It was held that a clause in the Calcutta Laudable Society for insurance of lives, excluding from its benefit a life lapsing by suicide or the hands of justice, does not except from its benefit a person dying by his own hand when non compos mentis at the time, as the word suicide, as used in such clause, must be taken in its criminal sense.<sup>1</sup> Bayley and another v.

East, in conjunction with the dissentient voice of Sir Nicholas Tindal, would not have led to different decisions. But the legal rates vary according to the Cast or class of the borrower; and a considerable difference of construction has been given, by the commentators on the Hindú law of contracts, to the texts which respect the limitation of interest, and the invalidity, or immorality only, of usurious loans and contracts. Har. Anal. 196. And see 1 Colch. Dig. 1 et seq. The Muhammadan Law prohibits the taking of interest for the use of money upon loans from one Musulman to another, and has not regulated the rate of it when allowed to be taken from a hostile infidel. 2 Hed. 489. et seq. 551 et seq.

Notes. 23d Jan. 1778. Sm. R. 51. Mor. 231.

1a. Although the Stat. 13th Geo. III. c. 63. s. 30. prohibiting "His Majesty's subjects" from taking more than 12 per cent. interest does not extend to Hindús, by reason of those terms being used in contradistinction to "native inhabitants;" and although the Stat. 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 17, provides that Gentoos and Muham-madans shall be governed by their own laws in all matters of contract; yet as, by a Regulation of the Government, the Hindús in the Mofussil are prohibited from taking more than 12 per cent. interest, the Supreme Court, though such Regulation does not extend to Calcutta, will not permit more to be recovered, as being against conscience and oppressive. Goorooopersaud Bose v. Habberly. 31st March 1815. East's Notes. Case 32.

2. Burroughs, J., observed that the Court has sometimes disallowed interest at 12 per cent., and sometimes even denied it altogether, though expressly reserved by the contract, where the transaction was usurious and oppressive. See quare, where interest is reserved by a contract not illegal? Ib.

3. By the usages of trade in Calcutta, interest is allowed, when goods are sold to be paid for at a given day, from the day on which the payment was agreed to be made; but the Court only allowed such interest to be at the rate of 6 per cent., unless a different rate had been contracted for. Bissumber Mullick and others v. Stubb and another. 21st July 1821. East's Notes. Case 28.

6. Where, by a mortgage deed, it was stipulated that the usufruct of the lands specified in it should be in lieu of interest to the mortgagee; it was held that, had the usufruct exceeded the legal interest, it would, under Reg. Mt. Budamoon and others*. 25th May 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 185.—Harrington & Fombelle.

7. It was held, that the institution of a suit for the recovery of a debt before the time specified for the payment in the obligation is not a sufficient reason for the refusal of interest, as allowed by Sec. 3. of Reg. XIII. of 1796, though sufficient for the refusal of costs, or for a nonsuit. Mohunt Hunjeet Geer v. Kunhya Lal. 12th Feb. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 68.—Lycester & Goad.

7a. A creditor is not at liberty to charge interest, by the custom of Surat, until two months after delivery of the goods, whether interest were agreed for or not; and if the goods be paid for within that time a charge for interest will not be allowed. Dada Bhase Ruttonjee v. Joseph Nimmo. 12th March 1822. 2 Borr. 339.—Romer & Ironside.

In a second action for the recovery of the rent for the period during which the suit was pending in Court, at the rate fixed by the judicial award, together with interest on the same, the Court awarded the principal, but no interest for the period antecedent to the adjustment, it not appearing that the plaintiff had ever consented, prior to the adjustment, to receive any smaller sum than his original exorbitant demand. *Pedro de Silva v. 14*c*. On petition in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Bombay, after a decree on appeal in England, interest was awarded on the amount of mesne profits decreed, although not prayed for in the plaint, or given by the decrees in India, or the order of affirmance in England. Ib.

2. Amount and Rate of.

15. The restriction contained in Sec. 6. of Reg. XV. of 1793 against a judgment for interest exceeding the principal, when the legal interest "shall have accumulated so as to exceed the principal," is not applicable to a case in which the accumulation is subsequent to the institution of the suit, and not ascribable in any degree to procrastination on the part of the creditor. Mt. Mukhun v. Mohunt Rampershaud. 13th July 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 242.—Harington & Fombelle.

16. It was held, that, according to the spirit of Sec. 6. of Reg. XV. of 1793, the Courts may award interest exceeding the principal of a debt, if the excess accrued pendente lite, and without any fault of the creditor. Baboo Jankee Pershad v. Maharaja Oodewunt Narain Sing. 19th Dec. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 270.—C. Smith, Shakespear, & Harington (Lycester & Martin, dissent.).

to the date of the decree of the Sudder Court. Kaoojee Mihirwanjee v. Khoorshedjee Nana Bhace. 13th Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 430.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

17. It was held that interest exceeding the principal may be awarded when the excess has accrued subsequently to recourse to law for the recovery of the debt, and between such recourse and the date of the decision. Goverdhan Das v. Waris Ali. 5th Sept. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 261.—Sealy.

18. In an account of several years between the borrower and the lender under a Bay-bil-wafâ, the Court did not allow the yearly rent to be charged first to the yearly interest, but limited the lender's credit for interest to a sum equal to the principal; and the double principal being less than the rent receipts, the borrower recovered possession of his land. Syud Inayat Ali v. Sheikh Didar Bakhsh and others. 10th Jan. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 259.—Ross & Barwell.

3. Limitation of Claim.

19. The Courts are not competent to strike off interest on the ground of delay in suing for a debt if the claim be otherwise cognizable. Balnath Sakoo and another v. Rajah Buddun Mohun Singh and others. 7th Aug. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 48.—Goad. Dhunujai Shah and another v. Harhalee Mitter and others. 2d July 1842. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 111.—Lee Warner & Dick.

20. Where the plaintiffs, under a judgment in their favour, obtained possession of certain lands, and on the expiration of nearly twelve years from the date of obtaining possession sued for Wâsilât, with interest; the Court awarded the principal sum for Wâsilât only, without the interest, no cause for the delay having been shewn. Gooroopershad Potedar and others v. Komalakant Bhose and others. 5th Feb. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 52.—Stockwell & Master.

21. Interest was not allowed on a principal sum adjudged, the plaintiff having suffered ten years to elapse without instituting his action or making any intermediate demand. Motee Baboo v. Moses Khachik Arakel. 6th May 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 67.—Stockwell & Barwell.

4. Accounts.

22. In actions of debts, compound interest will be allowed to run upon every separate item, both on the debit and credit side, from the date of the receipt or payment of that item until the close of the account. Kaoosjee Mikhwanjee v. Khoorshedjee Nana Bhace. 13th Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 430.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

23. If a balance due upon the adjustment of an account be not paid down, the claimant is unquestionably entitled, from the date of such adjustment, to legal interest upon the amount, until it shall be fully liquidated. Narasimma Chetty v. Wheatley. Case 2. of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 435.—Grant & Gowan.

5. Bonds.

23 a. The interest on a bond, the unpaid principal secured by which was decreed to the claimant, was declared forfeited in consequence of its being stipulated at more than the legal rate. Rai Balgorind v. Sheikh Gholam Ali. 24th June 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 93.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

24. On the institution of a suit to recover principal and interest on a bond, the interest should be calculated up to the time of the plaint. Mt. Mukhun v. Mohunt Rumpershaud. 13th July 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 242.—Harrington & Fombelle.

25. But the Court passed a judgment in favour of the lender for the recovery of the principal of the bond, with interest from the date of the bond to that on which the final decree should be carried into execution, the investigation of the case having been protracted by two appeals on the part of the defendant. Ib.

26. Where, in a suit for the amount of two bonds, with an equal sum as interest (under Sec. 6. of Reg. XV. of 1793, the interest due having exceeded the principal), one payment of interest was admitted; but it appearing that the interest due since that payment exceeded the principal; it was held that the rule contained in the Regulation quoted relates only to interest unpaid and in arrear, and that a sum equal to the principal is recoverable as interest, exclusive of the payment made. Gholam Ahmad Khan v. Munooher Das. 29th Nov. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 294.—Harrington & Fombelle.

26 a. Where a bond had been executed before the 1st of January 1804, bearing interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and subsequently to that period a second bond (the first remaining uncanceled) for the same debt, at a higher rate of interest; it was held that, agreeably to the provisions of Reg. XXXIV. of 1803, the legal interest is not thereby forfeited. Jectum Das v. Lal Roadar Partab Singh. 18th June 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 96.—Goad.

26 b. The Court refused to allow interest on a sum secured by bond, where the time mentioned in the bond for the payment of the sum borrowed had elapsed long previously to the institution of the suit by the obligee. Dada Bhace Suboorahjee v. Dhoolbh Deochund. 30th Aug. 1821. 2 Borr. 119.—Elphinston, Sutherland, & Ironside.

27. In a case where money was borrowed, and a bond executed for the payment thereof, with interest at the legal rate (12 per cent.), and afterwards another bond was executed for the payment of one half per cent. as Mihnatdneh; the Court held that, under the provisions of Reg. XV. of 1793, no part of the original debt was recoverable, even though no illegal interest had been received, the right of the party stipulating for such illegal interest being annulled by the stipulation. Oudan Sing and another v. Kauth Chand Pande. 23d Jan. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 205.—Goad & Dorin.

28. Judgment by a Zillah Court for principal and interest of a bond debt, together with interest on the aggregate sum from the date of suit, was confirmed, on appeal to the Provincial Court, with interest on the amount of the judgment; but interest while the cause was pending on special appeal before the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was calculated on the amount of the original bond only. Raj Chunder Rai v. Ram Hurree Ghosal. 29th Nov. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 268.—C. Smith.

29. By Sec. 5. of Reg. XXXIV. of 1802<sup>1</sup> of the Madras Code, bonds or agreements are expressly excluded from the provision which prohibits compound interest from being recognised in judicial decrees. Narasimma Chitty v. Wheatley. Case 2 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 435.—Grant & Gowan.

30. In the case of a bond bearing interest at 6 per cent., the Court awarded payment of 12 per cent. on proof that the debtor had violated an engagement made to the creditor to put him in possession of a farm as collateral security. Raja Rughoonundam Singh v. Ramdial Singh. 17th May 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 356.—Ahmuty.

31. Interest was allowed on a bond from the date of the bond, although the interest greatly exceeded the principal. Baboo Janki Pershad v. Raja Oodwunt Nurain Sing. 19th Dec. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 270.—C. Smith, Shakespear, & Harington. Bunceyad Sing v. Gholam Ali. 3d Dec.

1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 95.—C. Smith.

32. Where, in case of a loan secured by a bond bearing interest, a small deduction had been made as Dharat, it was held, that this was a device within the meaning of Sec. 9. of Reg. XV. of 1793, and rendered the dismissal of the claim necessary. Sri Nath Mallik v. Abhai Charan Nandi and others. 20th Dec. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 79.—Rattray.

33. A note passed for fifteen Maunds of grain, with 50 per cent. interest, also in grain, to be repaid at the harvest, was alleged to be invalid, being written on unstamped paper, as, the value per Maund being stated in the suit to be one rupee, with interest, the amount exceeded the sum requiring a stamp; but it was decided that interest could not be considered as forming a part of the principal, and that, therefore, the note did not require a stamp. Weeroopalshapa Ayah v. Bheemana. Nov. 1836. Sel. Rep. 168.—Pyne & Greenhill.

6. Mortgages and Conditional Sales.

34. A person having obtained a bill of sale for certain lands on the payment of Rs. 4401, executes a written engagement, in which he agrees that he shall not be put in possession of the lands for the period of one year, four months, and seventeen days; at the expiration of which period the lands shall be re-sold to the seller, on condition of his paying the sum of Rs. 5801, otherwise the engagement to be considered null and void, and the property to vest absolutely in the purchaser. Held, that such a transaction is, in reality, a Bay-bil-wafâ, or mortgage and conditional sale: and the condition for the sale being virtually a stipulation for interest beyond the legal rate, the transaction is in violation of Reg. XV. of 1793, and the interest liable to forfeiture. But the bill of sale and engagement having been publicly registered, the transaction was not held to be an evasion of the above Regulation involving forfeiture of the principal; and the purchaser's claim to the lands was rejected, with a judgment in his favour for Rs. 4401, the amount of his original advance. Mookhammad Jann Chondhry v. Ramruttun Das. 29th April 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 146.—Harington & Stuart.

35. A, a Musulmán, sues B for possession of a village under a deed of mortgage and conditional sale for Rs. 2081, redeemable in five years. It appearing that A lent B Rs. 1300 only, and, to avoid the imputation of taking interest (which is forbidden by the Muhammadan religion), consolidated the interest on that sum for five years with the principal, and caused the aggregate sum to be entered in the bond as principal: it was held that he is not, under such deed, entitled to possession of the village at the expiration of the period of redemption. The Court, however, ordered that he should recover the principal sum actually lent, with interest thereon, as there was no attempt to obtain usurious interest beyond the legal rate of 12 per cent. Syud Khadim Ullee v. Duljeet Sing and another. 16th March 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 255.—Ker & Oswald.

36. In a suit by a mortgagee to obtain possession of certain premises under a deed of Bay-bil-wafá, the mortgage having been foreclosed, and the sale made absolute; it appearing that one rupee per cent. per mensem was the sum stipulated to be paid as interest in the deed of mortgage, but that the mortgagee had received a separate bond, engaging the payment of an additional one per cent. interest; such a proceeding was held to be contrary to the provisions of Reg. XVII. of 1806, and the claim was accordingly dismissed. Luchmun Poorce v. Jowahir Geer. 24th Jan. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 106.—Sealy.

37. It was held that the validity of a transaction of Bay-bil-wafá is not affected by the fact of the parties not having come to a final adjustment of their respective accounts previously to the execution of the deed by the conditional seller; neither is it affected (the term at the end of which the conditional sale was to become conclusive being five years) by the fact of an excess above the legal interest having been received by the conditional purchaser in any one year, there being no trace of fraud to elude the law regarding interest. Ramhoomar Neave Bachusputee v. Bhugputtee Dibia. 31st Jan. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 111.—Leycester & Dorin.

7. Decrees.

38. Interest was allowed at the rate of 12 per cent. during two appeals on the amount of a Zillah decree passed in the claimant's favour, and confirmed on each of the appeals, pursuant to Sec. 3. of Reg. XIII. of 1796. Joogul Kishnur and others v. Radhakant Ghose. 18th Aug. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 154.—Harington & Fombelle.

39. In a suit for the recovery of certain Inaám land the Zillah Court awarded the whole claim to the respondent, and the Provincial Court added a fine of Rs. 112 to be levied from the appellant: the Sudder Court confirmed these decrees, and awarded interest on the amount payable under the decree of the Zillah Court, but reversing a portion of the Provincial Court's decree, which awarded to the respondent the produce occurring in the interval between the institution of the suit and the decision upon it, because it was granting what was not due, and therefore could not be claimed at the time when the suit was filed. Anon. Case 10 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 57.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

40. A claim for arrears of maintenance being adjudged in the Provincial Court in favour of a widow, the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, confirming the decree of the Lower Court, awarded interest at the rate of one per cent. per mensem on the aggregate sum adjudged by the Provincial Court, from the date of their decree to that of the decree of the Sudder Court. Zamindár of Calastrý v. Damarla Bungaroo Ammal. Case 13 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 170.—Scott, Greenway, & Thackeray.

41. A having sued B for debt in a Court of Appeal, obtained judgment, with an award of interest, from the date of the decision. On appeal by B this judgment was affirmed on the merits of the case. A afterwards sued B in the City Court for interest from the institution of the original suit, and it was held that the claim was cognizable to supply the defect in the former decree. Baboo Ramechund v. Govind Das. 19th Nov. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 127.—Goad & Dorin.

42. A decree affirmed in appeal by a Zillah Judge entitles the respondent (if plaintiff in the Lower Court) to interest between the dates of the two decrees. Dadu Bhace Ruttonjee v. Nimmo. 25th July 1822. 2 Borr. 339.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

42*a*. Where a party became security for a debtor to his creditor, and the creditor executed a decree by imprisoning the debtor only, it was held that the creditor was entitled, under Sec. 26. of Reg. V. of 1820<sup>1</sup>, to full interest on all sums recoverable under the decree, affirmed, as this was, upon appeal, until satisfaction of his decree. Dhoolabh Mooljee v. Rughoonath Kulyan. 23d Jan. 1823. 2 Borr. 399.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

43. Where, in a suit to recover a debt, the Provincial Court had awarded the principal with interest to the day of payment, provided such interest did not exceed the principal, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on appeal, allowed the principal and an equal sum for interest, together with interest at 12 per cent. on that aggregate sum from the date of their decree to the day of payment. Buneyad Sing v. Ghulam Ali. 3d Dec. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 95.—C. Smith.

44. In a claim for Wásilát, the Provincial Court having awarded interest for the whole period (thirteen years) during which a separate suit for the lands was pending, and interest on that amount from the date of their own judgment, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed so much of the decree as regarded that interest, and awarded the principal sum of Wásilát, with interest from the date of the institution of the suit for Wásilát in the Provincial Court, up to the date of the decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and interest on the aggregate sum from that date till payment should be made. Asman Singh and others v. Parmesree Sahae. 29th Aug. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—Leycester & Dorin.

45. Where an appellant, holding a decree of Her Majesty in Council, moved the Court in execution of the same, it was ruled, under the opinion of the Advocate General, that, in respect to interest on any sums paid over to the respondent, in execution of the decree of the Courts in India, simple interest on such sums should be recovered from the respondent at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. Burjorjee Ruttonjee Entee v. Eduljee Cowasjee. 2d Feb. 1829. Sel. Rep. 235.—Anderson & Henderson. Same v. Cursetjee Cowasjee. 30th Dec. 1830. Sel. Rep. 235.

46. It was ruled that simple interest at 6 per cent. per annum is leviable on a sum awarded by Her Majesty in Council, from the date of the deposit in execution of the decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to the date of the execution of the final decree. Sorabjee Wachu Gandy v. Komwarjee Manceckjee. 19th Mar. 1838. Sel. Rep. 235.—Simson & Pyne (Greenhill, dissent.).

47. Simple interest at 6 per cent. was held to be leviable, from the date of the first decree in the Zillah Court up to the date of execution, on the sum awarded by the final decree of Her Majesty in Council.<sup>2</sup> Mills v. Modée Peshtonjee Khershedjee. 3d

Mar. 1840. Sel. Rep. 114.—Marriott, Bell, Giberne, & Greenhill.

48. In an action for debt, simple interest only is to be allowed to the date of the decree of the Court of original jurisdiction, as prescribed by the Circular Order of the 4th March 1836, and not to the date of the petition of plaint; and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut modified the decree of a lower Court, which consolidated the principal and interest to the date of the petition of plaint, and awarded interest on the aggregate sum from the date of the decree of the lower Court to the date of payment. Byram Singh v. Sheo Sahye Singh and others. 28th Dec. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 66.—Lee Warner & Reid.

48 a. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in appeal, affirmed the orders of a Zillah Judge, allowing interest on a sum of money realized and deposited in the treasury of the Court, but of which payment had been indefinitely postponed to the decree holder on the application of an intervening judgment creditor to share in the proceeds, from the date of the attachment caused by such intervening creditor to that of the rejection of his application, with costs. Maharaja Rudder Singh, Petitioner. 4th Feb. 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 167.—Reid.

48 b. In a case where a plaintiff had issued out process against the defendant to prohibit his alienating property in another jurisdiction, and the said defendant, who was plaintiff in a cause in that other jurisdiction, notwithstanding sold his decree which he obtained against his debtor to a third party, who subsequently applied for its execution, but was stopped by the plaintiff, who questioned the legality of the sale, and insisted that the property should be sold, in the execution of the decree, for the benefit of his judgment creditor alone, and not for the purchaser of the decree, which again was followed up by other intervening claimants, who caused further delay in the enforcement of the decree purchased by the third party; it was held that the plaintiff was not liable to pay the accruing judicial interest on the decree during the period of its suspension, as his objections were not found to be collusive and litigious, or vexatious and unfounded under construction.<sup>1</sup> Ray Srikrishna, Petitioner. 3d Mar. 1846. 2 Sev. Cases, 313.—Reid.

48 c. The accruing judicial interest, the payment of which is imposed, under Construction No. 1010, on a claimant whose objections are found to be litigious and unfounded, must be computed upon the amount thereby affected, and not upon the whole amount of the decree. Ib.

8. Awards.

49. In the case of an appeal made to the Provincial Court from the decree of a Zillah Court, founded on the award of arbitrators alleged to have been guilty of partiality and corruption, should the charge not be proved, and the appeal be dismissed, interest must, according to the provisions of Sec. 3. of Reg. XIII. of 1806<sup>2</sup>, be awarded from the date of the Zillah decree, even though the Provincial Court do not go into the merits of the case. Buckley v. Ramsoonder Ghose. 17th Nov. 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 312.—Harrington & Fombelle.

50. Where a sum of money having been awarded to be paid to the appellant by the respondent's father was not paid up, either by the respondent or his father, for a period of seven years from the time of the award, it was held that the respondent was liable to make good to the appellant the loss of interest caused by his father's and his own neglect, at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum. *Nagar Trikun v. JURISDICTION.<sup>1</sup>

I. OF THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, I.

<sup>1</sup> The questions arising on the subject of the jurisdiction of the Courts are so numerous and important, and the subject itself is of so intricate a nature, that I have deemed it advisable to collect every decision that in any way bears upon it, taking the word "jurisdiction" in its most extended sense; and I have classified the cases as far as practicable under this general title, so as to elucidate the powers and authorities of the various Courts at one view. Many decisions, as it will occur to the reader, might appropriately be ranged under other heads,

1. OF THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

1. Memorials to the King in Council, complaining of, and appealing against, a scheme for the distribution of part of the booty taken in the war in the Dakhin, which had been approved of by the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, having been referred to a Committee of the Privy Council, they, without hearing the memorialists upon the merits of their cases, advised His Majesty to refer the consideration of them to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. Case of the Army of the Deccan. 10th July 1833. 2 Kuapp, 103.

2. Semble, That the Privy Council will not exercise jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal from the decisions of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, as to grants by the Crown of property accruing to it by virtue of its prerogative. Ib.

3. By the Common Law, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council possesses the same power as the Courts of Record and Statute have, of rectifying mistakes which have crept in by misprision or otherwise, in embodying its judgments. Where, therefore, an order had been made ex parte, upon the appearance of the respondents alone, for the dismissal of an appeal and affirmance of the judgment of the Court below, which purported to be upon the hearing of the cause, the Judicial Committee held that such order must be considered simply as a dismissal; and it appearing that the appellants were infants under the protection of the Court of Wards in India, and that the agent appointed by the Court to act as their guardian ad litem in the matter of the appeal had absconded, and abandoned the cause, their Lordships rescinded the order of dismissal, and restored the appeal upon the terms of the appellants paying the costs and giving access to the transcript of the proceedings in the Court below, in their hands, and undertaking to lodge printed cases within five months. Rajundernarain Rae and another v. Bijai Gorind Sing. 29th Nov. 1836. 1 Moore, 117. 2 Moore Ind. App. 207.

4. On a question whether a sub-partnership had been entered into, the validity of which depended on an instrument produced in evidence in the Court below, and upon inspection, as well as the evidence in support of it, pronounced to be invalid; the Judicial Committee, in confirming the judgment of both the Lower Courts, were of opinion that they were precluded, under the circumstances of the case, from entering upon the examination of the instrument itself, though they fully concurred in the opinion expressed by the Zillah Judge that the instrument was forged, and dismissed the appeal, with costs. Petamber Manik-jee v. Motee-chund Manik-jee. 15th May 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 420.

4a. Under an order of reference, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, upon an appeal coming before them, remitted the case, by reason of the rejection of certain evidence, to the Court below, with directions to take the evidence rejected. The Court in India, upon the remit, examined such of the witnesses before tendered as were produced, but made no adjudication in the cause, and transmitted the further evidence to England. No fresh order of reference was made to the Judicial Committee. Upon the appeal, with the further evidence coming before them, their Lordships, under the circumstances, were of opinion that they had no jurisdiction to entertain the case, the original order of reference having been exhausted by the remit. But upon a special petition for such purpose, all parties consenting, the Order in Council directing the remit to India was varied and amended, by being made a mere reference to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to take evidence, without throwing any duty upon that Court to reconsider or adjudicate upon the cause, but to remit the same for the consideration of the Lords of the Committee. Jesmunt Singjee Ubbay Singjee and another v. Jet Singjee Deep Sinjee. 5th Feb. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 245.

4*b*. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will not act as a Court of original jurisdiction: therefore, where the Judge of the Court below improperly suppressed documents which were not discovered until after the transmission of the appeal to Her Majesty in Council, their Lordships refused to give an opinion on the merits, and remitted the cause to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut for reconsideration. Juceer Bhace and others v. Vurnj Bhace and others. 29th Aug. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 324.

II. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.<sup>1</sup>

1. Generally.

5. If the cause of action arise in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, the defendant is subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, though he may have left the said towns at the time when the said action was commenced. Killican v. Juggernanth Dutt. Hyde's Notes. 27th Jan. 1777. Mor. 119.

6. Dictum of Impey, C. J. — A summons may be served on parties personally subject to the jurisdiction while residing in a foreign settlement.<sup>2</sup>

7. And although a subpoena was granted to appear and answer to a bill, in the nature of a supplemental bill, to be served on defendants resident at Chandernagore, this was only in order that the service of the subpoena might be by substitution upon the attorney in the cause. Ramdoss v. Smith. Oct. 1840. Mor. 121, note.

8. It was held that the Supreme Court has no power to summon a jury in civil causes; pleadings which conclude to the country in England conclude to the Supreme Court in India.<sup>3</sup> Hurrikisson Mistree v. Creasy. Hyde's Notes. 19th March 1779. Mor. 235.

9. In an action ex contractu and joint, when one or more of the co-contractors are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, it seems that execution will issue against those defendants only who are within the jurisdiction. Benud Beharry Seet v. Bharotcharn Mitter and another. Hyde's Notes. Nov. 1782. Sm. R. 98. Mor. 126.

recent case the Supreme Court refused to issue a subpoena to be served on witnesses in Serampore. — Mor.

<sup>3</sup> So early as 1779 a petition in favour of trial by jury in civil causes was presented to the Court. Mr. Justice Hyde, in his Notes, (16th March 1779) observes, "A petition was presented to the Court, signed by about three hundred of the English, Scotch, and Irish inhabitants of this Presidency, praying that civil causes might be tried by jury whenever the parties demanded that mode of trial, and offering to serve voluntarily on juries, if the Court had not authority by the Charter to compel the attendance of a jury." Sir William Jones, in his charge to the grand jury, on one occasion thus expressed himself upon the subject: "In the administration of penal justice, a severe burden is removed from our minds by the assistance of juries: and it is my ardent wish to have the same relief in civil, especially commercial, causes, for the decision of which there cannot be a nobler tribunal than a jury of experienced men assisted by the learning of a Judge." (Hyde's Notes, 4th Dec. 1783). — Mor.

10. In a joint action ex contractu, pleas in abatement for non-joinder must shew that the party omitted is alive and subject to the jurisdiction, and must be verified by an affidavit to the same effect. Atkinson v. Keble and another. Chamb. Notes. 23d Jan. 1786. Sm. R. 101. Mor. 127, note.

11. A clause introduced in a money bond, declaring the obligor subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, need not follow the precise expression used in the Act 13th Geo. III. c. 63. s. 16., or the Charter. But such clause will be declared void if it appear that it was not clearly understood and assented to by the obligor. Christie v. Hadji Sirdar. Hyde's Notes. 20th Nov. 1783. Mor. 130.

12. One of the defendants in equity, who was subject at the time of filing the bill, was held not to be subject at the hearing, because the ground of jurisdiction had been taken away by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 10., passed intermediately. Rumbold v. Joynerain Gosaul. Hyde's Notes. 31st Jan. 1785. Sm. R. 100. Mor. 130, note.

13. In a civil cause, where an advocate appears for the defendant, it will be considered prima facie evidence of jurisdiction, which the defendant should be called upon to answer. Ledlie v. Forbes and another. Chamb. Notes. 21st Nov. 1787. Sm. R. 101. Mor. 132.

14. Though the plaint should state several grounds of jurisdiction, and lay them in the alternative, it is still a sufficiently positive averment.<sup>1</sup> Durgapersaul Shah v. Dacosta and another. Chamb. Notes. 1st Feb. 1788. Sm. R. 102. Mor. 133.

15. One of the obligors in a joint bond not being subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, it was considered as a ground of nonsuit. Ib.

16. But the plaintiff may sue such of the co-obligors as are within the jurisdiction of the Court, alone, provided that the plaint shews with sufficient certainty that the rest cannot be proceeded against. Same v. Dacosta. 1st July 1788. Mor. 133.

17. If the plaintiff be misled by the defendant himself, he will be allowed to shew a different cause of jurisdiction than that laid in the plaint. Rintoul v. Colebrooke. Chamb. Notes. 3d July 1789. Sm. R. 105. Mor. 137.

18. In an action upon a scire facias against defendants as bail, the plaintiff was nonsuited for want of averment of jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> Ramlochand Ghose v. Nittanund Sein. 17th July 1795. Sm. R. 174. Mor. 141.

19. A plaintiff, not personally subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, is subject in respect of the costs of his own action. Mahender Deb Roy v. Ramconny Corr. 1st Term 1796. Mor. 141.

20. The defendants did not contest the suit, but admitted assets to a certain amount, and pleaded no assets ultra; the plaintiffs did not contest the plea, but prayed judgment for the assets admitted, and for the remainder of the assets quando: et nota bene, although the defendants did not contest the plaintiff's action (which was upon bond, and condition upon over set forth), but said nothing, yet the plaintiffs did not enter up judgment after admitting the plea, &c. But the cause was set down regularly in the paper, and, upon proof of jurisdiction, judgment was given for the plaintiffs by the Court.<sup>3</sup> Fairlie and others

<sup>1</sup> Though, according to the strict rules of pleading, averments in the alternative are bad, it has become customary in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, where several grounds of jurisdiction are laid, to state that "for one or more" of such reasons the defendant is subject.

<sup>2</sup> Quære, Whether the bail, as such, would not be held subject to the jurisdiction, whether the recognizance contained a clause of subjection or not?

<sup>3</sup> N. B. Quære as to the necessity of setting down the cause, under these circumstances, in the paper of causes, for the purpose of proving the jurisdiction?—Dickens' etc

v. Mongach and another. 15th March 1800. Sm. R. 108.

21. In questions of the corrupt receipt of presents, the King's Courts only have jurisdiction to any purpose, except that of dismission from office and suspension from the service, to which Government is competent on inquiry. Vencata Runga Pillay v. East-India Company. 26th Sept. 1803. 1 Str. 174.

22. An action on a bond which expressly specified that the matter should be submitted to the Recorder's Court in the event of a refusal on the part of the passer of the bond to abide by his agreement, was dismissed by the Court for want of jurisdiction, the obligor being an inhabitant of Zillah Chingleput, and therefore not subject to the jurisdiction. Venbiah v. Vencataranze. Case 12 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 24. — Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

23. In an action on a joint promissory note, one of the makers being out of the jurisdiction, it was brought only against the one within the jurisdiction, stating the other to be out of it. Anon. 12th Aug. 1810. Sm. R. 114.

24. An action of damages will not lie in the Supreme Court against a native prince residing at Madras, with the concurrence of Government, as his own ambassador. Zeib un Nissa Begum v. The Nabob Assem ud Dowlah. 18th Sept. 1810. 2 Str. 130.

25. A plea to the jurisdiction by a Hindú living in the Mofassil, who had brought an ejectment for property situated in Calcutta, was overruled for defect of form. And Semble, he is at all events liable to answer as to such discovery and relief as affects the ejectment. Tarramoney Dassie v. Kistnagocind Sein. 28th Jan. 1816. East's Notes. Case 44.

26. Per Woodhouse, A. G. In all cases where the Court of the Recorder has acquired jurisdiction of the party, and a suit is thus legally instituted, every species of process against the person or property of such party is legally serviceable in any of the territories subject to, or dependent upon, the British Government where the person or property may be discovered. The execution, therefore, of such process, in such a suit, cannot, I imagine, be opposed by any of the Provincial Courts. If a suit in any Provincial Court had been instituted between the same parties, and for the same matter, previously to a suit in the Recorder's Court, or if any decree had been previously had in any Provincial Court, such pending suit, or such decree pronounced, might be pleaded in the Court of the Recorder; and that Court would be bound to give due effect to the matter so pleaded, and to allow the party pleading such matters the full advantage of them, by getting rid of the suit in that Court. Gooshtusp Shah Suhoorabjee v. Suhoorabjee Nowshirwanjee. 15th Nov. 1820. 1 Borr. 326.

27. Per Macklin, A. G. When any person is fairly brought within the jurisdiction, either by appearing in person, by attorney, or by operation of law, the process of the Court runs through all the provinces subject to the Presidency of Bombay, where the defendant may be resident or have property. Gooshtusp Suhoorabjee Shah and another v. Kadoosjee Kamajee Hormuzjee Kala Bhace and another. 18th Dec. 1816. 1 Borr. 317.

28. A person arrested for debt out of the jurisdiction of the Court was discharged on motion. Muddoosoden Ghose v. Gibson. 29th June 1820. East's Notes. Case 21.

29. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Madras extends to the attachment and sale of property belonging to persons subject to its jurisdiction wherever situate. Anon. 1821. Mor. 390.

30. An officer of the Company's army in the political department, appointed by the Commissioner of the conquered territory in the Dakhin, was held amenable to the Supreme Court at Bombay. Amerchund v.

The East-India Company. 28th Nov. 1826. Perry's Notes. Case 2.

31. The local extent of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is the same on all sides, civil, criminal, and ecclesiastical. Rex v. Goculnauth Mullick. 22d April 1824. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 36. Mor. 220.

32. The bill in equity stating several grounds of jurisdiction, and the decretal order being drawn up directing issue to try the question of jurisdiction, confining the issue to the ground of inhabitancy, the order may be amended on motion. Buller, J., however, considered the amendment unnecessary, as the bill stating that the defendant is an inhabitant of Calcutta, and carries on trade and business there, and so forth, the grounds are not various, but constitute only one cause of jurisdiction. Nurroo-chunder Sircar v. Gunganarain Nundy. 19th Nov. 1824. Sm. R. 116. Cl. R. 1829. 206. Mor. 161.

33. An affidavit denying that the defendant is subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is a good affidavit of merits, in applying to set aside on terms an ex-parte judgment, or a judgment by default. Morton v. Mehdy Ally Khan. 4th Term 1827. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 44. Sm. R. 12. Mor. 124, note.—Grey, C. J., and Franks, J. (Ryan, J., dubitante.)

34. Held, that an action of ejectment will lie for the recovery of lands out of Calcutta, being the property of a native inhabitant of that place, if defence be taken for them. Doe dem. Bampton v. Petumber Mullick. 29th Oct. 1830. Sm. R. 84. Bignell, 24. Mor. 400.

35. Per Franks, J. A defendant having appeared, and omitted to establish that he is not subject to the jurisdiction after every opportunity has been given him, and if judgment have gone against him, it will be too late then to urge that he was not subject to the jurisdiction. Ib.

36. The averment of "inhabitancy" in a bill will lie in evidence of constructive as well as of actual inhabitancy. Khamah Dossee v. Silpersaud Bhowe and others. 22d July 1836. Mor. 181.

37. Quere, Whether the Sheriff of Madras can, under a fiery facias issued out of the Supreme Court, directing him to seize and put up for sale "goods and chattels within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court," seize and sell lands and chattels in the Mofussil? Lazar v. Colla Ragava Chitty. 3d Dec. 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 83.

38. The Supreme Court at Calcutta has not power to issue commissions except in matters depending before the Court. Anon. 28th March 1839. Barwell's Notes, 16.

39. All persons comorant within the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, or the districts annexed to the Presidency of Fort William, are within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court as witnesses, and subject to a sub-pœna ad testificandum. Doe dem. Buddinanth Ghosaul v. Deverall. 29th March 1839. Mor. 184.

40. Per Grant, J. The Supreme Court is not a separate Court in its different jurisdictions. Bissessur Bonnerjee v. Ramrutton Roy. 18th Nov. 1839. Mor. 185.

41. Per Seton, J. A failure of justice is not a sufficient ground upon which alone jurisdiction can be supported. Ib.

42. Evidence of trading in Calcutta, or other ground of constructive inhabitancy, is receivable under the general allegation of "inhabitancy," laid in the plaint as the ground of jurisdiction. Ramcullian Mundell v. Ramchander Seal and another. 12th Feb. 1840. Mor. 203.

43. The allegation in a bill that the defendant has fraudulently forged a bond and warrant (the subject-matter of the bill) in the names of other par-

44. The Supreme Court at Bombay has no power to admit persons as attorneys and solicitors to practice in the Courts there, except such as are qualified in the manner pointed out by the Charter and Letters Patent of 1823 establishing the Court; viz. those who have been admitted attorneys or solicitors in one of the Courts at Westminster, or were practising in the Recorder's Court at Bombay at the time of the publication of that Charter.<sup>1</sup> Morgan v. Leech. 12th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 428.

45. The decrees of the Mofussil Courts will be regarded as the decrees of the superior tribunals of the country, and as of equal authority with those of the Supreme Court (Grant, J., dissent.); and the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to interfere where it is shewn that the Mofussil Court had a right to adjudicate on the merits. Kerry v. Duff. 2d Dec. 1841. 1 Fulton, 111.

46. If a case comes on ex parte, the jurisdiction clause must be proved. Nubborcomar Dutt v. Sadhoochurn Dutt. 3d Term 1842. 1 Fulton, 20.

47. If the defendant have entered an appearance, and judgment be signed by default, the jurisdiction is admitted. Kristo Cawuth Saha and others v. Onapoonah Dossee. 3d Term 1842. 1 Fulton, 20.

48. Co-defendants, though not personally subject to the jurisdiction, may come in and defend. Morgan v. Kerr and others. 20th March 1843. 1 Fulton, 207.

49. The Court has jurisdiction to examine a judgment obtained in a foreign Court, fraud being alleged by the plaintiff against the defendant, who was the plaintiff in the former suit, and who had come within the jurisdiction; the Court therefore granted a writ of ne exeat regno. McIntyre v. Heerjeebhoy Rustomjee. 12th Sept. 1842. Perry's Notes. Case 5.

51. The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the sentences of Military Courts-Martial legally instituted, and awarding punishments for military offences. In the matter of Mark Porrett. 13th March 1844. Perry's Notes. Case 13.

52. Nor can any informality in the proceedings of Courts-Martial be objected to or listened to in the Supreme Court. Id.

2. On the Ground of Inhabitancy. (a) Generally.

54. A bond executed in Calcutta, and reciting the obligor to be "of Calcutta," was held to make him subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court as to the bond.<sup>2</sup> Ramram Dutt v. Ramnarain. Hyde's Notes. 30th June 1778. Sm. R. 98. Mor. 121.

55. A defendant arrested, not being otherwise an inhabitant of Calcutta than lodging there when subpœnaed, was discharged on finding common bail.<sup>3</sup> Ranny Lachy Sursutty v.

<sup>2</sup> This seems to have been decided on the ground that it was prima facie evidence of inhabitancy.

<sup>3</sup> By subsequent decisions it would seem that he was subject to the jurisdiction if the plaint were filed while he was in Calcutta,

Nilmoney Mittra. Chamb. Notes. 8th March 1791. Sm. R. 106. Mor. 138.

56. In an action on a bond containing a clause of subjection to the jurisdiction, it must be averred in the plaint that the defendant was an inhabitant of India, residing in the provinces of Bengal, Behar, or Orissa, at the time of executing the bond; and the mere averment that he is a British subject will not be sufficient.<sup>1</sup> Bonbear v. Hornwell. Chamb. Notes. 14th July 1797. Sm. R. 108. Mor. 145.

57. A native, not otherwise an inhabitant of Madras than as having come to it to seek justice, in consequence of the injurious act of another, and remaining there for no other purpose, cannot, while he so remains, be sued by that other as an inhabitant of Madras. Nagapah Chitty v. Rachumamah and another. 9th March 1802. 1 Str. 152.

58. A native coming to the Presidency of Madras for the recovery of his health, and residing for that purpose between it and different places in the Jagir, becomes sufficiently an inhabitant of Madras to be subject to the jurisdiction. Venkatasa Moodeliar v. Sashachella Moodeliar. 7th Jan. 1803. 1 Str. 167.

59. A defendant, who had gone to Madras, and remained there for weeks, solely on public business, not being otherwise an inhabitant of Madras, was held not to be subject to the jurisdiction as an inhabitant. Boojung Row v. Chittoo Row. 8th Jan. 1806. 1 Str. 210.

60. If a defendant be justly confined in an action of tort, he will, on the ground of residency, be considered within the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court as an inhabitant of Calcutta. But otherwise, if the confinement be unjust, as constrained residence in Calcutta will never subject a person to the jurisdiction of the Court. Duhan v. Mendes. Sittings after 3d Term 1809. Sm. R. 114. Mor. 147.

61. It is essential to jurisdiction, merely territorial, that the party shall have come within it voluntarily, and in time of peace, as a person detained by illegal force, and then arrested by legal process, would be liberated: so if a man were by force (that is, unjust force) carried within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any country, he ought not to be thereby rendered amenable to it. Madoo Wissenauth v. Balloo Gummaset. 30th Jan. 1818. Mor. 149.—(Rec. C. Bomb.)

62. The duration of residence, if it be voluntary, is immaterial in determining the question of jurisdiction. Ib.

63. A defendant in gaol, after conviction for a misdemeanour, will be held subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in a civil action. Colpersad Dutt v. Prankissen Holdar. 26th Jan. 1830. Cl. R. 1834. 27. Mor. 165.

64. The fact of residence generally at the Presidency being shewn to the satisfaction of the Court, will subject a party to the jurisdiction. Ramalingum v. Sashiah. 20th Oct. 1813. 2 Str. 241.

65. The question of inhabitancy, subjecting a native to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, is not a matter to be sworn to in the lump, but a conclusion of law; and the affidavit for the purpose should state and negative with precision every fact upon which the question may turn. Ib.

66. It was held that the word "inhabitant," for the purpose of jurisdiction, meant "resident;" and that a constructive inhabitancy would not do, as it could not have been the inten-and he had been there twenty-four hours. But it may be doubtful whether the residence of a person subpoenaed to attend as a witness in a cause will make him subject to the jurisdiction, as such residence would be perhaps considered as constrained.—Mor.

These decisions are, however, directly opposed to a dictum of Macnaghten, J.: "I have held it twenty times, and I always will, that if a man attends a public office daily in Calcutta, and gains his livelihood by it, even if he sleeps out of the boundaries of Calcutta, he is subject to the jurisdiction." Heatley v. Macarthur. 27th Nov. 1823. Sm. R. 115. Cl. R. 1829. 206. Mor. 159.

69. A party residing out of Calcutta, and employed there during the day at a public office, and occasionally sleeping there, was held to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Habberley v. Bason. 2d Term 1824. Sm. R. 115. Cl. R. 1829. 207. Mor. 160.

70. A person, not being a British subject, who transacts business in the day-time in Calcutta, but sleeps out of the jurisdiction for the express purpose of avoiding the jurisdiction, is nevertheless subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Martindell v. Toman. 17th July 1824. Sm. R. 116. Cl. R. 1829. 206. Mor. 161.

75. A debt having accrued in Bombay, and while the defendant in the action was an inhabitant of Bombay, he was held specially subject in the action to the jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court, though at the time the action commenced he might not have been in Bombay. Ib.

76. So if he were voluntarily commorant at Bombay, for no matter how short a period, at the time the suit commenced. Ib.

Where an Armenian resided at Dana, and his wife left him against his will, and went with some of their children to live in a house in Calcutta, she receiving the rent of another house, belonging to the children, by the husband's consent; it was held that he was not subject to the jurisdiction, on the ground of inhabitancy, as (they having agreed to live apart) the wife could no longer be considered as part of his family, nor her residence be deemed his. Zibah Muchertick v. Minas Aratoon. 27th July 1819. East's Notes. Case 104.

82. A party who has a family-house in Calcutta, or is entitled to a share of a family-house in which his ancestors had resided, to the expenses of which he contributes, and to which he may come when he pleases, though, in fact, he may never have been there, is nevertheless subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Sama-

Syud Mobaruck Ally Khan Bahaudur*, infra, Pl. 97.), made the following remarks on this case:—"It is to be observed that this case was decided without argument, and I am informed that great doubt was entertained at the Bar as to the decision at the time; and I know that Mr. Spaukie, the then Advocate General, advised an appeal. I have frequently heard this case cited with doubt since I have had a seat here, and am not prepared to say that, upon like facts, I should feel myself bound to come to the same decision." 87. A person carrying on trade in Calcutta, and having a house of trade there, was held to be a constructive inhabitant, and subject to the jurisdiction, though not personally resident within the jurisdiction, but conducting his business by means of partners, agents, or servants. Woomischunder Paul Chowdry v. Isserchunder Paul Chowdry. Sittings after First Term 1816. 2 East's Notes, 44.

88. And a defendant by assenting to his interest in trade, carried on after his father's death, was held to have made his election to be deemed an inhabitant, and to be subject to the jurisdiction, though he did not reside in Calcutta, and there was no evidence to shew that he ever even slept within the city. Ib.

89. Where a party, an infant, pleaded to the jurisdiction on the ground that he was not an inhabitant of Calcutta, and proved that he never was in Calcutta, being only an infant of eight years old, the Court still held the party liable to the jurisdiction, his elder brother consenting; and he was made a party with his elder brother on a supplemental bill to stop the trade carried on by the elder brother in Calcutta, and take the account. Ib.

90. Guddadhur Ouchurjee*. 28th Nov. 1818. East's Notes. Case 90.

91. Natives who have traded in Calcutta are subject to the jurisdiction in regard to transactions arising in the course of that trade, though the parties may have absconded or gone away from Calcutta before the suit commenced, and though the place of business be shut up. Nilmomy Sein v. Rajhissore Sein. Circa 1822. Mor. 388.

92. Persons residing out of the jurisdiction, but carrying on trade in Calcutta, are subject to the jurisdiction in suits brought against them by those persons with whom they have been concerned, or to whom they may have incurred debts in Calcutta trade. They are not, however, subject to the jurisdiction in suits brought against them by persons who have no dealing with them in the trade which they carried on in Calcutta. (Buller, J., dissent., who observed: "I do not think that such distinction can be taken: the only question, it appears to me, in those cases, must be whether the defendant is or is not an inhabitant of Calcutta: if an inhabitant, he is then subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in all cases.") *Dabeypersaud v. 96. Where a British subject, a partner in a firm carrying on business in Calcutta, had been resident more than two years in England before the cause of action accrued, Ryan, J., thought that the words of the Charter could not, in strictness, be applied so as to render him subject to the jurisdiction; but he considered that he might be held so subject as one resident out of the jurisdiction of the Court, but carrying on business in Calcutta by means of agents, and thus rendering him subject as a constructive inhabitant. Gopaul Duloll v. Bagshar. 18th March 1833. Sm. R. 118. Mor. 169.

97. If a defendant be possessed of hereditary landed property and a house in Calcutta, which shall never have been used by himself or his ancestors as a dwelling-house, but only as a residence for a Fakil to transact business relating to the defendant's lands, and the said defendant shall not carry on any trade either himself or by his servants, the said defendant himself dwelling out of the jurisdiction, he will not be held subject to such jurisdiction. *Tomsook Roy v. ### 3. On the Ground of being a British Subject.

100. The defendant, in an action for debt contracted in the town of Calcutta, if born in Calcutta, was held to be a British subject, and, as such, subject to the jurisdiction of the Court in whatever part of the provinces he might be. Killican v. Blackwell. 15th Jan. 1785. Sm. R. 110.

109. Where the jurisdiction clause stated that the defendant was a British subject, who had resided in Bengal, and had debts and effects &c. within the said province, and also that he was a British subject, and lately resided in Great Britain or Ireland two years since the cause of action arose, and the defendant did not appear, the Court assumed the jurisdiction, and gave judgment ex parte. *Becher v. Such a case could not now arise, since Act XI. of 1836, which enacts that no person whatever shall, by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, be, in any civil proceeding whatever, excepted from the jurisdiction of any of the Company's Courts in the said Act particularized.—Mor. 140, note.

Partners in mercantile houses, though resident in England, were held subject to the jurisdiction as British subjects, they having theretofore resided in Calcutta, and having debts and effects therein. Ramtochan Mullick v. Cocherell. 13th July 1802. Sm. R. 112. Mor. 146. Lackersteen and another v. Mercer and others. 1st Term 1819. Sm. R. 114.

126. A British subject resident in England more than two years before the cause of action accrued, but still continuing a partner in a firm carrying on business in Calcutta, was held to be subject to the jurisdiction in an action against the firm brought in the Supreme Court. Gopaul Duloll v. Bagshaw. 18th March 1833. Sm. R. 118. Mor. 169. (Ryan, J., dubitante.)

5. Submission to the Jurisdiction.

The Court cannot try the cause, under the words of the Charter, where the defendant has been in England two years, even if he submit to the jurisdiction. Nemo Mullick v. Lashington. Hyde's Notes. 1st July 1776. Mor. 119. (Hyde, J., dubitante.)

128. The Court may refuse to admit a party to defend instead of the casual ejector, unless in his petition he submits to the jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ryan, J., considered the defendant, in this case, to be subject to the jurisdiction, not by the strict words of the Charter, which he thought were inapplicable, but as a constructive inhabitant, carrying on trade in Calcutta by means of agents, though he himself was resident out of the jurisdiction of the Court.

<sup>2</sup> According to the recent rules, the defendant, if he defend as landlord, must always submit himself in that action to the

129. In an action on a bond the clause of subjection to the jurisdiction need not follow the precise expressions used in the Act 13th Geo. III. c. 63. s. 16. or the Charter; but the subjection clause must be clearly understood and assented to by the obligor. Christie v. Hadji Sirdar. Hyde's Notes. 20th Nov. 1783. Mor. 130.

130. A plaintiff, out of the jurisdiction of the Court, will be compelled to give the usual security for costs, although he should offer to submit to the jurisdiction, and to enter into a security, in the nature of a recognizance, to the Registrar, binding himself to pay the costs. Lachynarain Ghosaul v. Rajah Nobhissen. 22d Oct. 1796. Mor. 142.

131. Per Ryan, J. The defendant having admitted himself to be in possession of lands in the Mofussil, and subjected himself to the jurisdiction for the purpose of trying the right to such possession, and having agreed to try the right in the Supreme Court, the Court has jurisdiction to try the question, and to give judgment, without the contravention of any existing rules on the subject. Doe dem. Bampton v. Petumber Mullick. 29th Oct. 1830. Bignell, 24.

132. The covenant to submit to the jurisdiction must be a covenant to which the plaintiff is a party. Bissessar Bonnerjee v. Ramratton Roy. 18th Nov. 1839. Mor. 185.

133. An agreement to submit to the jurisdiction can only operate between the parties; and the plaintiff not being a party to it cannot take advantage of it, either at law or in equity. Ib.

the Sheriff's sale in his own name, and entering into an agreement with the Sheriff (not a party to the suit) to subject himself to the jurisdiction, does not thereby become so subject. Aheenah Bannoo v. Moonshee Boodally and others. 9th April 1840. Mor. 204.

135. Where an obligor in an action on a bond bound himself and heirs to pay, but in the clause of submission to the jurisdiction no mention was made of his heirs, it was held that the heirs were not bound unless so mentioned. Collychurn Bose v. Goluck Inderneerin Roy. May 1841. 1 Fulton, 35.

136. But the heirs are bound to submit to the jurisdiction if they be named in the covenant to submit. Same v. Same. 8th Nov. 1841. 1 Fulton, 35.

6. On the Ground of having been a Party to prior Proceedings.

137. In an action on a scire facias to revive judgment, the defendant cannot plead that he was not subject to the jurisdiction in the former action. Aga Maul Serfrauz v. Lucken Roy. Chamb. Notes. 6th March 1786. Sm. R. 101. Mor. 131.

138. A defendant in a revived suit must be averred and proved subject to the jurisdiction at the time of filing the bill of revivor upon the abatement of the suit by the death of the complainant. Calipersad Paul v. Hamilton. Chamb. Notes. 11th Feb. 1797. Sm. R. 106. Mor. 144.

139. No man is subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, on account of his having before sued in the Court, unless such former suit or action was between the same parties well as respecting the same matter. Goculchand v. Obeygram and others. Chamb. Notes. 10th Aug. 1797. Mor. 143. Cal Churn Chatterjee v. Dunkin. Chamb. Notes. 10th Aug. 1797. Mor. 144, note.

140. Per Chambers, J. But there may be cases in which a suit by a trustee would be considered as a suit by the party. Cal Churn Chatterjee v. Dunkin. Chamb. Notes. 10th Aug. 1797. Mor. 144, note.

141. A defendant in an action on the plea side being subject to the jurisdiction when the plaint was filed, was held subject, on that ground, to the jurisdiction in equity in respect of a bill of discovery in aid of such action at law. Mohu Rannee Pecarree Comarree v. Praveechunder Baboo. 20th June 1822. Sm. R. 115. Cl. R. 1829. 207. Mor. 158.

142. Quere, Whether a bill in equity shews a sufficient ground of jurisdiction in stating that in a former bill against other parties touching the same estate by the present complainant and defendant jointly, the present defendant submitted to account in respect of the same estate? Brijonauth Sandiel v. Debnauth Sandiel. 22d Dec. 1824. Sm. R. 116. Cl. R. 1829. 207. Mor. 162.

143. Quere, Whether a defendant in a cross-suit be subject by reason of being complainant in an original suit? Ib.

144. A party suing on any side of the Supreme Court subjects himself thereby to all processes issuing out of the Court relating to the matters in suit. Millett v. Russick Chunder Seal. 26th June 1835. Mor. 178.

145. Where the defendant is charged to be specially subject to the jurisdiction in respect of a certain judgment of the Court, by reason of having abused the process of the Court, and fraudulently caused the judgment to be sued out, but was not a party on the record, no sufficient ground of jurisdiction is disclosed.

<sup>1</sup> The being complainant in an original suit, laid as a ground of jurisdiction in a cross-suit relating to the same matters, is generally assumed to be sufficient ground for jurisdiction of itself in the cross-suit, provided the last be between the same parties, and touching the same matters. Whether the point has ever been expressly decided or not, it is certain that this is now often laid as the sole ground of jurisdiction, and its sufficiency acquiesced in.—Mor.

146. A party bringing an action upon a special contract is not thereby subject to the jurisdiction, in respect of a cross action not brought upon the contract, though relating to part of the goods contracted for, the two actions not relating to the same subject-matter. Rose v. Toman. 14th Jan. 1841. Mor. 395.

147. Per Ryan, C. J. It is now the constant practice to hold that the original complainant on the plea side is absolutely, and not merely sub modo, subject to the jurisdiction in respect to the same matter: and provided that the prior proceedings do relate to the same subject-matter, it is not necessary that they should be between the same parties. Sreemutty Govind Dossee v. Jadbuchunder Seal. March 1841. Mor. 380.

148. A complainant in an original bill is subject to the jurisdiction as a defendant, upon a supplemental bill, by reason of his having joined in filing the original bill. Robson v. Strettell and others. 30th Nov. 1843. 1 Fulton, 334.

7. As regards Executors and Administrators.

149. Scire facias. The defendants were held subject to the jurisdiction, by virtue of a written agreement of their intestates, in their lifetime, to submit the matters in difference, out of which the judgment arose, to the Supreme Court. Lloyd v. Hurropriah Daby and another. 22d Oct. 1799. Sm. R. 108.

150. Held, that an administrator could not deny the jurisdiction of the Court where he had obtained his authority for administration of the testator's effects out of the Supreme Court, notwithstanding the testator was not himself personally subject to the King's Court, nor that his lands were within the jurisdiction, so long as it appeared that the Court had been actually called on to interfere by the administrator himself, and that there appeared also to be some property within the town of Calcutta on which such authority might operate. But he was allowed to plead de novo. Anon. 13th Jan. 1814. East's Notes. Case 3.

151. A native, not an inhabitant of Madras, does not render himself liable to the jurisdiction of the Court by taking out probate to a will, even though the suit relates to the property of the testator; the effect of taking out probate being merely to enable him to bring actions, and by no means tantamount to personal residence. Arnachellum v. Venkoo and others. 25th Sept. 1815. Note by Newbolt, J., in 2 Str. 316.

152. An executor is subject to the jurisdiction of the Court in a suit relating to the property of the testator. Mt. Bhanoo Bibee v. Moonshee Hussain Ally. 29th Nov. 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 75. Mor. 166.

153. An executor entering into an agreement as such, is subject to the jurisdiction in a suit to carry the agreement into effect. Ib.

8. As regards Provincial Magistrates.

154. Held, that under the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 24. the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a civil action for false imprisonment against a provincial Magistrate acting in his judicial capacity, however irregular and illegal his act.<sup>1</sup> Culder v. Halhet. 30th Nov. 1825. Mor. 179. Grant, J., dissentiente.

155. This judgment was affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, when it was held that the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 24., protecting provincial Magistrates in India from actions for any wrong or injury done by them in the exercise of their judicial offices, does not confer unlimited protection, but places them on the same footing as those of English Courts of a similar jurisdiction, and only gives them an exemption from liability when acting bonâ fide in cases in which they have acted without jurisdiction. Same v. Same. 17th Dec. 1840. Mor. 396. 3 Moore, 28.

156. Trespass will not lie against a Judge for acting judicially, but without jurisdiction, unless he knew, or had the means of knowing, of the defect of jurisdiction; and it lies upon the plaintiff, in every such case, to prove that fact. Ib.

9. As regards Collectors of Revenue.

157. In an action against a Collector of the East-India Company the Court will issue process as of course, without inquiring whether the action be for any act done in the collection of the revenue, or under the regulations of the Governor-General and Council within the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 8. Ramcaunt Mundil v. Colebrooke. Chamb. Notes. 1st Nov. 1791. Mor. 140.

158. The Supreme Court sustained an action of trover against the Collector for refusing to deliver up goods for which the double duty was demanded, the plaintiffs having tendered the full amount of such double duty upon the fair value as proved; and the Court considered that the withholding the goods, notwithstanding such tender, upon an arbitrary demand of a higher sum, was an act of wrong, and that the plaintiffs had a right to seek redress in the Supreme Court if money were levied on them, or their goods detained without any authority from the Regulations, although, by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70., the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction in matters of revenue. Budden Soorge and another v. Sir G. D'Oyley. 5th Feb. 1819. East's Notes. Case 98.

159. It was held that a sale of lands within Calcutta by the Collector of Government, under a written authority from the Board of Revenue, and a conveyance to the purchaser by the Collector, constituted no defence against the legal title of the lessors of the plaintiff in ejectment; and that, under the circumstances of the case, the Court was not precluded from exercising jurisdiction by the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 8. Doe dem. Peearcemetery v. Bissonauth Bonnerjee. Oct. 1830. Bignell, 1. Mor. 379.

160. Semble, that in no case the Court will be precluded from exercising jurisdiction over land in Calcutta by the Revenue Regulations of Government not registered in the Supreme Court. Ib.

161. A bill of discovery will not lie in aid of proceedings in a Mofussil Court against a Collector of revenue, respecting a claim made by him in the execution of his office. Woodupnarain Booyeah v. Hervey. 10th Jan. 1831. Bignell, 77. Mor. 380.

162. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to order a feigned issue, under Reg. XXI. of 1827, to ascertain whether certain opium of the plaintiff, seized by the defendant as the Collector of Sea Customs, were duly seized or not. Ramchand Hursamull v. Glass. 14th June 1844. Notes. Case 14.

10. To issue Writs.

(a) Generally.

163. Per Chambers, J. The power of granting prerogative writs can only be given by express words. Rex v. Warren Hastings. Hyde's Notes. 18th Nov. 1775. Mor. 207.

164. The Supreme Court has no general power to issue writs of mandamus. Ib. Lemaistre & Hyde, J., dissent.

165. The Court can issue writs of ne exeat regno. Ib.

<sup>1</sup> In this case the land was not sold for arrears of revenue, but in consequence of one of the joint owners of the land in dispute having pledged it, without consent of the other part owners, as a security for a native Sub-collector, who became a defaulter and absconded.

165*a*. The Court has no power to remove by certiorari the conviction, by a Zillah Magistrate, of a British subject, unless such conviction be under the 53d Geo. III. c. 155. In the matter of Pattle. 14th Nov. 1836. 1 Fulton, 313.

(b) Of Habeas Corpus.

166. The Court and the Judges severally can issue writs of habeas corpus. Rex v. Warren Hastings. Hyde's Notes. 18th Nov. 1775. Mor. 207.

167. But it was afterwards held, that the Supreme Court, as a Court, has no authority to issue a writ of habeas corpus, the writ being a prerogative writ, and the general powers of the Court of King's Bench not being given to the Supreme Court. The Judges, however, having severally and respectively the powers of Justices of the Court of King's Bench at common law, have severally authority to issue writs of habeas corpus. Rex v. Ramgoind Mitter and others. Hyde's Notes. 14th Dec. 1781. Mor. 210. In the matter of Henrietta Bromm. Chamb. Notes. 14th Nov. 1792. Mor. 212.<sup>1</sup>

168. The Court may grant a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum to attach a person in the provinces not subject to the jurisdiction, if such person did not pay obedience to a subpœna ad testificandum. Anon. 16th June 1800. Mor. 146.

169. Where a person was notoriously subject to the jurisdiction of the Court by reason of inhabitancy, it was held to be competent to the Court to send a writ of habeas corpus, directed to him, into the Mofussil, without having proved him to be subject to the jurisdiction. Muddosoden Sundel v. ———. March 1815. East's Notes. Case 18.

170. The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of habeas corpus to natives not being inhabitants of Calcutta. Rex v. Goculnauth Mullick. 22d April 1824. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 36. Mor. 220.

171. A person making a false return to a writ of habeas corpus is subject to the jurisdiction in an indictment for the false return, even if subject on no other ground. Ib.

172. The Supreme Court at Bombay has no power or authority to issue a writ of habeas corpus, except when directed either to a person resident within the local limits of the general jurisdiction of the Court, or to a person out of such local limits who is personally subject to the civil and criminal jurisdiction of the Court. In the matter of the Justices of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay. 14th May 1829. 1 Knapp, 58.

173. The Supreme Court has no power or authority to issue a writ of habeas corpus to the jailor or officer of a native Court, as such officer, the Supreme Court having no power to discharge persons imprisoned under the authority of a native Court. Ib.

174. The Supreme Court is bound to notice the jurisdiction of a native Court, without having it set forth specially in the return to a writ of habeas corpus. Ib.

175. A party not being an inhabitant of Calcutta, and nowise personally subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, is subject to a writ of habeas corpus where the taking and abduction were within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction. In the matter of Sreenauth Roy. 1st Term 1840. Mor. 226.

176. Semble, If the party be subject to the criminal jurisdiction in respect of the caption, he is necessarily subject to a writ of habeas corpus. Ib.

176*b*. The Supreme Court cannot exercise any jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue, or concerning any act ordered or done in the collection thereof, according to the Regulations of the Governor in Council. Venkata Rungu Pillay v. The East-India Company. 26th Sept. 1803. 1 Str. 182.

176*c*. But to exclude the jurisdiction, on the ground that the matter concerns the revenue, the connection must be direct and immediate, not consequent or argumentative. Ib.

176*d*. To restrict the jurisdiction in respect of acts ordered or done according to the Regulations of the Governor in Council, it must appear that they had reference to the collection of the revenue. Ib.

12. Plea to the Jurisdiction.

177. Impey, C. J., expressed a doubt as to suffering a party to defend in ejectment instead of the casual ejector, and to plead to the jurisdiction. Doe dem. Indnarain Nundie v. Robinson. Hyde's Notes. 20th March 1779. Sm. R. 37.

178. The party upon whom the notice was served as tenant in possession was admitted to defend instead of the casual ejector, and to plead to the jurisdiction. Doe dem. Anon. v. Robinson. Hyde's Notes. 23d Oct. 1779. Mor. 122.

179. On a motion to discharge a defendant on filing common bail, the affidavits on the question of jurisdiction being contradictory, the defendant was allowed to plead to the jurisdiction. Radabulub Roy v. Gowripersaud Roy. Chamb. Notes. 10th Nov. 1796. Mor. 139.

180. A plea to the jurisdiction by a Hindú living in the Mofussil, who had brought an ejectment for property in Calcutta depending on the same title, was overruled for defect of form. Semble, "He would at all times be liable to answer as to such discovery and relief as should affect the ejectment." Tarramoney Dossee v. Kistnogovind Sein. 28th Jan. 1816. East's Notes. Case 44.

181. A plea to the jurisdiction must point out some other jurisdiction. Ib.

182. Quere, Whether the matter of jurisdiction should be pleaded in abatement or in bar? Ib.

183. The subject matter of a suit being out of the jurisdiction is not necessarily an objection to it, but may be obviated by circumstances, such as residence of the party within the jurisdiction, or when the contract concerning it is to be executed within the jurisdiction. The Court observed that it might be another question, whether a constructive inhabitancy would be sufficient. Ib.

184. Where one of several defendants to a bill in equity pleaded to the jurisdiction before the other defendants had answered, it was held that such defendant could not, upon the neglect of the complainant to reply or set down the plea for argument, within eight days after notice of its being filed, set it down himself for argument; but could only move to dismiss the bill as against himself for want of replication if no sufficient cause could be shewn. Radannooney Dossee v. Kistnomoney Dossee. 9th

<sup>1</sup> In this case, though no express opinion was given, the Court seemed to consider that the pending of the ejectment ex necessitate gave them a right to inquire of all such matters within the defendant's knowledge as were necessary for the just decision of the action brought by him, though not as to the other matters disconnected therewith, in respect of lands out of the jurisdiction, the defendant not being personally liable, as an inhabitant of Calcutta generally, but only quoad the suit brought by him, which presumed him to be personally present in Court.

April 1818. East's Notes. Case 81.

185. When neither the general issue, nor any special plea to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, had been pleaded, it was held that the question of jurisdiction was not put in issue, but must be taken as admitted.<sup>1</sup> Ally Nazaffer Khan v. Ramgopaul Roy. Sittings after 2d Term 1820. Sm. R. 115. Cl. A. R. 1829. 36. Mor. 158.

186. A plea to the jurisdiction must allege that the defendant was not subject at the time when the plaint was filed, and must be supported by an affidavit; and without such averment the plea is bad on general demurrer. Cossenauth Biswas v. Shrauz Molah. 27th March 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 208. Sm. R. 116. Mor. 159.

187. A bill alleging several grounds of jurisdiction, and amongst them inhabitancy, the plea must negative the inhabitancy as a fact, and not merely set forth matters from which the non-inhabitancy is inferred and submitted as matter of law. Ummah Bye v. Jaggernauth Persaud Mullick. 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 58. Mor. 168.

188. A plea in equity will be overruled for not pleading to all the grounds of jurisdiction laid in the bill. Mt. Bhanoo Beebee v. Moonshree Hussain Ally. 29th Nov. 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 75. Mor. 166.

189. The Court was inclined to think, that where the bill contains allegations of grounds of jurisdiction, to which the defendant pleads, and others which, standing alone, would have been demurrable but not noticed in the plea, the plea was bad in form.<sup>2</sup> Akeenah Bannoo v. Moonshree Boo Ally. 9th April 1840. Mor. 245.

13. Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.

190. Semble, The Court cannot grant administration of the goods of a man executed for felony. In the goods of Rajah Nundcomar. Hyde's Notes. 17th Jan. 1782. Mor. 5.

191. Held, that the Supreme Court has the power of granting administration of the goods of a Hindú, but the administrator must administer according to the Hindú laws.<sup>3</sup> In the matter of Commala. Hyde's Notes. 17th Feb. 1776. Mor. 1.

192. Held, that the Court had power to grant administration to Hindús under the description of British subjects. In the goods of Bindabehn Gossain. 4th Term 1778. Cited in Cl. R. 1834. 122.

193. Held, that a person of whose goods administration may be granted, must have been at his death a British subject, his being amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court being nothing to the purpose; but for this purpose all the inhabitants of Calcutta were considered as British subjects, the town having been conquered by Watson and Clive: this, however, was held not to extend to the surrounding factories. In the goods of Baz Alley Ganney. 2d Term 1782. Cited in Cl. R. 1834. 122.

194. Probate of wills was originally granted to the executors of Hindús and Muhammadans, conformable to the practice of the Mayor's Court; but when the Stat. 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 17. arrived in India, which altered the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, it was decided that the Court had not the power to do so. In the goods of <sup>3</sup> In a MS. book of notes by one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, quoted by Russell, C. J., is a note upon this subject, dated 17th Dec. 1776: "The Charter directs administration to be granted to 'British subjects' and of the goods of 'British subjects' deceased. Therefore the Court grants administration to the estates of Gentoos (as well as other persons) dying in Calcutta, and to Gentoos inhabiting Calcutta, adjudging them to be British subjects." Cl. R. 1834. 121.

Hadjee Mustapha. Hyde's Notes. 22d Oct. 1791. Mor. 74.

195. But in a subsequent case, the Court held that they had jurisdiction to grant probate, or letters of administration, in the case of a Hindú or Musulmán deceased leaving property and effects within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. In the goods of Beebee Muttra. 22d Oct. 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 119. Mor. 75. (Ryan, J., dissent.)

196. The Court has statutory right to grant administration in native estates where there is property within the local jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> In the goods of Moonshee Hossein Ali. 20th Nov. 1843. 1 Fulton, 339.

197. Semble, Company's paper forming part of the estate of a deceased native, there is a sufficient property in Calcutta to give the Court jurisdiction to grant administration. Ib.

198. The Court has jurisdiction to grant administration of the estate of an Armenian dying out of Calcutta.

<sup>1</sup> This principle may now be considered as established. It does not appear, from the reported cases, what has been the practice of the Supreme Courts at Bombay and Madras with reference to this question. By Sir T. Strange's Reports, it seems that at Madras it had always been considered doubtful whether the Charter of that Presidency empowered the Court to grant probate and letters of administration to natives, but that the Court had been in the habit of granting them to such natives as spontaneously applied for them, being "inhabitants of the limits of Madras," but had refused to cite or use means for compelling natives to come in and prove wills or take out letters of administration. And having decided in Arnachellum v. Venhoo, 2 Str. 316., that the taking out probate by a native, not an inhabitant of Madras, did not make him subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, even with reference to matters relating to the will; it was subsequently determined, In the matter of the Will of Tarul, 1b. 326., that probate should not be granted. These cases, however, do not decide the question as to the power of the Court to grant probate and administration, but seem rather to shew that it ought not to be done on the ground of expediency.

In the goods of Phanus Johannes. Chamb. Notes. 1788. Mor. 14.

199. The Court appears to have jurisdiction to grant special administration with the will annexed, durante absentia of the executors, of the goods of an Armenian Christian dying at Canton, leaving property at Calcutta, and leaving a will at Canton, all the executors of which are out of the jurisdiction, with, however, a power of recalling the administration if an application should be made by the executors, or by their attorney, duly authorised.<sup>2</sup> Padre Stephanas Aratoon v. Sarkiss Johannes. Chamb. Notes. 10th Nov. 1796. Mor. 16.

200. Held, that the Court had power to grant a commission to issue beyond the jurisdiction, to swear in an administrator of a British subject. In the goods of Kirkman. Hyde's Notes. 13th July 1780. Mor. 5.

201. But Impey, C. J., refused to send a commission to Lucknow, to see a party execute an administration bond, saying that "it could not be done." In the goods of Dillon. Hyde's Notes. 26th March 1781. Mor. 5, note.

202. A commission to swear in an administrator was issued out of the provinces.<sup>3</sup> In the goods of Harrison. Hyde's Notes. 14th March 1782. Mor. 8.

203. But in a later case, a commission was refused to swear in an executor at Lucknow. In the goods of Trickett. 4th Nov. 1835. Mor. 75.

204. The Supreme Court has no power, under the 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79. s. 21. and the 55th Geo. III. c. 84. s. 2., to grant letters of administration to the Ecclesiastical Re-

<sup>3</sup> In this case Hyde, J., said, "It has often been done, and I think on this ground, that this kind of voluntary jurisdiction is exercised by all Ecclesiastical Courts in every part of the world, as well as within the local limits of their jurisdiction." Impey, C. J., who at first did not think it could be done, afterwards assented.

208. Although the Court of Queen's Bench in England grants a prohibition to the Ecclesiastical Courts if they proceed to hear exceptions to an inventory exhibited by an executor, yet the Supreme Court of Bombay will, in its ecclesiastical jurisdiction, hear exceptions to an inventory exhibited by an executor. In the matter of the Will of Thacker Curramsey Shamjee. 19th January 1843. #### 14. Admiralty Jurisdiction.

210. Held, that the Charter gives no jurisdiction to the Court, on its admiralty side, to try prize causes. In the matter of the ship "Hinchingbrook." Hyde's Notes. 2d July 1782. Mor. 30.

211. But this was overruled, and a monition was granted to shew cause why a French ship taken in open war

213. The principle that the Court, as a Court of Admiralty, could hear and determine prize causes, seems to have been acquiesced in; but the libel was dismissed, and the captured ship and cargo restored, on the merits of the case, there not being sufficient evidence to condemn her as a prize. Michel v. The ship "America." Chamb. Notes. 13th Nov. 1794. Mor. 32. note. Same v. The ship "Enterprise." Chamb. Notes. 22d Jan. 1795. Ib.

215. But subsequently it was held, on argument, that the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction under the Charter in matters of prize. In the matter of the ship "La Fort." 4th April 1799. Mor. 33.

216. A ship's owner in Calcutta, contracting for her repair in the port, must be sued on the civil side of the Court, and no proceedings can be had against the ship or owner on the admiralty side. Henriquez v. Bennett. 10th Aug. 1818. East's Notes. Case 86.

III. OF THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

219. Where a purchaser of part of an estate at a public sale claimed an abatement in the assessment, on the ground that the papers exhibited at the time of sale, detailing the particulars of the lands, were erroneous; it was held that he was not entitled to the abatement, on the ground that the power of altering the public assessment in such cases (which is reserved to Government by Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799,<sup>2</sup> under the conditions there stated) is not vested by the Regulations in the Civil Courts.<sup>3</sup> Doorgapershad Bose v. The Collector

<sup>3</sup> The principle declared in the judgment upon this case, that the Governor-General in Council only is competent to grant an abatement of the public assessment upon portions of estates disposed of at the public sales, corresponds with the express provisions of Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799, extended to the province of Benares by Sec. 26. of Reg. V. of 1800, and re-enacted for the ceded and conquered provinces by Sec. 6. of Reg. XXVI. of 1803 (rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. XI. of 1822.) It is not applicable, however, to suits for annulling a public sale and recovering the purchase-money on the ground of any evident and material error in the description of the lands advertised to be sold, and specified in the bill of sale delivered to the purchaser. In such case, if redress be not granted on application to the Board of Revenue and Governor-General in Council, the purchaser is at liberty to sue, in the mode prescribed for public suits, to have the sale annulled by judicial process, and the purchase-money restored to him.—Macn.

of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs. 18th Aug. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 155.—Harington & Fombelle.

220. Although the Country Courts cannot directly question a judgment of the Supreme Court, which, if erroneous, can only be rectified upon an appeal to the King in Council; yet they can, upon collateral grounds not before brought forward, controul the parties who may have obtained such judgment when subject to their jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> Ramindur Deo Rai v. Roopnarain Ghose and others. 5th Aug. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 118.—Harington & Fombelle.

221. It was held that the claims of Government to lands included in the decennial settlement are subject to the cognizance of the Courts of Judicature, and that no individual can be legally dispossessed from such lands unless a decree of the Court has been given against him.<sup>2</sup> Costs were given against Government in a case wherein this principle had not been observed; and the plaintiffs, who had been irregularly dispossessed, were at the same time allowed the full benefit of the rule of limitations for the cognizance of civil suits. Vakcel of Government v. Rajesree Dibia and others. 30th Aug. 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 156.—Harington & Fombelle.

222. It was held that an order passed by the Revenue authorities, and confirmed by the Executive Government, under the Regulations which were in force before those enacted in 1793, was not liable to be set aside or altered by the Courts since established. Government and others v. Mt. Raj Koomarce. 6th May 1817.

<sup>4</sup> This was the result of a question put to the Advocate General by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

<sup>5</sup> This decision was governed by the spirit and intent of the preamble to Reg. II. and III. of 1793, whereby it is expressly provided that all questions connected with the financial rights of Government shall be subjected to the cognizance of the regularly-established Courts of Judicature.

2 S. D. A. Rep. 235.—Ker & Oswald.

223. In cases of property being plundered or destroyed, the power of the Criminal Courts is restricted to the punishment of the offenders for a breach of the peace; and they are expressly prohibited from adjudging pecuniary compensation, or damages for losses sustained, which must be sued for by the suffering party in the Civil Courts. Appoo Pillay v. Moottoo Naduseva Moodely. Case 18 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 192.—Scott & Greenway.

224. Held that, under Reg. XXV. of 1802, the British Government exercised an undoubted right in granting a Zamindari in unequal proportions to two parties, excluding a third who appeared to be entitled to share; and as by such exclusion, whether intentional or otherwise, no known law was infringed, the Civil Courts were precluded from all jurisdiction in the case. Rajah Vencata Narsimha Oppa Rao v. Raza Vencata Narsimha Appa Rao. Case 4 of 1818. 1 Mad. Dec. 298.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

225. The Civil Courts are not authorized to interfere with the revenue officers, or pass orders, in a summary manner, in matters relating to the settlement of estates. The Collector of Benares v. Narayan Sing and another. 25th Sept. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 278.—Fendall & Rees.

226. It was held that the Civil Courts have no power or authority, under the Regulations, to annul, by a summary order, a public sale of lands made by a Collector. Mirza Kureemoola Beg v. Baboo Hurruck Chund. 8th Jan. 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 284.—Harington & Fombelle.

227. The Civil Courts are restricted by Reg. V. of 1799 from interfering with the succession to the estate of a person deceased, without the institution of a regular civil suit, except in the special cases provided for in the said Regulation. Bhola

Nath Doss v. Mt. Sabitreen. 16th July 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 307.—Rees & Goad.

228. A sued B for the recovery of the value of certain property, consisting of jewels, shawls, &c., and money, alleged to have been taken away by B from the house of A. The Provincial Court at first refused to take cognizance of the claim under Sec. 11. of Reg. II. of 1802, it being of a criminal and not of a civil nature; but on a summary appeal from their order, the Court of Sudder Adawlut directed that the suit should be entertained, tried, and determined, on its merits, it being apparent that the act complained of amounted only to a trespass, for which redress was open by civil actions. Sree Raja Row Vencata Neeladry Row v. Encooguntly Sooriah and another. Case 5 of 1822. 1 Mad. Dec. 338.—Grant & Gowan.

229. A party in an appeal to the Sudder Court cannot plead to the jurisdiction of a Collector who had previously given a decree in the same matter, if he have neglected to do so in the Lower Court. Valangapooly Taren v. Roya Pillay and others. Case 12 of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 428.—Grame & Gowan.

230. It was held that a formal decision, duly acted upon, of a competent native authority, could not be set aside by the Company's Courts after the accession of the Company to the government of the country where such decision had passed. Ravee Bhudr Sheo Bhudr v. Roopshunker Shunkerjee. 13th May 1824. 2 Borr. 656.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

231. It was held that the Courts are not at liberty to question the merits of final decisions passed by any authority having competent jurisdiction, whether on the allegation of such decisions having been contrary to law, or wrong as to the merits.<sup>1</sup> Fatlih

233. The Zillah Court having held that the Mutanalli or trustee of a religious endowment, who had been removed from the trusteeship by the revenue authorities on the ground of corruption, could not sue for restoration to the office; it was ruled by the Court at large (Ratray & Shakespear, dissent.), in concurrence with the Western Court of Sudder Dewanny, that such suit was cognizable by the Civil Courts, under Sec. 15 of Reg. XIX. of 1810. Wasih Ali Khan v. Government. 29th Nov. 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 363. Same v. Same. 22d Sept. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 110.

234. Held, with reference to the terms of Cl. 1. of Sec. 2. of Reg. III. of 1828, that in a suit to set aside a resumption of a Lakhhiraj tenure, made by the revenue authorities before the enactment of Reg. II. of 1819, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts was not barred by Cl. 4. of Sec. 2. of Reg. III. of 1828. Government v. Maharajah Konwur Baboo Keerut Singh. 16th Aug. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 100.—Braddon & Ratray.

235. A Darpatnidár cannot be compelled by the Civil Courts to pay the rents of the Patni tenure due to the proprietor, the Darpatnidár being only responsible to the Patnidár for the amount of rent agreed between them to be paid to him. Should the Patnidár fail to pay the rent due to the Zamindár, the latter may, under

Reg. VIII. of 1819, advertise the tenure for sale, when the Darpatnidár is at liberty to deposit in Court the amount due by the Patnidár, with a view to the protection of his own under-tenure. Ashotoss Dey and another v. Bhyruchunder Bose. 21st Sept. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 183.—Braddon & F. C. Smith.

235 a. The authority of every judicial tribunal, and the obligation to obey the judgment of a Court of exclusive jurisdiction, are circumscribed by the limits of the territory in which it is established; and in a case in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Calcutta, where the appellant held a decree against an inhabitant of Rajahmundry, in the Madras Presidency, and his surety, an inhabitant of Cuttack, in the Bengal Presidency, he was allowed to execute the decree in the Zillah Court of Cuttack against the surety, and told to apply to the Zillah Court of Rajahmundry against the principal defendant. Lachmun Hazaree v. Sumbhookhoortee. 14th Feb. 1839. 2 Sev. Cases, 295.—Ratray, Money, & Braddon.

236. In an action for the possession of property purchased at a sale made by the Sheriff of Calcutta in execution of a judgment of the Supreme Court, it is not competent to the Company's Courts to enter into circumstances, legal or equitable, which go to affect the justice of the judgment given by the Supreme Court, or of the proceedings in execution under it. Nobin Kishen Muldar v. Vaughan. 6th June 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 289.—D. C. Smyth & Reid.

238. In a dispute as to whether certain lands formed part of a private estate, or of a Maháll ordered for resumption by a decree of the special commissioner appointed under Reg. III. of 1828; it was held, that a mere plea by the revenue authorities that the lands belonged to the resumed Maháll does not, in limine, bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts. The Court at the same time observed, that had the dispute concerned land included in the decree of the special commissioner, the Civil Courts could not have adjudicated the claim. Sudder Board of Revenue v. Sheebpersad Mundul. 14th Aug. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 297.—Smith & Biscoe.

239. Ram Ratten Mitter and another*. 30th Jan. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 11.—Lee Warner & D. C. Smyth.

240. Omachurn Bonnerjea*. 8th April 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 25.—D. C. Smyth & Barlow.

242. The decrees of the Mofussil Courts will be regarded as the decrees of the superior tribunals of the country, and as of equal authority with the decrees of the Supreme Court (Grant, J., dissent). An plea of such decree, whereon it is shewn that the suit is between the same parties, and relates to the same subject-matter, and that the Court whose decree is pleaded had jurisdiction, will be allowed, as it could not be overruled without constituting the Supreme Court a Court of Appeal from the Courts of the Mofussil. *Kerry v. ## 2. Of the Sudder Courts.

243. The Sudder Adawlut Court at Bombay was held not to be competent, under Sec. 15. of Reg. I. of 1800<sup>1</sup>, to entertain any cause which, from the production on the records of the Court of a former decree, shall appear to have been heard and determined by any former Judge, or person, or persons, having competent jurisdiction. Gungeshwur Deoram v. Purmanund Nundram. 3d July 1801. 1 Borr 6.—Duncan, Carnac, & Page.

244. Where it appeared to the Sudder Adawlut Court that the respondents were residents within the limits of the Supreme Court, and that the property sued for was also situated within the same limits, the appeal was dismissed for want of jurisdiction under Sec. 12. of Reg. 11. of 1802, whereby "the Courts are commanded not to intermeddle with, or take cognizance of" suits against persons so resident, and for real or personal property so situated; which, by the same Section, it is declared "are to be considered entirely exempt from their jurisdiction." Anon. Case 7 of 1807. 1 Mad. Scott), who conceived that, in consequence of the terms of the bond, they had no jurisdiction. Upon this the obligee brought his action in the Supreme Court, but the obligor being resident out of the jurisdiction, the Court refused to entertain it; and the grounds on which the Sudder Adawlut quashed all the proceedings appearing to be erroneous, that Court, on the application of the obligee, resolved to review the judgment. Ven-hiah v. Vencatarauze. Case 12 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 24.—A. Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

246. A claimed a Zamindári from B, who, as it appeared, held it under a Sanad or grant of permanent assessment, obtained from the Governor in Council, which, under the provisions of Reg. XXV. of 1802, conferred upon him a permanent proprietary right: held, that the Court was not competent to investigate the merits of A's claim, since such claim was annulled by the Sanad granted to B. Anon. Case 6 of 1808. 1 Mad. Dec. 26.—A. Scott, Read, & Greenway.

247. A party having, in the first instance, acknowledged the jurisdiction of the Sudder Adawlut Court, cannot afterwards plead to the jurisdiction under Sec. 8. of Reg. II. of 1802. Cavoo Boyer v. The Jagheer-dar of Arnee. Case 3 of 1810. 1 Mad. Dec. 34.—A. Scott & Greenway.

248. A suit having been filed against the mother of a woman betrothed, but not married, to the son of the Nawáb of Surat, was referred by the Court to the decision of His Highness under the treaty of A.D. 1800 and Sec. 16. of Reg. I. of 1800<sup>1</sup> (which Regulation was interpreted by the Supreme Government as including mothers-in-law of the Nawáb's sons amongst his relations), the Court holding that Rishtahdárí, or the relationship contemplated by the Regulation, commenced on the date of the Mangní, or betrothal, and that, therefore, they had no jurisdiction. Bahmunjee Munchunjee v. Makin Khatoun. 24th Feb. 1815. 1 Borr. 147.—Nepean, Brown, & Elphinstone.

249. During the pendency of a suit instituted by a person claiming as an adopted son of a Hindú widow, the widow dies, and proclamation is made for her heirs to come in and defend the suit, and the claimant is put in possession of the property in dispute by the Collector. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal decide that the claimant has not made out his title, and direct the Collector to put in possession of the property another person who had come in under the proclamation, but produced no evidence of his title. It was held by the Privy Council, on appeal, that the latter part of the decree must be reversed, as the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut had no right to determine the question of title of a third person, for it was not the question in the cause at all. Raja Haimeen Chull Sing v. Koomer Gumsheem Sing. 4th Jan. 1834. 2 Knapp, 203.

250. 252 b. Held, that the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut is competent to take cognizance of an illegal order of a Zillah Judge appointing a Curator six months after the decease of the proprietor, in contravention of the provisions of Sec. 14. of Act XIX. of 1841, notwithstanding Sec. 18. of the Act barring an appeal or order of review. Aladhmañ, Petitioner. 1st Sept. 1846. 2 Sev. ### 3. Of the Zillah Courts.

253. A suit filed by an appellant to prove his right to share the Dessaipān or Zamindāri of a village was dismissed by the Zillah Judge, because the Collector's books shewed that no Dessaipān right existed in the village in question. This decree was, however, reversed on appeal, as the claim of the respondents to the Dessaipān had been already expressly recognized by the decree of the Amcen, and affirmed by the Assistant Judge on appeal from the Amcen's decree, against which decree (being by competent authority) no other suit could be entertained according to Sec. 15. of Reg. I. of 1800.<sup>1</sup> Bhecha Nuthoo v. Shunkurjee and others. 14th April 1818. 1 Borr. 264.—Nepean, Bell, Prendergast, & Warden.

254. By Sec. 15. of Reg. VII. of 1799, a Zillah Judge is authorized to interfere summarily, on application from a farmer to enforce his right of removing a defaulting tenant. Jagesur Mustofee v. Shammohun Rai and another. 3d Aug. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 206.—Harington & Fombelle.

255. On a summary suit, under Reg. VII. of 1799, by a Zamindār against a dependent landholder for arrears of rent calculated according to a survey and measurement, to which suit the defendant pleaded a right to hold his tenure at a fixed rent; it was held, that the Zillah Court is competent to pass a summary decision, the party cast having the option of instituting a regular suit.<sup>2</sup> Raja Rajkishen v. Ramnaruen. 10th Aug. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 208.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

256. On a summary suit by the purchaser of a Zamindāri against a tenant for rent at the Pergunnah rates, the tenant, who pleaded a fixed Jama, not having shewn cause why the rent demanded should not be paid, such rent was adjudged to the plaintiff by the Zillah Court, under Reg. VII. of 1799, with an option to the defendant to bring a regular suit. The Provincial Court was of opinion, that, as the Zamindār claimed rents at the Pergunnah rates, and the tenant alleged a right to a Mukarrari tenure, the Zillah Judge was not authorized to pass a summary judgment on the case: but on appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, it was held that the Zillah Judge was competent to pass a summary decision in the first instance, under the 15th Section of the above-mentioned Regulation; and further, that such decision was not appealable (except on special grounds) to the Provincial Court, under the 18th Section of the same Regulation, which declares that the summary judgments authorized by Section 15. are not subject to appeal, as any person considering himself aggrieved

<sup>2</sup> The final judgment in this case was founded on the terms and construction of Cl. 4. of Sec. 15. of Reg. VII. of 1799: it is therein directed, that "where a defaulter or his surety may be brought to the Zillah Court under either of the two preceding clauses, the Judge shall call upon him to answer the demand against him; and, if he deny it, or any part of it, shall enter upon a summary inquiry into the merits of it by examining the vouchers and accounts of the parties." This was done in the present instance, and it appeared indispensable, with a view to ascertain whether the arrear claimed was due or not.—Macn.

257. The plaintiff advanced money to the defendant, in Zillah Bakergunge, on deeds of Khatt-kubala, on lands in another Zillah, and after the term of the deeds had expired, sued for the money in the Bakergunge Court, and obtained a judgment. The Provincial Court reversed it, thinking that the case, under Sec. 8. of Reg. III. of 1793, was only cognizable in the Zillah where the land was situated; but the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut ruled that the suit being specifically for money was clearly cognizable in Zillah Bakergunge under the above Regulation.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The Provincial Courts being empowered by the Regulations to admit a special appeal from the decrees of the Zillah and City Courts, in all cases wherein a regular appeal may not lie to them, if, on the face of the decree, or from any information before the Provincial Court, it shall appear to them erroneous or unjust, or if, from the nature of the cause, it shall appear of sufficient importance to merit a further investigation in appeal, the exception taken by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to the admission of an appeal by the Provincial Court in this case is, of course, applicable only to the admission of it as a regular appeal, without any grounds having been assigned to bring it within the rule for special appeals; in receiving which, the discretionary authority given for the correction of erroneous judgments in particular cases is directed to be used with caution, and is declared not to entitle any party to demand, of right, an appeal to the Provincial Court, in cases wherein the judgments of the Zillah and City Courts are provisionally made final.—Macn.

<sup>2</sup> Sec. 8. of Reg. III. of 1793 empowers the Zillah and City Civil Courts to take cognizance of all suits and complaints of a civil nature against persons amenable to their jurisdiction, "provided the landed or other real property, to which the suit or complaint may relate, shall be situated, or in all other cases, the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant at the time when the suit may be commenced shall reside, as a fixed inhabitant, within the limits of the Zillah, or city, over which their jurisdiction may extend."—Macn.

258. In a suit instituted in the City Court of Patna against a resident at that place for the amount of a debt incurred in a foreign territory, the defendant pleaded against the jurisdiction; but the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut overruled the defendant's plea, and determined that he was amenable, in a personal action for debt, to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court at Patna. Dwarkan Das and another v. Rajah Jhoolal. 20th Aug. 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 306.—Harington & Stuart.

260. Iswar Chunder Pal*. 15th Dec. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 282.—Harington & Leicester.

261. Where an agent brought an action in the Zillah Court against his coadjutor and their constituent, to recover money expended in conducting a suit; it was held that, though the agency was the cause of action, it did not give jurisdiction, that there was no specific act to render the constituent (an inhabitant of Bombay, and not possessing property in the Zillah) amenable to the Court's jurisdiction, and that the agent had employed no funds but those furnished by his coadjutor. Eduljee Mehrwanjee v. Khursedjee Manuckjee. 19th April 1832. Sel. Rep. 68.—Barnard, Anderson, & Baillie.

262. Where a Lower Court<sup>1</sup> had decreed part of a demand on a title distinct from that on which it was preferred; it was held that it was not competent to the Lower Court to inquire into such title and make any decree thereon, reserving, however, the plaintiff's right to bring a new action on that title. *Muhammad Yakub v. 264. Where goods had been consigned for sale by a party in one district to a mercantile house in another district, and the goods sold in the latter, and the proceeds carried to the credit of the consignor to meet alleged demands due by him to the consignee; it was held, in an action brought by the consignor in his own district for recovery of the proceeds of the sale, that the action should have been brought in the Zillah Court of the district of the consignee and not of the consignor, the Court of the consignor's district not having jurisdiction to try the case. *Seetla Deen Bajpaye and another v. 266. Where the plaintiff sued in Zillah Patna to set aside summary orders passed in execution of a decree in the Zillah Court of Behar; it was held that the action had been brought irregularly; 1st, in point of local jurisdiction, the Patna Court being incompetent to admit an action contesting the summary orders of the Behar Court; and 2dly, because, under the principle recognized by Construction 1129, the orders of the Behar Court and of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are not open to dispute by a regular suit. *Burkatoonissa Begum v. ### I. GENERALLY.

1. Where A and B disputed the office of Kázi of a village, A claiming by virtue of an authority dated upwards of one hundred years back, with a formal award afterwards confirmed by the Súbahdár, followed by an acquittance from B, under the terms of the award, and a subsequent order from the Súbahdár; and B, claiming as having the last decision of the native government in his favour. There appeared a great doubt as to who had been the officiating Kázi during the previous twenty-five years, but it was established that A was in possession the year preceding our acquisition of the territory. It was held, therefore, that A being in possession, joined to his having the oldest title, had the best claim to the office, more especially as the officer under whose authority B claimed had given a Samad equally decisive in A's favour four months before, and in one month afterwards two in favour of each party. Qazee Ulee v. Qazee Ibrahim. 29th April 1822. 2 Borr. 250.—Babington.

2. Held, that a civil writ for damages is the only means by which a Kázi, under Reg. III. of 1808, can exclude others from performing the duties of his office. Anon. 27th April 1837. Camp. Reg. 189, n. (Fouj. Ad.)

KHÁLISAH.

1. The decision of the Khálisah was held to be a judicial sentence within the express terms of Sec. 16. of Reg. III. of 1793, prohibiting the Civil Courts from entertaining any cause, which, from the production of a former decree on the records of the Court, shall appear to have been heard and determined by any former Judge, or any superintendent of a Court having competent jurisdiction. And where the widow of a Talookdár had been dispossessed of her late husband's estate by a person under a Pernáneh of the Naib Nazim of Bengal, and sued him for possession of the Talook, under an executed decree in her favour, passed by the Calcutta Dewanny Adawlut in 1785, it appearing that a prior claim which she had preferred before the Khálisah in 1773 was dismissed on trial of the merits, the judgment of 1785 was pronounced to be illegal, and her claim was dismissed accordingly. *Hurryhur Chowdry and another v. ### KHOTBAH.

1. Any Khatib, in any village or town, may perform prayers on Friday, and read the Khotbah in a Masjid, or house, or in any other place which may be selected by common consent; nor has the Khatib appointed by the Sultán, or his representative, any power whatever to hinder or forbid him from reading the Khotbah. Salar Mohommud v. Qazee Mohommud Ismaeel. Case 1. of 1814.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

KHOTÍ.

1. Where a claim for the Khoti of a village had been regularly decided by a Pancháyat, and confirmed by the officer of the native government then existing, and followed by possession, it was declared to be good, and maintainable against a subsequent reversal by the same authority without good reason assigned. Bal Seth Hur Seth Mahadeck v. Lakhshuman Kurundeckur. 21st Jan. 1822. 2 Borr. 189.—Romer.

2. A claimed the Khotí of a certain village which had been possessed by B for a period exceeding the limitation of twelve years; but on A establishing his right he was reinstated, the facts adduced being sufficient, in the Court's opinion, to support an action under the provisions of Reg. III. of 1814,<sup>1</sup> whilst B had not rebutted A's plea of unjust acquisition, by any document in support of his own title, or by satisfactory evidence to prove uninterrupted possession for more than sixty years. Bu-heerojee Bhilare v. Sabajee Bhilare. 27th April 1822. 2 Borr. 222.—Babington.

3. In a contested claim for the Khotí of a village, the Zillah Court decided in favour of the party exhibiting the oldest document; but this was declared to be an erroneous principle by the Sudder Court, which held, that however the native government might have been inconsistent, it was competent, and the latest decision was the binding one. In this case the evidence proved that each party had at various times possessed the office; and there being no proofs of the authenticity of the various Sanads produced, there were no grounds for a decision, and no resource but to leave the cause of dispute as it existed when brought into litigation, viz. in the hands of the latest possessor. Naro Juggunath Gudhree v. Madhom Rao Huchut Rao. 9th Dec. 1822. 2 Bc.—Barnard.

4. Where, in a disputed claim for the Khotí of a village, possession was not proved for a series of years by either party, and no prescriptive right appeared to exist, and although, amongst a large mass of Sanads and orders of the late Government, not one was actually proved, the Court decided in favour of the party holding the most authentic decision, which appeared to be the act of an indifferent, and, it was to be supposed, an impartial authority, no attention being paid to the antiquity or recentness of the various documents exhibited by the parties. Gopal Bhih v. Gungaram. 20th Dec. 1823. 2 Borr. 585.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

5. A sued B for the recovery of the Government revenue derived from certain Khotí lands seized upon by B. It being proved that the office had descended to A by right of inheritance from his ancestors, and that B had no hereditary claim beyond having been placed in the Khotí by the Sirkár during A's absence, judgment was given in A's favour. Apajee Narayan Tere Des-sace v. Naro Trimbuk Joorchur. 5th Feb. 1824. 2 Borr. 543.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

6. Where certain persons had possessed themselves of lands, and brought them into cultivation, which lands were afterwards claimed by another person as hereditary Khotí of the village, he having been absent at the time they were taken possession of and cultivated; it was held by the Muamltudár and the Collector that they could not be ousted as long as they paid the dues to the Khotí; but these decisions were reversed on appeal, and it was held that the right of the Khotí could not be invalidated, and that he was entitled to possession of the lands in question, liable, however, for any just claims for out-incurred by those who had brought the lands into cultivation, for which they might not have been reimbursed by the receipts, and which, if not privately adjusted, might form the cause of another action: it was also decided that the Khotí could not claim any arrears. Hunmuntrao Junardhun v. Sullowdin and another. 30th Jan. 1839. Sel. Rep. 144.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

KISTBANDÍ.

1. A Kistbandí interchanged between the plaintiff and defendant after a decree had been made, which Kistbandí (though not actually signed in the presence of the Judge) had been fully acknowledged by both parties as having been really executed and accepted, and the terms of it being, that if the Kists were not duly paid the Kistbandí should be enforced as the decree of the Court, was held virtually to supersede the decree, and ordered to be carried into effect according to Sec. 10. of Reg. II. of 1806. Khawja Nias Marcar Pogose v. Nabkishwar Das and others. 15th April 1836. 1 Sev. Cases, 81.—Rattray, Braddon, Barwell, & D. C. Smyth.

2. A written instrument, or Kistbandí, for securing the payment of the Kist by monthly instalments, though usual and advisable, is not necessary to entitle the Government to enforce such payment, if the revenue be a fixed monthly Kist, or instalment. Kirt Chunder Roy and others v. The Government. 15th Feb. 1837.—1 Moore Ind. App. 383.

3. The appellant sued to recover a sum of money due on a Kistbandí executed by the respondent's father on the consolidation of the amount of several bonds. On his death, and on account of the minority of his son, his estate came under the Court of Wards, when, on adjustment of the debts due by the estate, and production of the Kistbandí before the Collector, the Sarbarahkár of the respondent, admitting the justness of the appellant's claim, signed the Kistbandí (in recognition of its genuineness), which was then duly registered for payment; but, in defending the suit, pleaded laches incurred by the plaintiff, and his own irresponsibility. The Zillah Judge, who tried the case on its transfer to his Court under Reg. III. of 1833, dismissed it; but on appeal to the Sudder Dewany Adawlut it was remanded for further investigation. The Zillah Judge retried the suit, on recourse to the provisions of Reg. VI. of 1832, and adhered to his former decision of dismissal. This decision, on appeal, was reversed by the Sudder Dewany Adawlut, on the ground of the validity of the claim of the appellant against the estate of the deceased, tested as it was by the signature of the Sarbarahkár at the time of the production of the Kistbandí for payment. Darpmarain Ray v. Jagmohan Moonshee and another. 13th Feb. 1838. 2 Sev. Case 19.—Rattray & Braddon.

I. LÁKHIRÁJ.

1. Generally.<sup>1</sup>

1. A claim by the appellant on the respondents to recover certain lands, and hold them as Lákhiráj, such lands having been granted to his father as Birt, or clarity lands, was dismissed on proof that the lands, though once Lákhiráj, had been resumed and included in the assessment of a Pergumnah purchased by the respondents. Beiragee Pundá v. Gopee Mohan Thakoor. 3d Feb. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 123.—Harington & Fombelle.

2. A claimed a moiety of a Lákhiráj village, as one of the heirs of the original grantee, the whole being then in the possession of the other heirs. Held, that as the other heirs only held by a life tenure, tacitly confirmed by the omission of the Collector to resume the lands for the space of two years; and moreover that it nowhere appeared in evidence that the original grantee possessed more than a life interest; A's claim as one of the heirs was not maintainable. Anon. Case 2 of 1810. 1 Mad. Dec. 32.—Scott & Greenway.

3. Semble, Lands exempted from

<sup>1</sup> Lákhiráj grants were made for past services, or the performance of existing duties, as a provision for great officers of state, or members of families of high rank; for charitable or religious endowments; for the support of temples, mosques, teachers, priests, &c. In the cases placed under this head, generally, it does not appear on what footing the lands were granted, they being only mentioned as Lákhiráj.

revenue revert to Government on the decease of the person or persons to whom the grant may be made, it being merely a life tenure. Ib.

4. A grant of a village from the Nawab to a certain person, exempt from revenue, being proved on evidence to descend to the disciples of the original grantee, and not to his relatives, was adjudged by the Zillah Court to the disciple in possession, against a claimant by hereditary right. The Provincial Court held, that as the village had been granted to the original incumbent only on a life tenure, it should be resumed under Reg. XXXI. of 1802; but on appeal to the Sudder Adawlut, it appearing that the claim of the heir had been altogether disallowed by the Lower Courts, and that the Government had never claimed against the party in possession of the village, the judgment of the Provincial Court was set aside, leaving the actual possessor in occupation of the village, and not inquiring into his right to hold and continue such possession, no act having been done by the supposed rightful owner to divest his possession and assert his title. Batigad Shah v. Buddle Meean. Case 4 of 1810. 1 Mad. Dec. 37.—Scott & Greenway.

5. A suit by a Zamindar for the rent of certain lands held by the defendant on a Lakshiraj tenure was dismissed as irregular, under Sections 7. & 12. of Reg. XIX. of 1793, the extent of the land claimed exceeding one hundred Bighas; and the plaintiff was left to bring a new suit for any land, less than one hundred Bighas, alienated from the revenue assessment at any one time since the Company's accession to the Dewanny. Shamchand Baboo and another v. Rajender Mokerjee. 26th Dec. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 363.—Harrington & Fombelle.

6. Lands claimed as Lakshiraj under title-deeds registered in the Bazi Zamin Daftar, but differing from the records of that office with respect to the lands specified on the back of the title-deeds, held to be a valid tenure, exempt from assessment, so far only as the title-deeds correspond with the records of the Bazi Zamin Daftar. Mt. Nundkoonwur Beebee v. Ram Lochan Sing and others. 21st June 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 66.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

7. A grant from the British Government, confirming and releasing an alleged pre-existing Lakshiraj tenure, is of no virtue against the grantor, if obtained by the grantee by fraud and misrepresentation. Raja Sarup Jit Singh v. The Collector of Bundelkhand. 15th March 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 19.—Turnbull.

2. Altamgha.

8. It was held that an Altamgha rent-free tenure, confirmed by the former Lieutenant-Governor of the ceded provinces, is not resumable.<sup>1</sup> Raja Putnee Mull v. The Collector of Allahabad. 14th Feb. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 304.—C. Smith & Ahmuty.

<sup>1</sup> Two petitions were subsequently presented for a review of judgment in this case, agreeably to the instructions of the Superintendent of law-suits; the first on the ground that Mr. H. Wellesley, the Lieutenant-Governor, had not the power to confirm any rent-free tenure, but this petition was rejected by the second and fifth Judges (Smith and Martin). In the interim Reg. XIV. of 1825 was enacted, to declare that no grants to hold land free of assessment should be held valid, and to provide retrospectively that any decision passed in opposition thereto might be reviewed without reference to limitation of time, and that the application for review in such cases should be decided by a majority of the Judges of the Court. Under these rules another petition for review was presented on behalf of the Government, but this also was finally rejected (on the 29th April 1826) by the two Judges above named, joined by the Chief Judge (Leycester); it appearing that Putnee Mull had held possession of the disputed lands as a rent-free tenure under a Sanad from the Nawab Usufow Dowlah, from the year 1204 F. S. up to the period of the Company's accession, and that consequently the merits of the case could not be affected by the question whether the Lieutenant-Governor was or was not empowered to confirm a grant.—Macn.

9. Held, that Altamghá lands are inheritable property, and ordered that they should be divided among the heirs of the original proprietor,<sup>1</sup> their opponents claiming under a deed of gift alleged to have been executed in their favour by a person on whom the Patna Provincial Council had made a grant of the Altamghá lands de novo, and in whose favour a decree to hold them had been passed by the same authority; it appearing that the Persian decree (which the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut considered themselves bound to follow) awarded to the donor possession as manager only for the ancestor, and as no grant for lands whose produce exceeded Rs. 1000 per annum could be valid without the sanction of the Supreme Council, which had not been obtained in this instance.<sup>2</sup> Omar Khan v. Aboo Mooloommud Khan and others. 13th Jan. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 179.—Dorin.

9a. The term Altamghá, or Altamghá-Inuám, in a royal grant, does not of itself convey an absolute proprietary right to the grantee, where, from the general tenure of the grant, it is to be inferred that a Wakf, or endowment to religious and charitable uses, was intended; and property so endowed cannot be alienated by the grantee or his representatives. Jewan Doss Sahoo v. Shah Kubeerood-deen. 9th Dec. 1840. 2 Moore Ind. App. 390.

3. Birmooter.

10. A Birmooter tenure, free from assessment, having been erroneously included in the assets of an estate sold by auction for arrears of public revenue, is recoverable from the public purchaser at the suit of the proprietor. Ramdoolal Misser v. Mud-dun Mohan Bhuttacharya and others. 17th April 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 143.—Harrington & Rees.

11. A sued to recover lands as his rent-free Birmooter tenure from B, <sup>1</sup> Altamghá grants are made for personal purposes. To such an estate, on the death of the grantee, the sharers and residuaries succeed to their legal portions according to the law of inheritance. Macn. Princ. M. L. 329. Case 3.

<sup>2</sup> The above suit originated in the celebrated Patna cause, which was instituted in the year 1777, an account of which is thus given by the historian of British India:—"A person of some distinction and property, a native Mooloommudan, died, leaving a widow and a nephew, who for some time had lived with him in the apparent capacity of his heir and adopted son. The widow claimed the whole of the property, on the strength of a will which she affirmed the husband had made in her favour. The nephew, who disputed the will, both on the suspicion of forgery and on the fact of the mental imbecility of his uncle for some time previous to his death, claimed in like manner the whole of the estate as adopted son and heir of the deceased. For investigation of the causes, the decision of which depended upon the principles of the Mussulman Law, the Provincial Courts were assisted by native lawyers, by whose opinion in matters of law it was their duty to be guided. In the present instance the Council of Patna deputed a Cazee and two Muftes, by a precept of Perwana in the Persian language, directing them to take an account of the estate and effects of the deceased, and secure them against embezzlement; to inquire into the claims of the parties; to follow strictly the rules of Mooloommudan law; and report to the Council their proceedings. On the 20th of January the Cazee and Muftes having finished the inquiry, delivered their report, in which, after a statement of the evidence adduced, they declare their opinion that neither the widow nor the nephew had established their claims, and that the inheritance should be divided according to the principles provided by the Mooloommudan law for those cases in which a man dies without children and without a will: in other words, that it should be divided into four shares, of which one should be given to the widow, and three to the brother of the deceased, who was next of kin, and father of the nephew who claimed as adopted son. Upon a review of the proceedings of the Native Judges, and a hearing of the parties, the Provincial Council confirmed the decree, and ordered the decision of the inheritance to be carried into effect, &c." See Mill's History of British India, vol. 2. p. 569. 4to. edition.—Macn.

who had illegally ejected him. B pleaded that the lands were part of his assessed estate purchased at an auction; but A obtained a decree in his favour, although he had no title-deeds, and the village was mentioned in the auction list on the report of the Collector, who reported, after inquiry, that the disputed lands were the long-enjoyed ancestral Birmooter of A. Ram Ratan Ray v. Sambhu Chandra Majumdar and others. 2d Aug. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 221. — Ross & Walpole.

4. Deoruttur.

12. Where a Zamindár claimed rent of lands, alleged by the tenants to be rent free, and held by them as Deoruttur lands, the rent of part of them was found to be due to the Zamindár, and was adjudged accordingly; but his claim to the remainder was rejected, as, though there was no proof of any right under a competent grant to hold the lands in question exempt from assessment, yet, by Sec. 7. & 11. of Reg. XIX. of 1793, Lákhiráj tenures exceeding one hundred Bighás, and held exempt from assessment, though under incompetent grants before the 1st of Dec. 1790, belong to Government, and can be recovered, not at the suit of the Zamindár, but of the Collector on the part of Government. Radhakishen Rai and others v. Rammohun Rai. 17th March 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 130. — H. Colebrooke & Harington.

13. On a claim by the Collectors of Moorshedabad, on the part of Government, for the right of assessing certain lands held exempt from revenue as Deoruttur, part of them was adjudged to be assessable, as held under incompetent grants, and the remainder considered to be legally Lákhiráj, as having been granted before the Company's acquisition of the Dewanny. Collector of Moorshedabad v. Bishemmath Rai. 16th Jan. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 174. — H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

14. In 1805 A obtained a decree in the Zillah Court at Hooghly against B, the auction purchaser of part of his Zamindári, for 565 Bighás, as part of 4400, his ancestral Deoruttur lands. This decree was confirmed by the Provincial Court, and B's special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was withdrawn. In 1808 A sued C (also an auction buyer of another portion of his Zamindári), for 325 Bighás, as part of the said 4400 Bighás. A's claim was dismissed by the Zillah Court of the twenty-four Perqunnahs, on the ground of his Lákhiráj tenure not being proved. This decision was confirmed by the Calcutta Provincial Court, and A's petition of special appeal rejected by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on the 14th March 1822. Subsequently to this, A brought a third action in the Calcutta Provincial Court for 562 Bighás, as part of the same total of Deoruttur lands, against D, the vendee of a third auction purchaser of a section of his Zamindári, and his claim was dismissed on the ground of defect of proof of tenure, and the result of the action against C. But the Sudder Dewanny, in appeal, reversed the decision, with reference to the result of A's action against B, and proof of claim; and suggested a review of the order of the 14th March 1822, which (application having been made) was allowed on the 30th April 1827, and ultimately judgment was passed in favour of A on his suit against C. Leave to sue for mesne profits was also granted. Kali Parshad Ray v. Heirs of Khela Ram Mukhopadhyaya. 17th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 207. — Ratray & Walpole.

5. Fouj Seránjám.

15. Where lands were granted by the Government in Fouj Seránjám, or for maintenance of troops, the Court held the tenures to be for military service, and that the lands were not resumable till the holder refused to perform any service that might be proved by the Government Collector to be obligatory in lieu of the revenue. Sparrow v. Tanajee Rao Raja Sirke. 6th Dec. 1822. 2 Borr. 458.

6. Invalid Jágir.

16. It was held, that, under Sec. 2. of Reg. XLIII. of 1795, Government are entitled, on the death of the grantee, to revenue, and the Zamindár to Málikánah only, from lands in Benares assigned in grants to invalid native officers previous to the formation of the decennial settlement. Government v. Dhola Singh and another. 5th Mar. 1828. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 304. —Turnbull.

7. Jágir.

17. It was held that the tenure by Jágir is neither alienable nor hereditary; and it is to be considered as a life grant, merely so far as respects the exemption from public assessment. Collector of Barilly v. Martindell. 31st May 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 188. —Harrington & Fombelle.

18. On a claim by the grandson of the original grantee to certain rent-free lands and a money allowance conferred as Jágir on his ancestor by the former Rajas of Benares, and confirmed by Messrs. Hastings and Fowke; it was held that the land tenure should endure under such confirmation, but that the money allowance should be discontinued. The termination of its being hereditary having been made in the original grant. The Collector of Benares v. Maha Narain Singh. 14th July 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 390. —Alimuty & J. Shakespear.

8. Maddad-i-Maish.

19. Certain lands in the Zillah Seharunpoor were claimed to be held rent free, in virtue of two Sauads granted by Madho Rao Seindia, one of which, dated 29th Zi-l Kadah, 27th Julús, conferred the Mauza in question as Maddad-i-maish on A and other Fakirs, but had never been registered; the other, dated 8th Shabán, 32d Julús, confirmed the grant of the Mauza to A, B, and other Fakirs, and had been duly registered, but did not distinctly specify the nature of the tenure intended to be conferred. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, finding that the Mauza in question was registered in the quinquennial register as a Maddad-i-maish tenure, conferred by Madho Rao Seindia on A and other Fakirs on the 29th Zi-l Kadah, 27th Julús; and concurring with their law officers in opinion that the intention of the grantor to confer a permanent tenure was clearly inferrible from the words "and other Fakirs," which occurred in the Sanad dated in the year 32d Julús, and which had been duly registered; and advertg to the fact of the grantees and their descendants having enjoyed uninterrupted possession of the Mauza till its attachment on the part of Government; upheld the claim, and decided that the lands were not liable to resumption and assessment. Shah Uzeezollah v. The Collector of Seharunpoor on the part of Government. 9th Aug. 1828. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 312. —Ross.

9. Mániyam.

20. The Zillah Court adjudged the possession to a Zamindár of a certain village, a portion of another village, and a garden; but on an appeal by the defendant, on examination of the accounts upon which the permanent assessment of the Zamindári was formed, it appeared that the said portion of a village was excluded, being a Mániyam held by the appellant; and the decree of the Zillah Court was accordingly amended, and the portion of the village adjudged to the appellant. Anon. Case 12 of 1811.

1 Mad. Dec. 50.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

21. Māniyams are not Stavaram, or immovably fixed, i.e. real property, but Nibantam, or that which, at a specified time, is given to a person by the King by his grant, or by a subject by his deed of gift. Anon. Case 4 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 122.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

10. Sheoruttur.

22. Where a person claimed from a Talookdār to recover possession of certain lands, as having been granted to the claimant's ancestor exempt from revenue, under the designation of Sheoruttur, the lands were adjudged, on proof of grants made before the Dewanny, with the exception, however, of fifteen Bighās, the grant for which was subsequent to the Dewanny, and not sanctioned by Government, and which, in consequence, were not Lākhirāj property, but liable for revenue. Mehant Rampersaud v. Mehant Odaungir. 5th June 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 188.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

II. MĀLGUZĀRĪ.

1. Bandī Jama.

22*a*. Where an action was brought to recover possession of some land held on Bandī Jama tenure, and to have the assessment on it reduced to the rate paid previous to the survey, the Assistant Collector (Andrews) acknowledged the existence of the tenure, but doubted the claimant's title, as he had not produced the grant under which he held the land; and being of opinion that the tenure was not in the nature of free land, and consequently that the claim should have been brought forward many years before, the suit was thrown out under the Statute of Limitations. On appeal, it was held that it was doubtful whether the tenure of Bandī Ja- mu conveyed a proprietary right or not: if it did not, the claim, not having been preferred within twelve years, would fall under the Statute of Limitations. But independently of this question, it was decided, that, as the practical application of the measurement made by the revenue survey had been so generally taken as a rule in the Guzerat Zillahs, the Court saw no reason for excepting this claim. Dessucc Ruttonjee Bheembhace v. Purshotum Laldass Jugeccun. 16th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 105.—Ironside, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

2. Birt Ijārah.

23. A grant made to a person under the peculiar title Birt Ijārah was construed to convey a tenure inheritable by the heir of the grantee, and entitling him to hold the lands at the Istimārī Jama specified in the grant. Collector of Dinajpoor and another v. Gorchund Surma. 23d Jan. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

3. Mukaddamī.

24. The Mukaddamī tenure in Zillah Bhaurulpore was adjudged to be separable, as a proprietary estate (under Secs. 4. and 5. of Reg. VIII. of 1793), from the Chaudharī to which it had been theretofore annexed. Runglal Choudhery v. Ramonath Dass.<sup>1</sup> 24th June 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 114.

<sup>1</sup> In this case the Court found, from evidence adduced in another cause, decided by the Moorshedabad Provincial Court, between a Choudhari and a Mukaddam in the same Pergunnah (in which a decree was passed in favour of the defendant, he having purchased his Mukaddamī tenure from the former Malik), that the Mukaddams of the Mauzas, in the greater number of the Pergunnahs of Bhaurulpore, are entitled to all the privileges of Mālikhs in the other Zillahs of Behar; that their possessions are hereditary; that they do not hold their lands

4. Mukarrarî.

25. It was held that no other than the original Mukarrarîdâr, or his assignees, can claim to share in the benefit of Mukarrarî tenures granted by Mr. Law in Zillah Behar, co-sharership in the Milkiyat originally not conferring any title. Deodutt Rai and others v. Oodwunt Rai and others. 27th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 226.—Leycester & Dorin.

26. It was held that a Mukarrarî tenure, confirmed at the decennial settlement by Government, when all the under Pottas from any Zamîndâr or Chaudharî; and that their Mukaddamî tenures have existed from time immemorial in common with the Chaudharî, and are equally hereditary and transferable; that the Mukaddams, moreover, exercise a full right of property in selling the lands of their Mukaddamî villages by regular bills of sale, which, in several instances, have been attested by the Chaudharî, and which bills expressly declare the proprietary right of the seller to be transferred to the purchaser; that the interest of the Mukaddam appears to be greater than that of the Chaudharî. It appeared also, from the evidence of several witnesses, that for some years antecedent to the permanent settlement, when the lands were let in farm, or held Khâs by the officers of Government, the usual Mâlîkânch allowance of 10 per cent. was equally divided between the Mukaddam and Chaudharî. It further appeared that the Mukaddam receives from the Ryots of the produce appropriated for the maintenance of those officers, both in kind and in money, a share greater than that of the Chaudharî, in the proportion of four to one, and that this allowance is also termed Mâlîkânch, and is the portion of gross produce from time immemorial allotted to the proprietor or officer called Mukaddam, who is also styled the Mâlîk Mukaddam.

For more detailed information of the grounds on which the judgment was given in the above case of Runglul Chowdhry v. Ramunath Dass, and especially for the necessary distinction between the Mâlîk Mukaddams of Zillah Bhagulpore and other parts of the province of Behar, and the Mandal Mukaddams of Bengal (who are only the chief Ryots of their respective villages), see Minute of the Chief Judge (Harrington), containing his opinion in the case alluded to, and printed in the Third Volume of his Analysis of the Laws and Regulations, 391—395, 1st Edit.

circumstances connected with the original grant were known, cannot be resumed on the ground of want of authority in the original grantor after an interval of twenty-eight years, during which time the rent had been paid at an invariable rate. Baboo Byjnath Sahoo v. Government. 29th Nov. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 275.—Rc

5. Patnî.

The right of landholders of Patnî Talooks of the second or lower degrees in the Zamîndârî of Burdwan is not liable to be cancelled by the resignation of the Patnidâr who granted the Talook. It can only be cancelled by a public sale for arrears of revenue.<sup>1</sup> Kowla Kant Mokerjea v. Ram Mohan Gosain and others. 21st Dec. 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 325.—Fendall & Goad.

28. It was held, that on the forfeit-

<sup>1</sup> Sec. 11. of Reg. VIII. of 1819 declares that the sale of a Patnî Talook by public auction, for arrears of rent due to the Zamîndâr, invalidates the transfer by sale or gift of any portion thereof, and that the auction purchaser shall receive the tenure free from any incumbrances which may have accrued by the act of the defaulter or his legal representatives. Hence the holders of a Patnî Talook of the second, or any lower degree, lose their right to hold possession of the land, and to collect the rents of the Ryots, this right having been merely enjoyed in consequence of the defaulter's assignment of a certain portion of his own interest, the whole of which was liable for the rent. This rule, however, is explained,

12. of the same Regulation, not to apply to any private transfer by a Patnî Talookdâr of his own interest, nor to a public sale in execution of a decree, nor to a case of relinquishment by the Talookdâr in favour of the Zamîndâr, or to any act originating with him other than default as aforesaid: for all such operations involve only a transfer of the tenure in the state in which it may be at the time; and the new incumbrance succeeds to no more than the reserved rights of the former tenant, such as they may be, and is, of course, subject to any restriction put upon the tenure by his act.—Macn.

ure of a Patni tenure for arrears of rent, the Darpatni tenures under it cease also, though the holders of them be not defaulters, and though, subsequently to the default of the Sudder Patnidár, the Zamindár may have required them to pay their rents into his Kach'hari. Mohun Geer Mohunt v. Radhamohun Ghutuk. 25th Sept. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 179.—Leycester & Dorin.

29. It was held that it is lawful for the Zamindár to conclude a settlement with other individuals for a Patni Talook, with the permission of the Zillah Court, when the Sudder Patnidár has fallen into arrears, though his sharers, whose names were not recorded in the Zamindari records, had deposited their quota of the arrears in the treasury of the Zillah; but they were declared to be at liberty to sue him for any damage they might have sustained by his default. Ramdoolal Misser and others v. Rammohun Sarunt and others. 29th Dec. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 295.—Leycester.

30. A asserted a right to hold an inferior Patni as part of a subdivision of a superior Patni, the whole of which had been acquired by B from the Zamindár under a sale, preceded by an award of arrears (against the apparent Sudder Patnidár, or tenant-in-chief of the whole), and by an auction. In default of clear and direct evidence to the subdivision, and therefore to the distinct tenancy-in-chief of A's grantor, it was held that his tenure could not be protected against the operation of Sec. 12. of Reg. VIII. of 1819. Hara Sundari Dasya and others v. Kali Dás Bose and others. 30th Aug. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 64.—Ross & Rattray.

31. In 1810 A proceeded summarily, under Regulation VII. of 1799, against B, his Patnidár, for a defined balance of rent. The Judge found something to be due; but not being able to make a specific award, he referred A to a civil action, providing, however, that he might sell the under tenure, and settle with another. A did sell, and settled with C, at a diminished rent. He then sued B for a balance of rent after setting off the price he had received for the tenure. Part of his claim was dismissed in 1812 as not exigible, and the rest awarded. In 1823 B sued A and C to recover the Patni tenure, resting his right on pleas by which he had failed to repel the claim of A in 1812. Held, that the claim was not cognizable. Madan Mohan Ray v. Mahá Rajá Tejchandra Bahardur and others. 9th Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 157.—Rattray.

31 a. The plaintiff, a Patnidár, sued to obtain an assessment on certain lands held at a fixed rent under an alleged Málqúzárí Aímah grant. The claim was dismissed on proof that the grant was dated previously to the decennial settlement, and that the Aímah lands had been registered in the Collector's office as a separate Maháll prior to the date of the acquisition of the estate at public sale by the Zamindár from whom the plaintiff purchased his Patni tenure. Fukeerchand Sein v. Pran Kishen Haldar and another. 20th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 86.—Barwell & Hallid.

31 b. A purchases an estate from B. It subsequently appears that the estate did not belong entirely to B, but that a fractional part of it was held by him in Patni. Held, that the purchaser is liable for the rent of the Patni tenure due to the proprietor, so long as possession is held under the purchase. Ashotoss Dey and another v. Bhyrubchander Bose. 21st Sept. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 183.—Braddon & F. C. Smith.

32. The purchaser of an estate, sold for the recovery of arrears of revenue due on account of the same, acquires the estate free from all incumbrances which may have been imposed upon it after the settlement, and is competent to avoid and annul a Patni tenure created by the defaulter or his predecessors, and to entitle the purchaser to demand a higher rate of rent from the Patnidár than was demandable by the former Malguzár. A private purchaser buying from a public revenue auction-purchaser was held by the Court to have precisely the same power of annulling a Patni tenure. Munshi Muhammad Amír and others v. Ráj Kishn Bós and others. 15th Dec. 1841. 2 Sev. Cases, 325.

32*a*. Held, that under Sec. 9. of Reg. VIII. of 1819, a Darpatnidár may buy the Patni tenure, if he do not fraudulently withhold any balance due from him to his Patnidár. Fukker Chand Mitter v. Hills and others. 20th Jan. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 153.—Reid, Dick, & Gordon.

32*b*. In an action for the recovery of the price of a Darpatni tenure, lost to the plaintiff by the defendant having allowed the sale of his Patni tenure, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut decreed against the plaintiff; 1st, because the plaintiff were themselves the purchasers of the Patni tenure; and 2dly, because, as Darpatnidárs, they were in balance at the time of the sale of the Patni tenure.<sup>1</sup> Same v. Same. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 154.—Reid, Dick, & Gordon.

32*c*. Held, that a Patnidár cannot be summarily sued for arrears of rent. Raja Bidanund Sing v. Lutchmee Dutt Paurey and another. 30th May 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 171.—Ratray, Tucker, & Barlow.

32*d*. The sale of a Patni Talook, under attachment by order of the Civil Court, cannot for that reason be deferred, in the event of its becoming liable to sale under Reg. VIII. of 1819 for arrears due to the Zamindár. Ram Koomar Banoorjee v. Salt Agent of Bullooh. 20th Sept. 1844. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 61.—Reid & Barlow.

6. Talook.

33. Where a Talookdár appeared to have a proprietary right in his Talook, which, under the provisions of Reg. VIII. of 1793, entitled him to have it separated from the Zamindári, the Court advised him to apply to the Collector of the district for separation, in order that his Jama might be adjusted for future years, according to the Regulations. Bho-bindur Narain and another v. Bishennath Rai. 14th Aug. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 100.—H. Colebrooke, Harington, & Fombelle.

34. Where the plaintiff claimed a Talook under a deed of gift from his father the Zamindár, made prior to the sale of the Zamindári by the Sheriff, the deed of gift was upheld; and from its terms, by which the Talook was transferred to the plaintiff in full property, the Court considered that he was entitled to have the Talook separated from the Zamindári, and to hold it independent of the Zamindár, under the provisions of Reg. VIII. of 1793, and accordingly instructed the plaintiff to take measures for its separation. Anundchund Rai v. Kishen Mohun Bunoja and others. 4th Dec. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 115.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

35. The claim of an appellant to the Talookdári right of certain lands in the Zamindári of the respondents was not proved, and dismissed; but on proof of a right to hold the lands as a Maurúsi Ijrah, or hereditary leasehold, at the customary rent of the Pergunnah, judgment was given accordingly.<sup>2</sup> Dyaram v. Bhoabin.

<sup>2</sup> A Talook and a Maurúsi Ijrah, though both hereditary, differ in some important points. The former denomination includes tenures of various descriptions, some of which vest the Talookdár with a full right of property, and entitle him, under the Rules for the permanent settlement of the land revenue, to become independent of the Zamindár, through whom he formerly paid his rent, and to pay his fixed assessment directly to Government. Other Talooks are dependent on the Zamindári from the lands of which they are formed, but are secured by special provisions from undue exactions of rent. The Potta, or lease, for dur Naruen and another. 9th June 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Harington & Fombelle.

36. The lands of a Talookdār appearing separable from the Zamīndārī, judgment was given for their separation, and for the balance of arrears of rent due to the Zamīndār, to be settled according to the rate of revenue which should be then assessed on them.<sup>1</sup> Birjishwor and others v. Sumbhoobund Rai. 13th June 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 141.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

37. The purchase of a Talook, made while the Zamīndārī was under attachment by the Sheriff for a public sale, under the orders of the Supreme Court, was declared to be invalid against the purchaser at the public sale, but obligatory on the former Zamīndār and his heir, in the event of the public sale being set aside. Munroop Rai v. Ramjee Bunoja and another.<sup>2</sup> 22d Dec. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 172. — H. Colebrooke &

Fombelle. Petumber Bhattacharj v. Ramjee Bunoja. 3d July 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 195.—Harington & Fombelle.

38. A Potta for the sale of a dependent Talook at a fixed rent in perpetuity is invalid under Sec. 2. of Reg. XLIV. of 1793 (rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. V. of 1812, but re-enacted for the ceded and conquered provinces by Reg. XIV. of 1812) with respect to the fixed rent, but valid for the sale.<sup>3</sup> Munroop Rai v. Ramjee Bunoja and another. 22d Dec. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 172.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle. Petumber Bhattacharj v. Ramjee Bunoja. 3d July 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 195.—Harington & Fombelle. Gopee Mohun Thakoor and another v. Ramtunno Bose. 30th June 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 19.—Harington & Fombelle.

a Maorisi Ijrah does not specifically convey more than an hereditary right of occupancy. If it be not Istimrārī, or entitling the tenant to hold at a fixed rent, the amount of the annual rent payable to the Zamīndār is variable; and, when not settled by mutual agreement, is determinable only by the indefinite standard of the "customary rate of the Pergunnah," that is, the rent paid by similar tenures in the same Pergunnah.—Maen.

<sup>1</sup> As the Talookdār was entitled, according to the judgment of all the Courts, to separation of his lands as an independent Talook, the Zamīndār could have a right only to such revenue from the Talookdār as he might be considered to have paid to Government on his account antecedently to the separation; in other words, the Zamīndār should be placed in the same situation in which he would have stood had the separation already taken effect. The Court, on this principle, provided for the final adjustment of the accounts of revenue between the parties at the same rate at which the future revenue to be paid by the Talookdār to Government might be fixed.—Maen.

<sup>2</sup> The final decision on this cause was partly founded on the principle, that the owner of an estate, disposing of part of it as a dependent tenure, while the estate is under attachment preparatory to a public sale, binds himself and his heirs by such a disposal, in the event of the attachment being subsequently withdrawn, or the public sale, if made, being set aside, and the estate restored to the original owner or his legal representative; though, if the public sale for which the attachment was made take place, and remain in force, any transfer or lease made by the late proprietor during the attachment is not valid against the public purchaser.—Maen.

<sup>3</sup> The Sadder Dewanny Adawlat recognizes an important distinction in the construction of Sec. 2. of Reg. XLIV. of 1793 between the engagement for the Jama, or rent, and the tenure of the land for which such rent is engaged to be paid. The declared object of that Regulation being to prevent leases of dependent Talooks, or other under-tenures, for a long term, or in perpetuity, at a reduced rent, while it was at the same time expressly declared in the 7th Section that "nothing contained in this Regulation shall be construed to prohibit any Zamīndār, independent Talookdār, or other actual proprietor of land, from selling, giving, or otherwise disposing of any part of his lands as a dependent Talook," the Court (as it had before done on a reference of the question from one of the Zillah Judges in May 1798) considered the engagement for the fixed rent only to be declared void by the rule contained in the 2d Section of the Regulation, without the right of tenancy in the land, as stipulated between the parties, being in any other respect affected. The same principle is applicable to all remedial laws, which are to be interpreted with a view to the intended remedy, and its advancement.—Maen.

39. In a claim by A for possession of a Talook at a fixed rent, under a deed of sale from a Zamindár, whose estate had been sold under the authority of the Supreme Court, and purchased by B; it was decided that A's title to possession, and to mesne profits during the period of disposition, should be upheld, and that the rent should be adjusted under the rules of Sec. 8. of Reg. V. of 1812. Gopee Mohun Thakoor v. Ramtunnoo Bhose. 30th June 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 19.—Harington & Fombelle.

40. In a suit by a Zamindár against a Talookdár to recover arrears of rent, the latter pleads an engagement contracted by him with the former proprietor, authorizing him to hold his lands as an independent tenure at a fixed rent. The plaintiff purchased the Zamindáry, partly by private contract, and partly at a public sale for discharge of arrears of revenue. Held, in conformity with the provisions of Reg. XLIV. of 1793,<sup>1</sup> that the defendant's engagement, so far as regards the fixed rent of that part of his Talook included in the public purchase of the plaintiff, was null and void; but the terms of the engagement were good for the period of ten years so far as regards that part of the Talook included in the private purchase. Radhamohun Ghose v. Bhurut Chand Ghose. 1st Sept. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 80.—Fombelle & Stuart.

41. A Talook, originally granted as a dependent tenure, afterward made independent by a Khárij námech (or authority to render the tenure separate and independent), but not actually separated before a public sale of the Zamindáry for arrears of revenue, was included in the sale under the provisions of Sec. 14. of Reg. I. of 1801. But the auction purchaser having subsequently acknowledged the right of the Talookdár to hold the Talook distinct from his Zamindáry, the separation was adjudged, notwithstanding the objections of a second purchaser of the Zamindáry by private sale from the first purchaser. Hurce Narain Rai v. Raj Indur Rai. 7th Dec. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 97. H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

42. A Talook being separated from a Zamindáry by the consent of the parties concerned, and assessed by the Collector at a rate of Jama to which it was subject previously to the separation, without reference to its actual produce, such assessment was declared null and void, and another directed to be made, according to Clause 3. of Sec. 10. of Reg. I. of 1793, which prescribes, that when a portion of an estate shall be transferred by private sale, gift, or otherwise, the assessment upon that portion so transferred shall be fixed at an amount which shall bear the same proportion to its actual produce, as the assessment upon the whole estate may bear to the whole of the actual produce. Baboo Gopee Mohun v. Ishrychurn and others. 7th Dec. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 100.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

43. A sued B for the recovery of a division of a Zamindáry, claiming to hold it as a dependent Talook by right of inheritance. B did not pretend that A's claim was unfounded, but accused A's father of having absconded without paying the revenue, of refusing to return, and of insisting on extraordinary terms, among which was a claim to a remission. The assessment payable by the holder of the Talook amounted to two-ninths of the revenue assessed on the Zamindáry. The Court adjudged, accordingly, that A should hold the division as a dependent Talook, paying to the Zamindár two-ninths of the Jama assessed by Government on the Zamindáry. Rajah Vasseredy Vencatadry Naidoo v. Muctula Vasseredy Vencatadry Naidoo. Case 9 of 1813. 1 Mad. Dec. 74.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

44. A, as Zamindár, exacted from B rent in excess of the sum which B contended was the fixed and unenhanceable rent on his Talook. B recovered the excess in a suit for the same, in which his right to hold at a fixed rent, though not made the principal demand, was incidentally adjudged. Prasanna Nath Ray v. Rani Krishnamani. 12th March 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 274.—Barwell & Walpole.

7. Zamindári.

45. Held, that a Zamindári appearing to have been, by usage, not subject to division, cannot, under Sec. 5. of Reg. II. of 1793, be adjudged to be divided. Radhachurn Mohapatra v. Gungarnan Mohapatra. 5th March 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 207.—Harington & Stuart.

46. Previously to the permanent settlement, succession to Zamindári tenures was not governed exclusively by the laws of inheritance, but the ruling power created, abolished, tolerated, or disposed of them as might be considered most expedient for the purpose of realizing the revenue. Held, that after the permanent settlement, the British Government might therefore grant a Zamindári without regard to the laws of inheritance, exercising a right which, according to the usage of the country, was vested in the ruling power. Vasseredy Chendramouly Naidoo v. Vasseredy Vencatadry Naidoo. Case 13 of 1813. 1 Mad. Dec. 78.—Greenway & Ogilvie. Rajah Vencata Narsimha Oppu Rao v. Raza Vencata Narsimha Appa Rao. Case 4 of 1818. 1 Mad. Dec. 298.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

47. A claimed a certain Zamindári as adopted son of B, the late Zamindár, and his first wife. After B's death, C, his second surviving wife, who was pregnant at the time of B's decease, was delivered of a son, D. D was instated in the Zamindári by C, and enjoyed possession until his decease, sixteen years after the death of his father, B, without any interference on the part of A. A alleged that he had been instated in the Zamindári on the death of B, and had been ousted by C, who then instated her son D, and that on D's death he became entitled to the Zamindári; but failing to prove this, and it not being established that he had been adopted by or under the authority of B, or that he had performed the funeral ceremonies of his alleged adoptive father and mother, his claim was dismissed. Ramasamy Pundarathar v. Perundavy Annal. Case 17 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 186.—Scott & Greenway.

1. The members of a laudable society are not compellable to continue their subscriptions under a deed subjecting them to forfeiture of their advances, and of all benefit from the deed on default in payment. Broome v. Vaughan and others. 22d Feb. 1810. 2 Str. 82.

LAW OF NATIONS.

1. When possession is taken of an uninhabited country, the settlers introduce the laws of their own State; but if a territory already peopled be acquired by conquest or treaty, the existing laws of the territory, which are not incompatible with English law, are continued; but these the King has a right to alter. Jebb v. Lefferre. 1826. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 58.

2. The members of a provisional Government of a recently conquered country having seized the property of a native of the conquered country, who had been refused the benefit of the articles of capitulation of a fortress of which he was Governor, but who had been permitted to reside under military surveillance in his own house in the city in which the seizure was made, and which was at a distance from the scene of actual hostilities; it was held, that the seizure, having been made flagrante et nondum cessante bello, must be regarded in the light of a hostile seizure, and that a Municipal Court had no jurisdiction on the subject. Elphinstone and another v. Bedveechund and another.<sup>1</sup> 14th July 1830. 1 Knapp, 316.

3. Semble, The circumstance that a recently conquered city, where a seizure of the property of a native is made by the members of a provisional Government during the time of war, had been for some months previously in the undisturbed possession of that Government, and that Courts for the administration of justice were then sitting in it under the authority of that Government, do not alter the character of the transaction, so as to make it a subject of cognizance by a Municipal Court. Ib.

4. There is no distinction between the public and private property of an absolute monarch. Money, therefore, in the hands of the banker of an absolute monarch, whose territories have been conquered by the British, may be recovered from the banker on an information on behalf of the Crown. Advocate General of Bombay v. Amerchund. 14th July 1830. 1 Knapp, 329.

v. Khoda Bux. Hyde's Notes. 30th Nov. 1779. Mor. 253.

14. In ejectment, where the lessor of the plaintiff claims by purchase from the defendant, the Potta produced by the plaintiff, though in the name of the defendant, will be held sufficient to support the plaintiff's title. Doe dem. Mistree Khan and others v. Lutcha Beebee. Hyde's Notes. 6th July 1781. Mor. 256.

15. It was held that the lessor of the plaintiff must either produce a Potta, or account for its non-production; but that a purchaser under a Sheriff's sale need not produce a Potta.<sup>1</sup> Doe dem. Ramrutton Tagore v. Helme. Hyde's Notes. 20th March 1783. Sm. R. 78. Mor. 256.

16. The want of a Potta was held to be sufficiently accounted for by shewing the entry of the substance, shortly, in the Company's books, it not being at that time the practice in the Collector's office to keep copies of Pottas. Doe dem. Toolshey Dossey v. Choyton Seal. 20th July 1784. Sm. R. 78.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

17. Where the appellant made a claim on the respondent for arrears of rent, and to set aside the lease of a Talook, in consequence of the terms not being fulfilled; part of the sum claimed was adjudged as having been illegally received from the lessor by respondent and his ancestor, and part was held to be recoverable from others. The respondent not being the lessee, the claim of the appellants to set aside the lease was rejected. Casinath and others v. Aboo Moohumud Khan. 10th July 1805. 1 S.

<sup>1</sup> This judgment was afterwards reversed on an appeal to the King in Council, but upon a totally different ground. Chamib. Notes. 12th Nov. 1790.

D. A. Rep. 95.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

18. On a demand by a farmer on two under-renters for possession of lands for which they were in balance at the end of the first year of a lease which had been granted to them, and which they refused to give up, summary judgment was given for the farmer by the Zillah Court, and under Cl. 7. of Sec. 15. of Reg. VII. of 1799; and a fine of Rs. 100. was imposed on the under-renters for having retained possession of the lands by force. Held, that the summary judgment was just and regular, with the exception of the fine, which was not authorized by the Regulations. The Court, however, as the judgment was summary, gave an option to the under-renters to bring a regular suit for the trial of their right of possession if they thought themselves aggrieved.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The rule on which the final judgment in this case was grounded is contained in the 7th Cl. of Sect. 15. of Reg. VII. of 1799, which prescribes what measures may be taken by landholders and farmers for the security of their future rents, if the arrears due to them from their under-tenants be not liquidated within the current year, by the process described in the preceding clause of that section. It is therein declared, that if the defaulter be a leaseholder, having a right of occupancy only so long as a certain rent be paid, without any right of property or transferable possession, the proprietor, or farmer, from whom the defaulter holds his tenure, has the right of ousting him from the tenure he has forfeited by a breach of the conditions of it. It is further declared, that in such cases proprietors and farmers of land are at liberty to exercise the just powers appertaining to them, without any previous application to the Courts of Justice. But as, in the present instance, the under-tenants resisted the farmer's attempt to exercise his just powers, the Court, in consideration of the general spirit and intention of the clause above noticed, construed it to authorise the summary interposition of the Zillah Judge, on application from the farmer to enforce his right of removing a defaulting tenant, in like manner as it expressly provided for bringing to sale, by application to the Dewanny Adawlut, a dependent Talook, or other transferable tenure, in satisfaction of an arrear of rent due at the end of a year from the holder of such tenure.—Maen.

19. Mukarrari leases, granted by the Collector of Zillah Behar in 1788, and sanctioned by the Government and Court of Directors, were held not to be annulled by the subsequent promulgation of general rules for the decennial settlement of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa.<sup>1</sup> Goolab Narain v. Pretum Singh. 7th Sept. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 130.—Harington.

20. A received an advance from B as a loan, free of interest, for a given time, and gave a concurrent lease of an estate at a fixed rent, which was less than the Sudder Jama, and engaged that B should hold over till paid. A sued B to set aside the lease, and recover, as cancelled, his bond, on the ground that the lease was a device to evade the usury law, and the transaction was by a mortgage, and his debt replaced by the profits of the estate; but the transaction not appearing to the Court to be a device, as charged, nor unfair, A's claim was dismissed, and the right of B to hold over sustained. Sayud Athar Ali and another v. Rai Nawazi Lal. 1st Feb. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 8.—Sealy & Rattray.

21. A, on the plea of having conditionally sold certain lands to B, obtains possession of them by a summary order of the Zillah Judge, by repayment of the money, and grants a lease thereof for five years to C. B, alleging the sale to have been irrevocable, appeals, and regains possession; and the lands having been sold by public auction, in satisfaction of a decree and for public revenue, a regular suit is brought by the auction purchasers against A and B, and the sale is declared revocable, and the lands adjudged to them.

Held, that the lease to C is of no avail to recover profits in an action after the revocability of the sale had been judicially established. Sarup Chand Sarhar v. Raja Gris Chandra and others. 15th Aug. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—H. Shakespear.

22. Where a tenant had not given up possession of houses hired by him, after receiving warning agreeably to the conditions specified in the lease, and a notice afterwards served on him to the effect that if the premises were not given up within a certain time named in such notice that rent could be raised from the expiration of that period; held, that he should pay the increased rent specified in the notice to quit, with interest up to the date of payment. Woodin v. Aboul Kheir Mahommed Ali. 7th Jan. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 15.—Stockwell.

23. A claim by certain Zamin-dars for rent of land leased to the defendant was dismissed, it appearing the lands were included in another lease previously given by the same lessors to another party. Watson and others v. Rajah Kishen Chund and another. 1st May 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 161.—Hutchinson and F. C. Smith.

23b. A lease for seven years of a farmed Pergunna in Bengal was granted by the Rájah of Burdwan. The lease was not executed in writing, but the terms of holding were defined by a notice sent by the Rájah to the tenants of the premises. The lessee died before the termination of the demised term, when the lessor evicted the lessee's representatives, and granted a fresh lease to another at an increased rent. Held, in a suit brought by the representatives of the lessee, to recover compensation for loss of profits, that the act of dispossession was wrongful, the remainder of the term surviving to the heirs and representatives of the deceased lessee, and damages were decreed to be paid by the lessor, calculated upon the increased rental awarded. Maharaja Tej Chund Bahadur v. Sri Kanth Ghose and others. 8th Feb. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 261.

2. Pottas.

24. It was held, that under Sec. 2. of Reg. XLIV. of 1793,<sup>1</sup> a Potta for the sale of a Talook at a fixed rent in perpetuity, is invalid with respect to the fixed rent, but valid for the sale. *Munroop Rai v. 25. Where the proprietors of a Jágir claimed to recover certain lands from a person who asserted a right to hold them under a Mukarrari Potta at a low rent, it was held, on proof that the Potta was obtained from the agent of the Jágirdárs without their authority or knowledge, that such Potta should be set aside, and possession given to the claimants with mesne profits since the date of the suit. Mohammud Reazodeen v. Akbar Ali Khan. 13th June 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 238.—Harington & Fombelle.

26. Where a Zamindár refused to grant a Potta to the respondent, who claimed a right to cultivate certain land under a Mirási tenure, and had deprived him of his right, damages were awarded to the respondent for the time during which the respondent had been kept out of possession of the lands in question under Sec. 14. of Reg. XXV. of 1802. The Court also adjudged that the respondent was entitled to hold the land in question on a Potta defining the rate of division of the produce, which rate, to avoid disputes, should be determined by the Zillah Judge, who should take the evidence of the Kar-nams in open Court, before the parties or their Vakils. Zamindár of Ponary v. Ramasamy Peyer. Case 15. of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 62.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

27. In a suit for possession of lands on a Mukarrari, or fixed Jama, the Potta was set aside by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as it appeared that it had never been acted on, and that the lands specified therein had, both previously and subsequently to the date of the execution thereof, been leased out by the grantor, both in Katkiná and Tjárah, to different persons, and at a variable rate. Rajah Gopeenauth and another v. Mt. Jyaputtee. 6th Feb. 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 225.—Fombelle & Rees.

28. A Mukarrari Potta, or lease at a fixed rent, granted by one of the heirs of a deceased Altamghuldár, acting as Makhtár (or managing agent) of the rest of the heirs, was set aside, where it appeared that it had been granted without their knowledge and concurrence, and that he was not especially empowered by them to grant such Potta. Ameer Bulsh and others v. Moohammud Moostuqem Khan. 27th Feb. 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 230.—Ker & Oswald.

29. A Mukarrari Potta, or lease in perpetuity to an under-renter, granted subsequently to the enactment of Reg. XLIV. of 1793, was set aside as contrary to the provisions of Sec. 2. of that Regulation.<sup>2</sup> Meer Meruk Husein v. Raja Taj Ali Khan. 23d Sept. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 273.

Rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. V. of 1812, but re-enacted for the ceded and conquered provinces by Reg. XIV. of 1812; and see Sec. 2. of Reg. VIII. of 1819.

30. A, a Zamindār, sued B to recover possession of a village forming part of his Zamindārī, and, as he alleged, granted to B in lieu of wages for service. B claimed a right to hold the land as a Surra Mohasa, under a Potta alleged to have been executed by A to B's father in 1800: the Court considered the Potta to be proved. A urged that, by a Koul granting the Zamindārī in lease to him for eight years, and under the conditions of the Samad-i-Milkiyat-i-Istisrar, granted to him in 1803, as well as by the provisions of Sec. 12. of Reg. XXV. of 1802, he was restricted from making alienation of the property. It was held on appeal, setting aside the decision of the Provincial Court, that the clear and obvious intent of the restriction in question, as well as of the corresponding legislative enactments, being to defeat improper alienations, to the prejudice of the rights of Government, or of the successor to the estate, it follows that such alienations are voidable on the determination of the interest of the person who makes them. Thus, if the interest of A had ceased on the termination of the eight years' lease, and the Zamindārī had been assigned to another; or if, pending that lease, the Zamindārī had been attached for non-payment of revenue; in the first case the grant to B's father would have been voided, and in the second it would cease to take effect so long as the attachment should last. But if the restriction be made to operate more largely, and be construed to render the grant null and void, it would be carried beyond the object for which it was intended. It must be observed that A's interest suffered no interruption since the date of the grant to B's father; for before the termination of the eight years' lease, the Zamindārī was granted to him in perpetuity. B was accordingly adjudged to hold possession of the village under the Potta, subject to the operation of the above general principles; and the Court ordered that A should restore the village to B, together with the mesne profits thereof, from the date on which A obtained possession under the decree of the Lower Court; A to pay costs in both Courts. Rajah Bhoguntay Sooriah v. Rajah Rao Venkata Neeladry Rao. Case 6 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 284.—Stratton & Harris.

31. A Muharrari lease of lands in Zillah Behar was continued to the heir of the grantee, the successor of the grantor not proving that it was a life grant only.<sup>1</sup> Chowdhree Dood Rai Singh v. Mohommud Yahi Khan. 12th April 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 332.—C. Smith & Ahmuty.

32. Zamindārs cannot alter the Potta granted to Muharraridārs by increasing the fixed Tistimrari Jama.<sup>2</sup>

Baboo Ramnarain v. Gokul Chund and another. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 131.

33. A Mukharrari Potta, executed by a Zamindár in favour of the Collector's Diwán, being declared void under Sec. 15. of Reg. II. of 1793, the heirs of the Diwán were ordered to relinquish possession in favour of the heirs of the Zamindár, though the death of the Zamindár took place eighteen years before the institution of the suit; the extreme youth of the heirs, and other circumstances of the case, being held to be sufficient to account for the delay in suing. Bindrabun Bose v. Baboo Joneahir Singh and others. 13th March 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 130.—Leycester & Dorin.

34. It was held that Pottas granted by the ostensible auction purchaser of lands, and conditioning that, at the end of ten years, the lease should continue on the same terms (it being then, by Reg. XI. IV. of 1793, not legal to grant a longer lease than ten years), were binding against the real purchaser, and good against his claim to enhanced assessment at the end of the term, without, however, affecting the rights of Government, or any future purchaser of the whole Pergunnah, in case of a public sale for arrears. Ram Narain Rai v. Reaz Oodeen and others. 16th Jan. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 193.—Leycester & Dorin.

3. Lease in Perpetuity.

35. A lease granted in perpetuity by the Collector of Benares will not, at the grantee's death, devolve on his heirs if it have not been confirmed by the Board of Revenue or Government, according to the provisions of Sec. 18. of Reg. VI. of 1795. The Collector of Benares v. Ooma Bacc and another. 14th Nov. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 52.—Sir J. Colebrooke & Goad.

36. The Court ordered a lease to be cancelled though it contained no mention of a term, it not being expressly declared to be perpetual, and appearing to have been granted to the same person, on the same day, and for the same lands, as a deed of mortgage, and therefore evidently intended only as an additional security for a debt. Ramnarain Mitter v. Kallee Pershad Rai and others. 21st June 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 372.—Almuty.

37. Perpetual leases, Jáwarchánd Divákar (as long as the sun and moon), cannot be resumed by the lessor as long as the lessee pays the rent. Kawal Purbhassanjee Veerumsingjee v. Adamjee Hasbacc. 28th July 1831. Sel. Rep. 60.—Ironsides, Barnard, & Baillie.

37 a. It was held that a tenant on a perpetua' lease has the power, even although in balance, of resigning his lease, if he do so formally, and at the proper season, i.e. the close of the year. Rajah Kishenchunder Bahadoor v. Shankeree Dasser and others. 12th June 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 174.—Reid & Gordon (Dick, dissent.).

4. Life Leases.

38. It was held that the Shicáit, or Superintendent of a religious establishment, is not competent to grant a lease of the lands appertaining to the establishment for a longer period than his own life. Radha Ballubh Chund and others v. Juggut Chunder Chowdree and others. 8th May 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 151.—Leycester & Dorin.

39. A lessee for life was, by the terms of the lease, restricted to the cultivation of indigo. Held, on a liberal construction, that it was not vitiated by the growth of grain necessary for the support of the cultivators. Raja Grischandra Ray v. Commissioner of the Sandarbans. 16th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 205.—Walpole.

39 a. A lease to A for life may be assigned and transferred, and will continue during A's life. Ib.

40. A limited lease, containing a stipulation of renewal, without mention of any further limitation, or any phrase which could be so construed as to confer perpetual or heritable right on the lessees, was limited by the Court to the term of the natural lives of the lessees. Hurris Chunder Dhur v. Gunga Dhur Dass and another. 26th Jan. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 49.—Rattray & Stockwell.

41. In a case of life lease, it was held that repeated transfers of the rights of the lessee, and length of possession, form no bar to the recovery of possession of the lands by the lessor or his representative on the death of the lessee. Bishemath Biswas and others v. Maharajah Grischunder Deb and another. 21st April 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 94.—Lee Warner & Reid.

5. Liability for Rent.

42. A sued B and C for land and profits with interest from title acquire. B contested the title; C merely asserted tenure, subject to rent derived from B, which tenure A disputed. Though A proved his title and recovered, subject to C's tenure, C, by decree, was made liable for rent from the date of judgment only, and not from the date of A's title, or any other prior date. Pránnáth Chaudhuri and another v. Chandramani Devi. 25th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 328.—Braddon.

43. Held, that a planter, lessee of certain lands for the cultivation of indigo, selling his factory to another, and transferring his lease, is nevertheless responsible to the lessor for the rents due under the engagement executed by him as lessee, but has his action against the transferee. Motee Baboo v. Moses Khachik Arakel. 6th May 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 67.—Barwell & Stockwell.

43 a. The leasing out of lands to a third party, during the unexpired period of a lease, renders the lessor liable to repay the rents drawn under its terms, with legal interest, subject to the cancelment of the intermediate lease, and restoration of the possession of the lands to the original lessee, together with the gross rent, less ten per cent. for collections, leviable from those who combined to share the gross rents and produce of the lands and to keep the lessee out of possession. Mirza Mahammad Hussun and another v. Forbes. 28th May 1845. Decis. S. D. A. 1845. 178. 2 Sev. Cases, 273.—Court at large.

6. Renewal.

44. Where A claimed from B, a landed proprietor, the produce of lands of which a lease had been granted to A for four years, and renewed in the same year for ten years further, but possession taken from him in favour of a new lessee; it was held that A was entitled to the produce of the lands during the term of the original lease, but that the renewed lease, as being the renewal of a former lease before the last year of its term, was contrary to Sec. 2<sup>1</sup> of Reg. XLIV. of 1793, and therefore void. Bhannjun Sing v. Moher Sing. 4th Sept. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 212.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

45. A received an advance from B on executing a lease of certain lands for a specified period, with a further condition that if the debt were not repaid in full, on the expiration of the terms of the lease, the lease should be continued to B till the loan was paid. Two years before the lease expired B was ejected, in execution of a decree of the Provincial Court, for the same lands, obtained by C against A, which decree was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the lands restored to A as proprietor. Held, that, under such circumstances, B, the lessee, was entitled to recover and hold possession, under the terms of his lease, until the payment of the debt due to him by A, notwithstanding the expiration of the term of the original lease. Girdharee Lal v. Mt. Kadira. 24th June 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 175.—Braddon & Harding. (Hutchinson, dissent.).

7. Lease by way of Mortgage.

42. A lease granted in consideration of an advance of a sum of money was held to be equivalent to a mortgage, and the lessee was declared liable for such surplus proceeds of the estate as remained after he had realized his principal with interest. Mohunt Teekumbhartee v. Syud Ihsan Ali. 16th July 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 251.—C. Smith.

8. Annulment.

43. The order of a Zillah Judge, declaring that a sale in execution of a decree, which adjudged repayment of a loan previously advanced to protect the same property from public sale for arrears of revenue, had the same effect as such public sale, and cancelled all leases granted by the late proprietor, was overruled. Rai Mukhoond Kishwur, Petitioner. 30th June 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 13.—Reid.

44. Failure in a lessee (after a formal written notice duly served) to furnish fresh security on the death of his Mulzamin, annuls the lease and engagement contracted between the lessor and lessee. *Mirza Mahammad Hussain and another v. ### LIEN.

1. The factor for the owner of a ship having disbursed money upon her, and being otherwise a creditor in account with his principal, has a lien on her, not defeasible by a subsequent invalid purchase of her by such factor, which lien will protect his possession in a suit for it in the Admiralty Court, founded upon an assignment by the owner, with delivery of the grand bill of sale, such assignment being subsequent in time to that of her coming into the hands of the factor, as such, and to the disbursements, and accruer of a balance on her and her owner's account. Talloh and others v. Bruce and another. 15th May 1807. 1 Str. 230.

2. But this was afterwards reversed on appeal; and it was declared that, under the circumstances, the factor had no lien on the ship in respect of his expenditure concerning her. Same v. Same. 24th June 1812. 1 Str. 264.

3. A judgment docketed according to the 48th plea rule, and fieri facias issued, does not constitute a lien on the lands of the debtor. Colvin v. Oboychurn Dutt. 1st Term 1833. Cl. R. 1834. 46.

4. A drew five bills in favour of B, on F and Co., who accepted the same, and got them discounted by the Bank of Bengal, and on their becoming due procured their renewal. F and Co. subsequently drew three bills on the Bank of Bengal, and for securing, as well the repayment of the principal sum due on these bills and interest, as of all and every sum or sums which the Bank had already advanced, or should advance, on account of the drawers, deposited, as collateral securities, various quantities of Chili copper of a larger amount in value than the advances then made. By a condition in these bills, the Bank was authorized, in default of payment within the time stipulated, to dispose of the copper by public or private sale, and to re-imburse themselves the principal and interest due thereon. Shortly afterwards F and Co. failed, and assignees of their estate and effects were granted under the Indian Insolvent Act. On presentation to A of the first of the renewed bills, he served notice on the Bank not to part with the securities so deposited with them as aforesaid, alleging that the bills drawn and renewed by him were accommodation bills, for which he had not received any consideration, and were renewed on the faith of the securities being applicable to their discharge. The assignees of F and Co. redeemed the copper by paying to the Bank the amount of the principal and interest due upon the bills drawn by F and Co. All the bills drawn by A were dishonoured, and the Bank of Bengal brought an action against A for their amount. On a bill filed by A, on the equity side of the Supreme Court at Bengal, the Bank were restrained by injunction from proceeding with the action at law. Held on appeal, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, discharging the injunction, and reversing the decree of the Supreme Court, that, under the circumstances, the redemption of the securities was a sale within the meaning of the condition contained in the deposit bills; and that such sale was not a release to A, as surety for the previous bills, the condition not being that the copper, or the proceeds thereof, should be applied preferentially, or puri passu, with the other debts, but simply in reimbursement to the Bank of the principal and interest due upon the bills. The Bank of Bengal v. Radahissen Mitter. 28th June 1842. 3 Moore Ind. App. 19.

5. The endorsement of Bank of Bengal certificates is not sufficient to convey the property under Sec. 9. of Act VI. of 1839; but there is nothing in the Act which says that the interest shall not thus be passed, or that the certificates shall not be given as a security. But a lien may be created by deposit. The general rule is, that goods in pledge cannot be re-pledged; but a sub-bailee may hold against a bailor until the bailee's lien is satisfied. Wood v. Goluchchunder Podar. 1st Term 1843. 1 Fulton, 139.

1. If the owner of real property, whether land or other, allow another to hold it for three generations under any deed, without claiming it, such property becomes lost to him, and ownership accrues to the person in possession. But as three generations may lapse in two or three years, it is provided by the Shashtra that the actual possessor's ownership shall ensue if the property has been held for any time after the Smartha Kal, or extreme age of man. In the Mitáshará this Smartha Kal is fixed at 100 years; however, Katyáyana and Vyasa state sixty years as the time when three generations may be said to have passed over, and after which the claim of the original proprietor is null under any plea. Sugud Ghoolam Raza v. Aja Bhawe and others. 1 Borr. 367.

2. The right of a Hindú widow is not necessarily forfeited by her omitting to apply for separate possession of her husband's undivided share for more than twelve years after his death. Mt. Dhunnamnee v. Sontun Sahoo and others. 3d May 1820, 3 S. D. A. Rep. 30.—Fendall & Goad.

3. A claim to inheritance may be preferred at any time subsequent to the death of the ancestor without limitation. Mt. Khanum Jan v. Mt. Jan Beebee. 13th Feb. 1827.—Leycester & Dorin.

III. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Statute.

4. A plea of the Statute of Limitations, pleaded in an action of trespass, not committed within four years next before the exhibiting the plaint, and the Supreme Court not having been established four years, was held to be no bar. Attaram Sircar v. Baillie. Hyde's Notes. 12th May 1776. Mor. 336.

5. The Court agreed that the British Statute of Limitations did not apply to India, but that for the periods of time, reckoning from the time of opening the Supreme Court, the Judges would apply them as rules of discretion. Gyanchand Shaw v. Mirza Mahomed Casim Ally Khan. Hyde's Notes. 12th Feb. 1778. Sm. R. 25. Mor. 337.

6. A replication to a plea of the Statute of Limitations, that the defendant was not amenable to the Mayor's Court, nor to any other English Court, and that he commenced the action within six years after the establishment of the Supreme Court, was held good. Ahgan Hadji Mahomed v. Juggut Seet Cossaul Chund. Hyde's Notes. 3d March 1779. Sm. R. 143. Mor. 338.

7. A plea of the Statute of Limitations in an action of trespass, quare clausum fregit, where the Supreme Court had not been established six years was held bad. But, Semble, That it would have been considered a good plea if it had appeared on the pleadings that the action might have been brought in the Mayor's Court. Kissenchunder Ghosaul v. Watson. Hyde's Notes. 14th Nov. 1780. Mor. 339.

8. In an action of assumpsit, where the defendant pleaded (with the general issue) the Statute of Limitations, the replication that the action was commenced within six years after the establishment of the Supreme Court was held good. Bancharam Roy and another v. Summer. Hyde's Notes. 31st March 1781. Mor. 340.

9. It was doubted whether the Statute of Limitations extended to India; but if so, the exceptions and provisions must extend there also, and instead of the words "within this realm," the words must be understood "within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and within the districts of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa;" and instead of the words "beyond seas," "beyond those districts and out of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court." Verelst v. Levett and others. Hyde's Notes. 8th July 1782. Mor. 340.

10. But it was decided, subsequently, that the Statute of Limitations does extend to India; and in an action of assumpsit, the plea non assumpsit infra sex annos was held good.<sup>1</sup> Trelocharn Chatterjee v. Phillips. Chamb. Notes. 16th Feb. 1787. Sm. R. 93. Mor. 341.

10 a. Twenty years' possession by a defendant is sufficient to bar an action of trespass. Bulram Chund v. Tiretta and another. Chamb. Notes. 20th July 1790. Mor. 343.

11. Twenty years' possession is a good bar in ejectment; and the party suing having been prevented from suing, or entering upon the land, by any disability, cannot avail himself of the exception in his favour unless he sues within ten years from the removal of such disability. Doe dem. Durgachurn Buhshy and others v. Wyatt. Chamb. Notes. 22d Nov. 1790. Mor. 341.

12. If there be any limitation by Hindú law, it must be pleaded specially between Hindú parties, as the Statute of Limitations is in England. Mohun Persad Takoor v. Loll Beharry. Chamb. Notes. 24th Nov. 1790. Sm. R. 92. Mor. 342.

13. A replication that the parties are Gentoos, and that, according to the laws of the Gentoos, the plaintiff may commence, sue, and prosecute his action at any time whatsoever, was demurred to, and no counsel appearing in support of the replication, the defendant had judgment on the demurrer without argument. Kissen-churn Tagore v. Rempriah Daber, Administratrix of Govindram Tagore. Chamb. Notes. 5th July 1791. Sm. R. 93. Mor. 343.

14. In an action of assumpsit the plea that the defendant did not promise within ten years, was held good where it was not averred that the defendant was a Hindú. The jurisdiction clause merely alleged that the defendant was an inhabitant of Calcutta, and therefore the Court could not presume that the defendant was not a British subject. The Court cannot presume, from the names of parties, that they are Hindús, and therefore the general law, the law of England, must be applicable.<sup>2</sup> Leave to amend was, however, granted on payment of costs. Mahadan Dutt v. Muttee Chund. 4th Term 1824. Mor. 344.

15. Semble, Where a bill, professing to be founded on a contract, being for the amount of a loan made thirty-one years previously, upon interest; and instead of an allegation of an acknowledgment of the demand within six years, there is one only of an undertaking to pay within twenty years from the date of the advance; such undertaking might, in this case, be made in the year the contract was entered into, or the following year, just thirty years previously, to which the Statute of Limitations might have been pleaded. Peeramah Syrang v. Nineapah. 16th Aug. 1808. 1 Str. 283.

16. Between Hindú parties the Statute of Limitations cannot be considered applicable in actions ex contractu. But it seems likely that if the cause of action did not fall within the exceptions in the Statute of the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 17., the Statute of Limitations, the plea of the Statute would be good. Kistnoochunder Sir- car v. Ramdhone Nundy and others. Mor. 345.

<sup>1</sup> Note by Chambers, J. "I understand, from my brother Hyde, that no doubt was ever made by the Advocates, or by the Court, whether or no the Statute of Limitations extends to this country."

<sup>2</sup> Quære, Whether the plea would not have been good if it had appeared upon the record that the defendant was a Hindú?

17. It was expressly determined, on demurrer, that the Statute of Limitations is not applicable, in the Supreme Court, to Hindú parties. The action in this case was on a promissory note. Kistnochund Seal v. Ramdhone Nundy. 1834. Mor. 345.

18. The plea of the Statute of Limitations upon a promissory note cannot be sustained between Hindú parties. Meenaschyer Brahmince v. Arnachella Chittee. 1840. Mor. 345.

IV. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Bengal rule of Limitation.

(a) Generally.

19. Where the plaintiffs had sued for rents of land held by the defendants, due for a period of fourteen years, alleging the existence of another action for other lands between the same parties, to account for the delay in the institution of the present action; it was held, that no sufficient cause had been shewn to bar the application of the rule of limitation laid down in Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793. Rattan Munce Dassea and others v. Shunkurce Dassea and others. 28th May 1838. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 231.—Braddon & Money.

20. A claim to the recovery of lands alleged to be the claimant's right of inheritance was held to be barred by lapse of time, under Sec. 15. of Reg. III. of 1793, as well as under Reg. II. of 1805, the defendant, or his ancestor, appearing to have held bonà fide possession for more than twelve years antecedent to the suit. Lal Rooder Pertab Sing v. Lal Dhokul Sing. 2d Sept. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 253.—Harington & Fombelle.

21. On the claim of a person against the son of his brother for a share of an estate, it appearing that the defendant and his father had held adverse bonà fide possession for more than twelve years, the claim was disallowed. Radhachurn Mohapatar v. Gunganaraen Mohapatar. 5th March 1810. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 297.—Harington & Stuart.

22. Where, in a suit for possession of an estate as the plaintiff's right by inheritance from a banker (who died nineteen years before), it appeared that the ancestor of the defendant, though not the rightful heir, had obtained a public order from the late Government constituting him proprietor of the estate, and that possession had been held, accordingly, for fourteen years prior to the introduction of the British authority into the district; it was held, that the claim was not cognizable under the 5th and 6th Sections of Reg. XIV. of 1805, which restrict the Courts from interfering with acts of the native Government, or with suits in which the cause of action may have arisen more than twelve years before the acquisition of the district. Umrut Ram Chowdry and others v. Kesaree Bae and another. 27th Feb. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 314.—Harington & Fombelle.

23. A claim to the amount of a decree in favour of the ancestor of the plaintiff, passed twenty-four years before, was disallowed, on the presumption, arising from the lapse of time, and other circumstances, that it had been satisfied. Mirza Husun Ali v. Mirza Shureef and others. 5th March 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 317.—Harington & Fombelle.

24. A claim by the appellants to certain lands was disallowed, as barred by the rule of limitation, twenty-one years having elapsed from the date of a proclamation inviting their ancestors to sue to the date of the institution of the suit. Byjnath Sing and others v. Syud Hoosein Khan and others. 3d March 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 1.—Harington.

25. It was held that the prohibition against the trial of suits, the cause of action in which might have arisen previous to August 1765, was applicable to the districts of Burdwan, Chittagong, and Midnapore, ceded in September 1760, in common with other parts of the provinces included in the Dewanny grant of 1765, no distinction being made in the Regulations. Vakeel of Government v. Rajesree Dibia and others. 30th August 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 156.—Harrington & Fombelle.

26. Where execution was sued for under a decree thirteen years after the date thereof; it was held to be neither just nor agreeable to the practice of the Courts to carry such decree into execution; and, moreover, that even if the respondents had been put in possession of the lands under this decree (as asserted by them), and had been dispossessed by the appellant, the Judge should not have carried the decree into execution a second time, but should have referred the party to a new Dewanny suit. Jugunath Pershad Sircar v. Radhanath Sircar and others. 16th Nov. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 280.—Fendall & Rees.

27. Execution of a decree, thirteen years after the date thereof, was disallowed. Id.

28. A claim by a Musulmán woman to a share of her deceased father's property was dismissed as not having been preferred for more than twelve years after his death, and therefore not cognizable under Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793, and Clause 3. of Sec. 2. of Reg. II. of 1805. Mt. Zureenah Beebee v. Khajah Ali and others. 9th May 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 32.

29. In a suit by a Hindú for a share of his maternal grandfather's property, it was held that the rule of limitation should be reckoned from the period of his mother's or his grandmother's death, and not from that of his grandfather's second widow, who had got possession under a decree of the Court, his right having begun to accrue on the death of the former persons. Ramdhun Sein and others v. Kishenkanth Sein and others.

17th July 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 100.—Goud.

30. In a case of succession to one of the tributary estates of Zillah Cuttack, a decision given in favour of the plaintiff by the Superintendent was reversed on appeal, and the claim dismissed, as being barred by Sec. 4. of Reg. XI. of 1816, which prohibits cognizance of suits in which the cause of action may have arisen prior to the cession of the district. Raja Sham Soonder Mukunder v. Kishen Chunder Bhownurbar Rai. 22d March 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 39.—Harrington & C. Smith.

31. A claim to the possession of a Talook was held to be barred by the rule of limitation, the reasons urged by the claimant for omitting to prosecute his claim at an earlier period not being deemed to be sufficient by the Court. Kishen Dhan Sircar and others v. Mt. Nujeeba Beebee and others. 12th May 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 29.—Sealy & Martin.

32. Where a summary decision passed by a Zillah Court in 1796, and confirmed by the Provincial Court in 1797, left to the party out of possession the option of suing to establish his claim to certain lands; it was held, that as no action had been instituted till 1815, the right of action was barred by the rule of limitation contained in Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793, and Reg. II. of 1805. Ram Koomar Neerac Bachespattee v. Sree Nath Bhuttacharaj. 25th June 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 14.—C. Smith.

33. A claim for the possession of an estate was held to be barred by the rule of limitation where the adverse party was proved to have been in possession, under a deed of sale, for upwards of twenty years. Zoramur Sing and another v. Zor Sing and others. 21st July 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 87.—C. Smith & Sealy.

34. It was held that a proprietary claim to lands situated in Cawnpore is not cognizable under Reg. II. of 1805, there not having been any possession, on the part of the claimants or their ancestors, since the date of the Company's acquisition of the provinces (about sixteen years), and none for twenty-two years before, and no claim having been preferred on their part at either of the three first settlements. Murdun Singh and another v. Khayrat Ali and others. 25th Sept. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 185.—Leycester & Dorin.

35. It was held that the term of sixty years, specified in Cl. 3. of Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1805, was not applicable to a suit for lands in Allahabad, instituted upwards of twelve years after the date of the cession, the cognizance of which is prohibited by Sec. 18. of Reg. II. of 1803. Moohummud Hoosein v. Gunput Singh. 24th July 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 254.—Ross.

35a. And the same point was decided in an analogous case, where it was held that, notwithstanding the sixty years mentioned in Reg. II. of 1805, no claim can go back beyond the date of the cession, and this without reference to the defendant's possession having been fair or unfair. Murdun Singh and others v. Najeeb Ali and others. 26th Sept. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 258, note.—Leycester & Dorin.

36. A made a grant of part of his inherited real estate, in Shahabad, to B; on B's death, his grandsons C and D (living with their father E) succeeded. E (his father A living) sued C, D, and E, to set aside the grant as illegal under the Hindú law, and to recover the estate granted under an assignment from A. Held, that E's suit was barred by the quiet possession of B, C, and D, during a term exceeding twelve years. Gopál Chand Pánde and another v. Bábu Kanwar Singh. 3d April 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 34.—Turnbull, Leycester, & Ross.

37. A died in 1790; his natural son B, and his uncle C, obtained from the Supreme Court letters of administration to his estate, accounts of which they filed in 1796. Soon after C died, and D, the daughter of another uncle, also died in 1808. In 1815 her representative E sued for the real estate of A, as heir-at-law, and in 1820 obtained judgment for one-third, on the ground that B, C, and D had, with mutual acquiescence and equal rights, jointly taken the succession, and C had bequeathed his share to B. In 1822 E sued B for the third of the personal estate generally as per schedule, but was nonsuited; by direction, he, in 1827, brought an action for one-third of a particular debt in the schedule. E recovered, and it was ruled that he was not stopped by prescription, because D had died within twelve years from the last instalment of the debt recovered; within twelve years from D's death E had brought his action for one-third of the personal estate of A; and B, as administrator (as avowed by the terms of the schedule), was trustee and depository for the behoof of D and others. Mariam Bibi and others v. Khwaja Arieetic Ter Stephanos. 7th Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 84.—Rattray.

38. Of two widows of a Hindú, one had succeeded and administered to his estate, and had sold part under necessity. An action brought by the other widow, for half the estate, at the end of twenty years, was dismissed on defect of cause shewn (such as fraud or violence) which might bar the rule of limitation. Radha Mani Derya v. Surya Mani Derya and another. 31st May 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 120.—Turnbull, Ross, & Rattray.

39. In 1211, Fuslee, the Board of Revenue had separated from A's assessed estates five Maháills (recovered at law by B), at a Jama deemed just, though much less than the amount imputed to the Maháills in the details of A's contract. In 1225 A's heir sued Government and B, to recover the difference for thirteen years. Held, that the claim was not cognizable under general circumstances, and in particular under Sec. 6. of Reg. XXV. of 1793<sup>1</sup>, his remedy under which had been indicated by the Court of Appeal, in 1212, in an order on a petition of A. Raja Chhatar Singh v. Government and others. 19th July 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 130.—Rattray.

40. Before and after the decennial settlement several Talooks were registered in the names of different persons, as components of a Maháll, with specification of areas and quotas, completing the general assessment thereon; each Talook was considered as Huzúri. In 1794 A's name was omitted in a revised list, and he, after four years, petitioned the Revenue authorities against this. In 1817, A sued B for right to hold as Huzúri, and to recover lands of the Talook, from which (a trifle excepted) he alleged ejection in 1807. He pleaded that, awaiting the decision of the Board, in his protest, by order of the Collector, up to 1807 he paid revenue through B, as his under tenant. The claim was dismissed with reference to the laches of A, a period of nineteen years having elapsed from the petition to the Collector till that of bringing the action, and on defect of proof that A actually held the claimed Talook, and was ejected therefrom. Malik Yahub and others v. Jag Jiman Dhar. 3d April 1832. 5 S. A. Rep. 179.—H. Shakespear.

41. A suit, instituted in 1817, to recover Altanghá lands, in right of an ancestor, who died out of possession of them, in 1798, was held to be barred by the Bengal Statutes of Limitation, Reg. III. of 1793, and Reg. II. of 1805. Gordon v. Khanjeh Abu Mookhummud Khan and others. 3d Jan. 1834. 2 Knapp, 225.

42. Under Sec. 63. of Reg. VIII. of 1793, A brought an action against B for having refused to give him receipts for rent paid. The suit was dismissed with costs, because no dishonest intention was proved against B, and because A had not brought the suit within one year from the date when the cause of action originated as required by Sec. 7. of Reg. II. of 1805. Ram Narain Mookurjee v.

Sunboo Chunder Mookurjee. 14th April 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 26.—H. Shakespear.

43. The Lower Courts having decided a suit, declaring a deed to be invalid under the Muhammadan law, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in special appeal, would not go into the question of the validity, or otherwise of the deed, but reversed the decision of the Lower Courts, on proof of uninterrupted possession for a period of fifteen years, the neglect in not having previously instituted the action not being accounted for. Mt. Sansoonnissa and others v. Tunnoo Beebee. 1st March 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 58.—Rattray & Stockwell.

44. Plaintiffs sued for a share of the estate of a deceased Muhammadan, under the law of Inheritance, and obtained a decree in the Zillah and Provincial Courts against the defendants, who pleaded in bar to the action a conveyance under a special assignment. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed the decrees of the Lower Courts, and dismissed the claim on the ground of the long adverse possession of the defendants and their ancestor. Meer Moobruk Alee and others v. Mt. Mujjo and another. 30th June 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 74.—Stockwell & Robertson.

45. The plaintiff, a Patnidár, sued to obtain an assessment on certain lands held at a fixed rent under an alleged Málguzári Aimah grant; but the claim was dismissed, on proof that the grant was dated previously to the decennial settlement, and that the Aimah lands had been registered in the Collector's office as a separate Maháll prior to the date of the acquisition of the estate at public sale by the Zamindár, from whom the plaintiff purchased his Patni tenure. Fukeerchund Sein v. Pran Kishen Huldar and another. 20th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 86.—Barwell & Halhed.

46. A right of action, lost under the law of limitation, during the lifetime of the party in whom the right originally vested, cannot be revived by his heir after his death. Neelmann Pal Chowdree v. Rajah Burdahaunt Roy. 4th Jan. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Stockwell & F. C. Smith.

47. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal having, upon the examination of the evidence of descent and the opinions of the law officers of the Court, reversed the decision of the Provincial Court, in a claim, which was otherwise barred by the Bengal Regulations of Limitation, the Judicial Committee dismissed an appeal from the decision of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut under such circumstances, with costs. Gholam Russool and another v. Mt. Mughla and others. 23d June 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 446.

48. The Bengal Regulations of Limitation (Reg. III. of 1793. s. 15. & Reg. II. of 1805.) were held to be conclusive in a question of title, where adverse possession had been held for more than twelve years, the fraud alleged as taking the case out of the Regulations not being proved. Rajah Diendial Sing and others v. Rajah Anund Kishwur Sing. 7th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 482.

49. The orders of the Zillah Judge, rejecting the summary application of the petitioners to execute their decree, sixteen years after the date thereof, were affirmed on appeal by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, no good and sufficient grounds having been found to render the interposition of the Court necessary, and reverse the orders appealed against. Shehh Hosain Buksh and others, Petitioners. 9th April 1839. 1 Sev. Cases, 91.—Reid & Tucker (Braddon, dissent.).

50. Held, by the Presidency Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that an application for a review of judgment is not cognizable by the Court after the lapse of twelve years from the date of the final decision passed on the case.<sup>1</sup> Kasheenauth Bonnerjea and others v. Brijmohan Mitter and others. 25th May 1840. 1 Sev. Cases, 49.—Tucker, D. C. Smyth, & Reid.

51. A suit for the recovery of property sold at a public sale against the ostensible purchaser, on the ground that the plaintiff's ancestor was the real purchaser, instituted upwards of twelve years after the date of the purchase, was held to be barred by the rule of limitation. Kishore Munnee Dossee v. Sreekunt Sen and others. 4th Jan. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 67.—Barlow.

52. Held, that a suit to enforce a summary decree for rent, instituted more than twelve years from the date of the decree, was barred by the rule of limitation, there being no sufficient proof of demand and promise of payment, so as to bring the case within the exceptions laid down in Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793. Oneschunder Pal Chowdree and another v. Isser Chunder Pal Chowdree and others. 18th Jan. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 2.—Rattray & D. C. Smyth.

53. According to the principle recognized by Constructions 813 & 1036, a mere application for permission to sue in forma pauperis is not a "preferring of a claim" within the meaning of the rule of limitations laid down in Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793. Sheik Sujdar Allee and others v. Duttnerain and another. 30th Jan. 1838. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 8.—Tucker & Lee Warner. Felic Lopes and another v. Chowdree Bheem Sing. 11th Sept. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 45.—Lee Warner & Barlow.

<sup>1</sup> It appears, by Cl. 3. of Sec. 4. of Reg. XXVI. of 1814, that the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut is empowered to grant a review at any time, if, upon a consideration of the reasons assigned, the circumstances of the case shall appear in justice to require it. This case is an important one, as being, it is believed, the only one in which it has been ruled that the expiration of twelve years from the date of the decision passed by the Court bars the admission of an application for review of judgment.

54. In an action for the recovery of surplus payments of rent, where the cause of action commenced at the date of an order of Court, the Court applied the rule of limitation, calculating the period of twelve years from the date of such order, notwithstanding that the plaintiff had made certain summary applications to the Court in connection with the same proceedings subsequently to such date. Sham Lal Thakoor and others v. Radamohun Ghose. 6th Oct. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 50.—Tucker & D. C. Smyth (Lee Warner, dissent.).

55. In calculating the period for bringing an action, under the general rule of limitation, no allowance can be made for the time during which a mere application to sue in forma pauperis is pending in the Court. Rahm Khan and others v. Bilram Sunee and others. 14th June 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 96.—Rattray & Tucker.

56. Where claims to the entire estate of a deceased Muhammadan had been set up by his widow and brother, neither of which appeared to be well founded; it was held that the period of limitation for the institution of an action by his heirs-at-law should be calculated from the date of his death, and not from the date of the decree between his widow and brother. Syid Hussein Reza v. Amceroonissa and others. 22d April 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 124.—Rattray & Barlow.

time can only be reckoned against him from the period of his coming of age. Imam Buhsh Khan v. Nawab Dilawur Jung. 22d June 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 190.—Harington & Fombelle.

58. In a claim for lands of which possession had been fraudulently obtained, the limitation of time can only be counted against the claimants from the date on which the fraud was discovered. Moohummud Reazooddeen v. Akbur Ali Khan. 13th June 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 238.—Harington & Fombelle.

59. Where A, a Zamindár, claimed Zamindári Rusûm from B, the holder of a dependent estate, who had executed an agreement binding himself to discharge part of such Rusûm, and B urged that twelve years had elapsed since the execution of the agreement; it was held, that the minority of A was a sufficient ground for holding him exempt from the operation of the rule of limitations, the more especially as he had consented to waive his claim to arrears of the Rusûm beyond the period in which he instituted the present action. Roopnuranjan Deo v. Rajah Qadir Ulee. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 281.—Harington & Fombelle.

60. Where A, having borrowed money of B, pledged certain lands to him, and went on a pilgrimage, and after a lapse of fifty years, in which A was not heard of, his heir sued to recover the land on payment of the amount borrowed, the claim of the heir was adjudged on presumption of A's death, and the claim not being barred by the rule of limitations, under Cl. 4. of Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1805, which provides that no length of time "shall be considered to establish a prescriptive right of property, or to bar the cognizance of a suit for the recovery of property in cases of mortgage or deposit, wherein the occupants of the land or other property may have acquired or held possession thereof as mortgagee or depository only without any proprietary right,"

In a suit by a joint proprietor to separate possession of his share, the defendant urging that he had exclusive possession long before the Company's Government, without being able to prove exclusive right; it was held that the rule of limitation did not apply. Bhovanee Bulsh v. Khait Sing. 20th Jan. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 202.—Dorin.

63. A plaintiff was held not to be prescribed where it was shewn that within twelve years he pursued his claim, though not before the proper tribunal, and his petition for redress was pending when the term expired. This was ruled in the case of an illegal sale to recover revenue where the plaintiff had petitioned the Revenue authorities to set aside the sale, and his petition for relief was pending when the term expired, incompetency of those authorities to afford relief notwithstanding. Rup Chand Sahu and another v. Jivan Lal Ray and others. 23d Aug. 1824. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 168.—Shakespeare, Martin, & Harington.

64. The petitioner's estate was sold in the year 1803. Objecting to the sale, and not obtaining redress from the Revenue authorities, he presented a petition in 1807 to the Provincial Court, by whom he was requested to apply to the Board of Revenue. Ten years after 1807 he did apply to the Board, who, on the 17th Feb. 1818, referred him to the Civil Court. On the 5th Dec. 1829 (viz. after a lapse of eleven years and upwards) he instituted his suit in Zillah Behar. The Zillah Judge dismissed the suit, as being barred by the rule of limitations, and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut confirmed the dismissal. On application for review, the question arose whether the petitioner could be considered to have saved his right of action by suing within twelve years from the date on which he was referred by the Board of Revenue to the Civil Court, or must the period within which he is bound to institute the suit be reckoned from the date of the order of the Provincial Court referring him to the Board? Held, by the majority of the Calcutta Court, and the whole of the Western Court, that the cognizance of the claim is barred under the general rule of limitations.<sup>1</sup> Case of Umrao Singh, Petitioner. 12th Aug. and 9th Sept. 1836. 28th Jan. 1837. 5 S. XXII. of 1795. Surroop Sing v. Dhonkul Sing and others. 21st Sept. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 91.—C. Smith & H. Shakespeare.

66. Where the fraudulent holder of estates had alienated the same to various vendees, to whom no fraud was imputable; it was held, that, under Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1805, the plaintiff (a secluded lady, and resident at a distant province) might recover her share in the estates which the vendees had not held twelve years under a title believed to be good, the omission of plaintiff to sue during the term of twenty-five years notwithstanding. Kutbi Begam v. Kalab Ali and others. 31st May 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 123.—Turnbull & Sealy.

67. A personal claim was held not

<sup>1</sup> A difference between this case and that of Rup Chand Sahu v. Jivan Lal Ray (supra, pl. 63.) may be remarked. In the latter, the plaintiffs had, or were supposed to have, a petition for redress pending before the Board at the time the period of twelve years from the sale expired; but in Umrao Singh's Case this did not occur.

Raja Kali Sanhar Ghosal*. 5th Dec. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 151.—Rattray.

68. A traveller had been robbed in a Sarai in the Benares province, and the amount of the theft had been levied by Government from A, the Rajah, and B, the owner of the Sarai. B being unable to pay, A satisfied the amount, and the Sarai was made over to him in order to reimburse himself from the profits. At the end of thirty-three years, B, in his action brought for that purpose, recovered, with costs, by a decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, it being held that the rule of limitation was barred by Cl. 4. of Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1805, and the Court assuming that A had realized more than his claim. Profits were awarded from the date of the action only, on account of the delay of B in bringing forward his claim. Brij Paldas v. Udit Narayan Singh. 19th Sept. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 236.—Walpole & Barwell.

69. A brought an action against B and C to recover a share of an estate which B, his brother, in whose name it had been bought, had alienated to C twenty-four years before the institution of the suit, and twenty-two years before the death of C. The rule of prescription was held to be barred by the fraud of C, indicated by the adduction, in a prior suit, of a deed set aside therein, to prove the assent of A to alienations made by B. Judgment was passed by two Judges (Braddon & Halhed), in opposition to one (Walpole), who inferred privity and assent of A from other circumstances, and considered the claim barred by long adverse possession. Pran Kishen Neoghi and another v. Sadr-ud-din Chaudhari and others. 9th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 323.

70. Where the fact of fraud, constituting a bar to limitation under Reg. II. of 1805, and such suit was in the course of appeal in the interval; it was held that the case, which was originally instituted in the Zillah Court at the time when no Regulation existed applicable to the case but that of 1803, but which having been appealed from the Zillah Court was still pending at the time the Reg. of 1805 passed, was still subject to the Reg. of 1805, and that such Regulation was to be taken cognizance of by the Court of Appeal. Lall Dokul Sing v. Lall Rooder Partab Sing. 3d Feb. 1835. 3 P. C. Cases. Case 1.

74. The plaintiff having first sued in the Supreme Court to redeem certain lands sold at a Sheriff's sale, and obtained a decree, now sues the present defendants (who could not be made parties to the suit in the Supreme Court for want of jurisdiction) to recover the possession of the same property, which is held by them under a title derived from the purchaser at the Sheriff's sale. The suit in the Supreme Court having been commenced within the period of twelve years of the adverse possession of the defendants, and the present action having been instituted within a few months after the decision of that Court; it was held, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that the suit in the Mofussil Court, though commenced after the expiration of twelve years of such possession, was not, under the circumstances, barred by the Rules of Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793 and Cl. 3. of Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1805.<sup>1</sup> Prannath Chordree and others v. Rajah Burrodakant Roy. 16th June 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 97.—Reid & Shaw.

III. of 1793, Sec. 14., and Reg. II. of 1805, Sec. 3.), the party in possession of the property being a purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice, and the plaintiff's right of action having accrued twenty-five years before the institution of the suit. Sheikh Imdad Ali v. Rada Mohan Chondry. 22d Dec. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 135.—Robertson & Hutchinson (Stockwell, dissent.).

2. Madras Rule of Limitation.

(a) Generally.

79. The period of twelve years allowed by the rule of limitation, Sec. 18. of Reg. II. of 1802, was held, in the case of a redeemable mortgage within a limited period, to commence from the expiration of such period, and not from the date of the mortgage. Seevaramian v. Sambasevah Egen. Case 3 of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 39.—Scott & Greenway.

80. The first formal demand for partition of undivided property being made and refused, becomes the cause of action; and a party having made such demand more than twelve years previously to instituting a suit for partition of the paternal property, his claim was dismissed under Sec. 18. of Reg. II. of 1802. Bussava Rauze v. Kistnama Rauze. Case 11 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 132.—Scott & Greenway.

81. Where parties had continued to pay revenue for their lands, under the denomination either of Rusum or Kattubadhi, for a period of twelve years before they attempted to resist the payment; it was held that their claim to exemption from the payment of revenue was barred by Sec. 4. of Reg. XXXI. of 1802. Rajah C. Vencatadry Gopal Jugganadha Rao v. Khajah Shamsooddeen and another. Case 15 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 179.—Scott & Greenway.

82. A complaint against any encroachment upon land, ought to be, and usually is, immediate; the transgression then admits of easy proof, witnesses being ready to depose to the previous possession, and to all the circumstances of the seizure; and where a party acknowledged the alleged usurpation to have commenced nineteen years before the institution of his suit, and as he did not point out any part of the land claimed by him as having been seized within twelve years antecedent to the date of his plaint, his suit was dismissed under Sec. 18. of Reg. II. of 1802. Vencatarama Gopaul Jugganada Row v. Enooguntj Nursiah. Case 14. of 1819. 1 Mad. Dec. 250.—Harris & Grame.

83. Where a claim had been decided by the Collector, and it was urged, fifteen years afterwards, that such decree had been obtained through fraud; it was held, that if any undue means had been resorted to it was the duty of the injured party at the time, and not fifteen years afterwards, to bring the subject to the notice of competent authority, and the claim was dismissed. Va- langapooly Taven v. Raja Pillay and others. Case 12. of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 428.—Grame & Gowan.

84. The first Judge of the Provincial Court affirmed the decision of the Zillah Court, in opposition to the opinion of the third Judge, under the provisions of Sec. 7. of Reg. XV. of 1802.<sup>1</sup> A special appeal was admitted by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the ground that the plaintiff's claim, on the face of the Provincial Court's decree, appeared to be unactionable under the provisions of Cl. 4. of Sec. 18. of Reg. II. of 1802; and after an attentive consideration of the evidence the Court decided that the suit ought not to have been entertained, or, having been entertained, ought to have been dismissed, as, according to the plaintiff's own statement, the cause of action arose twenty years before the institution of the suit; and the evidence adduced by the plaintiff, for the purpose of bringing the case within the exceptions to the rule of limitation was altogether insufficient. The Court therefore reversed the decrees of the Lower Courts, and ordered the respondent to pay all costs. Sree Rajah Kakerlapoody Ramachendra Rauze v. Meer Abbas. Case 4. of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 452.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

(b) Exceptions from the Rules of Limitation.

85. Where a minor sued by his guardian to recover, in right of his adoptive father, a portion of a Mirasi more than twelve years after the cause of action arose, and it appeared that his adoptive father had been killed before the cause had become unactionable; it was held that the suit was cognizable under the provisions of Cl. 4. of Sec. 18. of Reg. II. of 1802. Narsinmarauze v. Caroomboo Moodely and others. Case 12. of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 92.—Scott & Stratton.

86. The rule of limitation was held not to apply where the precise period at which the cause of action arose was not ascertainable with certainty; but where a party claimed certain property, and the evidence adduced by him was very unsatisfactory, the Court observed that, moreover, it was highly improbable, if his demand had been well founded, that he would have suffered so long a period as eight years to have elapsed without taking legal steps for the recovery of the property, and dismissed his claim. Maroomah Marakanyen v. Agummad Ummal and others. Case 1. of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 362. —Ogilvie & Grant.

87. A clandestine appropriation of the usufruct of a portion of lands in a large estate may very possibly be enjoyed for a period of time unknown to the proprietor of such land; and if, on the discovery of such clandestine fraud, it may be attempted to be justified by a fraudulent fabrication, ultimately pronounced to be such by a judicial proceeding, length of possession most certainly can never render that fabrication a genuine instrument; and so far as such possession regards the Statute of Limitations it is manifest the claim for restitution of the usufruct has reference to an usufructuary mortgage transaction, which has been adjudged to be fraudulent and false, and therefore, under the concluding part of Cl. 4. of Sec. 18. of Reg. 1. of 1802, the law of limitations does not apply. Tayakoat Akma v. Vellapoorata Moideen Cotty and another. Case 5. of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 395.—Grant & Gowan.

3. Bombay Rule of Limitation.

(a) Generally.

88. The Majmuhdars of a certain Pergunnah were held to be entitled against the estate of the late district officer for their fees due to them by him, but only for whatever might be proved due during the last twelve years from the date of their petition, according to the provisions of the regulation respecting claims personal property. Mt. Jhunkoo Bapoo Bhace Mohundas and others. 22d Jan. 1821. 2 Borr. 573. —Romer & Ironside.

89. Where a person claimed an Inaam village granted to him by the late Peshwa, and attached before the commencement of the British rule by the farmer of the province, together with eleven years' produce thereof, the Court decreed the restoration of the village, but held that the claim for eleven years' revenue must be considered as a money debt, and therefore unsustainable under Sec. 3. of Reg. V. of 1827; and six years' produce was awarded, in conformity with the said Regulation. Mills v. Modce Peshtonjee Khershedjee. 31st Dec. 1831. Sel. Rep. 111. —Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

90. Semble, That a claim for land, held on Bandi Jama tenure, must be made within twelve years from the dispossession, as it is doubtful whether the tenure conveys a proprietary right, and if not it will come under the Statute of Limitation. Dessace Ruttonjee Bheembhace v. Parshotam Lalidas Jujjeeran. 16th May 1832. Sel. Rep. 105. Ironside, Barnard, Baillie, & Henderson.

91. Sec. 13. of Reg. 1. of 1800<sup>1</sup> of the Bombay code, limiting the right of action to twelve years, includes suits on account of land as well as personal actions. Where, therefore, a suit was instituted for the share of certain lands, some of which were attached to the hereditary office of Dessay, and no satisfactory proof was given that any demand had been made in respect thereof within the period of twelve years, the right of action was held to be absolutely barred. Nundram Dyaram v. Dula Bhace Kriparam. 13th Feb. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 414.

92. A claim for the recovery of fees incident to the offices of Majmuhdar, Parek, and Mehta, was held to be limited to a period of twelve years, by Sec. 4. of Reg. V. of 1827, of the Bombay code. Beema Shunker v. Jamsjee Shaporjee and others. 9th Dec. 1837. 2 Moore Ind. App. 23.

(b) Exceptions from the Rule of Limitation.

93. In a suit to recover a debt on a promissory note under seal, due to the appellants by the respondent's father (the respondent being his daughter and heiress), commenced more than twelve years after the debt was contracted; it was held that the debt was not affected by the rules of limitation, on the ground that as the respondent had received credit within the twelve years from the appellants for a bill of exchange drawn upon them in her favour, the claim of the appellants became thereby cognizable, the credit given to the respondent for the bill of exchange being considered as an acknowledgment of the debt on her part. Jacob Johannes v. Mukia Khatoon. 27th Nov. 1815. 1 Borr. 253.—Sir E. Nepean & Bell.

94. In a suit to recover a sum of money and interest on a note of hand of long standing, the sum was decreed to be paid, with interest, under Sec. 12. of Reg. V. of 1827, for six years, at three quarters per cent.; and it was held that letters written by the debtor within the time of limitation, and virtually acknowledging the debt, were sufficient to take the case out of the limitation of the Regulations. Anundram Balchand v. Muncharam. 31st March 1831. Sel. Rep. 53.—Ironside, Anderson, & Baillie.

95. A residence by the defendant at Poonah, beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the Company's Courts, is not such a "good and sufficient cause" for not commencing a suit for a period exceeding twelve years as will entitle a plaintiff to recover under the Bombay Reg. I. of 1800, Sec. 13.† and an offer of a specific sum by the defendant, by way of compromise to a suit instituted after a lapse of twenty-seven years from the cause of action, is not such an admission of the truth of the plaintiff's matter of demand as to take the case out of the prohibitory words of that Section. Bhace-chund v. Purtab-chund Munik-chund. 7th Dec. 1836. 1 Moore Ind. App. 154.

96. A claim preferred before the Peshná in 1813, previous to the British rule, but upon which no adjudication was made, was held sufficient to bring the claimant within the exception of Cl. 2. of Sec. 7. of the Bombay Reg. V. of 1827, notwithstanding adverse possession for thirty years previous to the institution of the suit. Jewajee and others v. Trimbukjee and another. 12th Dec. 1842. 3 Moore Ind. App. 138.

(c) Acknowledgment in Bar.

97. The Judge, by Sec. 13. of Reg. I. of 1800,‡ of the Bombay code, cannot hear or determine any suit whatever if the cause of action shall have arisen twelve years before any suit shall have been commenced on account of it, unless the plaintiff can prove that he demanded the money or matter in question; and that the defendant had admitted the demand, or promised to pay the money; or that he directly preferred his claim, within that period, to a competent Court, assigning sufficient reason why he did not proceed in the suit, and that he had been precluded from obtaining redress by minority or other sufficient reason. *Shambhoo Das Bhugandas v. It was held, that the committee of the estate of a lunatic cannot do any thing of his own accord: he must act under the authority of the Supreme Court in every thing, and then he is protected. There is no analogy between guardians of infants and committees of lunatics. The committee of a lunatic must pass his accounts every year: and in this respect there is no difference between him and a receiver. When a receiver has passed his accounts, he must get rid of the balance by an application to the Court to pay it into Court, and so must the committee.<sup>2</sup> In the matter of Kissenaunt Sain, a Lunatic. 3d Feb. 1800. But as B and C were unable to shew that A's husband had assigned her this house as a lodging, the Court decided, according to the opinion of the law officers, that A should be allowed a suitable set of apartments in the family-house, and a sum of money to provide herself with household furniture. *Prankoonour and another v. the widow must take her daughter and live with her mother and brother-in-law in their house, the brother-in-law being entitled to provide her with maintenance, and to protect her; and that, should she not agree with them, the brother-in-law must give up a part of the house for her separate residence, and afford her a suitable maintenance. *Kumla Buhoo v. 23 e. Quere, Whether, under such circumstances, the widow's right to maintenance can be barred by express terms? Ib.

2. When not entitled.

Cl. R. 1834. 53.

27. Litigation having taken place between parties in which the contest was whether the plaintiff (a Hindú widow) was entitled to a share of the estate of her deceased husband, but in which it did not appear that the question as to maintenance was directly raised; it was held that such proceedings did not act as a bar to her right of maintenance. Ib.

28. A claim by a Hindú widow for an allowance from her husband's family, was dismissed on proof of such impropriety of conduct on her part as, in the opinion of the Court, deprived her of all legal claim, according to the Hindú law, to a maintenance from them. Rance Bassant Koomaree v. Rance Kammul Koomaree and others. 29th Dec. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 144. — Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

3. Amount of Maintenance.

29. A Hindú widow was held to be entitled to apply to her father-in-law for food and raiment and expenses of pilgrimage, according to his means, and he cannot refuse; but she is not entitled to take the dowry from him, without sufficient cause, until she shall have attained the age of thirty years. Ichha Lushumee v. Anundram Govindram. 21st Feb. 1814. 1 Borr. 114. — Sir F. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

30. The amount of maintenance must bear some relation to the property. The general circumstances of the case must also be considered, there being no fixed rate or proportion laid down. Ex-parte Janaki Ummah. 6th Oct. 1814. 2 Str. 285.

33. Joynturain Puckrasee*. Macn. Cons. II. L. 60.

III. OF WIVES.

34. A Hindú wife was held not to be entitled to obtain maintenance for herself and children from the Cast (of Desawal Banyans), on the ground that the Cast had entailed poverty on her by enforcing, contrary to her wishes, a contract of marriage with her husband, a spendthrift and gambler. Dace v. Motee Nuthoo. 6th Oct. 1813. 1 Borr. 75.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

35. It was held that a claim for maintenance by a wife, who had, as she alleged, been forcibly expelled from her husband's house, should be rejected, as it did not appear, on evidence, that such forcible expulsion had taken place, but rather that she had quitted the house of her own accord. In such a case the expulsion must be clearly and satisfactorily proved. Sree Rajah Row Booshee Tummiah v. Sree Rajah Row Venkata Neeladry Row.<sup>1</sup> Case 2 of 1823.

<sup>1</sup> This judgment was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council without argument, the counsel for the appellants stating that it was an absurd action, arising out of family quarrels, and in-

IV. OF SONS, &c.

38. Maintenance cannot be withheld by a father from his son, merely on the ground of separation or disobedience, if he (the son) have no other means of subsistence. But the Court held, that where there is no cause, or an inadequate cause, for the separation, the principles of equity require that the separate allowance should be reduced to the lowest scale; it should scarcely exceed what is barely necessary for the support of the party claiming it. Sree Chettyania Annunga Deo v. Pursuram Deo. Case 2 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 275.—Harris & Graeme.

superiorities, and C and D to be acknowledged by them as the lawful successor and person legally entitled to the Puttanrunda or Málíkánch (allowance and immunities attached to the rank of the Colatery Rájah). But it being proved, by the record, that the claims of A were abrogated by the conquest of Malabar by Haider Ali, and the cession of it to the Company by his son Tipú Sultan, and that thus the ancient sovereignty of the Colatery Rájahs had ceased to exist previous to the period of the English acquisition of Malabar, and that all emoluments and immunities connected therewith were extinguished by the dissolution of the kingdom, A's claims were dismissed with costs. *Colatery Rájah of Colutnaad Cherical v. The original proprietor of lands granted by the ruling power on a tenure (Aimah) free from assessment, having, together with his successors, for a series of years received a fixed sum from the grantor, in lieu of his proprietary rights, the person to whom those rights may be subsequently transferred has no claim to Málíkánch at the rate of ten per cent. *Cheyn Singh v. #### 1. Generally.

1. The plaintiff and defendant were till lately in family partnership, the defendant managing the Zamíndári, and the plaintiff receiving his expenses. The family estate consisted originally of fifteen Mauzas, and the manager acquired seventeen more for Rs. 3200, borrowed for the purpose, and afterwards took out a Zamíndári Potta for the whole together. Held, in conformity with the opinion of the Pandits, that the plaintiff, at the time of separation, was entitled to one-half of the whole; for the acquisition by the managing partner is for the common benefit, and the money borrowed for the purpose is payable by each share in proportion.<sup>1</sup> Sheopershad Sing v. Kuber Sing. 5th Sept. 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 76.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

2. According to the local usages of Malabar, and the law of Maroomahatayam, the management of family property is vested in the senior male of the family, for the support and maintenance of the junior members thereof, and partition cannot be demanded by the latter. Anon. Case 28 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 118.—Scott & Greenway.

3. But where the senior male had avowed his incapacity to the management, and the second manager had not shewn that attention which it was incumbent upon him to shew to the other junior members of the family, the Court invested the junior members with a joint share in the future management.<sup>2</sup> Ib.

4. On the death of A, a Zamíndár of Purneah, his eldest son B took the whole estate, real and personal; the son C (who was then a mi-

<sup>1</sup> The subject of acquisitions, liable or not liable to be shared, is treated of in the Mitáshará (c. ii. s. iv.). The lands in dispute having been obtained for a payment of money not furnished out of his own separate funds by the appellant, and having been included, at the appellant's instance, in the same Sanad with the hereditary estate, in which the respondent's right of participation was undoubted, were clearly acquisitions made for the benefit of coparceners, and at their charge, under the management of the appellant acting as manager for the whole. Had they, on the contrary, been acquired from separate funds, and held distinct from the patrimonial estate, they would have belonged exclusively to the acquirer, and not been subject to be shared with him by his co-heirs.—Coleb. The claim of C was awarded. B was treated as having acquired on behalf of both brothers, and by credit or means derived from the joint undivided estate, on which he had wrongfully entered as sole successor: the Court considered him as virtually trustee for his younger brothers as to half, and provided that allowance should be made to him for the purchase-money, in the account for which he was liable. Rajah Baidyanand Singh v. Rudranand Singh. 25th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 198.—Sealy & Walpole.

5. On the death of A, a Hindú of Behar, the name of B, his widow, was substituted, in regard to lands of which he was recorded as owner. At the end of ten years, C and D, heirs in the male line of a brother of A's great-grandfather, sue to recover the whole, and succeed, the widow being entitled to maintenance only, on proof that they and their ancestor had enjoyed a portion for support, and on presumption that the accessions were acquired out of the profits of what was ancestral and pecuniary, on behalf of all the kinsmen. Ghanshan Kumari v. Gorind Singh and others. 10th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 202.—Turnbull & Walpole.

A Muslimán manager of a joint estate is liable to account for all the profits and interest which he may make by the estate come to his hands, excepting only for interest unlawfully taken by him from Muslimáns for the loan of money to them.<sup>2</sup> Shaikh Buxoo and others v. Shaikh Jummal and others. 24th July 1817. East's Notes. Case 70.

8. The son and daughter of an absent Muhammadan (declared to be forty years old when he left, and to have been missing thirty-five years) sued for the recovery of one-half of the family estate from the widow and son of his brother. The law officers declared ninety years from the time of birth to be allowed to a person in possession of an absentee's estate, but that another administrator of the estate should be appointed if it were mismanaged by the person in possession. The Court held that, under the circumstances, the estate appeared to have been mismanaged, and ordered the heirs of the absentee to be put into possession of his share. Durresh and another v. Shekhan and another. 1820. 2 Borr. 20.—Elphinston, Romer, & Sutherland.

III. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

9. Exceptions to the answer of a Hindú manager were allowed, under the circumstances, where, by his answer, he raised the question whether such manager could take out a portion of his share of the joint estate, and lay it out for his separate benefit. Shiberpersand Dutt and another v.

But the Maulavi said that he would be bound to account for such illegal interest even, should the joint cestui que trusts require it. By the Muhammadan law a Muslimán taking interest from a Muslimán is punishable, and the Kâzi would cause the money to be returned to the giver of interest or to his heir; or if none existed the Kâzi would retain it and give it away in charity.

10. It was held that a Hindú eldest son, the manager of the family, might, after his father's death, sue alone for a debt due on a promissory note to the father, without joining an infant brother. Gorindehund Sein v. Simpson. 20th April 1820. East's Notes. Case 119.

IV. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

11. The manager of an estate borrows money for the payment of arrears of revenue due to Government, giving a bond in the name of two proprietors, one of whom (since dead) had sole possession at the time. Held, that the manager is personally responsible for the amount in the first instance, with right of recovery from the heirs of the deceased possessor of the estate, on whose account the loan was contracted. Gowrishwur Acharjee v. Sheoo Buksh Singh. 29th May 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 64.—H. Colebrooke & Stuart.

12. A manager of a Zamindari, appointed under the authority of the Court of Wards, has powers co-ordinate with those that the Zamindár himself would possess when his disqualification might cease. Rajah Manoooy Vencatarow Zemindar v. Annularow. Case 4 of 1822. 1 Mad. Dec. 328.—Grant & Gowan.

13. A Sarbarahár in the management of certain property, alleged to belong to a minor, contracted a loan, in order to pay off debts originally incurred on conditional sale of such property by A, a former proprietor. On the suit of B, who claimed to inherit from A, a decree was passed in his favour, and against the rights of the minor. Held that, under such circumstances, B was responsible for the repayment of the loan, it having been satisfactorily proved that the debt was incurred by the manager entirely for the benefit of the property.

Rajah Sahibdeen Khan v. Brij Raj Sing. 11th Jan. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 47.—Stockwell.

14. A manager of an estate under attachment, appointed by a Collector under Reg. V. of 1827, has the authority to enhance rents and to lease in farms, under Sec. 6. of Reg. V. of 1812; and a farmer appointed by him possesses precisely the same power. Shekh Emambaksh v. Shekh Anayat Ali. 12th Aug. 1846. Decis. S. D. A. 1846. 305. 2 Sev. ## MESNE PROFITS.

1. Where A claimed from B the possession of certain villages as his hereditary property, and proved, to the satisfaction of the Court, both his father's title and his own as heir; it was held that A should be put into possession of the villages, and that an account should be rendered by B to

A of the mesne profits, computed at the rate of 10 per cent. on the annual produce of the villages, from the time when, according to B's admission, he first had possession of them, and that the aggregate sum should be paid to A. Imam Bakhsh Khan v. Nawab Dilawur Jung. 22d June 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 190. — Harington & Fombelle.

2. Where the defendant, having admitted the right of the plaintiff's mother to lands of which the plaintiff alleged he had fraudulently obtained possession, pleaded a right to them under an alleged conveyance from her to himself, and having failed to prove this conveyance, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Mesne profits during the time the plaintiff had been out of possession were not adjudged, as no claim had been preferred to them; but a right of action was reserved for their recovery if not paid on demand. Tejchand v. Jugmohan Rai. 16th Sept. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 257. — Harington & Fombelle.

3. In a suit by a party for possession of a Talook decided in his favour; on appeal, it was held that judgment against a third person, not a party to the cause, for mesne profits alleged to have accrued to her and her husband, should be overruled, as such profits, if refused, must be sued for separately. Gopce Mohun Thakoor and another v. Ramtunnoo Bose. 30th June 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 19. — Harington & Fombelle.

4. A mortgagee delivering up a house, and accounting for the rents and mesne profits under a decree of the Court, was held not to be liable for the full rent, without deduction for repairs, &c., the Court declaring that the balance rent only was to be considered as the mesne profits. Gooshtusp Shah Suhoorabjee v. Suhoorabjee Nonshirmanjec. 15th Nov. 1820. 1 Borr. 326. — Hon. M. Elphinstone, Bell, & Prendergast.

5. A having obtained a final judgment in his favour in a suit for the recovery of the profits of an estate up to the period of the institution of the original suit, claimed the revenues of the said estate during the interval the claim was pending, comprising a period of eleven years, and during which period he had been deprived of such revenues; the Court adjudged the amount of the mesne profits to A during the period his estate was unlawfully occupied by the Zamindár, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum to the date of the decree. Rajah Vassareddy Venkataswamy Naidoo v. Rajah Vassareddy Jugganada Baboo and another. Case 6 of 1822. 1 Mad. Dec. 343. — Ogilvie, Grant, & Gowan.

6. A Zamindár having to account for the mesne profits of a Zamindari, held by him unlawfully for a certain period, cannot make any charge on the estate on account of a Kutwál and his establishment, as the Government expressly charges itself with the support of the police establishments by Reg. V. of 1802; but the Court allowed two-ninths of a charge made by him for an extra Seh-bandí, maintained by him to aid in resisting the attacks of the Pin-darris. Ib.

7. Where A had wrongfully held possession of a Zamindari for several years, and B recovered possession thereof under a decree of the Sudder Court, the Court directed that the Provincial Court should receive such additional evidence as should be requisite for the purpose of determining the precise sums for which A was justly accountable to B, as the clear profits derived by him during the whole time he held possession of the estate. Sree Vutsavoy Jagganadha Rauze v. Sree Vutsavoy Booshee Seetiah. Case 5 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 453. — Ogilvie, Cochrane, & Oliver.

8. Where, in a claim for Wásilát, the Provincial Court awarded interest for the whole period (thirteen years) during which a separate suit for the lands was depending, and interest on that amount from the date of their own judgment; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed so much of the decree as regarded that interest, and awarded the principal of the Wásilát, with interest from the date of the institution of the suit for Wásilát in the Provincial Court up to the date of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut's decree, and from that date until payment should be made.<sup>1</sup> Asman Singh and others v. Purnesuree Suhaee. 29th Aug. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 176. — Leicester & Dorin.

9. The Court adjudged Wásilát, with interest from the date of the decree, against the heir of the party who failed in that decree, by whose bad faith the gaining party had been kept out of possession. Kripa Sindhu Patjoshi and others v. Kanhaya Acharya and others. 31st Dec. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 335. — Braddon & Halhed.

10. The Provincial Court having dismissed a suit for mesne profits, on the allegation that the evidence on either side was unsatisfactory, and that the plaintiff had produced spurious accounts, and called perjured witnesses, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on appeal, though dissatisfied with the evidence, reversed the decree, and estimated the amount of mesne profits from the average of the two preceding years, as ascertained in a former suit. The decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, but without costs. Sooriah Row v. Rajah Enooqunty Sooriah. 30th Nov. 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 72.

11. The plaintiff in a suit is limited to the sum laid in his plaint as mesne profits, though, by the evidence, a larger sum should appear to be due to him. Nooriah Ror v. Cotaghery Bhoochiah. 17th Dec. 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 113.

<sup>1</sup> I find from a memorandum in the above case, in the handwriting of Mr. Dorin, that the principle which guided the Court was, that in a common claim of Wásilát interest shall not be given. When payment of Wásilát has been long delayed, the Court must be guided by the circumstances, as well as where no demand has been made and followed up in due time. — Macn.

12. In a suit for lands and mesne profits, the Zillah Courts gave a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for a fractional portion of the land, leaving the quantity, as well as the amount of the mesne profits, to future adjustment in the course of execution of the decree. Held, that the decree was incomplete, the plaintiffs having sued for a specific quantity of land and a specific sum of money; and that it was the duty of the Courts to have ascertained and decided the quantity of land and the sum of money to which the plaintiffs were entitled, instead of leaving these points of the case to be adjusted in the course of execution of the decree. The case was accordingly remanded for re-investigation. Sherb Chunder Roy and another v. Hurmohan Roy and others. 2d Dec. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 305.—D. C. Smyth.

13. Held, that it is irregular to award mesne profits in general terms, without any specification of the period for which such profits are recoverable; and the case was accordingly remanded. Ramkoomar Chuckerbuttee and others v. Ram Ram Bhutacharjee and others. 3d Dec. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 306.—D. C. Smyth.

14. Where a sale of real property (made in execution of a decree) has been cancelled, the Courts may, by a summary order, award recovery of mesne profits accruing during adverse possession held by the auction purchaser, and interest thereupon from the date of the proceeding, fixing the amount of mesne profits. Rajah-un-Nissa, Applicant. 13th March 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 3. 1 Sev. Cases, 33.—D. C. Smyth.

14 a. In an action for the recovery of mesne profits, it was held that the plaintiff was rightly nonsuited by the order of the Provincial Sudder Amceen for omitting to state the amount, and the period for which they were alleged to be recoverable. Adheen Singh and others, Petitioners. 25th July 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 35.—Reid.

15. Held, that an action cannot be maintained against Government for Wásilít in the case of rent-free lands, legally resumed, but afterwards released from assessment by Government as a matter of favour. Rajah Ram Koor v. The Government and others. 6th May 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 159.—Ratnay, Tucker, & Barlow.

16. Illegal collections under the description of Tchbázári, or other denominations, from persons exposing goods for sale in Háts, under temporary stalls and sheds, cannot be taken into account in the adjustment of mesne profits in the execution of a decree for a Hát and Wásilít. Raddhamohan Ghose Chaudhuri, Petitioner. 10th Feb. 1846. 2 Sev. Cases, 323.—Reid.

MINES.

1. The purchaser of a Lohá Maháll of a certain Zamindári at a public sale, comprising certain Arangs, or iron manufactories, and the proprietary dues levied on the iron ore therein manufactured, but not entitling him to any proprietary right in the soil, was held to be entitled to require that no ore, the produce of such Zamindári, should be manufactured without paying him the customary dues; that the proprietor of the soil should not be allowed to establish Arangs for the manufacture of iron ore produced within the Zamindári; that such proprietor should not prevent any person from taking the ore from the established mines, and carried to the Arangs of the purchaser of the Maháll, nor be permitted to exact any fine or consideration for the ore so taken; that the owner of the Maháll should not be entitled to establish new Arangs without the consent of such proprietor; and that such owner should be entitled to open new mines on making compensation to the proprietor of the soil for any damage. The Court at the same time observed, that as the owner of the Maháll could not have any right to the land of the estate, his right of causing new mines to be opened ought not to be exercised without making a full compensation to the proprietors of the soil for their equal right to cultivate and improve their landed estate; such compensation forming a fair and equitable adjustment of their conflicting rights. The Court also remarked, that the right of the owner of the Lohá Maháll to the iron mines within the Zamindari was by no means to be understood as an uncontrolled and absolute property, but a right to be exercised according to established usage. It appeared to the Court, for instance, that the owner of the Maháll would not be justified in attempting to stop or restrain the manufacture of iron; or in attempting to exact, from those concerned in it, any dues or payments which had not been customarily received. Gooroo-prasad Bose and others v. Bismoonchurn Heyra. 31st July 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 337.—Harington & Stuart.

2. In cases where all the Mirásadars have not executed the conveyance, the Conicopoly of the village must be proved to have been present. Ib.

3. The Conicopoly having sworn that it was the custom of certain of the Mirásadars to execute deeds for the whole, a conveyance so executed was held to be valid. Doe dem. Mootoo v. Venkatachella. 2 Str. 315.

4. If a Mirásadár omit or refuse to cultivate his land, the Coodinwarum is undoubtedly the property of the actual cultivator, and the Mirásadár can have no right or title to the share of the produce allowed as a remuneration to those who cultivate the land. Ramaswamy Iyer v. Peddoo Naichen and others. Case 3 of 1819. 1 Mad. Dec. 227.—Scott & Greenlaw.

5. Semble, A Mirásadár does not, by omitting or refusing to cultivate his Mirási, forfeit his right to the peculiar privileges vested in him as proprietor of the land; his right to Coopatam, and other privileges of a similar nature, vesting in him as Mirási proprietor. Ib.

MOAMLATDÁR.

1. A claim by a Moamlatdár, or farmer, of the revenues under the Peshwa's Government against an under Moamlatdár for a balance due for his farm was disallowed, under the construction of the 9th Article of the treaty of Poona, which declared that all collections made by the Peshwa's order after the 5th January 1817 were to be carried to the credit of the East-India Company, and all claims to balances from the districts to which the treaty related, referring to periods antecedent to the treaty, were to be considered null and void; justice requiring, that if the under farmer were restrained from recovering his balances from the cultivator, the head farmer, in like manner, should not have the power to compel the payment of an old balance due by the under farmer. Trimbuk Rao Bhi-hajee Burce v. Krishnajece. 31st May 1823. 2 Borr. 226.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

I. HINDU LAW.

1. One of two part-owners of a valuable diamond mortgaged by the other, without his concurrence or privity, recovered his share of it, with costs, from the mortgagee. Shewa Das v. Bishenath Dobec. 10th Feb. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 126.—Harington & Fombelle.

2. Where an appellant claimed to recover two houses as mortgaged to her by her own husband, guardian of (her own son) the adopted son (by a deed of gift constituting him her heir) of the widow of the respondent's father-in-law, for a debt due by the widow to the appellant, the Court held, that the respondent being by the Shastra the widow's legal heir, the gift of the houses by the widow to the appellant's son was illegal and null, wherefore the mortgage to the appellant in right of such gift was illegal; but she was left at liberty to prove her debt against the widow, recovering, in that case, from the property.

Mt. Goolab v. Mt. Ichha. 5th July 1820. 1 Borr. 313.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Sir C. Colville, Bell, & Prendergast.

3. Where a house was sold by the owners to A after redemption of it from a mortgagee, who had re-mortgaged it to B; it was held that the owners, on the receipt of an acquittance from the mortgagee, were at liberty to sell the and that the claim of the under-mortgagee for remuneration did not against the owners, but against the mortgagee from whom he derived his title. Prannath Bhanoodutt v. Lakmeeram Aditram. 12th June 1821. 2 Borr. 103.—Sutherland.

4. Where A, in consideration of a loan, mortgaged to B certain lands, which, under a judgment previously obtained against the estate of A's father, were liable to be sold in satisfaction of a debt due to C; it was held that such mortgage was invalid, and could not prevail against the claim of C, whether B, the mortgagee, did or did not know of such previous judgment; and, though it appeared that the mortgage by A was made for the purpose of defeating the claim of C under the judgment, that such attempt at fraud would not be allowed to succeed in favour of B, the mortgagee, whether B were or were not privy to the fraud. Teloonaoola Aroonuchelly Chetty and another v. Palagherry Vencatachelliah. Case 8 of 1825. 1 Mad. Dec. 513.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

5. Cases arising between Hindú parties upon mortgages of lands in the Mofussil are to be governed by Hindú law, even where the form of the conveyance is English. Rajah Burrodicaunt Roy and others v. Bisnoondery Dabee and others. 10th May 1836. Mor. 91.

6. Although, by the Hindú Code, a mortgage or pledge unaccompanied by possession confers no title<sup>1</sup>, yet, by long-established custom, by reference to the maxim, that whilst the lex loci contractus governs the substance of the contract and its essential forms, the lex fori applies as to the forms of remedies and their consequences, a Bengálí mortgage, although unaccompanied by possession, gives a lien upon land. He may, however, sue to redeem the whole, though the other sharers refrain from joining in the action; and, on obtaining judgment, may take possession of the whole, leaving the other sharers to obtain their shares, or preferring the requisite application, and on paying their full proportion of all the expenses. *Sadhoo Lall and others v. 11. An equity of redemption cannot be sold under a fieri facias. According to the Hindú law, a pledgee cannot sell or dispose of a pledge for use for an unlimited time, and the sale by the Sheriff, under process issued at his suit, cannot give validity to such a sale. Rajah Burrodicaunt Roy and others v. Bishnosondery Dabee and others.<sup>2</sup> 10th May 1836. Mor. 91.

the Supreme Court is barred by lapse of time. Ib.

16. If assets come bonâ fide to a purchaser without notice of any judgment, &c., they cannot be followed; and as there exists no distinction between real and personal property by the Hindú law, a purchaser buying an equity of redemption by deed of lease and release, with notice of judgment, cannot be affected, as, under the process of the Court, an equity of redemption cannot be seized. A judgment gives no lien upon lands, nor does a writ, till executed by the Sheriff. Bindabund Doss v. Ostumchund Doss and another. 15th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 33.

3. Foreclosure.

17. A Zamindâr of Bengal executed a deed of sale for a portion of his estate to B; B executed a separate engagement that the sale should be redeemable by repayment of the money, with interest, within the term of a year. Before the expiration of the term A died, leaving a widow and an adopted minor son, or rather a son adopted by authority, after his death, by the widow. Within a few days of the completion of the term, when the sale would have become absolute and irrevocable, the widow, as guardian of the minor, borrowed money elsewhere of C, with which she paid the debt due to B, and freed the land, executing to the lender a similar second sale of the same land, redeemable within a given term, which term, however, expired without repayment on her part. Held, that the sale had become absolute, and judgment was given in favour of the purchaser.<sup>6</sup> Anon. Circa 1828. 1 Macn. Princ. H. L. 106.

one) was dismissed when the parties were Hindús, as between Hindús the mortgage cannot be considered as equitable, because, by their law, there must be a delivery of the pledge. Silmarain Ghose v. Russickchunder Neoghy and others. 7th April 1837. Mor. 105.

19. But this decision was afterwards overruled, and a decree was made for a sale in fault of redemption (and not a foreclosure) upon a Bengálí mortgage. Collydoss Gungopadha and others v. Sibchunder Mullick and others. 31st July 1840. Mor. 111.

4. Priority.

20. In a suit instituted by a widow to remove an attachment placed on a house, in execution of a decree under a mortgage against her nephew, she urging that her husband and his brother assigned it to her by a prior mortgage, then unredeemable by lapse of time; it was held by the law officers, that the prior mortgage was to be preferred<sup>1</sup>; but as the circumstances attending the mortgage to the widow were suspicious, the Court decided in favour of the second mortgagees. Ruljat v. Yakoob Johannes and another. 15th Nov. 1820. 1 Borr. 301. — Hon. M. Elphinstone, Bell, & Prendergast.

21. Where land was doubly mortgaged, in the first instance to A, and again to B, under two bonds at different times, the second with a condition of sale after five months without redemption, and possession vesting in B; it was held, under the authority both of the Hindú and Muhammadan law, that a mortgage is completed by possession<sup>2</sup>; and that a mortgage of later date, supported by occupation, annulled a prior one unaccompanied by possession. Tooljaram Atmaram

v. Meean Moohummad and another. 31st July 1821. 2 Borr. 130.—Elphinstone.

5. Of Undivided Property.

22. If, from the evidence, admissions, or circumstances, there should be reason to conclude that all the members of an undivided family were privy and consenting to the acts of its head, or the mortgagee or purchaser not privy to the state and circumstances of the family from which the conveyance may have been obtained, the sale or mortgage will be held binding against all the members of the family. Sasachella v. Vencatachella and others. 21st Feb. 1816. 2 Str. 320.

23. But collusion not appearing, the shares of the members of the family not joining in the sale or mortgage are recoverable. Id.

24. On the same principle, the Court, in the same term, refused an injunction to stay a proceeding at law by a mortgagor of family property, mortgaged to him by one brother, without the concurrence of the rest, as a security for money borrowed by him (for any thing that appeared to the contrary) for purposes exclusively his own; it appearing, or to be presumed from the circumstances, that the other members of the family had been privy to the transaction. Comarah v. Permall and thers. 1816. 2 Str. 331, note.

25. Where A claimed to recover from B a third share of an hereditary house, which he asserted had been unlawfully mortgaged to B by the son of his elder brother deceased, B pleaded the validity of the mortgage bond and sixteen years' possession; it was held, on evidence, that the mortgage bond was valid, though passed not in the name of B, but in that of another person: and as it appeared to have been made bona fide by the family, and as, by the Hindú law, one member of a family cannot sue for his share of an undivided estate, that A could only recover the whole property by redemption of the whole mortgage, the subsequent adjustment of the particular shares between the members of the family resting with themselves; and A was nonsuited, with costs. Derakur Josce v. Naroo Keshoo Goreh. 8th Feb. 1839. Sel. Rep. 190.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

26. It was declared that a younger brother is incompetent to mortgage an undivided estate without the consent of the elder; and a claim under a mortgage bond so passed cannot be sustained. Semble, That in cases of great necessity, such as extreme distress, the younger brother may mortgage without the elder's consent; but that in liquidation of a debt contracted during the life of their father, and during the time they live as an undivided family, the share considered as that of the younger would go to the mortgagee, although possessed by the elder brother. Ballojee Rapponjee Harbareh v. Venhapa Newala. 12th Sept. 1839. Sel. Rep. 216.—Giberne, Pyne, & Greenhill.

26a. The manager of a Hindú family has power to bind the rest by a mortgage where the money is raised for family purposes, and bonâ fide so applied. Aushatos Day v. Mohes-chander Dutt and others. 8th July 1840. 1 Falton, 380.

6. Verbal Mortgage.

27. Semble, That according to the law as current in Mithila, a verbal mortgage of immoveable property for a period of ten years is valid, provided such property remain in the hands of the mortgagee. Sham Singh v. Mt. Umraotee. 28th July 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 74.—II. Colchbrooke & Stuart.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.<sup>1</sup>

1. Generally.

28. Where a Muhammadan mortgaged a house, and subsequently sold it to another person, to whom he gave immediate possession, and the mortgagee never had possession; it was held that the possession of the house by the purchaser gives him a preferable claim to the mortgagee who had not been put in possession; as, until the house had been taken possession of by the mortgagor, the agreement was not binding. Mahomed Khan v. Keerojee. 1835. Sel. Rep. 165.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

29. Where certain Inaâm land, granted for the service of a Masjid, was attached, in satisfaction of a decree obtained by a mortgagee of the property against the descendants of the original grantee, who had mortgaged it to him; it was held, that, by the Muhammadan law, the mortgage was illegal and void, as land appropriated to religious purposes could not be sold or mortgaged by any of the descendants of the original proprietor; and the Court agreed that the attachment should be raised. Syud Hoossein Allee v. Rowjee Ramajee Dujeh. 1839? Sel. Rep. 204.—Giberne, Pyne, & Greenhill.

2. Bay-bil-wafû.

30. A Bay-bil-wafû sale of land, made by an agent on the part of the owner, was declared void in Muhammadan law, from the agent having exceeded his powers, from its being a sale at gross inadequacy of price, and from the presumption of collusion between the buyer and agent.<sup>2</sup> Meer

<sup>1</sup> In the Muhammadan law there is no distinction between mortgages of lands and pledges of goods. For the laws on this subject, see 2 Hed. 235. 4 Hed. 188 et seq. Maen. Princ. M. L. 71, 75, 317, 352, 354, 369; and Reg. I. of 1798, which provides for the application of such law.

Alcem Ullah v. Alif Khan. 39th Sept. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 55.—Lumsden & Harington.

31. A deed of Bay-bil-wafā, executed on land for a sum of money, in favour of a person through whom, not from whom, the money was borrowed, is not valid in Muhammadan law. Beebee Jugun v. Bakir Ali and others. 7th May 1804. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 78.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

32. A sold to B certain villages which he had previously sold under Bay-bil-wafā to C. On the suit of B against A and C, the Lower Courts decreed specific performance of the contract in favour of B, C receiving the money due on his conditional sale. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed the decision of the Lower Courts, on the grounds that, by the Muhammadan law, C not having assented to the sale, B should have waited till A had redeemed, or might have had recourse to his action

Adawlut on the 4th . i. 1799, there was a question put to the law officers respecting the legality of Bay-bil-wafā sales, though the cause, as it happened, went off on a question as to the competency of the agent, who made the Bay-bil-wafā sale, in that instance, on the part of another. It was stated in the Fatwa then given, that a sale with the optional condition for three days is good, but for more than three days is not good, according to Hanifah and Yusuf; but, according to Muhammad, for four days, or even a longer period, is good; that the sort of sale being prevalent in the country, Muhammad's opinion should be followed. The intention of the parties, as collected from the tenor of the deed, shews whether the Bay-bil-wafā be a sale with the reserve of an option of retraction within a limited time, or a mortgage for the security of money lent. A stipulation for a short period must be considered to mark that a sale was in the contemplation of the parties: a long term denotes a mortgage or security for a loan; and such mortgages, in the form of conditional sales, are very common, and rightly held valid under the opinion here cited. In the present case the inadequacy of the consideration was a sufficient ground for allowing the equity of redemption under the exposition of the Muhammadan law, that inadequacy of price vitiates a sale by an agent. See . . . days, 23.

to annul the sale for non-delivery, and that it was inconsistent with the Regulations, and the Circular Order of the Court of the 22d April 1813, constructive of Reg. XVII. of 1806 (whereby the interference of the Courts, as to the possession of either conditional buyer or seller is prohibited), the sale of part of the mortgaged property having become absolute prior to the award of the Lower Court, and the term of revocability of the remainder having expired. Muhammad Muthir Khan and another v. Sayud Abdul Hakim and another. 14th Aug. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 226.—Rattray & H. Shakespear.

3. Redemption.

33. The wife of a banished Muhammadan may bring an action to compel the redemption of mortgaged property, there being a proviso in the mortgage bond that the mortgagee might at any time compel redemption on giving five months' notice; and so long as she is content to remain the wedded wife of the banished man, and does not take means to divorce herself, she is legally capable of maintaining the action, and recovering the debt sued for. Mt. Noor Alum v. Sheikh Bahudoor Sheikh Mahmood. 20th Dec. 1823. 2 Borr. 639.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

34. In a claim to redeem a village from mortgage the plaintiff was allowed to recover half of the village by paying one-half of the mortgage money, that being the portion to which he was declared entitled, by the law of inheritance, as heir to the original mortgagor. Mukhammal v. Wazeer Ali. 14th March 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 32.—Harington & Sealy.

4. Priority.

35. A mortgage is completed by possession. Of two mortgages, the later, supported by occupation, was held to annul the prior unaccompanied by possession. Tooljaram Atmaram v. Meean Moohummad and another. 31st July 1821. 2 Borr. 130.—Elphinston.

III. PARSÍ LAW.

35*a*. Where a Pársí, having a share in his own right as heir of property descending to the heirs of a deceased, and also held in mortgage the share inherited by another of the heirs; it was held, by an award of the Dastúr, that he ought to have the refusal of the purchase of such mortgaged share.<sup>1</sup> Furidoonjee Shapoorjee v. Jumshedjee Norshirwanjee. 25th May 1809. 1 Borr. 23.—Duncan, Lechmere, & Richards.

IV. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

36. It was held that land under mortgage is the mortgagee's already and not the mortgagor's, as the mortgagee, if he choose to take possession, may maintain ejectment for it in his own name, even against the mortgagor; and an execution by such person is in effect an execution against equity, because he has already all the realty in him, and he is bound by his own acknowledgment. Anon. Jan. 1814. East's Notes. Case 5.

37. Where a mortgage deed was executed by three persons, who covenanted for title to convey, it will be taken prima facie that the three are each seised of one-third of the estate mortgaged; but the contrary may be shewn by averment, or by necessary inference from the facts stated. And such inference was made where the estate was shewn to have descended to two of the mortgagors only, from the ancestor of such two, though it did not expressly appear why the third had joined; but this might be as a trustee, or for better assurance of the personal debt to the mortgagee. Gopeymohun Thakoor v. Sebnú Cowar. 11th Feb. 1817. East's Notes. Case 64.

38. Though all the borrowing parties joining in a mortgage are personally answerable to the lender for the mortgage money borrowed, yet the Court will only decree a sale of such proportion of the mortgaged premises as appears to have been duly conveyed, and which is properly represented by the parties to the suit. Ib.

39. Per Grey, C. J. Lands in the Mofussil will be sold under a decree of foreclosure in mortgage suits. Doe dem. Bampton v. Petumber Mullick. 29th Oct. 1830. Bignell, 24.

40. The legal mortgage of a Potta will be treated as an equitable mortgage of the land which it represents. Parbutty Ghose v. Bholamath Mitter and others. 6th April 1839. 1 Fulton, 368.

2. Bengálí Mortgages.

41. In an action on a Bengálí mortgage, the plaintiff ought to set forth the instrument specially. Til-luckram Puckrassy v. Choiton Churn Naut. Hyde's Notes. 25th March 1777. Sm. R. 28. Mor. 230.

42. In an action on a Bengálí mortgage, the plaintiff need not prove a demand of payment, nor a demand of the sale of the property mortgaged as a security, as the action would lie for the money lent, this kind of mortgage being only a security. Ib.

43. Bengal bonds are simple contracts, not specialties, because not under seal. Weston and another v. Chaundraney. Hyde's Notes. 23d Jan. 1778. Sm. R. 51. Mor. 231.

44. The interest agreed upon was allowed, though more than 12 per cent., where the 13th Geo. III. c. (63. did not apply. Ib.

<sup>1</sup> This award was held good in all the Courts, but merely as an award under Sec. 20. of Reg. VII. of 1800, and the point here noticed was not discussed. Reg. VII. of 1800 was rescinded by Reg. I. of 1827.

45. A Bengal bond was held to be recoverable upon in an action of assumpsit for money lent, as it is not a conveyance of the land mentioned in the Potta. Sopleram Day v. Panchanand Mitter and others. 22d July 1778. Sm. R. 29. Mor. 232.

46. But this case was overruled, and it was held that a Bengal mortgage cannot be recovered on in assumpsit for money lent. Where the land alone is made liable, the Court doubted whether the plaintiff could recover at all at law, and whether he was not driven to a suit in equity for a specific performance. Radachurn Seal and another v. Panchanand Sealmoney. Mor. 233.

46a. And the plaintiff in an action of assumpsit was nonsuited on this latter ground. Rugganath Sham v. Ramdan Deb Surmono and another. 13th Nov. 1778. Sm. R. 29. Mor. 234, note.

47. A Bengali mortgage was allowed to be recoverable upon an action of assumpsit, where, on the face of the bond, it was expressed that the borrower was to sell and repay himself, and not merely that the lender was to sell and pay himself. Butram Mitter v. Ramchander Doss Paulit. 30th Jan. 1781. Sm. R. 30. Mor. 239.

48. Two members of an undivided family having mortgaged their property by note in writing, it was decreed that they should pay the principal and interest; and in default, that the share of the said mortgagors in the family premises should be sold by the Master. Modungopaul Bose v. Richardson and others. 28th Nov. 1788. Mor. 372.

<sup>1</sup> These instruments are now daily recovered upon in indebitatus assumpsit for money lent, and no distinction is taken between charging the land or the person as a security. Nor is the refined distinction recognized between instruments of this nature which express that the lender is to have power to sell the land and pay himself out of the proceeds, and those in which the borrower undertakes to sell the lands and pay out of the proceeds. -- Mor.

49. A party bringing an action subsequent to the mortgage, and sequestering mortgaged premises on account of a debt due to him from the mortgagors, will be restrained by an injunction from commencing any action against the mortgagee in respect of the mortgaged premises. Ib.

50. Where default was made in payment of a mortgage debt, secured by a Bengali deed of mortgage, with power of sale, a day will be given to the mortgagor to pay the amount found to be due by the Master, together with interest and costs; and in default of payment on such given day, the Master will sell the premises, and thereout pay the mortgagee what is due to him, and the surplus, if any, to the Accountant General, to the use of the mortgagor. All conveyances and title-deeds which were retained by the mortgagor were ordered to be delivered to the mortgagee for the purposes of the sale. Nilmoney Mullick v. Brijomohan Seal. 11th Nov. 1819. Mor. 375.

51. A Bengali mortgage will be received in evidence under the common counts in assumpsit, not only as evidence of the loan, but to shew the rate of interest agreed upon between the parties. Surroopsook v. Gorind Chunder Bonnerjee. 31st Jan. 1840. Mor. 244.

3. Practice.

52. Where a mortgagee had entered up judgment on a warrant of attorney, and the Sheriff had taken possession of the mortgaged premises under the fieri facias, an injunction was granted to restrain the defendant in equity from selling the premises under his execution. The Court, however, refrained from deciding the question, whether, if a sale had taken place to a stranger, it would have been valid, the decision resting on the nature of an equity of redemption. Shaik Jummorudden v. Ram-mohun Mullick. 20th Jan. 1814. Cl. R. 1829. 153.

53. In the case of a mortgage, a bill and decree for a sale, instead of a foreclosure, is sustainable. Armogum v. Syff ul Dowlah. 15th Sept. 1814. 2 Str. 282.

54. But before possession under the sale can be ordered, the defendant must be compelled to execute a conveyance. Ib.

55. Semble, It is only necessary to sue the widow alone, where a mortgagee files a bill for a sale (whatever may be the question as to foreclosure) of the mortgaged premises, if the debt be not discharged by a short day, in case of the previous death of the mortgagor without any son or grandson, but leaving a widow, in whose hands alone the property is bound for the husband's debts; and it seems he is not bound to join the daughters or next male heir. Gopeymohan Thakoor v. Sehn Cover. 11th Feb. 1817. East's Notes. Case 64.

56. A bill by the executor to redeem premises which had been sold under a judgment entered up on the mortgage bond, and purchased by the mortgagee, was dismissed without costs, there being no proof that the estate of the testator was insolvent, or that he had any debts unsatisfied. Laprimaudaye v. Praenkissen Biswas. 25th Jan. 1827. Cl. R. 1820. 153.

57. If a foreclosure bill be taken pro confesso against all the defendants but an infant, a sale may be decreed. Parbutty Ghose v. Bhola-nauth Mitter and others. 6th April 1830. 1 Fulton, 368.

58. An equity of redemption is not seisable under a writ of execution. In the matter of Rustumjee Cowasjee and another. 3d Term 1842. Mor. 100. 1 Fulton, 33.

V. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

59. Where the appellants claimed to redeem lands on which they had executed deeds of mortgage and conditional sale, redeemable within a certain time, on plea that payment of the amount was tendered within that time, judgment was given against them, no such tender being proved.<sup>1</sup> Sheikh Moomhammad Ali and another v. Kari Ram and others. 22d May 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 90.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

60. Where a party claimed an estate under a written engagement for the conditional sale of it on failure of repayment of a loan of money by a certain day; it was held that, under the circumstances, the actual sale of the estate was not intended, but only security for the loan; and judgment was given for the estate being retained on repayment of the principal and interest of the loan by an appointed time.<sup>2</sup> Rance Jugdesree v. Pooruchund Srimal. 17th June 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 143.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

61. Where A claimed from B, his

<sup>1</sup> The transaction in this case appears to have been merely a conditional sale, which the plaintiffs executed to secure the punctual payments of arrears of revenue on a specified day. The persons to whom the defendants are heirs did not take a mortgage of the lands; but about the time of the expiration of the period of redemption, when the sale became absolute, they paid the amount as the purchase money of the lands, and obtained possession. The plaintiffs having totally failed in proving the alleged tender of payment within the stipulated time, judgment was given against them in all the Courts.—Macn.

<sup>2</sup> The Courts were satisfied that the original intention of the parties was not the sale of the estate, but the security of the loan. The real purchaser, who was allied to the former proprietors, had bought the estate for a low price, and the purchase money was borrowed from the respondent, on the security of the engagement which formed the subject of the suit. But it was evidently not in contemplation to transfer the estate at the same inadequate price to the respondent, who was a stranger to the family of the former proprietors. In addition to this consideration, the inadequacy of price weighed with the Court in relieving the appellant from the transfer of the estate under the letter of the engagement.—Macn.

cousin, the moiety of the estate of their grandfather; it was held, on proof that it was the joint inheritance of the parties, that A was entitled to the moiety, though a mortgage debt, contracted by B's father to make good arrears of revenue when he had the management of the estate, was paid by B. Shekh Bhukarce v. Imambuksh. 5th Nov. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 355. — Harington & Stuart.

62. The mortgage or conditional sale of land by an agent was set aside, it appearing that he had no special powers from the proprietor for that purpose, the consideration being inadequate, and the execution of the deed of sale being irregular. But the mortgage money was ordered to be refunded, with interest, the costs of suit in all the Courts being made payable by the parties respectively. Golohnath Rai and another v. Miharaj. 17th May 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 6. — Harington & Fombelle.

63. A being indebted to B, grants him a mortgage of his estate (antecedating the mortgage deed eight years), together with a bond conditioned for the payment of the debt by yearly instalments, and a warrant of attorney to confess judgment. A's estate being attached by Government for arrears of revenue, and several instalments due on the bond being unpaid, B caused judgment to be entered up in the Supreme Court on his bond and warrant of confession, and sued out execution, under which the lands were sold by the Sheriff at public auction, and purchased by C, who afterwards sold them by private contract to D. Seven years afterwards, A having died, his son and heir sues B, C, and D to recover the lands, on the plea that the mortgage to B by A was fictitious, and granted with the view of screening his property from other creditors, and that B had executed an engagement to the above effect, promising that, should he cause the estate to be sold under the deeds in his possession, he would himself become the purchaser, and cause it to be transferred to the son of A. Held, that the engagement (if proved) being intended to defeat the rights of third parties, cannot avail A or his representatives against B, much less against C and D, who were purchasers for a valuable consideration, without notice. Ramindur Deo Rai v. Roopnarain Ghose and others. 5th Aug. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 118. — Harington & Fombelle.

64. A enters into a written engagement to B for the sale of his estate, on condition of receiving the whole amount of the purchase money by a specified period, and in that case engages to execute a regular bill of sale. A receives part of the purchase money, and B tenders the remainder before the expiration of the specified period. A, however, refuses to abide by the terms of his engagement. At the suit of B, the conditional sale was held to be conclusive against A, although the engagement did not contain any express condition that it should be considered sufficient to constitute an actual sale. Ram Gorind Singh v. Baichha Ram Ghose. 13th Aug. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 123. — Harington & Rees.

65. In a suit filed by an appellant to prevent the sale by the respondent of his fourth share of a house, attached at the respondent's instance, in execution of a decree, on mortgage of half the house against the owner of a fourth share conjointly with the appellant, the Court upheld the attachment, because the mortgage was a fair transaction, made in the most public manner for the benefit of the family, and therefore ought to be first satisfied. Sheochund Shumbhoo Das v. Nihalchand Bhaveshah. 10th Dec. 1818. 1 Borr. 298. — Hon. M. Elphinstone, Sir C. Colville, Bell, & Prendergast.

66. A having lent Rs. 10,000 on mortgage of lands to B, and afterwards borrowed of C Rs. 5000 on an agreement that C should have half the annual profits of the mortgage, and A having given to C as security the custody of the mortgage-bond, but retained the documents authorizing him to make the collections; it was held that this is a simple transaction between A and C, the former being accountable to the latter, without reference to the proceeds of the mortgaged estate. Kishendas v. Dirpal Singh. 31st July 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 43.—C. Smith.

67. Where a house and shops were mortgaged under a San Giveneea Khatt vesting possession in the mortgagee; it was held, that where possession had remained with the mortgagor for a number of years, without clear proof of possession by the mortgagee, or of his being ejected, the mortgage would not hold. But that part of the mortgaged property of which possession was shewn to have vested in the mortgagee was held liable to sale in satisfaction of his claims. Munchurjee Jamaspjee and others v. Ulee Khan Nuthoo Bhace. 18th July 1822. 2 Borr. 69. —Sutherland & Barnard.

68. Where the mortgagees of the upper story of a house obtained an attachment against the whole under a decree against the mortgagor, they were held liable, on the subsequent sale and demolition of the house, to make good the amount of a mortgage held by another person of the ground floor. Goolabchand Umbaram v. Poorshotam Harjcerun. 6th Feb. 1823. 2 Borr. 395.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

69. The conditional sellers of certain lands were reinstated in possession on payment of the purchase-money, though the deed containing the condition could not be produced, and the absolute bill of sale only was forthcoming, and though two of the sellers admitted that the condition had been cancelled, it appearing that the provisions of Reg. XVII. of 1806 had not been conformed to. Hidayut Ali v. Prem Singh. 29th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 250.—Leycester & Dorin.

70. Where A sued to recover rent from B for the occupation of a house mortgaged by B to him, B admitted the mortgage and rent to be due, and agreed to pay the money in three months, and A withdrew his claim by a Rāzi nāmeh. B failing to pay, was imprisoned by A, who subsequently attached the house under an order of the Court to have it sold for payment of the claim, together with costs and subsistence money, that the balance might be paid in satisfaction of the mortgage. It appeared on evidence that B had no right to mortgage the house, it being assigned for the subsistence of his mother, and liable to furnish her funeral expenses, and that she did not, neither could she by law, join in the mortgage; and the Zillah Register (Vihart) decreed the removal of the attachment. The mother died, and B, and C his son, appeared to defend the case, C defending, not as son of B, but as co-heir to the estate, as posthumous appointed son of B's late brother, and therefore having a claim upon the house. The sitting Judge (Sutherland) thought that, had B been the only heir, he would have been bound by his own acts; but as C had started up, should he be allowed an interest, things would remain as they were during the mother's life, his claim being distinct; but, whatever were the merits of the case, that A could not, under the condition of his mortgage claim, sell the house, or compel the redemption. If he allowed a bad tenant to occupy the house, it was done at his own risk, but he could not claim to break through the conditions of the mortgage for non-payment of rent, and the removal of the attachment was confirmed. But as the grounds of this decision were different from those on which the decree of the Register was founded, the case was referred to a competent Court. The full Court decided that A's claim for rent, under the decree in the first suit, ought first to be satisfied by the sale of the house mortgaged to him; and that after receiving the amount of his arrears of rent, being also paid the sum lent on mortgage, any surplus should be applied in defraying his costs of suit, which he would also recover from any property of the deceased mother. Any funeral expenses actually defrayed were to be refunded by A to those persons who expended the same. And the decision of the Register was therefore reversed, and the house decreed to be sold, and the proceeds applied to the purposes aforesaid. Puridoonjee Jumshedjee v. Manik Bacc and others. 13th May 1824. 2 Borr. 677.—Romer & Ironside.

71. A claimed a garden as belonging to B, by virtue of a mortgage made thereof to him by C; B had given the mortgage bond to C, as alleged, for a particular purpose; C having the mortgage bond in his possession, sold the garden to D, who produced the deed of sale made to him, and also the deed of sale executed to C. Held, that the production of such deeds was a sufficient proof of his title, and the mortgagee must seek his remedy against his debtor, the mortgagor, as he either negligently or voluntarily abandoned or lost his mortgage security. *Chonakara Machachy v. 72. Held, that the validity of a transaction of Bay-bil-wafu is not affected by the fact of the parties not having come to a final adjustment of their respective accounts previously to the execution of the deed by the conditional seller: neither is it affected (the term at the end of which the conditional sale was to become conclusive being five years) by the fact of an excess above the legal interest having been received by the conditional purchaser in any one year, there being no trace of fraud to elude the law regarding interest. *Ram-hoomar Neer Bachusputtee v. Semble, If a mortgagor in default engage at the end of a term to convert the mortgage into a sale in the event of non-redemption within the term, and if he neither satisfy the loan nor surrender the property, the mortgagee may recover the loan and interest, and is not restricted to his real action. *Khedoo Lal Khatri v. 75. The vendee of a revocable sale takes out of Court the amount of principal and interest tendered, reserving his right of action for the sum charged as short tendered; and the Court will award the same if the vendor fail to discharge himself, but without prejudice to his right to recover of the vendee the amount alleged to have been received by him. *Raja Barda Kant Ray v. 76. In consideration of, and to secure a sum paid by A, B deposited his titles to some real property, and executed a sale, revocable on repayment of the principal and interest within a limited time, covenanting to give possession and effect the registry of the vendee's name. After nearly twelve years had elapsed, A sued B to recover the principal and interest, and the award in his favour was affirmed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the defence being a total denial of the payment and deposit. *Kanhai Lal v. 78. A sold to B by revocable sale several villages for a defined sum, and at the same time transferred absolutely to B other property, apparently, but not really, for money paid. On the application of B, the Zillah Court ordered notice to redeem to be issued to A, under Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1806. A paid off part of the price inserted in the deed of revocable sale, and by mutual agreement part of the conditionally sold property was discharged, and part remained under sale, revocable within a defined period on satisfaction of the share of the price imputed to it. A did not duly redeem, but made partial payment, received by B after the expiration of the defined period. B, in his real action to recover as under a sale rendered absolute, failed on a special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which did not order a refund of the balance of purchase-money, because, 1st, the Court considered the gratuitous conveyance as an usurious device under Sec. 9. of Reg. XV. of 1793; 2dly, proof that notice was duly served on the vendor under Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1806, was wanting; 3dly, the original revocable sale was annulled by the subsequent covenant. Parasnath Chaudhuri v. Lala Bihari Lal. 28th Feb. 1834. 5 S. D. A. 79. Where A sued B and C for the recovery of a sum of money lent on a mortgage, with interest, or quiet possession of the mortgaged property, in the enjoyment of which A had been interrupted by B and C; it was held by the Assistant Collector (Malcolm) and the Collector (Mills) that it was proved that a certain sum had been received by A from the mortgaged property, and that A was therefore only entitled to recover the balance of principal, without interest, which had not been specified in the bond. But these decisions were reversed on appeal; and it was decreed that A had a right to the full amount, with simple interest at 9 per cent. from the period of the interruption by B and C, up to the date of the decree, to be paid within one month, or that B and C should deliver over the mortgaged property to A, leaving the latter to sue for damages sustained by the interference of the other parties. *Joona Naikeen v. 80. A claimed certain property from B, alleging that it had been mortgaged seventy years previously by C, his ancestor, to D, the ancestor of B. The latter resisted the claim by asserting that the lands had been sold by C to D. A produced a copy of the mortgage deed, and the transaction was further supported by hearsay evidence; and B not being able to produce any bill of sale, nor even a copy of one, or any proof that such document had ever existed, the mortgage was held to be proved, and the property directed to be restored to A, with costs of suit. *Rai Hurnarain Sing and another v. 82. A petition having been presented to prevent the sale of a house premises under attachment, in satisfaction of a decree, on the ground that the owner was an infant, and unrepresented in Court, and an order made thereon for the production of the evidence in support of those facts; the petitioner, not having produced such evidence, and the sale being about to take place, filed a plaint, claiming the premises in question on his own account as equitable mortgagee; but having failed in proving either the transfer, or the payment of the alleged mortgage, his suit was dismissed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bombay; and their decree was affirmed, but without costs, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. *Pandoorang Bullat Pundit v. 84. In pursuance of a stipulation contained in a mortgage deed, that the mortgagees should be at liberty to place a Mehta or clerk of their own to receive the collections, to be paid a weekly salary by the mortgagor, such officer was appointed, who received the collections for the first few years, and paid them over to the mortgagees, but afterwards discontinued such payments, and handed over the amount of the collections to the mortgagors. An attachment having issued against the estate, at the suit of a late partner, for the amount of his share of the property upon a dissolution of the partnership; it was held by the Judicial Committee, overruling the judgment of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of

Bombay, that the appointment of a Mehta by the mortgagees was a possession by them only so long as he continued to pay the collections over to the account of their mortgage;

1 that the subsequent payment by him of the collections to the mortgagors did not create a forfeiture by the mortgagees; the effect of the power to appoint a Mehta being merely equivalent to the mortgagee's right to receive the rents and profits if they should think fit, and would not operate so as to postpone their security to the attachment subsequently obtained, unless they permitted the payments to be made to the mortgagors after notice of such attachment. Ib.

85. The plaintiff, who had obtained a decree in the Supreme Court for a sum of money secured by a mortgage on property which had been sold in execution of a decree of a Mofussil Court, sued to have the property resold, in satisfaction of the decree of the Supreme Court. Held, that the plaintiff had clearly a lien on the property as mortgagee; and that the purchaser should either pay the sum awarded to the plaintiff by the decree of the Supreme Court, or that the house should be resold in satisfaction thereof. Pudden Lochun Doss v. Esther Guerinierre. 25th Aug. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 43.—Lee Warner.

86. A, a mortgagee (in the year 1829), instituted an action in the Lower Court for foreclosure. B, the defendant, (the mortgagor), did not appear; but C, a third party, filed a petition, stating that B had previously (in 1820) mortgaged the property to D, under a deed of conditional sale, and that B had subsequently (in 1827) sold the same, with other landed property, to C; and that C, to secure his own right under the deed of sale executed to himself, paid the amount of D's claim on the property, further stating that he, C, had brought an action against B, in 1831, for recovery of the sum paid for the pro-

erty, and that this suit was decided on a deed of compromise, by which, inter alia, the property in dispute became the property of C. The principal Sudder Ameen gave judgment in favour of A, the plaintiff, but his decision was reversed by the Zillah Judge on the appeal of C, and the decision of the Zillah Court was confirmed, on a special appeal of A, the plaintiff, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. *Chedee Lal v. ## 2. Redemption.

87. Where an estate had been mortgaged with conditional sale, to become absolute at the end of a term, which had since expired; it was held, that the mortgagor was nevertheless entitled to redemption of his estate on proof that offers of clearing the mortgage were made within the term, and evaded by the mortgagees. Bejnath Sahoo v. Vizeer Sing. 1st Dec. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 168.

88. Where A sued to redeem from mortgage the Desâigari of a village, it was urged in defence, by some of the opposite parties (who had been in possession of the office for seventy-five years), that a mortgage never had existed, and by others that it was foreclosed. The evidence in this case was very contradictory. The Zillah Judge (Anderson) observed that it was a case of difficulty and danger to disturb a possession of so long a standing. It required that the right of the disturbing party should be clear and defined. This was not quite the case in the present instance, but still A's title was better made out than that of the opposing parties. On appeal, the sitting Judge (Sutherland), distrusting the evidence, and placing it in the background, thought that it was impossible that such excellent property should have been so long unredeemed, if mortgaged for so small a sum, and was inclined to allow matters to rest as they were at the time of the institution of the suit, without disturbing, on such inconclusive grounds, what had so long existed; but on reference to a competent Court, it was held, that as the only proof of the foreclosure of the mortgage lay in a deed which was evidently fabricated; that as A had already made an application for redemption to a competent authority; and as there was no proof that a condition of sale formed part of the original mortgage; A was entitled to redeem. Parvatee v. Sooraj. 7th June 1818. 2 Borr. 516.—Romer and Ironside.

89. A, depositing the amount of a mortgage, moved the Zillah Court to restore possession. B pleaded that the sale was absolute. The Zillah Judge passed a summary order for restoration of the property to A; but this order was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who ordered that the property should be restored to B, on re-payment of the mortgage money with interest at 12 per cent., and that he should recover the collections during dispossession. On the institution, however, of a regular suit by C, who had purchased the estate of A at a public sale for arrears of revenue against A and B, the revocability of the sale was established, and a decree for possession on redemption of the mortgage was passed in favour of C. Abhai Charan Bandhopadhyaya and others v. Raja Gris Chandra and others. 25th June 1821. See in Sarup Chand Sarkar v. Same. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Goad.

90. Where a woman petitioned to redeem a mortgage executed by her, and which redemption was resisted by the mortgagee, who set up an alleged deed of sale to him, the Court found, on evidence, that the alleged deed had been obtained by fraudulent collusion, and decreed that she should be at liberty to redeem the mortgage. Mt. Sooruj v. Milapchand Harukchand. 11th July 1822. 2 Borr. 289.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

91. Where a person filed an action to set aside a sale of a house on the ground of a right of pre-emption being vested in him by a deed of mortgage with a condition of sale, the mortgage having been afterwards redeemed, and there being no proof that the mortgage had ever existed, he was nonsuited on the latter ground in the Zillah Court; and, on appeal, the Court held, that even if there had been a mortgage, with condition as aforesaid, the redemption of such mortgage annulled it and all its conditions, and he was therefore nonsuited, with costs. Meera Nagur v. Bhacedas Bhoolundas. 5th Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 352.—Sutherland.

92. An equity of redemption was decided to be saved by the repayment of the money borrowed on the mortgage within the period of one year from the receipt by the mortgagor of the notice to pay issued under Reg. XVII. of 1806, as required in such notice. Hussain Ali Khan and others v. Mt. Phool Bas Koor. 12th Jan. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 5.—Harington & Smith.

93. Where a person claimed to redeem a village from mortgage, he was allowed to recover half of the village by paying one half of the mortgage money, that being the portion to which he was declared entitled by the law of inheritance as one of the heirs of the original mortgagor. Mukham Lal v. Wazeer Ali. 14th March 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 32.—Harington & Sealy.

94. A right of redemption was adjudged to the seller of certain lands, on the ground of a condition to that effect in a separate deed executed by the purchaser, though the bill of sale itself was not worded conditionally. Beharee Lal v. Mt. Soohum. 10th July 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 174.—Leycester & Dorin.

95. Under Reg. XVII. of 1806, the Court cannot summarily settle what payment shall entitle the vendor of a recoverable sale to redeem; and in a case of improper interference in this regard (where the Lower Court had ruled that the deposit of the principal was sufficient) the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed the order, allowing the vendor (thus misled) a few days to save the redemption by deposit of interest, the expiration of the year of grace notwithstanding. Raja Barda Kant Ray v. Barmali Bose. 19th April 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 111.—Rattray.

96 a. The orders of the Lower Court refusing to receive the mortgage money tendered by a mortgagee, and restore possession of the mortgaged property because the period of the mortgage had expired, were reversed on summary appeal by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the Lower Court directed to receive the deposit money at any time before the final foreclosure of the mortgage, and pass such orders as might be proper in regard to the restoration of possession.<sup>1</sup> Saggyad Saidat Allee, Petitioner. 26th May 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 187.—Reid.

XVII. of 1806, which is applicable to this species of contract, and which provides that no conditional sale can become absolute without a notice of one year to the seller. Arman Pande and others v. Nouruttun Koonwur. 20th Feb. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 78.—Goad & Dorin.

99. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut will uphold a decree of the Supreme Court in favour of a mortgagee founded on a bond to confess

101. Where a mortgagee of a fourth share of the Kulkarni of a village, under a mortgage bond with a condition of sale, claimed to regain possession of the mortgaged share foreclosed, but retained by a co-partner of the mortgagor, the latter admitted the mortgage, but asserted that tender of the mortgage-money had been made within the time, and an award of arbitration had decided in favour of his right of redemption; but this not being proved on evidence, the Court held that the mortgage was foreclosed, and that the mortgagee was entitled to the fourth share sued for. *Junardhan Gunes Gogte v. 103. Where property on which the plaintiff had a mortgage had been sold in execution of a decree obtained by a common bond creditor, the Court held, that, notwithstanding the sale, the plaintiff should sue to foreclose the mortgage, instead of for the money lent by him, the sale having made no alteration in his position as mortgagee; and as only the rights and interests of the proprietor had been sold, as provided by Cl. 7. of Sec. 3. of Reg. date subsequent to the mortgage. Oottumram and another v. Hurgovindas Hurjeevandas. 24th July 1821. 2 Borr. 111.—Sutherland.

115. A had a deposit of the title-deed of a house belonging to C for a debt due from his father; C subsequently mortgaged the house to B; A and B obtained judgments against C, their common creditor; A's judgment was fourteen days after B's, and was only against the person of C; B's decree was, that his debt should be paid out of the house. A attached the house; but the Court held that the attachment was invalid, and decreed that either party might sell, and that if A sold he must satisfy B's claim, and make good any deficiency, but if B sold he was to satisfy his own claim in full, and pay over any surplus to A, and that the costs of the appeal should be borne by A. Khooshal Wamuljee v. Heerachand Premchand. 9th Aug. 1823. 2 Borr. 580.—Romer & Ironside.

116. Where the uncles of the plaintiff had mortgaged their shares of an estate to two individuals, and, on those mortgagees absconding, had made a second mortgage to another individual, from whom the plaintiff redeemed the property; it was held that a private distribution made among themselves by the first and second mortgagees cannot avail, as the first mortgagees had a right either to the whole, or to no part of the mortgaged estate. Pirthee Singh v. Bisumber Sahee and others. 29th Jan. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 298.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

117. Where an action was brought to raise an attachment placed on a house in virtue of a mortgage granted to the defendant by relations of the absent owner, the plaintiff claiming on a prior mortgage granted by the owner's Gumáshtah, bonâ fide for his (the owner's) son's benefit, whose right to mortgage his principal's property was disputed; it was held that possession for twenty years by the plaintiff, and the absence of objections on the part of the owner of the house, and want of right on the part of the relations of the owner to grant a mortgage, invalidated the defendant's claim. Chunchaldas Gunga Bissim v. Sudaseo Gunnesh. Sel. Rep. 172.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

118. Held, that a mere deposit, by a borrower, of the title deeds of real property, as security for a debt, is equivalent to a mortgage, in giving the holder of the deeds a prior lien on the property specified therein. Laljee and others v. Govind Ram Jance. 23d May 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 165.—Braddon, Reid, & F. C. Smith.

119. It was ruled that a lien on property under a mortgage bond cannot be set aside by a claim on a surety bond for costs, under a deed of prior date to that of the deed of mortgage. Sorabjee Wacha Gandy v. Komurjee Maneekjee. 1st April 1839. Sel. Rep. 235.—Bell, Giberne, Pyne, & Greenhill.

6. Usufruct.

120. In a claim of the appellant to the balance of principal and interest alleged to be due on a mortgage, judgment was given against the appellant, it appearing that the special conditions of the mortgage only entitled the mortgagee to receive the usufruct as interest, though lower than the legal rate, leaving the time of redeeming the mortgage, by payment of the principal lent, to the option of the mortgagors.<sup>1</sup> Behari

<sup>1</sup> The decision in this case determines two questions relative to the sort of mortgage described in the report; 1st, it is determined (against the claim of the plaintiff) that a mortgagee having, under the terms of the deed, accepted the usufruct in lieu of interest for an indefinite period, has no right to demand, at his own convenience, payment of the debt from the mortgagor, but must await his voluntary payment of the principal, or the gradual extinction of the debt, under the operation of Sec. 10. of Reg. XV. of 1793, in case the annual usufruct exceed the legal interest. 2d, The rule above cited does not annul the

Lal v. Mt. Phahoo and another. 18th Dec. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 119.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

121. A claim by the heir of a mortgagor to recover certain mortgaged lands was dismissed, the mortgage, which provided for the usufruct being received as interest until the lands should be redeemed by payment of the principal lent, not appearing to have been cleared. Muhronnisa Khanum v. Mt. Budamoon and others. 25th May 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 185.—Harington & Fombelle.

122. Where lands were assigned by a Tankhah for payment of a debt out of the revenue of such lands, without any stipulation, express or presumptive, for the application of the annual receipts to the discharge of the principal in preference to the interest, an account was taken by order of the Court, wherein the revenue was applied, first to the payment of the principal, and afterwards of the interest.<sup>2</sup> Queiros v. Khudija Sultan Begum and others. 20th July 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 199.—Harington & Fombelle.

123. Where A had mortgaged lands to B, with the condition that the lands should remain with B, and the stipulations of a mortgage which may be in favour of the borrower, but has provided that any excess above the legal rate of interest shall be applicable to the liquidation of the principal. A mortgage of this sort is intended to secure to the lender the punctual receipt of a sum not exceeding the legal interest of his loan; but the law does not permit it to be abused for the purpose of obtaining, under the name of usufruct, an usurious interest. The rule for allowing interest only equal to the principal regards cases where the interest is in arrear, not those where the interest is paid or realized from the usufruct, or where the usufruct is stipulated to be received in lieu of interest.

<sup>2</sup> It may be added, that the circumstances which governed this decision being of a special nature, it does not furnish a precedent for the general adjustment of accounts between proprietors of land and assignees, or mortgagees, when there may be no stipulation as above mentioned.

produce be received by him, until the mortgage should be redeemed by payment of the principal sum lent, the Court ordered that B should render an account of the profits, in the manner stated in Sec. 10. of Reg. XV. of 1793, from the 28th March 1780, the date specified in that Section, on a demand being made to that effect by A, in case the profits realized should have exceeded the legal amount of interest on the sum for which the mortgage was granted.<sup>1</sup> Choteelal v. Pirbhoonurain and others. 27th Nov. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 292.—Harington & Stuart.

124. A mortgagor is entitled to recover possession of an usufructuary mortgage by a summary process, agreeably to Sec. 2. of Reg. I. of 1798, and the concluding paragraph of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut's Circular Order, dated 22d July 1813, on payment of the principal sum borrowed, the question as to interest being left open for future adjustment.<sup>2</sup> Kurto

<sup>1</sup> Sec. 10. of Reg. XV. of 1793 is as follows:—"In case of mortgages of real property, executed prior to the 28th day of March 1780, in which the mortgagee may have had the usufruct of the mortgaged property, whether he shall have held it in his own possession or not, the usufruct is to be allowed to the mortgagee in lieu of interest, agreeably to the former custom of the country (provided it should have been so stipulated between the parties), until the above-mentioned date; subsequent to which the same interest is to be allowed on such mortgage bonds, and also on all bonds for the mortgage of real property, which have been entered into on or since that date, or that may be hereafter executed, as is allowed on other bonds, which have been, or may be, granted on, or posterior to, such date, and no more; and all such mortgages are to be considered as virtually and in effect cancelled and redeemed whenever the principal sum, with the simple interest due upon it, shall have been realized from the usufruct of the mortgaged property subsequent to the 28th day of March 1780, or otherwise liquidated by the mortgagor."

<sup>2</sup> Had this been an application from the mortgagee to foreclose the mortgage, instead of from the mortgagor to recover possession of his lands, the duty of the additional register would have been purely mi-

125. A borrowed money of B, and at the same time gave a farm of the estate to B, on condition that B should account to him for one-third of the produce, and should be entitled to hold it on these terms till repayment of the principal: A was to pay the government revenue. A, after some years, sued B to recover his estate, on the ground that B had realized more than principal and interest by the profits, and by Sec. 6. of Reg. XV. of 1793 the creditor was not entitled to interest more than the amount of the principal. B denied that he was liable to account for the receipt, and claimed to hold the farm until the principal was repaid. Held, that Sec. 6. of the Regulation quoted, prohibiting the Court from awarding arrears of interest more than the principal, did not apply to this case. It seemed, however, that the profits of the farmer had exceeded the legal interest of 12 per cent., and the Court ruled that B should account annually for the excess of income realized beyond the legal interest; and that A should recover his estate on paying the balance of the principal appearing due, on an account made up on the above footing. Ghulam Kadir v. Ray Nim Chunder Ray. 24th April 1821. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 9, note.—Goad & Dorin.

126. A Mootah being advertised for sale by order of the Collector, for arrears due to Government, the proprietor applied to a party to become security for the payment thereof by certain instalments, and thereupon deposited a Sanad and Arzi in the hands of a third party, and executed nisterial, and he would have been required to do nothing more than to inform the mortgagor of the application for foreclosure, leaving the mortgagee to bring his suit for the mortgaged lands after the expiration of a year from the date of the notice. See Circular Orders of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, July 22, 1813.

a Karār nímeh, or agreement, by which the transfer of the Mootah to the guarantee was made absolute in case of default by the proprietor in payment of the instalments. The party becoming security at the same time executed a counter Karār nímeh, or deed of defeazance, agreeing to give the Mootah, when satisfied out of the rents, &c., the principal sum and interest which he might advance on account of the security. Default having been made in payment of the first instalment by the proprietor, the guarantee obtained possession of the Sanad and Arzi; and, upon a further default by the proprietor, procured himself to be registered as owner, and obtained possession of the Mootah, insisting, notwithstanding the counter Karār nímeh, that his title was absolute. On a suit brought by the original proprietor for possession of the Mootah, and payment of the surplus, after satisfying the advances made on account of the arrears, it was held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the judgment of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Madras, that the transaction was in the nature of a mortgage, and that the party to whom the Karār nímeh was executed was only entitled to retain possession of the Mootah until he had reimbursed himself, out of the rents and profits, the sums advanced by him on account of his security; the counter Karār nímeh, though not registered, being a valid instrument, and operating as a deed of defeazance to the title acquired under the first agreement. Sri Rajah Kakerlapooddy Jagganadha Jaggaputty Raz v. Sri Rajah Vutsavoy Jagganadha Jaggaputty Raz. 8th Dec. 1827. 2 Moore, Ind. App. 1.

7. Limitation.

(a) As to Redemption.

127. The rule of limitation was held not to affect the right of redeeming mortgaged lands, as tenants in mortgage do not hold under a title capable of forming a right by prescription. Muhroonisa Khunum v. Mt. Budamoon and others. 25th May 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 185.—Harington & Fombelle.

128. In a suit for possession of lands as the property of the plaintiff, to which the defendant pleaded a mortgage (rihn) from the plaintiff's ancestor, dated sixty years before, and urged lapse of time against the claim; it was held, that such plea, not being of avail in cases of mortgage under Reg. II. of 1805, the plaintiff might recover on redeeming the mortgage.<sup>1</sup> Choteelal v. Pirbhoomrain and others. 27th Nov. 1800. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 292.—Harington & Stuart.

(b) As to Foreclosure.

129. In a transaction partaking of the nature of a simple mortgage, in which the mortgagee was not put in possession of the property mortgaged, it was held that the mortgagee must bring his action for foreclosure of the mortgage within twelve years from the date of the expiration of the year of grace allowed to the mortgagor for redemption. Felix Lopes v. Chondree Bheem Sing. 11th Sept. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 45.—Lee Warner & Barlow.

8. Registration.

130. A mortgagee was held to have no claim to the mortgaged property where the deed was unregist-

<sup>1</sup> The fourth Clause of Sec. 3. of Reg. II. of 1805 is in the following terms:—"No length of time shall be considered to establish a prescriptive right of property, or to bar the cognizance of a suit for the recovery of property, in cases of mortgage or deposit, wherein the occupant of the land or other property may have acquired or held possession thereof as mortgagee, or depositary only, without any proprietary right; nor in any other case whatever, wherein the possession of the actual occupant, or of those from whom his occupancy may have been derived, shall not have been under a title bona fide believed to have conveyed a right of property to the possessor."

tered, though passed after the establishment of a Registry office. Dadu Bhace Roostumjee v. Nana Bhace Munchurjee. 9th Sept. 1814. 1 Borr. 95.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, Elphinstone, & Bell.

131. But it was afterwards decided, that although a registered mortgage will be preferred to one which has not been registered according to Cl. 2. of Sec. 6. of Reg. IV. of 1802,<sup>1</sup> yet when no registered mortgage is set up, judgment may be given in favour of a mortgage without registry, provided its authenticity in other respects can be satisfactorily established. Brijlal Khoosha v. Jeerundas Jeeraj. 28th Nov. 1815. 1 Borr. 133. —Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Bell. Narayundas Labdas v. Loolajeesunkar Dhoolabhrum. Cited in 1 Borr. 272.

9. Practice.

132. A suit for the recovery of lands by a mortgagor, who has executed a mortgage redeemable within a certain period, and on certain conditions, can only commence at the expiration of that period, unless the mortgagor should have redeemed the mortgage at a prior date. Seeraramian v. Sambasevah Egen. Case 3. of 1811. 1 Mad. Dec. 39. —Scott & Greenway.

133. An action for the recovery of possession of mortgaged property, under Reg. IV. of 1793, was held to be cognizable by the Lower Court when instituted at the expiration of one year from the date of issue of the notice to the mortgagor to redeem his property. Raungopal Surmah Tarafdar v. Runzaun Beebee and others. 19th June 1837. 1 Sev. Sum. Cases, 129.—Hutchinson & Braddon (F. C. Smith, dissent).

NATIVE SERVANT.

1. A native in the Company's service, bound by the rules of the service into which he enters, cannot recover back bribes which (however improperly) he has been compelled by the Company to give up. Venkata Runga Pillay v. The East-India Company. 26th Sept. 1803. 1 Str. 174.

2. Interest and costs were refused to a native of this description, with reference to claims in which he succeeded. Ib.

3. On appeal, however, to the King in Council, interest was allowed at the rate of 10 per cent. from the time at which the money came into the hands of the defendants. Ib.

NATIVE WOMEN.

I. GENERALLY, 1.

II. ACTION BY.—See ACTION, 11*a.*

III. DEED BY.—See DEED, 4, 5.

I. GENERALLY.

1. The Court will protect native women against their own acts, as they can scarcely be considered as sui juris. Latcheny Umma v. Lencecock and others. 10th Feb. 1800. 1 Str. 30.

2. The Court will look with great jealousy as to the acts of native women passing their property, especially if in favour of persons who, from their relation, may be supposed to possess an influence over them which ought to be exerted for their protection; and the Court must often interpose between them and their acts, as Courts of Equity do in England in all cases between persons standing together in certain specified relations giving to the one a presumed advantage over the other. It may almost be laid down as a principle, that the act of a native woman parting with her property, unless in the ordinary course of her expenditure, will be considered as one about which the Court will require to be satisfied by something more than the mere evidence of its having been performed, however strong. Chellummal v. Garrow. 17th Feb. 1812. 2 Str. 159.

3. A native woman can never be deemed sufficiently sui juris to be bound by her own personal acts, if there exist the slightest reason to apprehend that an advantage may have been taken of her. Narsummall and another v. Lutchmana Naic and another. 7th Aug. 1809. 2 Str. 14. 329.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

4. In an account settled with a native woman, it was held to be doing nothing for the party accountable to her to produce and rest upon her signature: the Court must be satisfied that it ought to be binding upon her, by shewing that her complaint of its inefficacy is without foundation. And the account was referred to the Master. Ib.

5. A release, signed by a native woman who subsequently stated that she was ignorant of its effect, was declared void. Ib.

6. A woman cannot alienate a Mániyam acquired by her from the lawful heir. Should a woman, however, not incapacitated by insanity or otherwise, alienate such property, she commits sin; but nevertheless the grantee will be entitled to have the Mániyam. Anon. Case 4 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 122.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

7. A Hindú woman, having a son and heir, deriving property from her father or uncle, cannot apply such property in liquidation of her husband's debts, nor give it to any other person, until her son has attained his sixteenth year, and shall consent to the act. And a note of hand passed by a Hindú married woman and her husband, making over, in security for a debt, a house left to her by her father, was declared, even if duly established, to be null and void. Poonjeea Bhace and another v. Prankoonneur. 8th Aug. 1817. 1 Borr. 173.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, Brown, & Elphinston.

8. The same point was also established where a Mál Zámíní bond had been executed for a debt incurred by the husband of the woman, making a house which had descended to her from her father liable for the debt, which bond had been signed both by the husband for his wife, and by the son who was a minor. Krishnamam Moorleedhur v. Mt. Bheekie and another. 26th June 1822. 2 Borr.

9. Where the widow of a Mussulmán had not derived any property from her late husband, she was held not to be liable for his debts. Noor Jehan Begum v. Prem Sukh. 6th June 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 161.—Sealy.

10. It was held, that, by the Hindú law, a mother cannot alienate at pleasure an estate which she inherits from her son. Nufur Mitr and another v. Ram Koomar Chuttooorya and others.<sup>1</sup> 26th May 1828. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 310.—Rattray.

11. The Pandits of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut declared that, by the Hindú law received in Bengal, the alienation by a mother of a part of her minor son's estate, necessary for his support and that of herself, is valid, inasmuch as a sale occasioned by want is legal; but the Sudder Dewanny set aside the alienation by a mother where her husband, and the father of her minor son, was living, and liable for his support, and where it had been made in pursuance of an engagement which regarded the recovery of the mother's interest in the property, which was ultimately awarded her as trustee for her son, and not in her own right. Kishn Lochan Bose and others v. Tárinú Dási. 24th Aug. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 55.—Leycester & Turnbull.

12. Where, by the custom in India, the respondent (being a Hindú woman of high rank) could not be personally served with an order of revivor, the Judicial Committee allowed service to be substituted on her Díwán, or chief servant. Clark v. Mullick. 11th Dec. 1840. 3 Moore, 252.

13. The 26th Equity Rule<sup>2</sup> does not apply to the case of Pardah women. Chattoo Sing v. Rajhissen <sup>1</sup> The estate taken by a mother in property inherited from her son is the same as that which a widow has in property inherited from her husband; for which estate see INHERITANCE, Pl. 48 et seq., and notes.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. When the criminal sessions occur at the beginning of term, rules nisi for new trials, &c., are to be minuted within the four first days of term. This is a motion of course, and then the motion for a rule nisi may be made within four days after the termination of the sessions. Anon. 2d March 1834. 1 Fulton, 163.

2. The Supreme Court will not grant a new trial on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence, or against the weight of the evidence; unless, indeed, some distinct point can be urged of evidence improperly received, or improperly rejected. *Morris and others v. 4. If the Court do not sit on the fourth day of term, the third is the last day on which a new trial can be moved for without leave. Rogober Dyal v. The East-India Company. 17th June 1842. 1 Fulton, 2.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

5. A plea of insanity set up by a plaintiff on appeal not having been investigated in the Courts below, a review of judgment was allowed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the case sent back for a new trial on its merits. *Tubeeb Shah v. 6. A plaintiff being nonsuited on the ground that she sued for a part instead of the whole sum due to her from the defendant, and having subsequently instigated a new suit for the whole debt, which was awarded to her, on appeal by the defendant to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut the nonsuit was reversed, and the original case ordered to be re-tried on its merits; and judgment being again given for the plaintiff, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut awarded payment of the whole debt, evidence to its being due having been furnished, and there having been no irregularity in preferring the claim. *Ramchurn Lal v. ## I. GENERALLY.

1. By the law as current in Mithila, whatever is acquired by sons living jointly with their father is divisible among all of them. Dhnn Sing v. Donlut Sing. 31st Aug. 1792. Cited in Rany Pudmavati v. Baboo Doolar Sing and others. MS. notes of P. C. Cases. (Zillah Court, Purnea.)

<sup>1</sup> "So intimate, by the Hindú Law," to use the words of Sir Thomas Strange, "is the connection between the two subjects of partition in the life of the father, and inheritance upon his death, that they may be said almost to blend; since, not only upon his demise, but upon his renunciation of worldly concerns, with the view to the ending his days in devotion, or, after such an absence from his family as may justify the inference that, if not in fact dead, he has abdicated his temporal rights, the latter, i.e. inheritance, in effect, by anticipation as it were, attaches; as it does on his degradation for crime, unexpiated: the material difference between them, as concerns the objects, being, that, on partition by the father, he has a discretion with regard to property of his acquirement, in contradistinction to what had descended, to divide it among his sons in such shares as they may respectively merit, or as circumstances may dictate, exercising it always, not arbitrarily, or capriciously; whereas, whatever be the nature of that of which he dies possessed, he has, according to the doctrine of the Mitáshara, no power to regulate the succession, which the law, upon his death, vests equally in all." 1 Str. of an annual dividend of the profits of the estate, left under the management of one or more sharers, is sufficient to maintain a right of partition in the joint estate when required. *Rance Bluwani Dibek and another v. 2. A deed of partition, by a father, in which he allots to his sons portions of his estate, moveable and immoveable, ancestral and acquired, but which was not carried into effect during his lifetime, is not binding on his sons after his death. Bhowannychurn Bunkhojau v. The heirs of Ramkaut Bunkhojau. 27th Dec. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 202.—Harington & Fombelle.

3. A party instituting a claim for a share of his grandfather's property was nonsuited on proof of separation, and the production by the other side of a Fârikhhatt, or release, signed by him for his share of the property. Dost Moohumud v. Husin Bhace Wulee Bhace. 6th Nov. 1817. 1 Borr. 205.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, & Bell.

4. Semble, A father cannot by will prevent his descendants from coming to a partition among themselves. Nubkissen Mitter v. Hurrishander Mitter and others. 11th Oct. 1819. Maen. Cons. H. L. 323.

5. Where property had been bequeathed for the maintenance of an idol by the descendants of the testator, it was ordered, that in case of a quarrel amongst the descendants, and a partition, that the family idols should be enjoyed by them alternately; that the time of enjoyment was to be ascertained according to the proportions of the estate which were left by the ancestor to the several descendants; and that every thing given by the ancestor to the idol should accompany the possession of it. Ib.

6. A mother taking on partition stands upon the same footing with regard to her interest in the estate, moveable and immoveable, as a widow taking on the death of her husband, i.e. she takes only a life interest.<sup>1</sup> Gooroopersaud Bose v. Seebchander Bose and others. 9th Dec. 1820. Maen. Cons. H. L. 29. 72.

7. It was held that lapse of time does not bar the right to a division of a joint estate, the several proprietors of which had entered into separate engagements for their respective shares, though such shares had never been actually separated. Kirtnaraen Das v. Rajkoomar Rai and others. 13th March 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 219.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

8. Where the mother and the widow of a Brahman divided between them his property, consisting of Deewuttur land, and the right of officiating in a temple, reserving to each the power of alienating her own share; it was held that such a partition was invalid by the Hindu law, in consequence of the incompetency of the parties; and a sale executed by the mother on the strength of it was set aside.<sup>2</sup> Mt. Joymunnee Dibia and another v. Eakeer Chunder Chakraborty. 25th March 1829. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 337.—Turnbull.

9. In a case of disputed adoption, the Court, considering the adoption unsubstantiated, decreed partition of an ancestral estate among the heirs. Baboo Girwardharee Sing v. Kulahul Sing and others. 19th Jan. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 9.—C. Smith.

10. On the death of A, a Zamindâr of North Purnea, his elder son B took the whole paternal estate, real and personal. His younger son C (then a minor) sued to recover a moiety of the patrimony, as also accessions made by A. The claim of C was awarded, and B was treated as

The Court considered him as virtually trustee for his younger brother as to half, and provided that allowance should be made to him for the purchase-money in the account for which he was liable. Raja Baidyanand Singh v. Rudranand Singh. 25th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 198.—Walpole.

11. No partition having been in fact made of undivided property after a decree directing a partition, the nature of the property remains unaltered, and it must be looked upon as undivided. Prawnhiessen Mitter v. Sreematty Ramsoondry Dossee. 28th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 110.

12. A partition in fact, made by the several members of a joint and undivided Hindú family, is as binding as a partition by agreement. Doe dem. Gocoolchunder Mitter v. Tarrachurn Mitter. 27th Jan. 1843. 1 Fulton, 132.

II. SHARES ON PARTITION.

13. In a Zamindári acquired by one of four brothers living together, either with aid from joint funds, or with personal aid from the brothers, two-fifths were declared the share of the acquirer, and one-fifth the share of each of the others: a division of the Zamindári was made accordingly among the heirs and descendants of the brothers.<sup>1</sup> Gudadhur Serma v.

Ajodhearam Chowdry. 30th Oct. 1794. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 6.—Sir J. Shore, Speke, & Cowper.

14. At the suit of some of the younger members of a Hindú family for shares of the family estate, the legal distribution was adjudged on its appearing that the estate was not the exclusive right of the elder branch, but that all the members (who had held lands for their support as being sharers) were entitled to share, though hitherto no division had been claimed. Duttanarain Sing v. Ajeet Sing and others. 14th Feb. 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 20.—Cowper.

15. At the partition of a landed estate among the sons of a deceased Hindú all shall share equally. The eldest has no claim to a greater share than the rest on the ground of primogeniture.<sup>2</sup> Bhyroochund Rai v. Russomunee. 18th Sept. 1799. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 27.—Speke & Cowper.

<sup>2</sup> The allotment of a superior portion to the elder brother in token of reverence is obsolete (Dáya Bh. c. iii. s. ii. 26, 27), unless by the free consent of the younger brothers; and the widow's pretensions to it are preposterous, where no such allotment has been assigned to her husband in his life-time.—Coleb.

Kishenchurn Rai. 25th Feb. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 33.—Speke.

18. Plaintiff and defendant were till lately in family partnership, defendant managing the Zamindari, and plaintiff receiving his expenses. The family estate consisted originally of 12 Mauzas, and the manager acquired 17 more for Rs. 3200, borrowed for the purpose, and afterwards took out a Zamindari Potta for the whole together. It was held, in conformity with an opinion of the Pandits, that the plaintiff, at separation, was entitled to half of the whole, for the acquisition by the managing partner is for common benefit, and the money borrowed for the purpose is payable by each sharer in proportion.<sup>1</sup> Sheopershad Sing v. Kulundur Sing. 5th Sept. 1803. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 76.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

19. Two brothers, Hindus, living together, without any paternal estate, purchase sundry lands, and hold them several years in common tenancy. The younger claims against his elder brother for a moiety of the lands; and it appearing that the elder brother chiefly contributed the capital of the purchase-money, both giving their labour to the improvement of it, one-third share of the joint estate was ad-stances in the case, and did not proceed on the legal inadmissibility of that claim, the Hindu law sanctioning the allotment of an additional portion in such cases, with one quarter to the heir who retrieves the common property. Dāya Bh. c. vi. s. ii. 39.—Coleb.

<sup>1</sup> The lands in dispute having been obtained for a payment of money not furnished out of his own separate funds by the appellant, and having been included, at the appellant's instance, in the same Sanad with the hereditary estate in which the respondent's right of participation was undoubted, were clearly acquisitions made for the benefit of co-parceners, and at their charge, under the management of the appellant, acting as manager for the whole. Had they, on the contrary, been acquired from separate funds, and held distinct from the patrimonial estate, they would have belonged exclusively to the acquirer, and not been subject to be shared with him by his co-heirs.—Coleb.

Govindchund Corformah and others*. Nov. 1812. Cited in East's Notes. Case 124.

21. Upon partition made between one son and the sons of another son of A, the widow of A will be entitled to one-third,<sup>3</sup> the son to a third, and the sons of the other son to a third of the estate. Seebchunder Bose v. Goorooopersaud Bose. 4th Dec. 1812. Macn. Cons. H. L. 69.

22. The following were the surviving members of an undivided family. A, the second son of the common ancestor; B, the grandson of the common ancestor by the first wife of the eldest son deceased; C and D, grandsons of the common ancestor by the second wife of the first son deceased; E, F, G, and H, granddaughters of the common ancestor by the second wife of the first son deceased. The common ancestor held certain villages on Mocassa tenure, on condition of performing certain services for the Government; but the Government, having dispensed with those services, resumed the villages, and subsequently granted four of Previously to the resumption, however, A and B had granted to the second wife of the deceased son one of the service villages which was in her possession at the time the suit was commenced: C and D demanded a partition; and it was held that the village granted by A and B to the second wife of the deceased son was not part of the divisible property, and could only become so at her death, and that she was entitled to enjoy the proceeds of it during her life; and the three other Shrotriya villages, receivable under the Sa-nad of Government, should be divided as follows: viz. two-sixths to A, two-sixths to B, and one-sixth each to C and D. The rest of the family property, real and personal, was directed to be divided in the following proportions; viz. three-sixths to A, and one-sixth each to B, C, and D. The Court further adjudged that the partition should be considered to take effect from the date on which the suit was instituted in the Zillah Court, and that each party should pay his own costs. Anon. Case 7 of 1814. 1 Mad. ### III. EVIDENCE OF PARTITION.

39. A member of a Hindú family, among whom there have been no formal articles of separation, but who, as well as his father, has messed separately from the rest, and had no share in their profits or loss in trade, though he has occasionally been employed by them, and has received supplies for his private expenses, is presumed separate from family partnership, and shall not be admitted to claim a share of acquisitions made by others of the family.<sup>1</sup> Rajkishor Rai and others v. Widow of Santoodas. 26th Oct. 1796. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 13.—Speke & Cowper.

40. The mere circumstance of messing conjointly is in law no conclusive proof of coparcenary in property.<sup>2</sup> Khodeeram Serma and another v. Tirlochan. 4th Sept. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 35.—Lumsden & Harington.

41. Where the plaintiff sued his brother and nephew to recover the moiety of an estate, on the plea that it had been acquired while the family was undivided, and such plea was established by the evidence, judgment

<sup>1</sup> This was a question of evidence. The Hindú law provides that, in case of a dispute as to the fact of a partition, recourse shall be had to presumptive proof in default of written and oral evidence. Dáya Bh. c. xiv. The presumption, on the grounds stated by the law officers, was, that this family had long been separate in regard to property.—Coleb. Mit. c. xi. s. xii. 1 Macn. Princ. H. L. 53. 2 Do. 169, 170.

<sup>2</sup> And vice versa, see infra, Pl. 43. It is, as the law officers declared in this case, that the mere circumstance of living together is not conclusive evidence of partnership, though it be one among the arguments and presumptive proofs to which recourse is had in a case of uncertainty to determine whether a family be united or separate in regard to acquisitions and property.—Coleb. Dáya Bh. c. xiv. Mit. c. xi. s. xii.

was given for the plaintiff. It appearing, also, that the plaintiff had withdrawn a former suit instituted by him for the same property, being induced by a written promise of his brother (the defendant) to make an amicable surrender of the moiety sued for, this was construed to be a virtual admission of the plaintiff's right, as member of an undivided family. Jadoo Ram Das v. Obhje Ram Das. 28th Aug. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 77.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

42. Partition may be inferred from circumstantial evidence. Doe dem. Ramasamy Moodeliar v. Vallatah. 2d Aug. 1813. 2 Str. 211.

43. A Hindú family may be divided as to residence and meals, and yet continue one as to property; and the converse is equally true. Mootiah v. Ninecapah. 1816. 2 Str. 333.

44. The management of property by the family is evidence that it belongs to them, in opposition to the claim of any one of them singly. Ib.

45. Where three brothers, whose father's estate was not divided among them, lived and ate together with the mother, but traded separately, and two of the brothers died, one leaving a widow and daughter by a former wife, the other a widow and two sons; it was held that the brothers and the descendants of the two above-mentioned could not be considered as a divided family; and in this case the widow and two sons will be permitted to possess their father's share, but the widow of the other brother cannot be allowed to separate and take her husband's share; nor has the daughter, by a former wife, any right to separate and take her father's share, because he died without previous separation, and leaving no son. The other members of the family are, however, bound to maintain the widow and daughter of the brother dying without male issue, no separation having taken place. Mt. Rajhoonwur and another v. Mt. Dhunhoonwur and others. 5th July 1816.

1 Borr. 207.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, & Bell.

46. Where all invitations and presents are sent by the Cast (Beesa Mohr Banyans) to two brothers jointly, it is a proof of their unity of interest. Mt. Goolab v. Mt. Phool. 9th Sept. 1816. 1 Borr. 154.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

47. Partition was presumed where two brothers each held possession of a moiety of a village granted to them on a rent-free tenure by the Rájah of the country. Than Sing and another v. Mt. Jectoo. 2d Dec. 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 320.—Fendall & Goad.

48. A Hindú woman of the Brahm Kshatri Cast claimed to recover her father's estate from one of his brothers and the son of a second, on the plea of a division having been effected and a will of her mother in her favour. The will was held to be null and void; as, if the three brothers had been bond fide separated in all their interests, the share of the last brother would have descended to his daughter, even had there been no will; and if no separation had taken place, the will would not avail her in opposition to the superior rights of her deceased father's brother and nephew. On investigation it was found that, although the three brothers were so far disunited as to receive Cast invitations and presents separately, yet there was no proof as to their carrying on distinct concerns, or having divided among them the family estate, and the claim of the daughter of the first brother was dismissed with costs. Bhugwan Goolabchund v. Kriparam Anundram and another. 3d April 1821. 2 Borr. 24.—Romer.

49. A claimed for the removal of an attachment laid by B on A's house, in execution of a decree against A's brother. The attachment was confirmed by the Zillah Court, from want of proof by A of separation from his brother, and of his title generally, but was annulled, on appeal, from want of proof by B of the brothers' unity of interests. The deed of sale of the house being in A's name alone, he was held to be deemed the sole proprietor, unless any thing to the contrary could be shewn, which B had failed to do. Dnyal Chutoordus v. Juohar Govinddas. 8th Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 345.—Romer, Ironside, & Barnard.

50. Where there is no formal separation of interests between brothers, and the parties have lived together as an undivided family till five years after the death of one of the brothers, the presumption clearly is, that a trade carried on by the brothers is a joint one: and in absence of all proof that there was a separation of interests between the members of the family, or that any part of the property was self-acquired by one of the brothers independently of funds or other aid afforded by the others, the sons of the deceased brother are entitled to share in the whole property of the family. Bairy Cundappah Chitty v. Bairy Cristnamah Chitty and another. Case 3 of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 372.—Grant & Gowan.

51. A memorandum of separation between two brothers, one of whom had neither agreed to nor signed it, was held to be in nowise binding against him; and on the death of his brother he was declared to succeed to the whole property, to the exclusion of the deceased brother's widow, who, however, was entitled to maintenance out of the estate. Gopal Rao Pandoorung v. Ruma Bacc. 8th Jan. 1824. 2 Borr. 625.—Romer, Sutherland, and Ironside.

52. Where, in a Watanlári village, or one paying a fixed rent, the income arising from it had been divided by the parties inheriting the village, but the lands had not been divided; it was held that such division of the income and profits constituted a separation of interests by the parties, as it was to no purpose to divide the lands when, by the tenure under which they were held, no advantage could arise. *Ruce Bhudr Sheo Bhudr v. 53. In a suit for the division of property of an undivided Hindú family, the whole of the property of each individual is presumed to belong to the common stock; and it lies upon the party who wishes to except any of it from the division to prove that it comes within one of the exceptions recognized by the Hindú law. Luximon Row Sadasew v. Mullar Row Bajce. 22d May 1831. 2 Knapp, 60.

54. When partition is denied, the fact may be ascertained by reference to separate possession of a house, or separate transaction of affairs. Raj Koomar Bissessur Komar Sing v. Mt. Soohh Nundun Koor. 9th April 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 87.—Dick & Shaw.

55. Verbal evidence of a partition is as conclusive as though it had been written. Doe dem. Gocoolchunder Mitter v. Tarrachurn Mitter. 27th Jan. 1843. 1 Fulton, 132.

IV. PRIVATE PARTITION.

56. A claim to obtain separate possession of a fractional portion of an undivided estate, on the grounds of a private deed of partition, and a distinct settlement with the sharers for the public assessment, was rejected, as no actual partition of the lands had taken place in the mode prescribed by the Regulations. The Collector of Tipperah v. Gholam Nubee Chowdry. 24th Dec. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 103.—Fombelle & Rees.

57. A private partition, in the absence of any regular Butwarah by the Collector, constitutes a legal severalty for all purposes under the Hindú law. *Raja Patni Mal and another v. #### V. IMPARTIBLE PROPERTY.<sup>1</sup>

58. If property be acquired, without aid from joint funds, by the exclusive industry of one member of an undivided Hindú family, others of the family, though they were at the time living conjointly with him, and still should do so, have no title to share in his acquisition.<sup>2</sup> Khodeer-ram Serma and another v. Tirlochan. 4th Sept. 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 35.—Lumsden & Harington.

59. Where A, a Hindú, claimed of B a right of participation in certain property acquired by trade whilst A and B were in family partnership with their late father, judgment was given against A, the property being proved to have been acquired by B, exclusively and without aid from any joint stock of the undivided family. Soobuns Lal v. Hurbuns Lal and another. 17th June 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 91.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

60. Where one of four Hindú brothers, while living in family partnership with the rest, obtained a considerable grant of land; it was held that he was exclusively entitled to it by Hindú law, it not being shewn that he obtained it by means of aid from any joint funds of the family. Purtab Bahaudur Sing v. Tilukdharee Sing. 9th March 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 178.—Harington & Fombelle.

61. Where a son claimed from his father a balance of cash, and proved that the money was acquired by his (the son's) separate and exclusive industry, and that the father, therefore, was not entitled to any part of it, judgment was given for the amount. Brij Ratan Das v. Brij Pal Das. 20th April 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 182.—Harington & Fombelle.

62. By the Hindú law as current in Bengal, if property be acquired, without aid from joint funds, by the exclusive industry of one member of an undivided Hindú family, others of the same family, although they were at the same time living in co-parcenary with him, have no right to participate in his acquisition. Kaleepershaud Roy and others v. Degumber Roy. 28th May 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 237.—Ker & Oswald.

63. An undivided brother may acquire separate property during his lifetime, and such property will, on partition after his decease, descend to his son. Jopmarain Mullick v. Bissamber Mullick. Aug. 1819. Macn. Cons. H. L. 48.

64. If a Hindú receive property from his father, a portion of the same devolves to his brothers; but if he acquire it by his own industry, without receiving assistance from the estate of his father, such property is not divisible on plea of inheritance, and no brother can claim any portion of it from him who is the maker of it. So that, should he leave a widow and no sons, grandsons, or great-grandsons, the property would devolve upon her as his heiress. Govinddas Dhoolubhdas v. Muha Lukshumee. 25th Aug. 1819. 1 Borr. 241.—Nepean, Prendergast, & Warden.

65. A sale by A, to his brother B, of a house which he had bought with his own money, was declared binding; and the house would, consequently, descend to B's daughters and grand-daughters, there being no male issue, whether there had been any separation between the brothers or not, and A's son could have no claim whatever.<sup>1</sup> Lar Bacc v. Ichharam Gopal. 4th Sept. 1821. 2 Borr. 309.

<sup>2</sup> In the present case the time and mode of the acquisition of the Zamindari and Birmooter lands in dispute being known, there was no room for doubt in regard to the separate property of the lands in dispute, as they were gained by the unassisted exertions of one of the family, who could not therefore, nor his descendants, be required to give up the acquisition to be shared by the rest of the family. Dáya Bh. c. vii. s. i. 3. The right of retaining the possession of a house built on ground which was common property is countenanced by a passage in the Dáya Bh. c. vi. s. ii. 30. But the principle extends further than is there stated.—Coleb.

66. Held, in a case which arose in Ramghur, that the sole acquisition of one parcener, unaided by the common estate or labour, is impartible. Koul Nath Sing v. Jagrup Sing and others. 20th Feb. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 12.—Ratray & Turnbull.

67. Held, that a purchase made by a Hindú, a member of a joint undivided family, with his own funds, is his exclusive property. Kishore Munnee Dossee v. Sreehant Sen. 4th Jan. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 67.—Barlow.

68. The landed estate of a refractory Zamindár being confiscated, was conferred on a person in remuneration for public services, and on his death it was held by his son, and afterwards by his grandson, to the exclusion of all other members of the family. On the suit of the two sons of the original grantee to participate with their nephew (the grandson), judgment was given against them, the Zamindári being considered to be one of those estates not liable to division recognized by Reg. XI. of 1793.<sup>2</sup> Provision was made in that Regulation for the future abolition of the custom; and it was enacted that, after the 1st of June 1794, such estates should descend according to the Muhammadan and Hindú laws of inheritance. But this provision was held not to be applicable in the present instance, the father of the claimants having died in the year 1774. Koonwar Bodh Singh and others v. Seonath Singh. 17th Nov. 1813.

2 S. D. A. Rep. 92.—H. Colebrooke & Stuart.

69. A member of an undivided Hindú family may accept and hold a grant from Government, in severalty, for his personal services; and a trust will not be implied for the family without circumstances to raise it, nor will the property acquired by such grant be subject to partition. Mootiah v. Nineapah. 1816. 2 Str. 333.

I. HINDÚ LAW.

1. Vicinage and Partnership do not confer any right of pre-emption, according to the Hindú law as current in Bengal. Ramkunhaee Rai and others v. Bung Chund Buhoojea. 24th Feb. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 17.—Fendall & Goad.

2. In an action to recover the profits of a partnership, where it was proved that a partnership in trade had existed by verbal agreement between two Brahmans, the Court decided, that although, by the Hindú law, it is unlawful in Brahmans to traffic, yet, on closing their accounts, they are entitled to their respective share of the profits of such traffic, and gave judgment accordingly. Jye Narain Mokerjee v. Bul Ram Rai. 15th July 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 84.—Sealy.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.

3. By the Muhammadan law the right of pre-emption appertains to one partner over the share of another partner, as their property is joint and undivided, and he is a sharer in the thing itself.<sup>1</sup> Udan Singh and another v. Muneri Khan and others. 15th Sept. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 85.—Fombelle & Stuart.

III. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Liability to others.

4. It was held that a joint bond, given by two persons who were carrying on trade as partners, and one of whom was a married woman whose husband was absent at sea at the time the bond was given, although for goods furnished to her in her trade, which was conducted solely by her with her husband's knowledge, was void; and, as the bond was joint, no recovery could be had on it even against the partner. Ramjoy Pooroomanick v. Lewis Gotting. 17th Nov. 1815. East's Notes. Case 39.

2. Dissolution.

4 a. A decree for an account of dealings and transactions of a deceased partner in a Hindû family bank, and for dissolution of the partnership, was reversed, on the ground that the respective rights of the parties were not sufficiently defined and declared. Baboo Janokey Doss and another v. Bindabun Doss and others. 25th Feb. 1843. 3 Moore Ind. App. 175.

IV. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Liability to others.

5. Partners in a banking-house are not exonerated from the amount of a debt due by the house by a deed dissolving partnership, circumstances appearing to make the transaction collusive. Gopal Das v. Shunker Pooree and others. 29th June 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 193.—II. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

5 a. The partners of a banking concern were held to be jointly and severally responsible for an undertaking executed in their names by the managing partner. Gholam Unbia Khan v. Mochee Lal and others. 6th Jan. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 1.—Fendall & Goad.

6. Debts due by a firm must be recovered from the firm alone, and not from individual partners, unless in a case of an open and avowed separation of interests among the partners, or of any member incurring responsibility by his own act. And where a person sued one of two partners of a firm for half the debt due by the firm, half having been already paid by the other partner, the suit was dismissed, the Court holding that the payment by one partner was to be considered, not as his share of the debt, but as on account of the whole debt due by the firm, and giving the debtor liberty to recover the rest by suing the whole firm. Nihalchand Jacechund v. Shookul Umbashunkur. 11th July 1822. 2 Borr. 286.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

7. But it was afterwards held that the original default in not joining the names of all the partners or heirs of a firm sued, was, under the circumstances of the case, a mere formal omission, and not a substantial defect, and that it might have been amended in the Lower Court, as had been done in the Sudder Court. Jetha Bhace Mooljee v. Hutesingh Lala Hurukchund. 11th Dec. 1823. 2 Borr.

415.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

8. A mortgage of a village, which was partnership property, made by some of the partners for the benefit of the firm, was held binding on a member of the firm though not executed by him. Juggeerundas Keeha Shah v. Ramdas Brijbookundas. 26th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 487.

2. Liability to each other.

9. Where the widow of one of two partners gave away, through partiality, personal property, it was held that, provided it were not the common property of the two partners, the gift would be valid as related to the personal property; but if she gave away the property of the partnership the gift would be invalid, because one cannot assign away the property of both. Mt. Umroot v. Kulyundas. 5th July 1820. 1 Borr. 284.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Colville, Bell, & Prendergast.

10. Of two partners, each must divide the profit and loss exactly according to their agreement or articles; and after the death of either his share goes to his heirs. Id.

11. In a case of disputed partnership accounts between two European shopkeepers the Court referred the proceedings to a gentleman skilled in mercantile affairs, and passed a decree on the basis of his report. Morris v. Collis. 26th Nov. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 117.—Sir J. Colebrooke & Goad.

12. A and B having dissolved partnership, and exchanged Farikhkhatts, whereby they agreed that B should receive all sums due to, and pay all debts owing by, the firm, except one specified debt; it was held that A, or his representatives, can recover from B any sums recovered from A or his estate by creditors of the firm, not being the specified creditor. Matha Hesaraj v. Visan Bhye. Case 7 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 467.—Grant, Cochrane, & Gowan.

12a. In an action for the recovery of Rs. 42,000, principal and interest, on a Shirakat nāmeḥ, or deed of partnership, in which it was stated that the sum of Rs. 21,000 was paid by the defendant to the plaintiff, his partner, but which the plaintiff now asserted he had never received; the Court held, under the circumstances, that, after the lapse of nearly twelve years from the time of the transaction to the institution of the suit, the plaintiff was not entitled to put the defendant on his proof of the actual payment of the sum, and dismissed the claim in toto. Lala Mitterjeet Singh v. Brij Ruttun Doss; and vice versa. 19th Jan. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 152.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

3. Dissolution.

13. A claimed from B and his brother C, as late partners in a banking house, the amount of a debt due from the house. B pleaded a Farikhkhatt, or deed of release, from his brother, purporting to dissolve the partnership, but dated only six months before the failure of the house. Under the circumstances the Court considered it presumable that the deed was collusively executed, in contemplation of bankruptcy, with a view to withhold the property of the parties from satisfying the debts of the house: the deed was therefore declared to be inadmissible, and judgment was given against B conjointly with C. Gopal Das v. Shunkar Pooree and others. 29th June 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 193.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

4. Suit between Partners.

14. Held, that a suit between partners in a banking concern should be laid for general adjustment of accounts, and not for particular items. Chintamun Abustee v. Ram Koorur and another. 17th July 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 177.—Reid, Dick, & Gordon.

PATÍDAR.

1. In the case of a sale of one Patí, or share of an estate, for arrears of revenue, the loss falls upon the whole of the Patídars, or shareholders, equally, and not on any particular individual on whose portion (parcelled off by private agreement) the arrears accrued, no formal division of the property having been made in the manner prescribed by the Regulations. *Bhownnee Singh and another v. up to the time of the money paid in, and the plaintiff to pay all subsequent costs. Mischam v. Campbell. 2d Term 1827. Cl. R. 1829. 213.

I. GENERALLY.

1. A claim to lands granted in commutation of a yearly pension, under Sanads executed subsequently to the acquisition of the Dewanny by the Honourable Company, was dismissed by the Provincial Court, under Sec. 3. of Reg. XIX. of 1793, and Sec. 34. of Reg. VIII. of 1793. But it appearing that the pension in lieu of which the grant had been made was granted before the Company's accession to the Dewanny, the claimant was referred by that Court to the Collector; and the claimant not being able to produce any Sanad of confirmation from the office established for the investigation of pensions, or any judgment authorizing the payment of the pension that he claimed, the Collector rejected his claim, as the provisions of Reg. XXIV. of 1793, which authorize, in certain cases, the continuance of pensions, could not be considered applicable to his case. On appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut the Court affirmed the decision against the claimant. Ram Jeevan Misr v. Guorce Singh. 6th Sept. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 83.—H. Colebrooke.

I. GENERALLY.

1. In reviewing proceedings of the Native Courts in India, where the Hindú or Muhammadan law is the rule, and the form of pleading totally different from that in use in Courts where the law of England prevails, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will look to the essential justice of the case, without considering whether matters of form have been strictly adhered to. Ghirdharee Sing v. Koolahul Sing and others. 8th Dec. 1840. 2 Moore Ind. App. 344.

II. COMMON LAW.

1. Declaration.

2. In a question of administration under the Dutch law, Impey, C. J., observed: "The plaintiffs must be defeated in this action for want of having sufficiently stated the Dutch law, and saying that they, as representatives, are entitled, by the law of Holland, to sue for the debts due to the deceased." Johanna Bolts v. Day and another. 27th Oct. 1777. Sm. R. 35.

3. It was held doubtful whether a repugnancy in the English dates laid in the plaint, as corresponding with certain Bengálí dates, the latter being correctly laid, did not vitiate the plaint.<sup>1</sup> Legullis v. Ramsunder Mit-

<sup>1</sup> It seems that the objection could not have prevailed, even on special demurrer. The English dates might have been rejected as surplusage, as Bengálí dates are frequently given, in pleading, without the explanatory English dates, yet no objection is ever taken on this ground. But even if both the Bengálí and English dates had been inaccurate this would have been no ground for objection, on the principle, in pleading, that dates are always immaterial, except when they are matter of description, where an error would be a variance, or unless they are made essential by the subsequent pleading.—Mor.

ter. Hyde's Notes. 25th Nov. 1778. Mor. 235.

4. In an action of assumpsit, the Court thought that the plaintiff, charging the defendant as son, heir, and personal representative of a Hindú, and alleging that he had possessed himself of the effects of his father, and was therefore liable, according to the customs of the Hindús in Bengal, to pay his father's debts, was bad, as it ought to have set forth, in due form, that there was such a custom among the Hindús, and then have brought the case within the custom; and because it did not aver that the son possessed himself of effects of his father to the amount of the debt demanded.<sup>1</sup> Aga Hajji Mahomed v. Juggut Seat Cossaul Chund. Hyde's Notes. 19th July 1779. Mor. 238.

5. Where a plaintiff sues as heir or representative, according to the Hindú law or custom, he must shew in the plaintiff how he is heir or representative, and entitled to sue. But amendment of the record will be allowed.<sup>2</sup> Rajah Geer Gosain, Representative of Gosain Sookdeb Geer v. Panchannul Aghurralah. Hyde's Notes. 20th Nov. 1782. Mor. 240.

6. The defendant being sued as son, heir, and representative, pleaded specially that no property or effects of his father had ever come to his hands. And the plaintiff may well leave the defendant to his plea in all cases without noticing it in the plaintiff. Razbullub Chatterjee v. Ramtonoo Dutt. Chamb. Notes. 4th Aug. 1788. Mor. 239, note.

7. The record was withdrawn, on account of a similar supposed objection, the plaintiff not averring that the defendants had possessed themselves of assets. Juggernaut Podar v. Sree Canto Rai and another. Chamb. Notes. 15th Nov. 1793. Mor. 239, note.

8. Dictum of Anstruther, C. J. "Although the rights of the representatives of Hindús are to be determined according to the Hindú law, as well as who are the representatives, yet the forms of pleading, when those representatives are ascertained, must be, in this Court, according to English law." Lloyd v. Hurroproiah Dabee. 18th Nov. 1799. Mor. 239, note.

9. "Calcutta," and "Port of Calcutta," are synonymous terms. Eglington v. Mills. 11th Nov. 1841. 1 Fulton, 398.

10. A Muhammadan suing as heir must set forth in the plaintiff how he is heir. Shaik Punchoo v. Shaik Mungloo. 13th Feb. 1844. 1 Fulton, 409.

2. Abatement.

11. In a joint action ex contractu, pleas in abatement for nonjoinder must shew that the party omitted is alive and subject to the jurisdiction, and must be verified by an affidavit to the same effect. Atkinson v. Page Koble and another. Chamb. Notes. 23d Jan. 1786. Sm. R. 101. Mor. 127, note.

3. Demurrer.

12. An issue on a plea to the jurisdiction must be tried before a demurrer can be argued. Aga Takhi v. Ranny Baranny. Hyde's Notes. 15th Jan. 1782. Mor. 266.

13. If the defendant demur to one count of the plaintiff, and plead several pleas to other counts, to which pleas the plaintiff demurs; the plaintiff, having joined in demurrer, may set down the demurrer to his plaintiff for argument before the defendant joins in demurrer, in the demurrers to the plea. Sheriff v. Bhoyrubchunder Ghose. 3d Term, 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 215.

<sup>1</sup> The cause was struck out, and no decision come to. This plaintiff would now be held sufficient. It is unnecessary to aver that the defendant has sufficient effects, because "no assets" would be matter for plea.—Mor.

<sup>2</sup> By the new rules the defendant would be compelled to plead it specially if he intended to dispute it at the trial, because the character in which the plaintiff sues is never in issue unless expressly denied by the plea.—2 Sm. & Ry. 51.

14. No plea shall be allowed after a demand of particulars, except what would be allowed in the King's Bench in a demurrer, after demand of particulars. Pennington v. Golaubchand. 3d Term, 1836. Cl. R. 1829. 212.

15. Where, in the plea, it was alleged that the defendants had paid the indorsee of a certain bill or voucher a consideration to the value of the goods therein mentioned, and such payment was admitted in the replication, a demurrer to the latter was allowed, as there was no avoidance, nor any answer in law to a plea of payment. Buchtat Sing and another v. Pittar, Lattey, and Co. 1838. Barwell's Notes, 5.

16. In an action of assumpsit for the price of an article, the defendant pleaded a breach of warranty, and that the article had been returned: the plea was demurred to as amounting to the general issue, and the demurrer was allowed. Schneider v. Morgan. 1838. Barwell's Notes, 11.

17. A demurrer was set down for argument by the complainant. A motion was made to set aside the order for irregularity. It is usual for either party to enter the demurrer: if the defendant enter, either party may set down a demurrer for argument. Seebosondery Dabee v. Tagore. Barwell's Notes, 13.

III. EQUITY.

18. All regulations of the Government relied on must be set forth upon the plea or answer, in order that the Court may judge of them. Vencata Ranga Pillay v. East-India Company. 26th Sep. 1803. 1 Str. 196.

19. The statement in the pleadings of mere orders of Government at the time will not be held sufficient, as, by the very terms of the 21st Geo. III., orders themselves, as well as the acts done under them, must be according to previous regulations. Ib.

20. A plea simply denying a partnership, without negating the circumstances stated in the bill, from which it might be inferred, is bad. Ninah Maricanyer v. Videe Chitty and others. 19th July 1814. 2 Str. 254.

21. A plea for want of parties in equity must aver that the persons who have been omitted were subject to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the plea was filed. Fairlie v. Gungagovind Bonnerjee. 18th Feb. 1826. Cl. R. 1834. 70. Mor. 163.

22. A plea for want of parties, although the bill alleged that all the necessary parties were before the Court, and sought a discovery of any others, should the defendant allege such others to be necessary, was held good. Shaih Mahomed Tuckey v. Shaikh Sulderodeen. 29th June, 1830. Cl. R. 1834. 86.

23. The averment of "inhabitaney" in a bill will let in evidence of constructive as well as actual inhabitaney. Khamah Dossee v. Sibpersaul Bhoose and others. 22d July 1836. Mor. 181.

24. A plea in abatement, setting out the title of an adopted son, was for that reason held to be informal, as the bill admitted that he had a claim: it was also decided to be bad for all the parties, as they were stated in the plea to be a joint and undivided family: the plea was accordingly overruled with costs, with leave to amend. Biswas v. Biswas. 4th March 1839. Barwell's Notes, 14.

PLEDGE.

1. By the Muhammadan law, the vendee of a pawner cannot recover an unredemmed pledge from a non-assenting pawnee, but may elect to wait redemption by the pawner, or to sue him to set aside the sale. Muhamud Muthir Khan and another v. Sayud Abdul Hakim and another. 14th Aug. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 226.—Rattray & H. Shakespear.

1. To give validity to an agreement, possession of the subject is not necessary. Sreenarain Rai and another v. Bhya Jha. 27th July 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 23. — Harington & Stuart.

2. Certain persons came forward offering to people and bring into cultivation a deserted village, if a lease were granted to them constituting them Patéls of the village on the conditions they had offered. This was done by the Assistant Collector in the absence of the Collector. Thereupon other claimants came forward, stating that the village was theirs; on which the Collector set aside the first deed, and granted the second claimants a Koul for the village, having ascertained, by inquiry, that possession vested in them. The lessees under the first deed then brought an action to set aside this arrangement, claiming, not the village, but damages for the loss of its profits; but as the possession was proved to have always vested in the second claimants, the Court decreed that the right to cultivate the lands of the village should vest in them, so long as the just revenues of Government were by them defrayed and the Abádi or population of the village maintained, but no longer. Rajah Bhace and another v. Heera Harsingh and another. 2d Feb. 1811. 1 Borr. 361.—Crow & Day.

3. A claim was set up for certain Wazífah lands, which had been in the possession of the then occupiers for a long period, on the ground that they had been held by the claimant's father and grandfather. The Court observed that no proof had been adduced that the lands sued for were the same as those said to have been held by the claimant's grandfather; and it was held, under the circumstances, that it was not a case which required that the title gained by long occupancy should be disturbed, even if the free lands had been proved to have formerly belonged to the claimant's family, as none of the requisites laid down in Sec. 6. of Reg. III. of 1814<sup>1</sup> were to be found in the case. Mt. Koondun Buhoor v. Sher Khan

Bhaee Khan and others. 2d July 1822. 2 Borr. 337.—Romer.

4. Where two parties claimed certain Inaám lands, the Court were of opinion that, with respect to the Sa-nad, or grant of Inaám, no sort of evidence had been adduced on either side to prove their descent from the original Inaámdárs. It was, however, conceived that the evidence of the witness on which alone one of the parties could be said to rest was false and wholly unworthy of credit; and under the plea of uninterrupted possession on the part of the other party for a period of upwards of twenty years a decree was given in his favour. Jivo Bave Bhanoo v. Sukharam Buchajee Bhanoo. 7th Dec. 1822. 2 Borr. 409.—Barnard.

5. Possession of a house by a purchaser gives him a preferable claim to a prior mortgagee who has never been in possession. Mahomed Khan v. Keerojee. Nov. 1835. Sel. Rep. 165.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

1. Semble, An executor giving a power of attorney to his co-executor to enable him to act for him, is liable for moneys received by means of the power, under an order directing such moneys to be paid to the two executors. Arnachellum v. Venhoo and others. 25th Sept. 1815. 2 Str. 316.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

2. A power of attorney granted by an absentee (a Frenchman, resident at Chandernagore, who was shipwrecked near the island of Saugor, and had not since been heard of,) to sue for money due to him, was declared to be in force (as provided by the French law in such cases) until it should be revoked, or the death of the absentee should be established by clear and positive proof, or, in consequence of the presumption arising from his absence, his heirs should have obtained an order to put them in possession of his estate, according to the provisions of the French law. Peren v. Richemont. 12th Jan. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 122.—Harrington & Fombelle.

3. Pending an appeal, from a decision in the Provincial Court, by A and B, as attorneys of C, C died, but the Court allowed A and B to defend the appeal under a general power of attorney, executed by the son and next heir of C. Ooduy Chund Chutoorjea v. Palmer and Co. 14th Feb. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 14.—Fendall & Goad.

4. A Mukhtár námech, or power of attorney, accepted by a creditor from his debtor for the collection of outstanding debts to a certain amount, was held to be a complete acquittance for that amount of his claims against the debtor; but of such assigned debts, some privately collected by the debtor were decreed to the creditor. Brijbhookun v. Lala. 8th May 1823. 2 Borr. 487.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

5. The recital of a power of attorney in a will, affecting to transmit the authority conferred by it, is not sufficient evidence of the contents of such an instrument, in the absence of proof of its loss or destruction. Bomanjee Muncherjee v. Syud Hoossain Abdoolah. 7th Dec. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 494.

I. IN THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

1. Generally.

1. The Judicial Committee will not send back a case to a Court below for further investigation on the ground that further evidence might now be produced before it, when the party has opportunities of bringing forward that evidence below of which he has not availed himself. Raja Row Venkata Niladry Row v. Ennogoonty Sooriah and another. 11th Feb. 1834. 2 Knapp, 259.

2. When a Court below has decided upon a case depending upon questions of fact alone, the Judicial Committee will not advise a reversal of their judgment, unless there appear some clear distinct point in which they are wrong, although doubts may be entertained as to its correctness. Baboo Ulruck Sing v. Beny Persad. 11th Feb. 1834. 2 Knapp, 265.

3. The right of a party to institute a suit as heir of the original grantee not having been disputed in the Courts below, cannot be questioned before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Mills v. Modce Pestonjee Khoorshedjee. 26th June 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 37.

4. In reviewing proceedings of the Native Courts in India, where the Hindú or Muhammadan law is the rule, and the form of pleading wholly different from that in use in Courts where the law of England prevails, the Judicial Committee will look to the essential justice of the case, without considering whether matters of form have been strictly attended to. Ghirdharee Sing v. Koolahul Sing and others. 8th Dec. 1840. 2 Moore Ind. App. 344.

5. Where, by the custom in India, the respondent (being a Hindú woman of rank) could not be personally served with an order of revivor, the Judicial Committee allowed service to be substituted on her Dindán, or chiefservant. Clark v. Baboo Roupaul Mullick. 11th Dec. 1840. 3 Moore, 252.

6. Semble, Where a matter has been referred by Her Majesty to the Judicial Committee which is not strictly an appealable grievance, their Lordships may, under the reservations contained in the 3d and 4th Will. IV.

c. 41, advise Her Majesty to grant the petitioner leave to appeal. Morgan v. Leach. 3d Dec. 1841. 3 Moore 368.

7. There being two sets of appellants, having separate interests and adverse claims against each other, as well as against the respondents, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council permitted two counsel to be heard for each set of appellants. Jewajee and others v. Trimbukjee and another. 12th Dec. 1842. 3 Moore Ind. App. 138.

7 a. The Judicial Committee will not entertain a technical objection which was not taken in the Court below, where it might have been removed. Dharm Das Pandey and others v. Mt. Shama Soondri Dibiah. 8th Dec. 1843. 3 Moore Ind. App. 229.

7 b. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will not encourage a mere objection of form that does not affect the substantial merits of the case. The Mokuddims of Kunhurendy v. The Enamdar Brahmins of Soorpal. 14th June 1845. 3 Moore Ind. App. 383.

2. What Law administered between Parties.

8. Natives of Mithila who had migrated to Bengal, but had retained the religious observances of their native district, were held to be entitled to the benefit of the Mithila law. Rutchputty Dutt Jha and others v. Rajunder Narain Rae and another. 12th Feb. 1831. 2 Moore Ind. App. 132.

8 a. The Judicial Committee are bound to take notice of the law of the country from which the appeal comes, and to decide according to it, although it has not been noticed in the Court below. Sumboochunder Chondry v. Naraini Dibe and another. 6th Feb. 1835. 3 Knapp, 55.

8 b. When, therefore, a Court below had decided upon the ground of evidence of which they had cognizance in another suit, but which was not legally before them in the suit in question, their decree was supported on the ground that the appellant, who the plaintiff before them, had, according to the law of the country, no right to sue. Ib.

8 c. Where a Bengali family had migrated to Mithila at a remote period, and had adopted the laws and customs of that country, the Mithila law was held to prevail. Rany Pudmarati v. Baboo Doolar Sing and others. 30th June 1847. MS. Notes of P. C. Cases.

8 d. A family of Sudgop Brahmans who had, many years previously to the institution of a suit, migrated to Midnapore, were, upon proof that they had retained their laws and religious observances, held to be entitled to the Bengal laws. Rany Srimuty Dibeah v. Rany Koond Luta and others. Dec. 1847. MS. Notes of P. C. Cases.

8 e. Where a question was raised as to what law should prevail between parties appealing, it was held, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that as the question was not raised in the first suit between the parties it could not be honestly started subsequently. Ib.

II. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

9. Dictum of Anstruther, C. J. Although the rights of the representatives of Hindús are to be determined according to the Hindú law, as well as who are the representatives, yet the forms of pleading, when those representatives are ascertained, must be, in this Court, according to English law. Lloyd v. Hurroproiah Dabee. 18th Nov. 1799. Sm. R. 11.

10. An application for a Commission of Lunacy ought to be "in Lunacy," and not entitled on either side of the Court. In the matter of Udditnarain Sein. 19th March 1840. 1 Fulton, 378.

11. The Supreme Court takes judicial notice of the Regulations of the Bengal Government, but not of the practice or modes of procedure of the Mofussil Courts. Woodubchunder Mullick v. Braddon. 15th Jan. 1844. 1 Fulton, 402.

12. The sale of property by a Mofussil Court must be treated in the same way as a sale of property by a foreign Court would be. Ib.

13. Motions for officers of the Court to attend with papers are to be made on the side on which the officer is who is required to attend. Anon. 2d April 1844. 1 Fulton, 450.

2. What Law administered between Parties.

14. The question whether a will has been properly executed by a Muhammadan testator must be tried by the English, and not the Muhammadan law of evidence. Syed Ally v. Syed Kulleo Mulla Khan. 19th Jan. 1813. 2 Str. 180.

15. And the same was held with regard to Hindú testators. Ib.

15 a. An Armenian heir-at-law is entitled to recover on his title by the British law. Doe dem. Aratoon Gaspar v. Puddolochun Doss. 9th Nov. 1815. East's Notes. Case 36.

16. The laws of Portugal were administered between Portuguese in the case of succession to land. Doe dem. De Silveira v. Salvador Bernardino Tereira. Perry's Notes. Case 1. (Recorder's Court.)

17. It was held that the Portuguese laws in all points of succession, and of all personal rights, as those of husband and wife, remain in full force as regards the Portuguese in Bombay, and that the Portuguese customs had a legal commencement, and were valid. Ib.

18. But the law of Portugal cannot, of its own force, operate at Bombay, and the Portuguese are subject to the law of England alone, with the reservation, however, of certain customs. Ib.

19. In an action of assumpsit by a Muhammadan plaintiff, the defendant (being a British subject) is entitled to the benefit of the British law. Jhow Khan v. Imlack. Circa 1826. Cl. R. 1834. 20. Mor. 243.

19 a. Excepting, in the case of Hindús and Muhammadans, there is no other law than the British which can affect the descent of lands in Calcutta. Jebb v. Lefevre. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 56.

21. Quere, As to the law by which lands in the Mofussil, and belonging to Armenians, are governed in the Supreme Court? Stephen v. Hume. 2d Feb. 1835. 1 Fulton, 224.

21 a. Semble, The Supreme Court will administer English law between Hindú or Muhammadan parties as between British subjects, except only in cases falling within the specific exceptions of the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 18. Soodasun Sain v. Lockenouth Mullick. 4th July 1839. Mor. 107.

21 b. The succession to land situate in the Mofussil, and belonging to a Jew, an inhabitant of Calcutta at the time of his death, will, in a suit in the Supreme Court, be regulated by the English law. Musleah v. Musleah. Feb. 1844. 1 Fulton, 420. (Grant, J., dissent.)

22. Dictum of Peel, C. J. A British subject has no privilege in this Court to have a special law applied to his case. The same law applies, and the law of descent is one and the same, for all the suitors of this Court, except Hindús and Muhammadans.<sup>1</sup> Ib.

<sup>1</sup> It will be remarked that the practice on this point differs from that adopted by the Honourable Company's Courts. This case may be considered as decisive.

3. Common Law.(a) Process.

23. Where particular modes of proceeding are pointed out in the Charter they are to be followed; but in cases where no process is pointed out the Court ought to issue such as the cases require, and such as would be issued in the like cases in England. Ree v. Warren Hastings and others. Hyde's Notes. 18th Nov. 1775. Mor. 206.

24. The parties to the record, both at law and in equity, are the only parties recognized as using the process of the Court. Bissessur Bonnerjee v. Ramratton Roy. 18th Nov. 1839. Mor. 189.

25. If a sequestration has issued against some of several defendants who have not appeared, the rest cannot non pros. the plaintiff. Ramconny Ghose v. Ramsunker Haldar and others. Hyde's Notes. 21st June 1782. Mor. 315.

26. A plaintiff cannot be non prosed for not proceeding until two terms after notice to deliver particulars. Soyd Ally Khan v. Baboo Jugger-naut. 2d Term 1815. Cl. R. 1829. 233. Chintamonee Pyne v. Ramtonoo Dass. Ib.

29. One of two defendants cannot non pros. a plaintiff. Kisnomohun Sain v. Ramcomal Nundy. 1st Term 1825. Cl. R. 1829. 233.

(c) Particulars of Demand.

30. Not giving a bill of particulars, according to the exigency of a Judge's order, is the same as not putting in pleadings under the 63d Rule.<sup>1</sup> Syed Taffy Ally Khan v. Baboo Jugger-naut. 1st March 1815. East's Notes. Case 17.

31. The Court has no power to the particulars of demand at the trial. Ramjane Khansumah v. Graves. 13th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 21.

(d) Proceedings to Trial.

32. On the last day for setting down causes for the sittings, they are in time if set down within the office hours, whether the Court shall have risen or not. Hall v. Mohan. 3d Feb. 1823. Mor. 276. Cl. R. 1829. 216.

33. The cause must be two days in the paper previous to trial, and the day is to be reckoned, although the cause be not entered till after the rising of the Court, such entry being made in office hours. Hall v. Mohan. 3d Feb. 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 216. Maha Rance Comaree v. Pranchunder Baboo. 12th July 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 217.

34. Notice of trial one day exclusive, another inclusive, given on the 30th of June for the 6th of July is sufficient. Mackintosh v. Reed. 3d Term 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 216.

(e) Postponement of Trial.

35. The Court will not allow a motion to put off trial before the cause is set down on the board. Anon. Barwell's Notes, 86.

36. Trial was postponed on affidavits that the plaintiff could not procure the attendance of a material witness. Rohman Khan v. Muddermohun Roy. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 47.

37. A rule nisi was granted to shew cause why a trial should not be postponed on the ground that only six days' notice of trial had been given, as in a town cause, whereas the defendant was resident at Banleah, more

38. A rule was made absolute for postponing a trial upon an affidavit which stated that one witness (naming him) was in England and another at Cawnpore. Coleman v. Teil. 1842. 1 Fulton, 25.

39. Where a rule nisi had been obtained for the postponement of trial, on an affidavit that several material witnesses could not be found to be served with their subpoenas, mentioning their number but not their names, it was held to be necessary to amend the affidavit by inserting the names of the witnesses, and the rule was enlarged till the next day, to give the defendants time for so doing. Nittanund Shaw v. East-India Company. 14th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 26.

(f) Judgment as in case of a Nonsuit.

40. A motion for judgment as in case of a nonsuit will be granted for not going on to trial within one term after issue joined, instead of the carrying down the record for trial by proviso. Inupty, C. J., observed that it was not intended to be exceedingly strict in observing this rule, but to use it to compel the plaintiff to speed the cause. Monohur Muckerjee v. Tilluckram Puckerassay. Hyde's Notes. 16th Jan. 1778. Sm. R. 250. Mor. 261.

42. Going on to trial being once delayed, on the motion of the defendant, beyond the first term after issue joined, the defendant can never afterwards resort to the rule to obtain judgment as in case of a nonsuit, but must stay till three terms are past, without any proceedings. Anupty and another v. Radakhissen and another. Hyde's Notes. 18th Nov. 1778. Sm. R. 251.

<sup>1</sup> This rule was made absolute by consent. Sed quære, Whether it could have been made so otherwise, the defendant having employed an attorney resident in Calcutta? Vide 2 Sm. & Ry. 88.

43. Motion for a rule nisi for judgment as in the case of a nonsuit, where the plaintiff has lain by for a whole year, will not do without notice. Sheriff v. Hickey. 13th Nov. 1800. Sm. R. 251.

43 a. But it was afterwards held that a rule nisi would in future be considered as notice. Roopchund Bhuchett v. Bannamull. 4th Term 1824. Sm. R. 251. Cl. R. 1829. 235.

44. After a rule for judgment as in case of a nonsuit discharged on a peremptory undertaking of the plaintiff to try by a certain time, if he do not enter his cause for trial before such time, the defendant may move for judgment as in case of a nonsuit, in the first instance, without giving previous notice of such motion. Chew v. Tucker. 4th June 1816. East's Notes. Case 55. Cl. R. 1829. 235.

47. Judgment as in case of nonsuit may be entered up in a peremptory undertaking for trial, notwithstanding the plaintiff has set down the cause in sufficient time, should he neglect to give notice of trial. Revely v. Limond. 10th Jan. 1831. Cl. R. 1834. 32.

48. Judgment as in case of nonsuit will be given if the plaintiff do not appear when the cause is called on, although the cause was a remanet. Joychunder Day v. Schoo Ghose. 14th March 1831. Cl. R. 1834. 34.

(g) Right to Begin.

50. Where contempt is admitted, if affidavits in mitigation be put in the counsel for the defence begins; if no affidavits be put in, the counsel for the prosecution begins. In neither case is there a reply. The Queen v. Rajah Rajnarain Roy. 17th Jan. 1840. 1 Fulton, 372.

(h) Ex-parte Rule.

51. <sup>1</sup> In all cases under the 38th Plea Rule an order nisi is necessary before an ex-parte rule can be set aside, and an affidavit of merits is required, in addition to payment of costs and usual terms. Ramnaut Tugore v. Krishnapersaul Tugore. 9th Nov. 1799. Sm. R. 12. Jameat Khan v. Ramduloll Aush and another. 4th Term 1824. Sm. R. 12.

52. If an ex-parte rule be taken out for want of a plea, but the cause be not set down for trial in that term, a new rule to plead must be served on the defendant before the cause can be set down in a subsequent term.<sup>1</sup> Arthur v. Clarke. 11th Nov. 1833. Cl. R. 1834. 147.

53. The same point was decided in Neranjun Sing v. Bissumber Mullick and others. Ib.

54. It was afterwards decided that the foregoing cases did not apply to ex-parte rules taken out on the last day of term, when the plaintiff could not try at the sittings next after; though the Court recognized the authority of the previous cases so far as that an ex-parte rule ought to be acted upon in the same term or the ensuing sittings, if possible; or, if not then, that a new rule to plead should be obtained. Unnoodapersaud Bonnerjee v. Roopnarain Holdar. 16th March 1836. Mor. 280. Barwell's Notes, 105.

55. The rule to plead had issued on the 22d, and been served on the 23d, and the ex-parte rule obtained on the 25th of Oct. 1835. The cause was set down for trial on the 15th and tried on the 18th of March 1836, and on the 4th of April execution issued, and on the 10th the defendant's lands were seized. Held, that as there had been great laches on the part of the defendant in not coming in to set aside the ex-parte rule, and waiting for judgment, and also as he had no affidavit of merits, a rule nisi should be made absolute on payment of costs by the defendant, he pleading forthwith issueably, taking short notice of trial, and giving judgment of the term. Surroopchunder Sircar Chowdry v. Sumboochunder Sing. 27th June 1836. Barwell's Notes, 106.

56. In actions ex parte under the Charter, for want of appearance, the new rules do not apply, and every thing that is necessary to make out the case must be proved by the plaintiff. The defendant in ex-parte actions cannot appear either in person or by counsel, as he is in contempt. Macnughten v. Tandy. 24th Oct. 1838. Mor. 288.

57. Semble, Where a party is in contempt for want of appearance, and an ex-parte rule obtained, he cannot come in for the purpose of reducing damages. Same v. Same. 24th Oct. 1838. Barwell's Notes, 9.

(i) Verdict.

58. On the trial of an issue on the equity side of this Court, a special verdict may be found. Gooroochurn Doss and others v. Goluchmancy Doss. 20th March 1843. 1 Fulton, 171.

(j) Assessment of Damages.<sup>2</sup>

59. Notice was served on a defendant for an assessment of damages, and a subsequent conditional order was made allowing him to come in and defend. If the condition be not performed in such case the original notice revives, and damages may be assessed. Gour dross Mistry v. Heritt and another. 23d July 1842. 1 Fulton, 18.

<sup>1</sup> This was held on motion to set aside the ex-parte rule for irregularity. Several objections were taken, but the Court stopped the counsel for the defendant, considering this sufficient.—Clarke. Now, by the new rules the defendant, after appearance, neglecting to file his plea, or subsequent necessary pleadings, within the proper time, the plaintiff may sign judgment in default.—2 Sm. & Ry. 52. R. 19.

<sup>2</sup> By a draft Act, intituled "An Act for the Improvement of the Administration of Justice in the Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal," (read in Council, for the first time, on the 13th March 1847) power is proposed to be given to the Supreme Court, on its equity side, to assess damages on bills for the specific performance of an agreement.

(k) Nonsuit.

60. An action on the case set down for trial ex parte. There was a sequestration. The plaintiff not being able to support the case, there was a nonsuit; and Impey, C. J., considering how the attachment should be got rid of, said, "It ought to be by an order of the Sheriff, in open Court, which should now be entered by the Prothonotary, and taken notice of by the Sheriff." Birdy Khan v. Gungaram Paul. Hyde's Notes. 26th Nov. 1778. Sm. R. 251.

61. On a nonsuit the proper way to obtain the defendant's discharge out of custody is to apply to a Judge at Chambers, on a certificate of the nonsuit, for an order on the Sheriff to discharge the defendant. Ramsunder Bose v. Sobaram Naskar. Hyde's Notes. 16th July 1779. Sm. R. 251.

(l) Judgment.

62. It was held doubtful whether the judgment of a Provincial Court is a record, and how far the plaintiff ought to set forth the authority of the Court; also, whether evidence is admissible that the judgment is erroneous.<sup>1</sup> Mirza Jeleel v. Gorachund Dutt. Hyde's Notes. 9th Feb. 1778. Mor. 231.

64. On an ex parte judgment, regularly obtained, the defendant moved to set it aside, on affidavits of three persons that they had been informed by the defendant, and believed, that he did not owe any thing to the plaintiff. The whole of the facts were denied by the plaintiff on all the points of the defendant's affidavit. The Court being desirous of letting in the defendant, to try if it could not be done without injury to the plain-

<sup>1</sup> There was a previous case of Punchanund Ghose v. Kissen Mungul and others, 11th Nov. 1776, where an action was brought on a decree of a Zillah Court; but it was assumpsit. 65. If non assumpsit be pleaded to a bill of exchange, a motion must be made before judgment can be signed by defendant. — v. Trower. 25th Oct. 1837. 1 Fulton, 13.

66. Motion to enter up judgment, nunc pro tunc, the defendant having died, was refused. The Court intimated that they would only use their discretion where the delay had been occasioned by the Court. Anon. 18th June 1838. Barwell's Notes, 4.

67. A plea concluding with a verification, and not being signed by counsel, is a nullity, and the plaintiff may sign judgment as for want of a plea. Sandles v. Aga Kurboolie Mahomed. 31st Oct. 1838. Mor. 244.

68. If a plea requiring counsel's signature be irregularly filed, a motion must be made before judgment can be signed. Anon. 20th June 1842. 1 Fulton, 14.

69. Under Plea Rule 25,<sup>2</sup> if a defendant file three pleas, having obtained leave to file two, judgment may be signed by default. Gourdross Mistry v. Herritt and another. 16th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 17.

(m) Stay of Proceedings.

70. A commission for the examination of witnesses operates as a stay of proceedings. Mac Kellar v. Wallace. 26th Jan. 1842. 1 Fulton, 142.

71. The circumstance of an appeal being bonâ fide is not sufficient to operate as a stay of proceedings. Remfrey v. Conie. 6th Mar. 1844. 1 Fulton, 446.

(n) Rules and Orders.

72. One of several parties against whom a rule nisi has been obtained cannot shew cause without an affidavit that all the parties have been served. Palmer v. Brightman. 24th March 1828. Cl. R. 1829. 336.

73. A rule nisi may be made absolute on a day not appropriated to litigated motions, if no counsel be instructed to shew cause. M'Neight v. Ranlochun Sircar. 1 Feb. 1831. Cl. R. 1834. 33.

74. On a motion that Company's paper, deposited in lieu of special bail, be restored to the defendant, who had obtained judgment in the action, the practice is to grant a rule nisi only. Hurbujjur Sing Khettry v. Assanund Lohannah. 9th July 1839. Mor. 298.

75. Upon a motion for payment to the Sheriff of moneys seized in the hands of a third party, as an alleged debt due to the defendants, the rule nisi ought to be served upon the defendants and upon all parties interested, such as the assignee of an insolvent defendant. But such service being omitted, the Court will not discharge the rule, but enlarge it, in order to give an opportunity for the service upon all parties. Dwarkanauth Mullick v. Gonsalves and others. 18th July 1839. Mor. 298.

76. No common-law motions can be heard, even by the full Court during the sittings, to set aside an order made in term time. Gourdross Mistry v. Hewitt and another. 16th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 17.

77. The Court may review an order made by a single Judge in Chambers. Sreemutty Rance Hurroosondery Dossee v. Cowar Kistenauth Roy. 10th April 1843. 1 Fulton, 205.

(o) Rule to Compute.

78. On an action on a Bengali bond it was held that it was not a case in which the Prothonotary could compute the principal and interest due under the 21st Plea Rule.<sup>1</sup> Gaspar v. Seal. 19th July 1832. Mor. 288.

(p) Rule to Plead.

79. A new rule to plead is not necessary after a demurrer to plead has been allowed, with liberty to amend. Bryce v. Smith. 2d Term, 1828. Cl. R. 1829. 330.

(q) Time for Pleading.

80. When the defendant appears after the return of the summons, the time for pleading runs from the day of appearance entered, and not from the return of the writ, although the rule to plead was entered before the return of the writ.<sup>2</sup> Hedger v. Law. 3d Term 1828. Cl. R. 1829. 331.

81. But if appearance be entered before return of summons, the time runs from the return day. Mackintosh v. Moore. 26th March 1826. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 50. Cl. R. 1834. 20.

(r) Adding Similiter.

82. It is the duty of the complainant to rejoin for the defendant if the defendant do not rejoin in two days after replication. Purshoon Lall v. Byjoomanth Sahoo. 19th April 1821. Cl. R. 1829. 280.

83. After a rule to rejoin has been served under the rule of the Supreme Court, the plaintiff cannot adopt the practice of the Court of Queen's Bench, and add a similiter, the replication ending to the Court. Warman v. Wilson. 24th March 1842. 1 Fulton, 127.

(s) Counsel.

84. In causes of action of a certain value, the Court will require that more than one counsel be employed for the plaintiff. The East-India Company v. Harris. Hyde's Notes. 2d July 1782. Mor. 237. Crangford Mo. Hyde's Notes. 14th Nov. 1775. Ib. note.

84a. Only one counsel can be heard at the trial in opposition to a nonsuit. Hurymohun Bhur v. Kis- senmohun Bysack. 7th April 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 41.

85. The Court will not interfere to prevent the master from taking the account in a cause where he had been previously engaged as counsel. Mutty Chund v. Janokey Doss. 9th March 1837. Mor. 286.

86. Junior counsel may be heard on all points of law raised during the trial, but not on those raised by the pleadings. Ramjannee Khansumah v. Graves. 15th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 22.

(t) Pauper, Action by.

87. On opposing a motion to make absolute a rule to shew cause why the lessors of the plaintiff should not be dispaupered, they having obtained leave to enter up judgment for part of the premises laid in their plaint; the Court held, that this did not amount to a possession of the property, and that they might never get into possession of the part of the premises they had the writ for, and the rule was discharged with costs. Doe dem. Anundo Ram v. Ramdhone Chuckerbutty. 12th July 1800. Lewin's Notes. Sm. R. 83.

88. Defendants, as well as plaintiffs, may be admitted on the pauper establishment, and in actions in form ex delicto as well as in those ex contractu. Mutah Deen v. Ranjeet Sing. 17th Nov. 1840. 1 Fulton, 386.

89. A special affidavit of circumstances must be put in before a party will be put upon the pauper establishment in actions of assault. Ib.

(u) Proclamation.

90. On a motion made, A was proclaimed, according to the rule of the Court for proclamations being made three successive Mondays, instead of proclamations in the Church, which are directed in the statute, in conformity to which the rule of the Supreme Court is intended to be, as nearly as the circumstances of India will admit. Palk v. Dobinson and another. 19th March 1781. Hyde's Notes. Sm. R. 128.

91. On the 21st March 1797, the Court, on the Plea side, gave a day by proclamation to a defendant to the 27th, which was one day less than usual, in order that the plaintiff's might move on the 28th, which would be the last day of term, for a second day to be given till the first day of the next term. In no other cases is less than a full week given by the Court. Anon. Chamb. Notes. Sm. R. 128.

92. Seven days are usually given to a defendant between one proclamation and another. An application for five days was refused. Ramrutton Roy v. Bissummer Sein. 11th Nov. 1843. 1 Fulton, 336.

(v) Prohibition.

93. The Court will not issue a prohibition on the Plea side, to restrain proceedings in the Admiralty side. Murray v. Langford. Nov. 1842. 1 Fulton, 95.

(w) Record.

94. If one of the Judges of the Supreme Court be a party on the record, the record specially sets forth that the plea was holden before his companions alone. Sir R. Chambers v. Huzzoorree Mull. Hyde's Notes. 7th July 1781. Mor. 266.

95. In an action on a bill of exchange, the Court, at the trial, refused to allow the record to be amended, the bill being described in the plaint as payable at three months instead of four months. Da Costa v. Coondoo. 6th July 1838. Mor. 287.

(x) Special Cases.

96. In special cases the Court will only hear one counsel on each side in the first instance. The "special case" should be drawn up and signed by the junior counsel on either side; and in the event of dispute upon any point, the Chief Justice may be referred to in Chambers. If a further argument should be necessary, the senior counsel on each side will be heard. The counsel for the plaintiff begins, and is entitled to the reply. Dor. v. Paliologus. 21st March 1830. Mor. 294.

4. Equity.

(a) General.

97. Replication filed 26th Oct. Rule to rejoin served 27th Oct. Rejoinder filed 1st Nov. Rule to file interrogatories served on defendant 4th Nov. Thus the three weeks from the time the cause was at issue expired on the 22d Nov., and the three weeks from the serving the rule to file interrogatories on the defendant expired on the 25th Nov. On the 23d Nov. the defendant obtained a rule nisi to dismiss the bill for not proceeding; and, on shewing cause, the rule was discharged with costs. Prosser v. Cunningham. 30th Nov. 1830. Cl. R. 1834. 36.

98. The same Judges (Grey, C. J., diss.) decided in direct opposition to the preceding case, and the rule to file interrogatories was discharged, the complainant undertaking to pay costs, and set down the cause for hearing within a week.<sup>1</sup> Dookeram

<sup>1</sup> See quære. The 27th Equity Rule (Sec 2 Sm. & Ry. 151. R. 1.) directs that the complainant shall, at any time after issue joined, be at liberty to rule the defendant to file interrogatories, who is to have three weeks for that purpose, during which the complainant cannot enter a rule to pass publication, nor set the cause down for hearing. Now if the above decision in Dookeram v. Becoolol be correct, the defendant can move to dismiss the complainant's bill, on the ground of his not proceeding in the cause during a period that he is prevented, by the rules of Court, from proceeding in the cause. It may be said that the complainant ought to have ruled the defendant to file his interrogatories the day on which issue was joined; but then the 27th Rule declares that he is at liberty to serve his rule at any time: so unless he construes the words any time to mean the day when 99a. A plaintiff in equity may waive a part of his demand. Same v. Same. Ib.

100. The third equity order, which came into operation on the first day of the second term of 1842, is not compulsory. Mirza Raja Narain Guzzyputty v. Muller and others. 18th July 1842. 1 Fulton, 23.

(b) Who may sue.

101. A Hindú married woman, stating that she was possessed of property to her own separate use, sued as a feme sole; and it was held that this was not ground of demurrer to the bill.<sup>2</sup> Sreemutty Rannee Comulcoary v. Russickchunder Neoghy. Nov. 1830. Bignell, 13. Mor. 371.

102. In a Benámi transaction, the party beneficially interested should sue in equity. Maha Rannee Busunt Comaree v. Bullobdeb and another. 22d July 1840. 1 Fulton, 383.

issue was joined, his bill must be dismissed for not proceeding when he could not proceed. In this case Grey, C. J., stated that, as the Court differed, costs ought not to be given. But Franks and Ryan, Js., held that costs should be given, it being, in their opinion, too clear a case to bring it within the rule that costs would not be given where the question was so doubtful that the Court were divided in opinion, notwithstanding that the case of Prosser v. Cunningham was cited to shew that, so far from being doubtful, the Court had, on a previous contested motion, unanimously given a different decision from that which was now passed by two of the same Judges, differing from the C. J.—Clarke.

104. In India, before a bill can be filed by a next friend on behalf of an infant, leave must be obtained from the Court, and an affidavit must be filed by the person applying for such leave, shewing what the circumstances and reasons are which make it for the benefit of the infant that the suit should be instituted; and unless it be clearly proved that such suit is for the infant's benefit, the application will be refused. Luxumeboye and others v. Succaram Sadewsett and others. 5th Feb. 1844. Perry's Notes. Case 11.

105. If there be adult co-plaintiffs, a bill in equity may be filed on behalf of an infant without leave. In the matter of Brijonauth Roy. 19th Feb. 1844. 1 Fulton, 445.

(c) Pauper, suits by.

106. The Court having a discretionary power as to costs, which the Courts in England do not possess, the power of the Supreme Court to grant the privilege of proceeding in formâ pauperis is not dependent upon the statutes of Henry VIII.; and accordingly, under circumstances, the benefit may be granted to defendants as well as to plaintiffs, and in actions ex delicto as well as in actions ex contractu. Matah Deen v. Soodeen Bheek Sing and others. 14th Jan. 1841. Mor. 400.

107. Semble, In the Supreme Court an infant may sue by his next friend in formâ pauperis. Raj Rajindro Misser v. Bissonath Muttyloll. 18th July 1844. 1 Fulton, 490.

108. The affidavit on which the order to sue in formâ pauperis is based must shew that the infant is a pauper, as well as his next friend. Ib.

(d) Parties to suits.

109. An infant is not a necessary party to a suit for the recovery of a debt due on a promissory note to his father, instituted by his elder brother, the manager of the family. Govindchund Sein v. Simpson. 20th April 1820. East's Notes, Case 119.

110. In a question concerning a mother's right to be a party to a suit between the sons for a partition, they intending, by a juggle, to oust her of her share; it was held, that though she could not, by her bill, pray for a partition, yet she might be made a party, and that she should have all costs and full maintenance until partition. Jomoonah Dossee v. Bycaunnath Paul Chowdry and another. 2d Term, 1820. East's Notes. Case 117.

111. On a bill for partition, a Hindû widow is not a necessary party, if her sons do not seek a partition of the estate; she being therefore only entitled to maintenance out of their undivided share of the estate. Jaynarain Mullick and others v. Bissumber Mullick and others. Aug. 1819. Macn. Cons. H. L. 48. Tarramoney Dossee v. Sibpersaud Dutt. 1st Term, 1826. Cl. R. 1829. 331. Tarramoney Dossee v. Samboochandee Dutt. 23d Feb. 1826. Cl. 119. Kisnomohun Seat and others.* 23d July 1817. East's Notes. Case 71.

Rammohan Paul*. 8th Feb. 1830. Cl. R. 1834. 27.

142. The six weeks' time allowed by the 6th Equity Pl. Rule<sup>4</sup> for amending a bill after answer, are suspended during the pendency exceptions to a Master's report upon the exceptions to the answer, whatever may be the ultimate fate of either set of exceptions. Moha Rancee Bussant Coomartree v. Muddenmohun Coopoorah. 1st Nov. 1838. Mor. 291.

(k) Replication.

150. A bill, amended after answer filed, requiring no further answer, the defendant has ten clear days to file a further answer, and a replication filed on the tenth day will be taken off the file for irregularity. Bowannychurn Mitter v. Sumbhochunder Mitter. 14th Dec. 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 271.

151. A replication ought not to be filed to the answer of one of the defendants, until all the others have answered, or the bill has been taken pro confesso against them. But should the replication be so filed, the complainant must file his interrogatories against that defendant to whom he had replied, and cannot wait until the suit is at issue against all. Goorooper-sund Ghose v. Woodynarain Mundell. 17th July 1828. Cl. R. 1829. 336.

<sup>1</sup> But the present 28th Equity Rule only allows eight days for replying to a plea, and the 29th Equity Rule allows two months for replying to an answer. 2 Sm. & Ry. 146, 147.

Guddadthur Acherjee*. 13th Nov. 1823. Cl. R. 1829. 291.

(t) Re-hearing Cause.

170. Where a petition of re-hearing is allowed, and delay is made in setting down the cause for re-hearing, the opposite party cannot move to take the petition off the file; but the Court will speed the cause by appointing a given time for setting it down for re-hearing; and in default of setting down, the cause will stand dismissed. *Woomuchurn Doss v. 174. Where a cause is on the plea board, and coming on for trial, the Court will not, on the Equity side, grant an order nisi for an injunction to stay trial, even though bill filed and notice served, but the time of which notice has not expired, and the cause was called on sooner than was expected. Mattyloff Seal v. Hanky and others. Barwell's Notes, 85.

180. An injunction will not be granted when the time to file interrogatories, or set down the cause under the second Equity Rule<sup>1</sup> for the examination of witnesses, has expired; the bill will be dismissed. But Ryan, C.J., directed that for the future a motion (of course and without notice on office copy order for extended time, and certificate of no interrogatories filed) should be necessary before the cause should be considered as dismissed out of Court. Hurro Persaud Ghose v. Ramnarain Mookerjee. 21st May 1841. 1 Fulton, 209.

181. Proceedings in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are not a breach of an injunction prohibiting proceedings in any Mofussil Court, for the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut does not come within the legal acceptance of a Mofussil Court. *Hurroopersaud Ghose v. ## II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

209. In a suit concerning rent the Court do not consider it irregular to order a separation of the lands of the parties on proof of independent proprietary right, though it did not actually form part of the original claim. Birjishwar and others v. Sumbhoochand Rai. 13th June 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 141.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

210. Where parties (respondents) claimed their right to be included, as entitled to an eighth share in a decree given against the appellant in favour of certain persons, co-heirs in the litigated property, with the respondents, who had obtained the whole, the Court decreed an eighth share of the property to the respondents, on the law officers declaring that, both by the Shastru and custom of the country, the respondents were justly entitled to such share. The appellant in this case pleaded that he had already paid the money to the heirs named in the decree; but it was proved, on evidence, that this was not the case. Lulloo Bhace Nuthoo Bhace v. Yumona and another. 10th Aug. 1809. 1 Borr. 354.—Grant & J. Smith.

211. The sanction of the Board of Revenue is required, under Sec. 7. &

12. of Reg. XIX. of 1793<sup>1</sup>, for a suit to assess resumable tax-free land, exceeding 100 Bighas in extent, and alienated by a single grant prior to the 1st of Dec. 1790. Shamchand Baboo and another v. Rajender Mokerjee. 26th Dec. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 363.—Harington & Fombelle.

212. It was held, that in a suit brought by one person against another to recover certain lands under a deed of gift, alleged to have been executed in his favour by the proprietor, it was only necessary to inquire into the title of the claimant; and that should it incidentally appear that neither party has a right to the property, still the rightful heirs must institute a regular suit in order to recover it. Raja Chutter Singh v. Shah Moommud Ali. 5th April 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 178.—Harington.

213. In a suit brought by A against B, C, and D, to recover a share of property acquired by trade whilst they were in partnership with his father, a judgment was given in favour of A. Subsequently to execution being sued out by the plaintiff, D claimed exemption from responsibility under the said decree, on the plea that neither he nor his father had ever been in partnership with the father of A. This plea was held to be inadmissible, no mention having been made, at any former stage of the proceedings, of the circumstance which it recited. Rammohun Sircar v. Jugmohun Sircar. 19th Aug. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 194.—Ker & Oswald.

214. It was held that a sharer in an estate was entitled to her share under the provisions of Sec. 13. of Reg. III. of 1793, though she was not an original plaintiff in the suit. Kaleepershaud Roy and others v. Degumber Roy. 28th May 1817. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 237.—Ker & Oswald.

215. In a claim preferred, after the period prescribed by Reg. II. of 1805, and Sec. 14. of Reg. III. of 1793, it is not requisite to declare that the adverse possession was acquired by fraud or violence, if that can be gathered from the plaint. Tubceeb Shah v. Budder Oodeen. 24th July 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 162.—Smith & Goad.

216. Judgment of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was declared conclusive against two interlocutory claimants, their claim, virtually rejected by the Zillah decree, not having been brought forward on appeal to the Provincial Court, nor supported by a separate action. Sona Ram Sarma v. Ram Ruttun Sarma and others. 4th Sept. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 266.—Smith & Martin.

217. Where, in a suit to obtain possession of a certain Talook, it appeared that the respondents had collusively created a fictitious Talook in favour of the appellants, to evade a decree passed against them in another suit, and were now obliged to plead their previous collusion in bar to the suit brought against them in the present instance, the suit was dismissed with costs to the appellants. Birj Mohun Sein and another v. Ram Nursingh Rai. 19th May 1829. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 341.—Rattray.

218. Where part only of a claim is awarded by a judgment, in execution thereof possession of the residue cannot be given, although it should immediately devolve on the claimant by a clear title. Rai Shám Ballabh v. Prankrishn Ghos. 29th March 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 23.—Turnbull.

219. If a claim be dismissed by way of nonsuit, the Court should not narrow the future legal recourse of the plaintiff. Krishn Datt Sahu v. Krishn Parshad and others. 15th June 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 39.—Turnbull & Rattray.

220. By the release of the vendors to the vendees of a conditional sale, procedure, according to Sec. 8. of Reg. XVII. of 1806, cannot be dispensed with under peculiar circumstances, such as an intervening attachment in execution and sale by the vendor to a third party to satisfy judgment. Id.

221. Where the judgment of a Lower Court is expressly affirmed in appeal, any inconsistent words, subjoined to the decretal order of the Appellate Court, should be treated as surplusage, benefiting and prejudicing neither party. Dharam Narayan Ghos and another v. Ladli Mohan Thakur and another. 30th Aug. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 62.—Leycester & Turnbull.

222. A sues B for certain properties under an universal title (Inheritance, for instance), and B repels his claim by pleading a particular title (Specific Gift, for instance). If B's title fail, the Court cannot award to A any property not claimed, his obvious right notwithstanding. Ibrahim Khan v. Sayul Muhammad Arab and another. 19th Sept. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 143.—Turnbull & Rattray.

223. A, the widow of B, a Muslim, repelled the action of C, his brother, for a share of an ancestral estate, by pleading the result of an action by their father, whereby his claim to a share therein had been dismissed. Plea overruled, the father's hereditary right having been recognized in a subsequent scheme of distribution amongst the co-heirs, and B and C, as such, having, by joint payment, saved the estate from sale for arrears of public revenue, thereby acquiring the interests of other co-sharers who abandoned. Khati Jan v. Anwar Khan and Ghin Khan. 5th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 184.—Rattray.

224. When a real claim of a plaintiff is dismissed, the Court will provide for any equity to which he is entitled; for instance, will award (with interest) against the estate of his vendor, a principal sum paid by the plaintiff for lands which the plaintiff's vendor could not legally alienate. Ram Sundar Ray v. Heirs of Raja Udeant Singh. 30th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 210.—Rattray & Walpole.

225. A single Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut found part of the disposition of a judgment of the Lower Court untenable, and concurred in the rest. On assent of the party benefiting by such untenable part to forego its benefit, final judgment, essentially judgment of amendment, was passed. Prannath Chaudhari v. Chandramani Devi. 25th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 328.—Braddon.

226. A revenue sale of an estate was set aside on the suit of part only of the owners. Udman Singh and others v. The Collector of Zillah Patna and others. 29th July 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 358.—Braddon & Barwell.

227. It was ruled that parties against whom a claim under a decree of a Civil Court lies, are jointly and severally liable for the amount. Muckandram Gorindram v. Girjashunker Mottychand and others. 10th Sept. 1839. Sel. Rep. 212.—Giberne, Pyne, & Greenhill.

227*a*. In the case of a joint decree, without specification of the sums payable to each of the plaintiffs, payment of the portions of the other decree-holders, by one of them who has realized the whole amount, cannot be summarily enforced. Ram Sahai Bajpal, Petitioner. 22d March 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 4.—Reid.

228. An action having been brought to set aside a Kabúliyat, or counter-part engagement of a lease, by a party against whom a summary suit had been previously preferred before the Collector for arrears of rent under the same engagement, and in which a decree was given in favour of the summary plaintiff, subsequently to the institution of the regular suit to contest the Kabúliyat, the Court permitted the plaintiff in the regular suit to file a supplementary plaint as an application to set aside the summary decree as well as the Kabúliyat, the cancelling of which formed the subject of his original plaint. Anundee Ram Chucherbuttee v. Hyder Ali and others. 30th March 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 21.—D. C. Smyth & Dick.

229. In an action for dower by the widow against the heirs of a deceased Musulman, one of the heirs acknowledged the justice of the claim. Held, that, under the circumstances, such an acknowledgment was insufficient as a ground on which to form a judgment even against the party making it, the claim not being of that nature that it could be divided; nor could a decree be given in favour of the plaintiff as against one of the defendants and not the other, they both standing in the same relation to the plaintiff, being her own daughters, and both having inherited equal portions of their father's property. Beebee Sahebun v. Beebee Hingun and another. 18th May 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 31.—D. C. Smyth.

229*a*. Execution of a decree against a Hindú widow, personal to herself, cannot be summarily had, after her death, against the estate of her late husband, in possession of the son adopted by her with her late husband's permission; but the decree-holder may try the question of the liability of the property by a regular suit. Beglar, Petitioner. 26th May 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 10.—Rattray & Reid.

229*b*. An order of a Zillah Court dismissing the suit of the petitioner, who sued to recover property which had escheated to the Government on default of succession, because the petitioner did not appeal from a summary order rejecting his claim, was overruled, as against the practice of the Courts. Bungsee Dass Udhehari, Petitioner. 31st May 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 11.—Reid.

230. A decree for landed property should specify, in detail, the property of which it awards possession, without referring to any other documents to determine what that property is. Domun Singh and another v. Ushoor Khan Chondree. 3d July 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 41.—Reid.

231. In a claim for real property, the plaintiff denied the facts, and impugned the merits of a decree passed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in an action regarding the same property between the ancestors of the parties to the present suit. Held, that, under these circumstances, the former decree was binding as between the present parties. Gabriel Avietick Ter Stephanous v. Gasper Maleum Gasper. 30th Nov. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 57.—Tucker & Barlow.

232. In an action for the immediate recovery of real property, under the Hindú law of inheritance, the Lower Court decreed against the plaintiffs, but provided for their reversionary interest on the death of the present incumbents. Held, that, under the circumstances, such order was irregular, as it would have been sufficient to have pronounced judgment upon the claim as preferred. Udheet Singh and others v. Mt. Pran Pierce and others. 27th Dec. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 61.—Ratray & Tucker.

232a. The plaintiff sued the defendants, a mother and her daughters, for the recovery of a sum of money lent to the former on the security of a farming engagement of a certain village, the right of the mother in which was disputed by the daughters, who had obtained possession to the ejectment of the plaintiff. The Zillah Judge declared that the village was liable for the debt, thereby deciding the proprietary right between the mother and daughters, which was not at issue; and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut held that he should have confined himself to a decree for the plaintiff for the money due to him, leaving the question of the liability of the property to the stage of execution of the decree. Mt. Ummut-ul-Hadi v. Syad Ali Bursh. 5th June 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 125.—Ratray, Tucker, & Barlow.

233. A petition filed to correct an error as to the name of the heir of a defendant to a suit cannot be considered as a supplementary plaint, to which the provisions of Sec. 5. of Reg. IV. of 1793 are applicable. Bholanath Baboo, Petitioner. 8th Jan. 1844. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 55.—Reid.

233a. It was held that the accounts of a Government office require to be proved, as those of a private individual. Salt Agent of Bulloah v. Chundermone and others. 24th May 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 179.—Barlow.

233b. An order passed in the execution of a decree for the sale of a contingent interest was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who directed the "rights and interest" in existence to be sold. Syad Uddoolah, Petitioner. 8th July 1844. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 59.

233c. Suit by certain Comatis of the Vaisyas against the Mantrimahānud (secret assembly, for avenging encroachments upon the rules or rights of Cast), to establish their right to have performed for them and their tribe certain religious ceremonies, called Subha and Asubha (auspicious and inauspicious), by Brahmans, in the language of the Vēdas, in the enjoyment of which they had been disturbed by the Brahmans refusing to perform such ceremonies. In the answer to the plaint the defendants denied the right of the Comatis, and set forth certain acts whereby they had forfeited their right to have the ceremonies performed for them by the Brahmans. The Zillah Court, taking that part of the defendant's answer which set forth the acts by which the forfeiture of the rights in question was occasioned, framed it into a statement of facts and law for the opinion of the Pandit of the Court; and upon his opinion declared the plaintiffs' tribe entitled to have the ceremonies performed for them by Brahmans. Upon appeal, the Provincial Court remitted the suit to the Zillah Court to take evidence, and upon such evidence and the opinions of the Pandits, which the Provincial Court took upon the same statement as the Zillah, they affirmed the decree. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, upon the whole case, reversed these decisions. Held, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, reversing the decisions of the three Courts, that the whole proceedings were irregular, and contrary to the express provisions of the Madras Reg. XV. of 1816, Sec. 10. Cl. 3. & 4., which required the Judge to record the points necessary to be established before the evidence could be taken; the opinion of the Pandits being also taken upon an assumed statement of facts not admitted or recorded. But in consideration of the circumstances, such reversal was without prejudice to bringing a fresh suit. Namboory Setapaty and others v. Kanoo Colanoo Pullia and others. 8th Feb. 1845. 3 Moore Ind. App. 359.

233 d. Held, that the Nāib Sirishtahdār shall lay all petitions superscribed by Vakeels and agents as belonging to any particular Judge, before such Judge, and all other petitions having no such superscription before the Judge of the miscellaneous department of the Court. Vakeels and agents appointed under Reg. XII. of 1833<sup>1</sup> are required to write (under their own responsibility) on all petitions presented by them, in cases or matters pending before, or belonging to, any particular Judge, the name of the Judge, in order that such petitions may be referred to him direct; and the Nāib Sirishtahdār is henceforth prohibited from so doing. Anon. 2d June 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 177.—Reid.

233 e. A copy of a decision recorded in the English language under Sec. I. of Act XII. of 1843, by a Zillah or City Judge, must be granted to an applicant, a party to the cause. Superintendent of the Marine Department, Petitioner. 8th June 1846. 2 Sev. Cases, 345.—Reid.

2. What Law administered between Parties.

234. Where the contested estate was situated in Bengal, and the family, originally from Mithila, had resided for generations in Bengal, had intermarried with Bengali women, and had not invariably observed the religious ordinances of Mithila; it was held, that the Bengal law must govern the case. Rajchunder Narain Chowdry v. Goculchand Goh. 22d June 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 43.—Lumsden & Harington.

235. It was held that a person settling in a foreign district shall not be deprived of the benefit of the laws of his native district, provided he adhere to its customs and usages. Gungadutt Jha v. Sreenarain Rai and another. 24th April 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 11.—Harington & Stuart.

236. In a suit brought by a Muhammadan against a Hindú, the decision was grounded on the law of the religion of the defendant, as directed by Sec. 3. of Reg. VIII. of 1795.<sup>2</sup> Mt. Rubbee Koor v. Jemut Raur. 1st April 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 257.—Ker & Oswald.

236 a. It is not illegal, in suits appertaining to Zillah Midnapore, to pass decrees without reference to the Mitáeshará, and according to the Dāya Bhāgá and other Pothis of Bengal. Simboo Rani Chowdry v. Mt. Gour Muni. 9th May 1820. P. C. Cases.—C. Smith.

237. Ranee Zoohoorunnisa.* 12th Aug. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 164.—Leycester & Goad.

238. When the rights of a Jain by inheritance were involved, the Court sought solution of questions of the Jain Shastra which arose, by reference to the Hindú law officer of the Court and Jain Pandits. Maha Raja Govindnath Rai v. Gulal Chand and others. 23d March 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 276.—H. Shakespear.

239. Where right of inheritance was the subject of a suit, and a question as to the validity of a contract under the Muhammadan law incidentally arose, the Court ascertained such law by reference to its Muftis. Imdad Ali v. Kadir Baksh and others. 24th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 296.—Walpole.

240. Where the plaintiff, a Musulmán, claimed against a Hindú vendor and vendees of an aliquot part of an undivided estate the right of pre-emption founded on common tenancy, it was ruled by the Court, on general principles of equity, that the legality should be tried with reference to the law of the defendant rather than that of the plaintiff. The Register of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut had before, when consulted with reference to Sec. 3. of Reg. VIII. of 1795, enacted for Benares only, propounded this as a general rule, though liable to vary under particular circumstances. This was ruled before Regulation VII. of 1832, with which it is not at variance.<sup>1</sup> Sakina Khatun v. Gauri Sanhar Sen and others. 9th July 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 299.—Braddon.

241. By Reg. IV. of 1793 it is provided that in suits relating to succession, inheritance, marriage, and Cast, and all religious usages and institutions, the Muhammadan law with respect to Muhammadans, and the Hindú law with respect to Hindús, are to be considered as the general rules by which Judges are to form their decision; according to the true construction of which the Muhammadan law of each sect ought to prevail as to the litigants of that sect, and not the general Sunnî law. Rajah

<sup>1</sup> The Rule of Sec. 3. of Reg. VIII. of 1795, enacted for Benares, was probably borrowed from the analogous rule in Stat. 21. Geo. III. c. 70. s. 17. applicable to cases of Hindús and Muhammadans tried in the Supreme Court. It is now rescinded by Sec. 8. of Reg. VII. of 1832, Sec. 15. of Reg. IV. of 1793 being substituted. This has received a declaratory construction by Sec. 9. of Reg. VII. of 1832, which, in regard to the case of parties differing in religion, has laid down the principle adopted in the above case.

Deedar Hossein v. Rance Zuhooroonisa. 24th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 441.

242. Held, that cases arising between Armenian parties must be decided according to the Armenian law, and that the established practice of referring, for the opinion of Armenian ecclesiastics, points of law and usage arising from Armenian cases pending decision in the Company's Courts must be adhered to, until altered by some Act of the Legislature. Beglar v. Dishhloom. 20th Jan. 1842. 1 Sev. Cases, 159.—Smyth, Shaw, & Reid.

243. Held, that, according to the practice of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, suits regarding inheritance between Armenians should be decided according to the exposition of the law current among them, as given by the ecclesiastical authorities of the Armenian Church, until provided for by a legislative enactment. David Mullic Feridoon Beglar v. Bibi Dashkhor Wanis Cackick. 28th Jan. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 72.—Reid & Shaw.

244. The plaintiff married, in Calcutta, a girl of Dutch parentage, at the time of her marriage a ward of the Dutch Orphan Chamber at Chinsurah, but resident in Calcutta, and instituted the present action to recover from the executors of her grandfather's will (written in the Dutch language) a sum of money bequeathed by him to her. Held, that the case must be tried according to the English, and not according to the Dutch law; the will containing no special provision as to the marriage, both parties being British subjects, residing in Calcutta, and having been married at the Cathedral in Calcutta under a licence formally obtained. Botelho v. Lacroix and another. 2d Dec. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Tucker & Reid.

3. Institution Fee.

245. In a claim to the amount of a decree passed twenty-four years before, and which was disallowed on account of the lapse of time, no institution fee was levied, and a fourth only of the regular costs made payable, as in summary suits.<sup>1</sup> Mirza Hasan Ali v. Mirza Shureef and others. 5th March 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 317.—Harington & Fombelle.

245 a. Where a suit had been irregularly instituted, contrary to the provisions of the Regulations, the Court being of opinion that the Zillah Judge ought to have pointed out the irregularity to the plaintiff, and allowed him to amend his plea, directed the institution fees in all the Courts to be returned. Shamchand Baboo and another v. Rajender Mokerjee. 26th Dec. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 363.—Harington & Fombelle.

Lakshman Upadhyay and others.* 16th March 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 342.—Sealy & Rattray.

4. Parties to Suit.

247. Where the plaintiff alleged ejectment by the defendant, by, and under colour of, an act of the Collector, whom he did not make a party to the suit; it was held that, for such omission, and inasmuch as the particulars of the claim were deficiently set forth in the plaint, judgment of non-suit with costs be substituted by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in place of an award in favour of the plaintiff passed by the Lower Courts. Mir Ali v. Raghab Ram Ray. 18th Nov. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 72.—Turnbull & Sealy.

<sup>1</sup> It was determined by the Court of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the 9th of August 1797, that a petition to enforce a decree, presented after an interval of several years, does not subject the petitioner to the institution fee as on a new suit, the process in such case being, not to try the merit of the cause, but to determine on the enforcement of the decree after hearing the objections of the party against whom it is desired to be enforced.

248. Where A sued B for an estate on a general title resting on disputed points of fact and law, and recovered in the Zillah Court by a decree, from which B did not appeal; and a subsequent action of A against B, and his vendee C, for another estate on the same title, was dismissed on appeal by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who found the issues differently; it was held, that the first decision was not binding on C, because he was not a party thereto, and because the suit was for a different estate. Bandhu Ram v. Sanker Datt. 19th June 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 216.—Rattray & Walpole.

249. On hearing pleadings, if it appear that the plaintiff has omitted any party who may be found liable to the claim, the Court may direct the plaintiff to include such party by supplemental bill. Raghu Nath Bose v. The Salt Agent of Chittagong. 10th Dec. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 242.—Rattray.

249 a. A decree cannot be enforced against a person not a party to it. Dilawur Allee Khan and another, Petitioners. 15th March 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 25.—Reid.

250. Where the plaintiff sued to set aside a sale, made in execution of a decree, of certain property, alleged to have been previously purchased in the name of his daughter-in-law; it was held, that as the latter, who was the nominal vendee, was not made a party to the suit, the plaintiff must be nonsuited. *Jaggurath Singh and another v. 250 a. A plaintiff was nonsuited by the principal Sudder Ameen, under Sec. 3. of Reg. IV. of 1793, for making a deceased person a defendant to his suit which he had instituted against several others living; and this order was affirmed, in appeal, both by the Zillah Judge and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. Panchanan Ray, Petitioner. 24th March 1846. 2 Sev. 5. Third Party.

251. In a suit for possession of a Talook, judgment for mesne profits against a third party, not a party to the suit, was overruled. Gopee Mohun Thakoor and another v. Ram-tunnoo Bose. 30th June 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 19.—Harrington & Fombelle.

252. On the admission of a special appeal by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, against a judgment passed by a Provincial Court, for certain lands in favour of A against B, a claim being set up by C, as a third party, founded on the absence of all original right on either side, the Court did not judge it necessary to enter into this further claim, but contenting itself with deciding between the former parties, left to C the option of proceeding by regular suit. *Vakeel of Government v. 254. Where, in an action for the recovery of a debt due on mortgaged property, a third party appeared and claimed a large sum under a decision of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the Provincial Court awarded to the plaintiffs a certain part of their claim; and after that was paid, it was ordered that the holder of the decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut should receive what was due to him thereon, and that the plaintiffs should then receive the balance of their claim; but on appeal it was decided that the holder of the decree should first receive the whole of the sum due under the decree, and that then the plaintiffs should receive the sum decreed to them by the Provincial Court.

255. Where, in an action under the Hindú law of inheritance, a third party intervened, claiming a portion of the property on the ground of purchase at a sale made in execution of a decree against the ancestor of one of the defendants; it was held, that the decision of the Court should be given as between parties, and should embrace the whole property; but that should it appear, in the course of the execution of the decree, that the third party had a good title to the property claimed by him, the Judge should proceed under the spirit of Construction 744, not executing the decree against the claimant, but referring the decree-holder to a regular suit to contest such claimant's right. Mt. Soorja Koonwur v. Doosht Dorun Singh and others. 27th May 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 33.—D. C. Smyth & Reid.

widow in possession of her late husband's estate, a claim was preferred by A, founded on gift and adoption, under a written permission of the deceased husband, and was resisted by B, on an alleged title of a previous gift, and denial of the adoption of A. The claim was disallowed by the Court, the proof of the permission to adopt being held to be defective, and the presumption being, that if it ever had been granted, it had subsequently been cancelled: it was, however, decreed that the husband's relations were at liberty to sue the donee of the widow, when the validity of the transfer by gift, to their exclusion, would come under consideration; and that the decision of this case should not affect such action on their part. *Gungaram Bhaduree v. Property supposed to belong to a public defaulter, being attached and about to be sold in satisfaction of dues of Government, should another person claim that property previously to the sale, a summary inquiry may be made into the merits of the claim. A formal investigation is not, in the first instance, necessary: but it is at the option of the claimant to institute subsequently a suit against the former incumbent and the purchaser jointly, and if his title be proved the sale will be void, and the property adjudged to him with costs, as provided for by Sec. 29 of Reg. VII. of 1799. Vakeel of Government and others v. Mt. Kishoree. 25th Nov. 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 162.—Harington & Ker.

259. A and B recovered at law their husband's share in a joint estate, on a gift from him and acknowledgments by his brothers. They had obscurely associated in the plaint an infant C, as an adopted son, but the fact and legality of his adoption were disputed and not investigated. The judgment passed was construed as not

260. A sued for an estate by title of inheritance. B repelled the suit, by pleading defect of right in A, and judgment in a prior cause between himself and C, the adoptive mother of A, founded on a compromise which he alleged C was competent to make. The Court, finding strong presumption of A's right, quashed the judgment on the first claim, to which A ought to have been made a party, and execution of which he opposed, and decreed recovery to A, with permission to B to bring a new suit against A and C, jointly, to establish the legality of his alleged title under the compromise. Mahā Rājā Govindnāth Rāj v. Gulāl Chand and others. 23d March 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 276.—H. Shakespear & Walpole.

261. The Lower Court did not try part of the claim of A on B, because it was repelled by the result of C's suit against B resting on fact, reserving A's right to sue de novo according as the Appeal Court might decide in the other suit which was appealed. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut affirmed this decision. Hidayat Ali Khān and another v. Tajan and others. 4th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 287.—Walpole.

262. A petition by the plaintiffs, presented by the authorized Vakeels of the plaintiffs, withdrawing their claim, having been rejected by the Zillah Judge, on the ground that it was an act of collusion and fraud, of which the parties themselves (all females), whose act it was alleged to be, were probably ignorant; it was held, that as such withdrawal did not affect the rights of other parties who had intervened as claimants, it ought not to have been rejected, the plaintiffs being bound by their own act; and the Court, in dismissing the claim as between the original parties, reserved the right of the interveners. Umrat Jan Bibi v. Shub Jan Bibi and others. 11th Sept. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 181.—Braddon & Hutchinson.

8. Reversal of Decree.

263. The proprietary right having been formally investigated and decided on in a summary suit by a Register, whose decision, on a regular appeal having been erroneously admitted from it, was reversed by the Provincial Court; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on a summary appeal, did not think proper to touch the reversal of the Register's decree, such reversal being proper, although the nature of the appeal, and the grounds of the reversal, were erroneous, but specially directed that the party in possession before the dispute should not be disturbed. Luchmun Das and others v. Roupchand and others. 6th Jan. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 3.—Rees.

264. In a suit between A and B, the Court having decided that no duress was used in a sale of a certain Mauza by the ancestor of A to B; it was held, that it was not competent to the Courts below to give judgment in favour of C, who claimed to be a co-proprietor with A against B, on the ground of the proof of the plea of duress having been used in the sale. Soharun Lal and another v. Ujaib Rai. 26th Jan. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 41.—Goad.

265. The Courts are not competent to decide in a new suit, contrary to the provisions of a former final decree relative to the same property. The merits of that decree cannot be gone into. Rao Ram Senkur v. Rancee Turnce Dibia. 25th April 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 146.—Leycester & Dorin.

266. The decrees of the Lower Courts were reversed, owing to the proceedings in the Zillah Court not having been conducted agreeably to Sec. 30. of Reg. II. of 1819; and the Judge was instructed to try the cause de novo, in conformity to the provisions of the said Regulation upon the original fees for stamp paper. The the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the Provincial Court were made payable by the parties respectively. Rajah Armurden Sahee and another v. Sheo Dial Oopudiah. 10th July 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 173.—Leycester & Dorin.

267. In a suit for possession of an estate by certain Zamindars against a farmer who claimed the right to hold the lands on a perpetual tenure at a fixed Jama, judgment was given in favour of the plaintiffs, the defendant not being able to substantiate his plea; and a claim to compensation preferred by the same plaintiffs for Sajir duties resumed from a Ganj which had been established by the farmer was rejected, as not belonging to the proprietors of the land; but the Provincial Court having adjudged that neither party had a right to compensation, so much of their decree was reversed, the point for decision being merely whether or not the right lay in the claimants. Brightman v. Casinath Bunkoojee and others. 17th Jan. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 201.—Leycester & Dorin.

268. The Zillah Court having, under the rule of Hindú law which bars the right of a woman to alienate ancestral property, dismissed a claim preferred on the ground of a deed of sale executed to the plaintiff by a female, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed the decree, it appearing that the defendants had not pleaded, as a bar to the claim, the rule of law which governed the judgment of the Lower Court; that there was nothing on the proceedings to shew that the property was ancestral; and that the defendants, both in the proceedings and in private transactions, had acknowledged the fact of the sale without offering any objection to the same. Omrow Singh v. Mt. Hem Kowur and others. 20th Aug. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 105.—Rattray & Brad-don.

268 a. A principal Sudder Amecn gave judgment in a case in which he had no jurisdiction. ### 9. Review.

269. Where a party, in his petition for a special appeal, stated that he had been east in several other suits in the Lower Courts of precisely the same kind as the present, and, in the event of the judgment of the Sudder Court being in his favour, it was his intention to apply for the admission of special appeals from the decrees in the other suits referred to; the Court observed that the regular course for the appellant to pursue was, to apply to the Courts who passed such decisions for a review of judgment under the provisions of Sec. 6. of Reg. XV. of 1816. Rajah C. Venkatadry Gopal Jagganadha Rao v. Khajah Shumsoddeen and another. Case 16. of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 179.—Scott & Greenway.

Where a claim had been dismissed on special appeal, a review of judgment was admitted, on a suspicion that the Pundit on whose Vyavashita the special appeal had been decided, had taken a bribe to induce him to give a favourable answer. Nundram and others v. Kashee Pandee and others. 30th June 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 70.—C. Smith, Martin, & Ahmuty. (J. Shakespear, dissent.)

vious error, without summoning the opposite party to shew cause. Rajendra Narayan Adhikari and another v. Sayad Abdul Hakim and another. 7th Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 307.—A. Ross.

272. Where the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut had confirmed the decision of the Provincial Court, which dismissed a claim as barred by prescription, but afterwards, on review, held that valid exception existed, and directed that the suit revived should be tried on its merits; it was held, that the Lower Court, and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in appeal, cannot again go into the question of prescription, nor try any alleged fraud and imposition, by which, on review, the order for the revival of the case had been obtained. Rup Chand Sahu and another v. Jivan Lal Ray and others. 31st Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 168.—Rattray.

273. The Zillah Court, on the plaintiff's suit, adjudged a conditional sale made by the defendant to be absolute. The appeal from this judgment was heard by two Judges of the Provincial Court in succession; the last (Curtis) adopted the judgment of reversal proposed by the former (Middleton) on the ground of redemption by the vendor; but the first Judge, by order, on a petition of the vendees, had suspended his judgment to see whether the two Judges would agree with him in the retraction of it; but the second Judge concurring in the judgment of reversal, the first Judge passed final judgment in conformity with that opinion of the second Judge. He, however, by an order on the petition of the vendees, directed an application to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut for review, because the vendor had not redeemed, and no provision had been made for the balance due, and he stayed execution on the judgment of reversal. This order had not been sent to the other Judge for concurrence when the Provincial Court was abolished under Reg. II. of 1833. On application to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, by the original defendant, for the admission of a special appeal, review of judgment was admitted under Sec. 5. of that Regulation. Heirs of Roopchand Paramanik and another v. Bhagrat and another. 12th March 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 352.—H. Shakespear.

By the practice of the Presidency Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, review of judgment was held not to be admissible after a lapse of twelve years from the date of the final decision on the case.<sup>1</sup> *Kasheenaath Bannarjee and others v. <sup>1</sup> This case is important, as being, as is believed, the only one in which it has been ruled that the expiration of twelve years bars the admission of an application for review.

275*d.* An application for review of a summary order was rejected without inquiry into its merits, because, first, a copy of the order complained of had not been filed with the petition of review, and, secondly, because no reason was given for the delay in making the application. Rajah Kishenchunder, Petitioner. 18th April 1842. #### 10. Powers of Judges.

276. The opinions recorded by the Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on a first decision, are not set aside merely by the admission of a re-hearing, or review of judgment. Mt. Dakeemun and others v. Meer Kabeer Hossein and others. 3d April 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 81.

277. A suit having been received by one Judge of a Provincial Court, it is not competent to another Judge to dismiss it on the ground of the cause of action not being such as to render it cognizable by that Court; nor is this just ground in any case for dismissing a suit after the merits have been gone into. Nubkishore Bunkoonjee v. Hyder Buksh. 30th Aug. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 125. — Harrington & Fombelle.

278. In a case of review of judgment, two Judges being of opinion that the decree reviewed should be reversed and two that it should be affirmed, one of the latter having joined in passing the decree reviewed, and the Judge who concurred with him in that decision having since died; it was held, that the opinion of the deceased Judge should be taken into account, so as to create a majority without the necessity of calling in a fifth Judge. Baboo Sheodas Narain v. Kanneul Bas Koonwur and others. 5th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 234.—Leycester.

279. One Judge of a Provincial Court being of opinion that the Zillah decree should be reversed, and a second that it should be affirmed, with leave, however, to the defendants to bring a fresh action; it was held, that it is not competent to a third Judge to dispose of the case finally, by affirming the Zillah judgment, if he differ as to the latter part of the order. Subeem Oolla and others v. Doorpudsee Dasee. 9th March 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 319.—Ahmuty.

282. Two Judges (Messrs. Rat-tray & Turnbull) admitted a review of the judgment passed by themselves. Mr. Rattray, on hearing the review, proposed to confirm the judgment; and, as Mr. Turnbull had left the Court, sent on the case for another voice. Messrs. H. Shakespear & Walpole were of opinion that Mr. Rattray was competent, singly, to confirm, and that the reference to another Judge was unnecessary. Ib.

<sup>2</sup> On this point the Judges were divided: Mr. Leycester and Mr. Sealy held, that as the Judge so differing concurred in the decision of the Lower Court, his judgment was final; and difference of motives did not involve necessity of reference to another Judge. Mr. Ross and Mr. Turnbull, on the other hand, were of opinion that there was that obvious difference of motives which rendered such reference necessary. It was ultimately ruled that, under the circumstances of the case, it should be submitted to another Judge, but that the general principle should be considered as undetermined.

283. Where two Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut concurred in amending the decree of a Provincial Court, but differed as to grounds, final judgment was passed notwithstanding such difference. Bábú Rám Sáháy Sing and others v. Chandan Sing and another. 5th March 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 96. — Turnbull & Ross.

284. A's suit against B for land was dismissed in the Zillah Court, and decreed in the Court of Appeal, on proof of right and ejectment. On special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut the first Judge would have decided for B, and the second for A; and a third agreed with the second, but proposed to bar A from recovery of mesne profits between the ejectment and the institution of the suit, on the ground of laches. Reference was made back to the second Judge, who concurred on the assent of the pleader and one of the respondents. Rám Ratan Ray v. Sambha Chandra Majmuadar and others. 2d Aug. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 221. — Ross & Walpole (H. Shakespear, dissent.).

285. Where two Judges concurred in a judgment as to the demand of the plaintiff, but differed as to a question of law which was incidentally raised, reference was made to a third Judge. Prasanná Náth Ray v. Rám Krishnámáni. 12th March 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 274. — Barwell & Walpole.

286. The judgment of the Lower Court was reversed in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut by two Judges, though not on identical ground. Rái Radha Gobind Singh v. Gorachund Gosain. 15th April 1833. 5 S. D.

A. Rep. 290. — Rattray & Halhed.

287. Where an appeal has been heard successively by two Judges, and the second differed from the first on an opinion obtained by him from the Muhammadan law officer, it is competent to the first Judge, to whom the papers were referred back for consideration, to amend his judgment, and make that proposed by the second Judge final. Aiman Bibi v. Ibrahim Khan. 9th May 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 304. — Barwell & Walpole.

288. It was determined by a majority of the Court, that, under Cl. 6. of Sec. 2. of Reg. Government.* 29th Nov. 1834. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 363.

289. Two Judges having arrived at the same general conclusion in regard to the judgment in a cause, but differed as to a material fact, with special reference to which the first Judge had sent on the case for another voice; it was held, that the decision was incomplete, and that the case must be submitted to another Judge. Wasiq Uli Khan v. Government. 22d Sept. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 110. — Court at large.

290. A brings an action against B. C intervenes. Judgment is given in the Zillah Court in favour of A. B and C appeal on entirely different issues. One Judge is for amending the case on the appeal of B, and reversing the Zillah decree so far as it affects C; another Judge is for partly confirming the Zillah decree on the appeal of B, and partly reversing it on that of C. Notwithstanding the concurrence of voices in respect of the appeal of C, both appeals are sent on for another voice. Two Judges then concurring pass final judgment, reversing the Zillah decree on both appeals. Umrut Jan Bibi v. Shub Jan Bibi and others. 11th Sept.

don & Hutchinson.

291. A review of judgment having been admitted, in consequence of a slight difference of opinion of the deciding Judges; it was held, that their opinions were not thereby cancelled, but are to be taken into account in the final disposal of the case. *Nawab

rara Begum and others.* 18th June 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 290.—Rat-tray, Lee Warner, & Reid.

292. Held, that according to the rules and practice of the Court the orders of the several Judges who had previously recorded their opinion on a case could not be cancelled; but that the Court was competent, with reference to the further inquiry or-of the case in such manner as might appear to them proper. *Jordan, Ap-the same decision in a case, but differ-voice was necessary. *Rajkomar Deo-

Rughoonundun Singh and others.* 9th
April 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 89. — Tucker & Smyth.

11. Remanding Cases.

293a. A sold his indigo factories to B and C, merchants and agents of Calcutta, and proceeded to Europe.
D, on the insolvency of B and C, bought a four-anna share of E, the assignee of the late firm of B and C, and managed the concern for himself and E. F, a native Zamindár, sued
A, the absentee late proprietor, for arrears of rent which had accrued and become payable during A's possession of the lands leased to the factories for the cultivation and manufacture of indigo, and obtained an ex- parte decree. In the execution of this decree the Zillah Judge ordered the sale of one of the factories of D, in satisfaction of the unliquidated arrears. On the appeal of D this was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the ground of the de-fectiveness of the investigation, apparent on the proceedings of the Lower Court; and the case was remanded for further inquiry, with the injunction to release the factory from sale should the arrears appear to have accrued prior to the purchase by D, while the factories were in the possession of A, during whose stay in the country they were not placed under attachment.

Davidson, Petitioner. 23d June
1835. 2 Sev. Cases, 125. — D. C.
Smyth.

294. A sells an estate to B, which
B sells to C, the name of A still remaining recorded as proprietor in the Collector's office. The estate is sold for arrears of revenue, and the surplus proceeds are alleged to have been paid by the Collector to A, the recorded proprietor. On an action by C against A and B, for recovery of the amount of the surplus, the Zillah Court gave a decree against B, without going into the question of the payment alleged to have been made by the Collector to A, leaving B to sue
A for the amount; but on appeal the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed this decree, exonerated B from liability, and directed investigation of the claim against A. Beebee Nancy Deram v. Mackay. 25th Feb. 1836.
6 S. D. A. Rep. 55.—Braddon &
Stockwell.

295. The defendants in an action having advanced a plea, which, if correct, would have barred the jurisdiction of the Zillah Court trying the suit, but which that Court neglected to inquire into, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut returned the case as incomplete, for investigation on that point.
*Satrunjeeb Pal and others v. Hurree
Doss Baboo and others.* 21st Jan.
1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 4. — D. C.
Smyth.

296. The defendant having pleaded, in a case before a Principal Sudder Ameen, that the plaintiff had greatly overvalued the property which formed the subject of action, such excess of valuation making the case appealable to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut instead of to the Zillah Judge; and the Principal Sudder Ameen having decided in favour of the plaintiff, without adverting to the plea of the defendant; it was held, that the Principal Sudder Ameen was bound, in the spirit of Sec. 5. of Reg. XIII. of 1808, to inquire into the plea before proceeding to try the merits of the case, and that, accordingly, the case should be remanded to the Lower Court.<sup>1</sup> Domun Singh and another v. Ushoor Khan Chowdree. 3d July 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 41.—Reid.

297. In an action for land and mesne profits, the Zillah Judge having awarded the former and left the latter for future decision, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut held that the decree was incomplete, and remanded the case, with instructions to the Judge to pass judgment on the entire claim. Ramnarain Sawant v. Saroop Chunder Dutt and others. 17th March 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 77.—Tucker & Reid.

298. A Collector having returned to the Zillah Court a suit referred to him under the provisions of Sec. 30. of Reg. II. of 1819, without the prescribed report, which suit was then decided by the Principal Sudder Ameen and Zillah Judge in the absence of such report; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut set aside the decisions as incomplete, and remanded the case, with instructions to make a second reference to the Collector. Anooda Pershad Ray v. Mt. Bhagro-

bee Dasse. 21st June 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 107.—Tucker & Reid.

298a. It is competent to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, with reference to Construction 1073, in remanding a case for re-trial to the Zillah Court to restrict the inquiry to any particular point or points. Har Shunker Nerain Singh v. Kishen Deo Nerain Singh and others. 30th June 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 107.—Reid & Barlow.

299. The Principal Sudder Ameen nonsuited a case because the defendants at the trial filed a copy of the order passed by the Zillah Judge of the district, rejecting the plaintiff's application to be allowed to sue as a pauper for the remaining portion of the property which he had omitted to include in his first plaint. This was reversed, in appeal, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the Native Judge directed to restore the case to its former number in the file of pending cases, and allow the plaintiff to put in a supplemental plaint for the remainder of the property. Bhohnath Baboo, Petitioner. 20th June 1842. 2 Sev. Cases, 269.—Reid.

299a. In the execution of a decree of A against B, certain of B's boats were attached for sale at Midnapore by the Principal Sudder Ameen of Hooghly. C, a third party, interposed, and got them released; and while the appeal was pending before the Hooghly Judge, C applied to the Judge of Midnapore to inquire into the ownership of the boats, and got them also released from liability to sale. Held, on a summary appeal of A to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that the interference in the matter by the Hooghly Court in limine, and the subsequent orders of the Judge of Midnapore were improper; and the proceedings of the Lower Courts were quashed, and the Judge of Midnapore directed to re-institute inquiry and try the case de novo. Gungapersaud Ghose, Petitioner. 13th Sept. 1842. 2 Sev. Cases, 1.—Reid.

299b. The Sudder Dewanny Adaw-

<sup>1</sup> It is to be inferred, from the Court's order, that had the defendant's plea of overvaluation been proved, a nonsuit would, in their opinion, have been the proper course. Had the excess of valuation been such as not to affect the appellate jurisdiction, the Court would probably have considered it sufficient to tax the plaintiff with the costs on the excess.

lut directed the restoration to the file of a Moonsiff of a suit for false imprisonment against a police Dāróghah, struck off by the orders of the officiating Judge. Ram Gopal Ghose, Petitioner. 8th Jan. 1844. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 55.

299 c. In a suit for the recovery of money, on a balance of account opened with the plaintiff by the defendant through a Gámáshtah, the defendant denied the amount; the Court remanded the case for further investigation, and remarked on the Principal Sudder Ameen's proceeding in converting a defendant into a witness, and in his directing the parties how to proceed in the case, such being in contravention of the Circular Order dated the 13th Sept. 1843. Gour Chunder Podar v. Chunder Kullah. 8th Feb. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 155. — Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

299 d. A, B, C, and D obtained a decree against F, F, G, and H for Rs. 176.14 annas, 7 pice, which they carried out in execution, and then set up a Kistbandi for prior liquidation; J, a third party, intervened, and produced a counter claim, under a deed of mortgage of a subsequent date, to be paid out of the proceeds of the same property attached for sale in preference to the claim advanced by A, B, C, and D under their Kistbandi. The Moonsiff, after investigating the claims of the parties, directed satisfaction of both the incumbrances with which the property was charged, to be made from the proceeds of the sale, and the appropriation of the surplus to the liquidation of the decree. The property sold realised only Rs. 80, which being inadequate to meet all claims, the decree was left unsatisfied. A, B, C, and D, into whose hands the property had passed by right of purchase, alleged obtaining possession of the property, but subsequent dispossession of the same by one of the defendants, and accordingly instituted the suit. J, the third party, established his deed of mortgage in the Moonsiff, and declared his willingness to pay to the auction purchasers what he, the third party, had paid to the mortgagor previously to the sale. A decree was accordingly passed by the Moonsiff, but reversed, in appeal, by the Principal Sudder Ameen, without inquiry into the validity of the claim of the mortgagee, and without pronouncing definitively on the rights on which the defence in the Court below was founded. On special appeal, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, to cure this defect, remanded the case for re-trial in the Principal Sudder Ameen's Court, in order to let him pronounce judgment upon the rights of the party alleging himself to be mortgagee. Keeruth Singh v. Omadhar Bhutt and others. 17th Feb. 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 221. — Court at large.

299 e. In a case in which the plaintiff had brought his suit to obtain leave to sell the interests of the original defendants in a Patni Talook, and appropriate the proceeds of sale in the liquidation of his decree, in reversal of a sale under Reg. VIII. of 1819, caused by letting the tenure fall in arrear, at which the defendants became Benámi purchasers; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut (with reference to Construction No. 1301.) held that the cause of action was rightly laid on the Jama annually paid to the Zamindár of the Patni Talook, which was in excess of the plaintiff's decree, and directed the restoration of the case to the file of the lower tribunal, in reversal of the order of nonsuit passed by the Zillah Judge on the appeal of the plaintiff from a decree of dismissal of his claim by the Principal Sudder Ameen. Harischandra Mukhopadhyay, Petitioner. 7th July 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 173. — Reid.

299 f. In a suit where the plaintiffs acknowledged having sued only for a part of their claim founded on a right of inheritance, and intended hereafter to sue for the remainder; it was held by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut that such suit was irregularly instituted<sup>1</sup>; and the Court reversed the decision of the Native Judge, and remanded the case to his Court to call upon the plaintiffs to file a supplemental plaint for the remainder of the inheritance, and to decide the case in the usual course. Bhairub-chandra Mujmoadar and others v. Nandakumar Mujmoadar and others. 17th Dec. 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 265. Dec. S. D. A. 1845. 461. — Reid, Dick, & Jackson.

12. Interpreter.

300. Held, that a party wishing to conduct his own case, and being unable to plead in the Hindustani or Oordoo language, may be heard through an interpreter. Hedger v. Birmyemoye Dasi. 15th May 1840. 1 Sev. Cases, 111. — Rattray, Tucker, Warner, D. C. Smyth, & Reid.

300*a*. And should he, under such circumstances, be unable to afford to pay the expense of an interpreter, the Court will then employ an interpreter duly sworn for the occasion, the expense of such interpreter being defrayed by the Government. Ib.

301. The Court will admit a competent interpreter to interpret into the language of record the arguments of a party wishing to conduct or defend in a foreign language an appeal in propria persona sedente curia. Hedger v. Maha Rani Kamal Kumari. 22d April 1841. 1 Sev. Cases, 115. — D. C. Smyth & Warner.

13. Ex-parte Causes.

302. All proceedings in a cause heard ex-parte were quashed, it appearing to the Court that it might be inferred that the plaintiff (the respondent) had some cause of action, although the evidence was loose and unsatisfactory, and that this insufficiency was partly attributable to the extreme irregularity of the mode in which the trial was conducted in the Zillah Court. Rajah Royduppu Rungah Rao v. Pakee Govardanadoo. Case 5 of 1820. 1 Mad. Dec. 261. — Harris & Graeme.

303. In the matter of an ex-parte decree, where the Zillah Judge, having in view other claims on the defendant, confined the execution of it to any property of the defendant, with the exception of certain effects specified; the Court held that the restriction should be removed and the decree made general, leaving disputes for priority of execution or other cause to be tried in the usual manner. Jugjeerundas Gokooldas v. Moohum-mud Bhace Ubdoolu Bhace. 1st March 1821. 2 Borr. 48. — Elphinstone, Romer, & Sutherland.

304. Held, that the decision of a Lower Court cannot be considered imperfect merely because the cause was heard ex-parte, the defendant having received the usual notice, but neglected to defend the action. Saheenah Khanum v. Imlach. 5th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 76. — Brad-don & Stockwell.

304*a*. A case cannot be tried ex-parte when it is notorious that the usual notice of the claim has not been, and cannot be, served on the defendant.<sup>2</sup> Randolph, Petitioner. 7th Nov. 1843. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 40. — Reid.

14. Decision by Oath.

305. The mode of deciding by the oath of the plaintiff can only be resorted to with the consent of both parties to the suit, agreeably to Sec. 6. of Reg. IV. of 1793. Jaga Doss v. Hemmura-in Sing and others. 2d Dec. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 305. — D. C. Smyth.

306. A plaintiff consenting through his Vakil to the settlement of his suit in Court by the statement on oath of the defendant, cannot object to a decree of the Court founded on such statement. Bajpie Rajah Gungesh Chunder v. Suroop Chunder Sirkar. 29th Aug. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 130.—Barlow.

15. Withdrawal of Suit.

307. A plaintiff cannot be prevented from withdrawing his suit. Man Bebee and others, Petitioners. 10th Dec. 1844. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 62.—Reid.

PRE-EMPTION.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW, 12.

I. HINDÚ LAW.

1. Among the holders of separate shares of an hereditary Zamindári, each, according to the Hindú law, may sell his share to whom he pleases. The other sharers have no necessary right of pre-emption.<sup>2</sup> Ramrutun

<sup>2</sup> The right of pre-emption claimed in this case was founded on ideas taken from the Muhammadan and not from the Hindú law, and carried even further (according to notions so generally prevalent throughout the country as to amount perhaps to established custom) than the doctrine of the Muhammadan law itself countenances. It is so much recognized, that, in other suits which have since come before the Court, the defendants, though Hindús, have admitted the principle on which the pre-emption was claimed, but rested the defence on other grounds, such as a tender made and refused, before the sale was completed, to a stranger. The Muhammadan law allows the right of pre-emption to a partner in the property of the land sold, to one participating in the immunities and privileges of it, and to a neighbour (Hedaya, Book xxxviii. c. i.). It was, in the above case, claimed after a division and separation of shares on the ground of former partnership, and not specifically on that of vicinage. Whe-

Sing and others v. Chunder Naruen Rai. 29th Sept. 1792. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 1.—Stuart, Speke, & Cowper.

2. Vicinage and partnership were held not to confer any right of pre-emption according to the Hindú law as current in Bengal.<sup>3</sup> Ramkumhure Rai and others v. Bung Chund Bunnhojee. 24th Feb. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 17.—Fendall & Goad.

3. Where the Zillah Court had awarded the right of pre-emption to Hindús claiming the moiety of a Mulharari village as Shafi Khalit, or neighbours by common tenancy, the claim was denied by the defendants, who asserted the severalty of the two moieties, but admitted general vicinage. The Patna Court of Appeal reversed the decision of the Zillah Court, on the ground that the right claimed was unknown to the Hindú law; and, on a special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the judgment of the Court of Appeal was affirmed (though the Pandits of the Sudder Court maintained that the right of pre-emption from vicinage existed under the Hindú law), on the ground that the appellants had not duly asserted the right claimed. The question whether, under the Hindú law as current in Western India, the right claimed might or might not be valid was reserved. Partab Narayan and another v. Rattan Mahtun and another. 19th March 1820. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 71, note.—C. Smith.

4. In a litigation between Hindús, whether the custom of the country would have supported this claim is questionable. It most probably would in any case in which the Muhammadan law maintains the right. But as the decision of this suit was made to rest on a question of Hindú law, there is no doubt that the opinion which governed the decision was, in strictness of law, correct (see Dáy. Bh. c. ii. s. 31.).—Coleb.

<sup>3</sup> In this case the vendors followed the Western Shastras. But the law as received in Bengal was asked. The Pandits argued against the existence of the right under that law. Their reasoning rests on the doctrine of the Bengal writers, which maintains the validity of acts done by an owner though prohibited.

which arose in Tichoot, the right of pre-emption, founded on common tenancy, was admitted by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as conformable to local usage and reason, and as sustained by the Vyavastha of its Pandits in the last case. Omed Ray and others v. Nakheel Rai and others. 28th Oct. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 68. Leycester & Turnbull.

5. A and B, tenants in common, mutually covenanted to give each other the right of pre-emption, and that each should have the right to redeem, if the other sold to a stranger in contravention of this covenant. B did sell to C, a Muhammadan native officer, in contravention. A, on information received, impugned the sale as corrupt in the Criminal Courts; where, as also in the Civil Court, summarily, he asserted his right of pre-emption. On the regular suit of A against B, at the end of about six years, his right to redeem on the covenant was decreed.<sup>1</sup> Rajendra Narayan Adhikari and another v. Sayyid Abdul Hakim and another. 19th July 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 307. — H. Shakespear & Barwell.

6. In a suit between Hindús, in Shahabad, in the province of Behar, the Court admitted the right of pre-emption, founded on vicinage and contiguity of property, the lands of the claimants being situated in the same Patí, or portion of the village, as those which formed the subject of the action, the right of pre-emption, though not expressly recognized by the Hindú law, being current among Hindús in the province of Behar. Ramnath Singh v. Rajroop Singh and another. 14th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 82.—Stockwell.

7. The Court admitted the right of pre-emption, founded on partnership, in a suit between Hindús which originated in the province of Behar. Mohabul Nath Tewaree and others v. Bhowanance Dutt Singh and others. 20th July 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 83.—Barwell & Stockwell.

8. The Court upheld the right of pre-emption, founded on common tenancy, in a suit between Hindús which arose in the district of Tirhoot. Meethun Lal v. Mt. Deo Murat and others. 10th May 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 163.—Money & Hutchinson.

9. A and B hold equal shares in certain villages. A sells his portion of one village to C for a specific sum (say Rs. 6000), and also sells his share of other villages to D for the same sum. B then sells his share of all the villages to D for a sum (say Rs. 8000), without specification of the price of each. C claims the right of pre-emption of the share of the village of which he had already purchased a portion from A. The right of pre-emption was not disputed on appeal. Held, that the price to be paid by C to D should not be determined with reference to the price paid by C to A, but adjusted with reference to the relative values of the shares sold by A to D. Mahadeo Dutt v. Poorun Bibi and others. 16th Jan. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 277.—Harding & Tucker.

10. Where certain parties of the Sudgop Cast sued to establish their superior right of pre-emption over certain female apartments contiguous to their family residence against the purchase of a decree-holder of the Kayet Cast, their claim was recognized by the Court with reference to the rights, feelings, peculiar usages, and institutions of the natives. Gooroo Charun Sirkar and others, Applicants. 9th Feb. 1841. 1 Ser. Cases, 27. — D. C. Smyth & Lee Warner.

11. Held, that where the right of

<sup>1</sup> In this case Mr. Shakespear remarked, with reference to an argument in the decision of the Provincial Court as to the law of Shufaah, and according to which law the Court had decided, that in a dispute between two Hindú tenants in common, as in the present case, the civil law of the Muhammadans was irrelevant, and the special covenant on which the plaintiff relied was neither contrary to Hindú law or usage.

pre-emption among Hindús is recognized on the ground of local custom, the rules and restrictions of the Muhammadan law are applicable to claims of that nature. Mewa Lal and others v. Sooltan Singh and another. 25th July 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 129.—Rattray, Tucker, & Barlow.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.<sup>1</sup>

12. On a claim of Shufuah, or right of pre-emption, founded on vicinage and partnership, it being proved that the plaintiff had made the requisite demand and protest on hearing of the sale, though payment was not immediately tendered, judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff, in conformity with the opinion of the Muhammadan law officers, on condition of payment by a certain day. Ghoham Nabby Chowdry v. Gaur Kishore Rai. 22d Oct. 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 350.—Harrington & Fombelle.

13. A sells lands to B, conceiving himself entitled to do so as heir of his father, the former Mukarraridár; and C (late Málík) claims a right of pre-emption, declaring, at the same time, that the estate of a Mukarraridár upon his death devolves on his heir; as, by the settlement concluded between the Government and the Mukarraridár, he becomes Málík of the proceeds of his Mukarrari, with the exception of a portion thereof, which the late Málík receives as Málíkinah; consequently the right of the late Málík is not wholly transferred to the Mukarraridár, but he and the late Málík are to each other in the relation of partners, and the right of Shufuah appertains to one partner over the share of another, because such property is joint and undivided, and he is a sharer in the thing itself. C therefore, as late

Málík, was decreed to have a claim to pre-emption. Uodan Singh and another v. Mumeri Khan and others. 15th Sept. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 85.—Fombelle & Stuart.

14. It was held, that if A, a Muhammadan trader, transfer lands to B by sale, and C afterwards come forward and establish his right of Shufuah, he will be entitled to the lands at the price paid for them by B, who will be compelled to refund the profit accrued during the period of his possession to C, receiving himself the purchase money back from A. Id.

15. In a suit by a Muhammadan to establish his superior right of pre-emption of a house bought by another person, it was held, by the Register's and Judge's Courts, that the sale was void, on the ground of informality of the deed of sale (it not having been submitted to the Kázi), and leaving the right of pre-emption to be determined by a fresh action or the highest offer: but these decisions were reversed on appeal; and the Court held that the deed of sale was a valid instrument, and the respondent had failed to establish his right of pre-emption, having forfeited the same, under the provisions of the Muhammadan law, by declining to purchase the house in dispute previously to its acquisition by the appellant. Umbaram Mukundas v. Rughoomath Laldas. 31st May 1823. 2 Borr. 366.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

16. In a suit by A to set aside a sale by B of a piece of land containing a burying-ground, it was not proved by B that A had given up a right of pre-emption possessed by him; and as the Muhammadan law did not allow of the sale of burying-grounds, the sale was annulled, liberty being given to B to make a fresh sale, excluding the burial-ground, and giving such notice to A as his right of pre-emption entitled him to by law.<sup>2</sup> Meer Sudr-ood-deen Khan

v. Qazee Meerun and others. 9th March 1824. 2 Borr. 682.—Romer.

17. A respondent having been declared entitled to redeem from mortgage one moiety of a village, as the portion to which he was entitled by the law of inheritance, as an heir of the original mortgagor, was informed by the Court that he was entitled to recover, by right of Shufuah, the other moiety which had been sold by his co-heir. Mukhan Lal v. Wazeer Ali. 14th March 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 32.—Harrington & Sealy.

18. A claim in right of pre-emption to property, the possession of which has been transferred by a deed of Hibeh-bil-inaaz, or gift for consideration (such consideration being expressly stipulated), is good under the Muhammadan law.<sup>1</sup> Syed Looft Allee v. Mt. Lazima. 29th July 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 34.—Robertson.

19. And this, notwithstanding that the consideration stipulated in the deed of gift be considerably below the real value of the property. Ib.

20. Where a Muhammadan might have had cognizance of the sale of a piece of ground, to the pre-emption of which he was entitled, and did not prefer his claim till a considerable time after the sale, his right of pre-emption was held to be forfeited, as he should have filed a suit within one month against the vendor. Boo Murrum v. Peermud Wullud Mahomud. 7th Feb. 1839. Sel. Rep. 178.—Pyne, Greenhill, & Le Geyt.

21. Under the Muhammadan law pre-emption cannot be claimed in a case of Bay taljiah, or fictitious sale made to serve a temporary purpose. Mohammud Ali Khan v. Ashruf-un-nisa Begum. 10th Dec. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 306.—Lee Warner.

22. In a case of Bay taljiah, a lease of the property from the alleged purchaser to the seller does not render the sale absolute, so that pre-emption can be claimed. Ib.

23. Pre-emption, if not claimed immediately, is barred. Ib.

24. But pre-emption cannot be claimed where the consideration is not expressly stipulated. Ib.

25. A party having claimed the right of pre-emption in certain lands, and obtained a decree, is not at liberty to withdraw from his claim in consequence of the resumption of the lands by Government, and the conclusion of a settlement with other parties. Sheik Soopun, Petitioner. 4th May 1841. ## I. KUL GUR.

1. Kul Gurs have the right of employment in the families to which they are priests, and to the fees arising from the office; nor can they be superseded by others chosen by the family, even though the family should pay them their fees, as they are entitled to the employment as well as to the fees. *Mooljee Purseram and another v. 2. When a Cast (Kundooleca Brahmaus) were, ex officio, Kul Gurs to another (Kupol Banyans), and claimed, under documents that had never been acted upon, to share in the gains of two persons who claimed as Kupol Nyat Gurs, these two urging that their collections were quite distinct, and belonged to themselves alone as Kupol Nyat Gurs, and not to the Cast in general as Kupol Kul Gurs, and backing their claim with a Bandobast that proved the Nyat Guri to be in their families; it was held that they were entitled to the fees separate and distinct from the Cast. Nuthoo Soodaram and others v. Roopshunhur Jaceeshunhur and another. 28th Aug. 1811. 1 Borr. 374.—Day & Romer.

II. NYAT GUR.

3. A Nyat Gur, or general Gur of the whole Cast (Dussa Shreemali Banyans), cannot be removed from such office unless by an unanimous vote of the whole Cast. Bhoola Rouchhor and others v. Rulyat. 26th July 1813. 1 Borr. 80. — Sir E. Nepeau, Brown, & Elphinston.

4. Where A filed a suit, claiming the office of Nyat Gur of the Cast of Surat Ghanchis, against certain of the members in the shape of damages for the employment of another person as Priest, the claim was dismissed on proof that A, though entitled by descent to the office, had acquiesced in the alienation of a half share, by the last possessor, in favour of the person employed by the parties he now sued. Nurbheram Tooljaram v. Bhaecdas and another. 17th Sept. 1821. 2 Borr. 169.—Sutherland.

III. PUROHIT.

5. A Jujman, or member of a Hindú family who employs a certain Purohit, or officiating priest, is not at liberty to discharge such priest whilst he is capable of performing sacrificial or other religious duties.<sup>1</sup> *Radha Kishen and others v. II. LIABILITY OF, 5.

III. POLICE OFFICERS.—See CRIMINAL LAW, 498 et seq.; DEFAMATION, 6.

IV. SUIT BY.—See PRACTICE, 103.

I. GENERALLY.

1. A claim by a Modí against an old Kumavisláur out of employ, to oblige him to make good certain deficiencies in the payment of the Modí Khanek supplies, was dismissed, as it appeared that the Modí Khanek accounts were never under the Kumavisláur, being kept by the Majmua- dars under the native government, and superintended by the Désâjis of the Pergunnah. Moreover, the Court thought there was no reason why the Kamavisdâr, if sued ex officio, should be answerable in his own person for balances avowedly outstanding against the villages, and which, since his removal from office, he had no means of recovering. In order to have made him liable as for a personal debt it should have been proved that he had actually made the collections, as there was no assignable reason why he should have left any such balance outstanding as he might be called on to make good after his administration. Hurjeeem Laldas v. Bhikarce Nundlal. 5th March 1817. 1 Borr. 408. —Prendergast, Keate, & Sutherland.

2. Sec. 3. of Reg. IX. of 1806<sup>1</sup> requires the immediate production, to the officer of search, of a Chalan covering the salt laden on a boat, on pain of confiscation, and the Court cannot afford any relief. Ram Kishnar Kund and another v. Superintendent of the Western Salt Choki and others. 23d Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 90. —Leycester & H. Shakespear.

3. A Kâzi and a Saddar Ameen are not public officers of the Judge's Court within the meaning of Sec. 4. of Reg. XVI. of 1793. Shah Nawaz Khan v. Clement. 10th Jan. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 261. —Court at large.

3a. The Government officers in the Salt Department cannot withdraw from an arrangement entered into by the Superintendent of salt works with a proprietor of Khâlaris, which has existed for a series of years, on the plea that the Superintendent had no authority to enter into it. The Salt Agent at Jessore v. Radha Mohan Chondry. 22d Dec. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 135. —Robertson & Hutchinson (D. C. Smyth, dissent.).

4. It is not competent to revenue officers engaged in making settlements under Reg. IX. of 1833, or employed in the manner therein provided, to interfere in regard to any case which may have already been judicially determined by a Court of Civil Judicature, or to proceedings in execution of a judicial award under which possession of property has been given.<sup>2</sup> Collector of Gorruckpore v. Maharah Chutturdharee Sahee. 7th Feb. 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 74. —Rattray.

II. LIABILITY OF.

5. A Deputy Nâzir having released, under a Judge's order, a party imprisoned for debt, was held not to be responsible for his person. Maloo Bhace Kureem Bhace v. Peshtunjee Kala Bhace and another. 5th Nov. 1816. 1 Borr. 177. —Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, & Bell.

6. The Government Collector of Broach sued the distillery Dârôghâh for the recovery of certain fees on Mowrah berries, not brought to account of Government. The Court held that the Dârôghâh was not liable, he proving that they were taken by the Mektas employed at the distillery, and that they were, therefore, either authorized perquisites in lieu of wages or they were not. If legal, they belonged to the receiver, and if not, the Government could not sue for their amount. Mohammud Nurem Mohommud Aruf v. The Collector of Broach. 14th March 1822. 2 Borr. 183. —Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

7. Where a manufacturer, contracting with the Commercial Resident, commenced a suit against him for the recovery of certain customs levied upon him, in defiance of the contract which bound the Resident to pay them, the suit was dismissed on proof that they had been paid by the Resident; and the Court observed, that if the Customs had been levied after payment of the same by the Resident, the claim for recovery must be against the Custom Master, not the Resident. Ramdas Brijbhokundas v. Corsellis 28th July 1823. 2 Borr. 614.—Sutherland.

7a. The Diván of a subordinate commercial factory was held responsible for the sum of Rs. 10,000 which he had entered in his books as received from the principal factory, although such sum was never sent. Mt. Ram Sonu v. Chester. 27th Aug. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 169.—Goad & Dorin.

8. The Patéls of a Jamaát were held free from personal responsibility for the Government dues of the Jamaát; at the same time the Court observed that the Collector had full liberty to proceed either against the individual defaulters by attachment of their persons, or by suit, or to sue the particular Patéls who had collected the Sarkár's dues and not brought them to account. Agar v. Dhoolubh. Bhoola and others. 9th Aug. 1823. 2 Borr. 548.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

9. The treasurers of a Collector were held to be responsible for a sum of money said to have been stolen from the treasury under their charge. Baboo Ram Das and another v. The Collector of Benares. 5th Jan. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 1.—C. Smith.

10. It was held that a stamp Dá-rógháh is not responsible for any defalcation on the part of the subordinate stamp vendors and their sureties. Government v. Abdool Hamid. 6th May 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 149.—C. Smith.

11. Where the revenue officers illegally confiscated salt, the owner recovered, as damages, the prime cost, boat hire, and expected profits. Ram Kishwar Kund and another v. Superintendent of the Western Salt Chohi and others. 23d Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 90.—Leycester & H. Shake spear.

12. A, the salt agent of Chittagong, brought an action in the Zillah Court against B, the Dá-rógháh, and C, his surety, for a deficiency of salt, as per monthly account rendered by B. B, in his defence, urged that D, a Gumáshtah of A, afterwards made a defendant in the suit, had illegally, and without official authority, attached and held possession of his Golah, and that, consequently, D was liable for the deficiency. C pleaded discharge by the abolition of the Golah. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut affirmed the award of the Zillah Court for the deficiency proved, against D in the first instance, and ultimately against B and C, who were held not to be discharged by the tort of D. Raghu Nath Bose v. The Salt Agent of Chittagong. 10th Dec. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 242.—Rattray.

13. Under Sec. 38 of Reg. XI. of 1822 the Collector cannot be held responsible for merely carrying into effect the orders of the Court; and as long as he adheres to them he is not accountable for the errors of the Court, should such appear to have occurred. Government Vakeel v. Ram Lochan and another. 24th April 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 157.—Hutchinson & F. C. Smith.

14. Held, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that a conviction of “surreptitiously obtaining” and “corruptly appropriating” money deposited in Court, against a ministerial officer, in the Provincial Court of Appeal, by the Nizamut Adawlut, was not a conviction of “embezzlement” in the legal acceptance of that term; and that therefore it was insufficient to authorize the enforcement of the summary proceedings for the recovery of the amount so obtained and appropriated, prescribed by Cl. 3. of Sec. 7. of Reg. XVIII. of 1817, and Sec. 6. of Reg. III. of 1827. Government Pleader, Petitioner. 9th Aug. 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 36.—Court at Large.

PURCHASER.

1. In a conveyance under Ferguson's Act, when there is nothing to impeach the bona fides of the purchaser or mortgagee, it is not necessary to prove that the sale or mortgage was for the payment of debts, or, indeed, that there were any debts of the testator at all. Unless the purchaser colluded with the executor he cannot be liable for the wrongful acts of the latter, and the remedy of the heir or devisee is against the executor alone. *Doe dem. 2. The mere act of a plaintiff filing a Rázi námeh, and thus withdrawing a suit from the file where there had been no judgment on its merits, especially when done for the purpose of instituting a more complete trial for the same demand, was held not to bar his right to bring forward his claim again in any way he might think proper. Recadas Khorecdas v. Ubheraj Pitambur. 1st Aug. 1822. 2 Borr. 325.—Ironsides.

<sup>1</sup> It was decided in the Court of Chancery (Freeman v. Fairlie, 17th Nov. 1828, Cl. Ad. R. 1829, 21. 1 Moore Ind. App. 305.) that land and houses in Bengal are freeholds of inheritance, and are not chattels real, and they were held not to pass to the executor or administrator. And see Gardiner v. Fell, 1 Jac. and W. 22. 1 Moore Ind. App. 299; and supra, p. 249, note 2. Act IX. of 1837 declares all immovable property belonging to Parsis, when situate within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Courts established by Her Majesty's Charter, to be of the nature of chattels real and not freehold, for the purpose of transmission on the death and intestacy of the person beneficially interested therein, or by the will of such person. By Act XX. of 1837 all immovable property held by any inhabitant of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore, and Malacca, so far as regards its transmission by will, or in case of intestacy, is declared to be of the nature of chattels real and not of freehold.

2. The lands of Muhammadans and Hindús descend according to their respective laws. The Stat. 21st Geo. III. c. 70. expressly directs that every question of succession and inheritance is to be so determined. Ib.

3. Estates of freehold and inheritance are recognized by British law in Bengal, and in the hands of all but Hindús and Muhammadans. They descend according to British law. Jebb v. Lefevre. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 61.

4. Excepting in the case of Hindús and Muhammadans, there is no other law than the British, which can effect the descent of lands in Calcutta. All other classes of persons are liable to British law only. Ib.

5. Land and houses in Calcutta have escheated to the Crown for want of heirs, and grants have been obtained through the crown officers of England, of such lands in favour of illegitimate children. Ib.

I. TO THE REVENUE AUTHORITIES.

1. The object of the reference to the Revenue Authorities under Reg. II. of 1814 is to afford the Government, after the necessary inquiries, an opportunity of ordering the plaintiff's demand to be satisfied if they think it just, or leaving him to prosecute his claim should they doubt or not acknowledge the justice of the demand. Till the Revenue Authorities have given their final reply, the suit of the plaintiff was held, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, not to have been formally instituted, and the plaintiff not required to reply to the defendant's answer. Emambandee Begam, Petitioner. 24th Nov. 1846. 2 Sev. See EXECUTOR, 4. 18. 22 et seq. 43, 44.

I. INSTITUTION OF SUITS BY.

1. By a General Order made on the Equity side of the Supreme Court at Madras, it was ordered that, "Whenever it shall appear that the property of any infant is unprotected, and not secured for his or her benefit, the Registrar shall, with the previous consent of the Court or a Judge, institute proceedings on behalf of such infant, for the purpose of protecting his or her person or property." In pursuance of this order, the Registrar of the Supreme Court, upon petition, obtained an order, giving him liberty to file a bill on the Equity side of the Supreme Court as the next friend, and on behalf of infants, for an account of the estate of their father, who died intestate, against their mother, the administratrix; and, notwithstanding an appeal against such order, such bill was filed, to which the defendant put in a plea, which being overruled, a further appeal from such decision was interposed to Her Majesty in Council. It was held, by the Judicial Committee, that the order of the Equity side of the Supreme Court being made under the general jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and not under the Statutes 2d & 3d Vict. c. 34. was void, it being against public policy to allow an officer of the Court to institute suits, in the conduct of which he might have a direct personal interest, as in the present instance, by receiving fees on the proceedings and commission on the amount of money paid into Court, and the orders made in pursuance thereof were accordingly reversed. Hosanna Arathoon Kerakoose v. Serle and others. 30th Nov. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 329.

II. COMMISSION.

2. The Registrar of the Court is entitled to commission as administrator of an illegitimate intestate, against the nominee of the Crown, such nominee being considered by the Court to stand in the same position as any other representative of a deceased. Howard v. Hemming. 13th Nov. 1818. East's Notes. Case 88.

3. Where the Registrar of the Court had obtained administration to the effects of a supposed intestate, who, it was afterwards discovered, had left a will, he was, under the circumstances, allowed one per cent. commission on the sum collected by him before probate. Ex-parte Hemming. 4th Feb. 1819. East's Notes. Case 96.

4. By the practice of the Supreme Court the Registrar is entitled to a commission of five per cent. on all sums of money paid into Court. Hossanna Arathoon Kerahoose v. Serle and others. 30th Nov. 1844. 3 Moore Ind. App. 329.

11. Reg. X. of 1800 does not apply generally to all undivided Zamindaris, in which a custom prevails that the inheritance should be indivisible, but only to the Jungle Mahalls of Midnapore and other districts where such local custom prevails; and therefore only partially, and to that extent, repeals Reg. XI. of 1793. Rajah Deedar Hossein v. Rance Zuhooroon Nissa. 24th Feb. 1841. 2 Moore Ind. App. 441.

which a suit had been instituted in the Zillah and Provincial Courts, did not stand amenable to a Court of Justice, or other public authority, for its discharge, under Sec. 8. of Reg. II. of 1802; therefore the Court reversed the decree of the Provincial Court and affirmed that of the Zillah Court.<sup>1</sup> Anon. Case 3 of 1805. 1 Mad. Dec. 1.—Lord W. Bentinck & Hurdis.

14. Where property violently seized by a Zamindár was alleged to be, de jure, the property of the claimant; it was held, that if such averment were true the case came within the description of those referred to in Sec. 11. of Reg. II. of 1802, and was excluded from the cognizance of the Zillah Court. Veeraeethal v. The Sherrangunga Zameendar. Case 1 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 3.—Oakes, Scott, & Hurdis.

14*a.* Held, that no right or title of any description whatever, could possibly be derived to a Zamindár from any orders passed subsequently to the 1st of Jan. 1802 by the Boards of Revenue and Trade, however sanctioned by Government, when such sanction was deficient in that which was most essential to it, promulgation by Regulation. Neither could any proclamations, published by officers acting under their authority, in any shape affect a right actually possessed by the Zamindár, or divert it from that which had been its accustomed course. The Zamindár of Vizianagram v. The Commercial Resident. Case 6 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 9.—Casamajor, Maxtone, & Hurdis.

15. In a claim for a Mirásí, the appellant proved by evidence that the Mirásí had been held by his family for a long period antecedent to the year 1795. The respondent disputed the original right of the appellant, but did not adduce any evidence as to the fact of the superiority of his alleged prior title, nor to confute the testimony of the appellant's witnesses; but insisted, in bar to the right of the appellant, upon a Sinád granted to him by the Collector, and the restrictive operation of Sec. 10. of Reg. II. of 1802; and the Court, deeming both established, gave judgment in his favour. Anon. Case 8 of 1807. 1 Mad. Dec. 18.—Casamajor, A. Scott, & Hurdis.

15*a.* A was employed as a Fakíl by B, a Zamindár, then in confinement, in order to effect his release and his restitution to the Zamindári, which had been sequestered by the then Principal Collector. A pretended to be able to effect these objects by means of bribery, and B assented. B was subsequently, on consideration of his case by the Principal Collector and the Board of Revenue, released from confinement and reinstated in his Zamindári. A sued B for remuneration, asserting that the result was caused by his interference. The claim was dismissed in the Lower Courts, and A appealed in forma pauperis. The Court held that the claim of A was disgraceful, and that the suit was frivolous, groundless, and vexatious. The suit was therefore dismissed with costs; and considering that the case came within Sec. 36. of Reg. VII. of 1809,<sup>2</sup> A was further adjudged to be punished as a litigious appellant, and to be imprisoned for three months. Sadooram v. The Zamindár of Chitterelly. Case 2 of 1809. 1 Mad. Dec. 27.—Scott, Read, & Greenway.

16. Sec. 4. of Reg. XXV. of 1802, which provides that the permanent assessment shall be made exclusively of certain sources of revenue, among which are enumerated "lands paying only favourable quit-rents," does not refer to the quit-rents, but to the lands which might otherwise be considered assessable with the full Jama, at the discretion of the Zamindár. That discretion the Government reserved to itself, and the exercise of it is subjected to the Rules contained in Reg. XXXI. of 1802. Rajah C. Venkata-dry Gopal Jagannadha Rao v. Khajah Shumsoodeen and another. Case 16 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 179. —Scott & Greenway.

<sup>1</sup> From the report of this case it does not appear what was the purport of these decrees; but as the Section referred to prohibits Zillah Courts from trying suits for the private debts of persons not amenable to a Court of Justice, or other public authority, at the time of contracting the debt, it may be inferred that the Provincial Court wrongly entertained a suit which had been dismissed by the Zillah Court.

16a. In a suit for possession of a Zamindári, the plaintiff's title depended upon the fact of a division having taken place between the members of the family. No averment of such division was made in the plaint, nor did the Courts in India, as required by Sec. 10. of Reg. XV. of 1816, make it a point to be established, though some evidence was given of the fact. Held, on appeal by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that there had been a miscarriage, the conditions of the Regulation being imperative; and the decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut was accordingly reversed: leave, however, was given to institute a fresh suit within three years, as the parties had acted under a misapprehension of the Regulation. *Srimut Moottoo Vijaya Raghunadha Gomery Vallabha Peria Woodia Tacer v. ##### 1. Generally.

1. Lands held by a Zamindár for a religious appropriation, of which he has the superintendence, are not considered to form part of the Zamindári, provided the endowment be valid under the Regulations; and the fact of the Zamindár having himself made such endowment does not invalidate it, if antecedent to the Dewanny grant. Collector of Moorsshedabad v.

2. Where A, being adjudged entitled to half the proceeds of a religious establishment, sued for half the mesne profits derived by B during her sole possession, there being no means of ascertaining the amount of B's profits; it was held that A should hold sole possession during a period equal to that for which B singly enjoyed the same. Mt. Rajoo and others v. Mt. Buddun. 8th May 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 13.—Fombelle.

3. A suit was instituted to recover a balance stated to be due on an alleged Swāmi Bhogam agreement, under which possession of the lands was held by the defendants, and to enforce the full performance of the agreement. The defendants contended that the Mirāsi right in the lands was vested in them, and that their allowance for the maintenance of the Pagoda was a mere charitable contribution; whereas, from the evidence of their witnesses, it appeared that it was exacted from them as a Swāmi Bhogam. The evidence adduced not being sufficient to prove where the proprietary right of the lands was vested, nor the amount of the Swāmi Bhogam, supposing such right were vested in the Pagoda, the Court annulled all the proceedings in this case, allowing the original plaintiffs, or their representatives, to commence a suit de novo, if they should think proper, for the establishment of their claims upon the defendants. The Provincial Court having adjudged possession of the lands to the original plaintiffs, which had never been claimed by them, the Court reversed their decree, and ordered that the original defendants, or their representatives, should be replaced in possession of the lands, and that the parties who held possession under the decree of the Provincial Court should account to the said defendants for the produce of the land during the time that the latter were ousted. Anon. Case 11 of 1812. 1 Mad. Dec. 58.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

Kishwanund and others.* 12th Sept. 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 126.—Harington & Fombelle.

10. Where lands had been assigned by the ancestor of A (who had constituted himself Shiwait) by way of endowment for the service of Hindú deities; it was held that they were inalienable by A, who had succeeded to the charge of the trust, and the claim of A's vendee was dismissed. Ram Sunder Ray v. Heirs of Raja Udrant Singh. 30th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 210.—Rattray & Walpole.

11. A distinction is very properly made between bona fide real endowments and those nominally so. The former, for instance, may be indicated by grant with sanction of the ruling power and continuous application of income to the object of dedication; the latter, by absence of such characteristic, by the application of the income to personal use, and by the exercise of individual proprietary right. One of this latter class was treated by the Court as individual property and alienable. Mahatab Chand v. Mir-dad Ali. 19th Feb. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 268.—H. Shakespear.

12. Where A had bought part of the lands of an alleged endowment, and kept possession thirty-four years; it was held that the claim of the heir of the grantor was barred by prescription. 16. Where the office of Superintendent of a Hindú religious establishment had been by usage elective, it was held that such usage must be adhered to in preference to any other mode of succession, and that no relinquishment or devise by the incumbent, in favour of another person, can operate further than as a nomination, which, to avail, must be confirmed by the usual mode of election. *Narain Das v. 5. Not Hereditary.<sup>1</sup>

17. It was held that lands duly endowed for religious purposes are not hereditary as private property. Elder Widow of Chutter Sein v. Younger Widow of Same. 15th April 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 180.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

II. MUHAMMADAN.<sup>2</sup>1. Generally.

18. Wakf implies the relinquishing the proprietary right in any article of property, such as lands, tenements, and the rest, and consecrating it in such manner to the service of God that it may be of benefit to men; provided always that the thing appropriated be, at the time of appropriation, the property of the appropriator. Mooheemul Sadik v. Mooheemul Ali and others. 6th Dec. 1798. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 17.—Cowper.

19. Where, in a claim of the respondent to a moiety of his father's estate, a religious endowment on the tomb of a Muhammadan saint was pleaded by the appellant, but not proved, judgment was given for a division of the estate among the legal heirs.<sup>3</sup> Meer Nusrat Ali v. Meer Casim Ali. 17th Sept. 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 108.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

20. On a claim by A (a female) against B and C for possession of certain lands, as trustee of a religious establishment, it being proved that the lands had been assigned for an endowment, but that the person who assigned them and settled the trusteeship on the claimant was proprietor of only an 11 anna share of them, the endowment was upheld for that proportion only, and possession was adjudged to the trustee. Mt. Hyatce Khamum v. Mt. Koobsoom Khanum and another. 4th Sept. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 214.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

21. An assignment by a Muhammadan for a pious endowment of the whole of an estate, of which he is only entitled to a share, is void, even as to his share, according to the doctrine of Imam Muhammad, such share being at the time undefined; but according to Abu Yusuf, and a whole series of Putana which coincide with him, the assignment of so much of the estate as was the legal share of the endower is valid, and the Court decided according to this latter opinion. Ib.

22. An endowment for charitable and public purposes being a perpetual endowment, it is, according to the provisions of Reg. XIX. of 1810 of Bengal, the duty of the Government to preserve its application; and being excepted, by Sec. 2. of Reg. II. of 1805, from the general operation of the Regulation of Limitation, no suit for its recovery is barred, until, at least, the officer entitled to administer it has been in possession of his office for twelve years. Jewun Doss Sahoo v. Shah Kubeer-oool-deen. 9th Dec. 1840. 2 Moore Ind. App. 390.

<sup>3</sup> The appellant's plea that the lands were an endowment for pious uses being rejected, the Court proceeded to determine the cause conformably with the law of inheritance, of which this was a simple case, an eighth being the share of one or more wives, and the residue devolving on sons and daughters in the proportion of a double share to males. The Court ascertained the whole of the heirs, and included them in its decree, to render the judgment conclusive in conformity with the express provisions of Sec. 13. of Reg. III. of 1793.

2. What constitutes Wakf.<sup>1</sup>

23. It was held that, to constitute a Wakf, or pious appropriation, it is not required, by the Muhammadan law, that the grant should be express in the use of that term; provided the nature of the tenure be inferrible from the general contents of the grant.

24. By the use of the word Inaam in a royal grant it does not follow, necessarily, that the property specified is conveyed in absolute proprietary right, if, from the general tenour of the instrument, it may be inferred that a Wakf, or religious endowment, was intended. In such cases reference should be had to the custom of the country, and the question should be decided by the sense attached by common usage to the expressions.<sup>1</sup> Mt. Qadira v. Shah Kubeer-ood-deen Ahmad. 24th Aug. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 407. —Harington & Martin.

25. Where, from the general tenure of a royal grant, it is to be inferred that a Wakf was intended, the term Altamgha or Altamgha Inaam, does not, of itself, convey an absolute proprietary right to the grantee, Wakf lands not being subject to alienation by the grantee or his representatives. Jemun Doss Sahoo v. Shah Kubeer-ood-deen. 9th Dec. 1840. 2 Moore Ind. App. 390.

26. According to the Muhammadan law a valid endowment may be verbally instituted without any formal deed; and though the witnesses to the fact depose vaguely, yet their evidence (corroborated by circumstances) is legally sufficient. Abul Hasan v. Hájí Mohammad Masih Karbalá. 17th Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 87. —Lycoster & Ross.

27. A general dedication of land for the purpose of a cemetery establishes Wakf, and excepts the same from descent to the heirs.<sup>2</sup> Mír Núr Ali v. Májidah' and others. 30th July 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 136. —H. Shakespear.

28. But the existence of tombs on land, unless the owner had consecrated it, does not bar partition except as to the actual spot covered by the tombs. Ib.

29. An instrument making an immediate dedication of property to the service of the Deity, though reserving a life interest to the donor, is a Wakf, and is valid, though for more than a third of the donor's property. Doc dem. Jann Beebee and others v. Abdollah Barber. March 1838. 1 Fulton, 345.

30. But if the dedication be not to take effect until subsequent to the death of the donor, the instrument operates as a will, and is only valid to the extent of one-third of the donor's property. Ib.

31. Scemle, A Wakf is valid without delivery, and is created by a mere verbal declaration of interest. Ib.

3. Alienation of Endowed Lands.<sup>3</sup>

32. Although property of the nature of Wakf (or assigned for pious purposes) cannot be sold, according to the provisions of the Muhammadan law, yet the custom of many Muhammadan towns permitting such sale, it would be held good by the Court. Fatima Beebee v. Moolla Abdool Futteh. 9th Sept. 1811. 1 Borr. 111. —Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

<sup>1</sup> It is a fundamental principle of Muhammadan law, that, in every ambiguous expression of a person in conveying a right to another, reference should be had, first to the custom of the country, and, on failure of that, to the intention of the grantor, as stated by himself. As regards Wakf this is especially recommended in the Fatawa-i-Aulangi.

<sup>2</sup> There is a case in Macnaghten's Precedents of Muhammadan Law, p. 337, Case VI., in which it was decided that cemeteries and religious buildings are inheritable if not Wakf; and the learned jurist has added in a note: "An erroneous opinion appears to be entertained that all property destined to religious purposes necessarily partakes of the nature of an endowment; but, in point of fact, no property should be considered as such, unless specially appropriated by the owner." This distinction is very important.

33. And an appellant claiming certain Wakf property under an alleged mortgage, the property having been held by the respondent for ninety-five years, and not being able to prove the mortgage; it was held that the respondent could not be ejected, as; though the sale of such property was illegal, it was customary in many Muhammadan towns, and consequently the probability of a sale was equally strong as that it had been made over to respondent's family in mortgage. Ib.

34. Wakf lands are not capable of alienation according to the Muhammadan law. Kulb Ali Hoossein v. Syf Ali. 17th March 1814. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 110. — Harington & Rees. *Mt. Qudira v. 35. A person having duly endowed property for religious purposes cannot afterwards alienate such property. Abul Hasan v. Haji Mohammed Masih Karbala. 17th Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 87. — Lyecester & Ross.

36. The Sajjádéh nishin, or Superior of Wakf property, is merely appointed to administer the affairs of the property, and has no power of alienating any portion of it. Shah Imam Bukhsh v. Mt. Beebe Shahee and others. 5th March 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 22. — Robertson & Stockwell.

36a. Land belonging to a Muhammadan, which is occupied by tombs, cannot be sold in execution of a decree. Baboo Ras Behari, Petitioner. 21st Nov. 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 40. — Reid.

4. Superintendence.<sup>1</sup>

37. The appropriator of a religious endowment has the power of appointing a superintendant: on his death it is vested in his executor, or, should he have left no executor, then in the ruling power. Mohommud Sadik v. Mohommud Ali and others. 6th Dec. 1798. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 17. — Cowper.

38. Although the superintendant of a religious endowment may legally consign or bequeath the trust to his sons on his death bed without any express power to that effect, a consignment made during health is invalid, unless he have obtained the superintendence with such power. Ib.

39. And the ruling power may remove such devisees on proof of misconduct, and appoint a person of integrity in their stead. Ib.

<sup>4</sup> This opinion the Court at large adopted, and it received the concurrence of the Allahabad Court of Snider Dewanny, to which the point was referred. But Mr. Rattray and Mr. Shakespear, of the Calcutta Court, held, that, in case of a removal directed or confirmed by the Government, the party removed had no remedy. Mr. Rattray remarked that no jurisdiction had been expressly given in such cases, and Mr. Shakespear considered that the precedent of Mohammad Sadik v. The Sons of Mohabut Ali was decisive as to the paramount power of Government. See supra, Pl. 39.

XIX. of 1810, appoint a successor in his stead without the knowledge and consent of the Revenue Authorities. Wasik Ali Khan v. Government. 22d Sept. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 110.

<sup>1</sup> The Sajjâdeh is the carpet on which the Muhammadans kneel in the act of prayer. The meaning of the term Sajjâdeh nishîn, which is synonymous with Gaddî nishîn, is thus given by Meninski: "Considens in tapete sacros preces peracturus aliisque præiturus antistes." This officer is frequently confounded with the Mutawalli, that is, the trustee or superintendent of the endowment, although they are quite distinct; the one having the charge of the spiritual, the other of the temporal affairs of the endowment. The office of trustee may be held by a woman, and the duties may be discharged by proxy; whereas the office of superior requires peculiar personal qualifications.—Macn.

45. The plaintiff, alleging that he had been illegally ejected by the Revenue Authorities from the office of Mutawalli of a religious endowment, sued for restoration to such office in virtue of a Tauliyat nâme, executed by the then Mutawalli, who had himself been appointed under a testamentary trust, with a power to nominate his successor. The Court being of opinion that the plaintiff had never been put in possession of the trust under the original deed of nomination and appointment in his favour, and that his personal management of the establishment and possession of the trust had not been established, dismissed the claim; but recorded their opinion, that, subject to the decision of Government, the plaintiff had the best claim to the trusteeship.<sup>2</sup> Id.—Barwell, C. <sup>2</sup> The questions of the validity of the appointment of the appellant to the trusteeship, and of the extent of interference which can be legally exercised by the Revenue Authorities under Reg. XIX. of 1810 in regard to such appointments, were not positively ruled by the judgment of the Court; but it may be assumed that the appointment of a successor by a Mutawalli, himself legally appointed and duly empowered, by the original deed of appropriation, to make such appointment, and faithfully and efficiently discharging his trust, would be a legal and valid appointment; and that the trustee so appointed cannot be removed by the ruling power without proof or strong presumption of corruption or incompetency. ## RESUMPTION.

1. A, a Zamindár, granted waste land to B, on a lease, without limitation of period, but with a condition of resumption at any time on payment of all the expenses incurred by B in preparing the land for cultivation. A claimed to resume the land on performing the above condition, and B pleaded Sec. 8. of Reg. VIII. of 1793, respecting Jangalburi Talooks, as barring the condition, and rendering his tenure irresumable. Held, that the condition for the resumption was legal and valid. Buldeo Sircar v. Rajah Narnarayan Rai. 4th March 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 49.—H. Colebrooke.

2. A Zamindár having resumed a district for arrears, without having first distrained the personal property, or caused the arrest of the defaulter, as provided by Reg. XXVIII. of 1802, and it appearing obvious that he had rendered his fau liable to ultimate attachment by omitting to discharge the arrears, the defaulter, moreover, failing to shew that he was in possession of personal property sufficient to make good the arrear; it was held that the attachment, though irregular, was, on the whole, justifiable. Zamindár of Charnahal v. ———. Case 15 of 1814. 1 Mad. Dec. 94.—Scott & Greenway.

3. The father of A, a Zamindár, granted certain Lákhiraj villages in perpetuity to B. On B's death the villages were stated to have devolved on her son, who transferred them to his sister, and she gave them to her son, the plaintiff, who held them for a certain period, when they were resumed by A's father. The Provincial Court adjudged to the plaintiff the villages in question, together with the produce of the villages during the time that they had been unjustly resumed, and also the costs of suit. A, the Zamindár, appealed to the Sudder Adawlut, who confirmed the decree of the Lower Court, and dismissed the appeal, with costs. Anon. Case 1 of 1815. 1 Mad. Dec. 121.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

4. The resumption of a rent-free tenure, though confirmed by the Board of Revenue, is not valid without the inquiry directed in Secs. 3. and 4. of Reg. VIII. of 1811.<sup>1</sup> The Collector of Bundelkhund v. Hachee Geer. 30th Nov. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 56.—Goad.

5. A Tahsildár in Allahabad having caused certain lands lying within the limits of his authority to be purchased at a public sale in the name of his minor son, and the same being resumed by Government under Sec. 14. of Reg. XXV. and Sec. 9. of Reg. XXVI. of 1803,<sup>2</sup> on satisfactory evidence that the lands were held by the father; a suit by the son for their recovery, supported by the allegation of their having been purchased from the funds of a female who had received him in adoption, was dismissed, by reason of the proved tenure of the father, and the absence of all previous mention of such adoption. Baboo Ratna Chandra and another v. The Collector of Allahabad. 29th Dec. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 280.—C. Smith.

6. Lands granted as a rent-free tenure in Pudargha are not resumable according to the Hindú law; and the management of them having been resumed by the officers of Government, who accounted to the grantee for the proceeds; it was held that the right to the tenure was not thereby affected. The Collector of Bundelkhund v. Churun Das Byrajee. 1st Dec. 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 415.—C. Smith.

7. Quere, Whether, on the abolition of a system of police, maintained from the alienation of public land revenues, the possessors of the lands yielding those revenues forfeit their right of occupancy upon the resumption of such alienations? Appoo Moopen v. Durmarajah Naraina Ramien and others. Case 1 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 431.—Ogilvie & Gowan.

instalment of rent due on certain villages rented by him from A, A attached the villages for arrears, and distrained and sold the property of B, and rented the villages, for the remainder of the lease, to other parties. It being evident, by A's own shewing, that the sale of B's property was not only unnecessary but harsh and vexatious, as he had thrown obstacles in the way of B's fulfilment of his engagements; it was held that, by this oppressive act, A had forfeited all equitable title to the difference between the amount of the arrear due by B and the sum produced by the sale, and also to compensation for any loss which might accrue in consequence of his renting the villages to others, for which difference and compensation the present suit was instituted; and A was accordingly nonsuited and decreed to pay all costs. Rajah Rao Sooreya Rao v. Ennooguntty Sooriah. Case 1 of 1826. 1 Mad. Dec. 517.—Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

9. It was held that the rules for the resumption of rent-free tenures do not apply in suits for the recovery of lands fraudulently alienated by the manager as rent free since the Company's accession to the Dewanny. Sheikh Burkut Ali and another v. Sheikh Khoda Buksh and others. 6th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 208.—Leycester & Dorin.

10. Where two Mauzas, which had been conferred as an hereditary rent-free tenure on the ancestor of the claimant before the Company's accession to the Dewanny, had been illegally resumed; it was held, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that the claimant was entitled not only to the Government share of the rents, but to the absolute possession of the lands, without reference to the proprietary right, in whomsoever originally vested, the grant having been unlimited, although at one time a money payment had been made in lieu of it, apparently by consent of the grantee. Raja Girdhur Narain and others v.

Raja Chuttr Sing. 19th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 219.—Leycester & Dorin.

11. A, a Zamindár, established by law that B's title to hold lands less than 100 Bighás as Láhhiráj was invalid, and that he was entitled to resume and assess; it was held that such judgment did not exempt A from liability to B for profits on part of the lands, of which A had taken possession prior to his right to assess being established. Brij Nath Babu v. Raghu Nath Ojha. 30th Aug. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 231.—H. Shakespear.

12. The plaintiff sued to obtain the reversal of a resumption, made by the revenue officers, of a Nánkár village, held by him under a deed of gift from his adoptive mother, who had herself obtained it by gift from her husband, the original grantee, on whom the grant was conferred by the Názim of Bengal and Behar, in terms (Ba farzandán) which implied an hereditary tenure. The defendants, being the Government and the Málik, or proprietor, with whom the settlement had been made, pleaded, inter alia, the illegality of the gift by the plaintiff. The Government having at one time virtually recognized the right of the donor of the plaintiff, by having relinquished to her the village after an interruption of her possession, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut would not admit the plea, considering that the legality or otherwise of the gift could only be disputed by the heirs-at-law of the donor of the plaintiff. Government v. Maharajah Komwur Baboo Kerut Singh. 16th Aug. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 100.—Rat-tray & Braddon.

13. A village having been granted in Inaám by the Péshwá of the Dákhin, was, after the death of the grantee, seized by the Muamlatdár, or farmer of the revenue, for an alleged debt due to him, and retained until the Treaty of Poonah in 1818, when it came into the possession of the British Government. On a suit institated by the representatives of the original grantee, for possession of the village, and payment of the arrears of revenue so sequestered, it was held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the decrees of the Provincial and Sudder Dewanny Adawlut Courts, that the original resumption was a wrongful act of an individual, and not an act of the State. The British Government were therefore ordered to restore the village, but, pursuant to Sec. 3. of Reg. V. of 1827 of the Bombay Code, with only six years' arrears of revenue. Mills v. Mojee Pestonjee Khoorshedjee. 26th June 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 37.

14. A party having claimed the right of pre-emption in certain lands, and obtained a decree, is not at liberty to withdraw from his claim, in consequence of the resumption of the lands by Government, and the conclusion of a settlement with other parties. Sheikh Soopm, Petitioner. 4th May 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 9. — Reid.

15. Held, that a stipend payable under a judgment of the Court, from the proceeds of lands held under a Lākhirāj tenure, necessarily ceases on the resumption of the tenure by the Government. Ramchunder Bahoo, Petitioner. 20th June 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 32. — Rattray & Reid.

The Government and others*. 6th May 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 159. — Rattray, Tucker, & Barlow.

I. GENERALLY, 1.

II. JURISDICTION OF THE SUPREME COURTS.—See JURISDICTION, 176*a*, et seq.

I. GENERALLY.

1. ARREARS of revenue recoverable under Reg. XXVII. of 1802 are arrears of public revenue, strictly so called, payable by proprietors or farmers immediately to the Collector or other public officer of Government, under settlements permanent or temporary; and the arrears recoverable under Reg. XXVIII. are, first, arrears of rent, or the private revenue of proprietors or farmers, payable immediately to them, or for their behoof to the Collector or other public officer, or to a manager; or, secondly, arrears of public revenue payable to the Collector or other public officer, but not under a settlement with a proprietor or farmer. Anon. 12th March 1829. Campb. Reg. 89, note.

2. Where private creditors exist, their claim to sell the land cannot be set at naught by its indefinite attachment for arrears of revenue. And it was also decided that, though the demand for revenue has precedence of others, the Government can decline a sale only where the property would not realize more than the Government revenue due. Anon. 17th June 1828. Campb. Reg. 91, note.

3. It was held that Government has no demand for any tax, either on date-trees belonging to Wazifahdārs and others holding land in their own right, nor on the toddy produced from them; nor can the farmer of spirit and toddy have any claim, except upon a private agreement with the proprietors, for leave to sell toddy within the limits of the farm, the Collector's proclamations permitting distinctly persons to draw toddy and sell it in the city of Surat; or else, previous to selling it within the limits of the farm, to Plaintiffs and defendant being Zamindars of two estates, separated by a river, and the river having gradually carried away lands from the defendant's side, and left lands annexed to the estate of the plaintiffs; held, that such lands as having been gradually annexed by retirement of the river were the lawful accession of the plaintiff's estate. *Raddemohun Rai and another v. on B's estate, at that time joined by gradual accession to the estate of A, and subsequently re-annexed to that of B by the sudden return of the river to its former channel. Had the river, by a sudden change of its course, intersected the old land of A's Zamindari, leaving each bank still capable of being identified as the estate of A, the general law of alluvion in India, as well as in Europe, would not have entitled B to the land situate between the new and old channel of the river; and the local usage admitted by the parties with respect to Shikast Piceast (literally, 'broken and joined') or alluvial land properly so called, viz. that the river flowing between the two estates should form their mutual boundary, could not have been available to B as constituting a title to land not gained by alluvion. It may be added, that in the common case of alluvion, or increment by the recess of a river or a sea, the Indian law and usage correspond with those of England, and with the civil law. What is gained by gradual accession is the property of him to whose estate the recess of the river or sea has annexed it. What is lost by the gradual encroachment of a river or the sea is a loss without reparation to the owner whose estate is thus destroyed.—Maen.

<sup>1</sup> The principle of these decisions has been since recognized in a formal enactment. Cl. 1. of Sec. 4. of Reg. XI. of 1825, provides

Hurree Nath Rai v. Mt. Jyedoorga Barzain. 9th Sept. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 269.—Blunt.

6. Where a claim was made to certain lands alleged to have been washed away by the stream from the plaintiff's estate, judgment was given in favour of the defendants, to whose estate they had become gradually annexed, without any proof of their allegation that those lands were formerly their property, and had been recovered by the recession of the river.<sup>2</sup> Zeeboon Nisa v. Pursan Rai and others. 1st March 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 316.—Ahmuty.

that land gained by gradual accession from the recess of a river or the sea is to be considered an increment to the tenure of the person to whose estate it may be annexed.

<sup>2</sup> In cases of contested alluvial land the grand channel of a river is considered to constitute the division between the estates; but in the above case the evidence was contradictory on this point, each party declaring that the branch which flowed under his boundary was fordable, while the other branch was broad and deep.

<sup>3</sup> The principle which governed the final decision in this case is, that the general right of fishing in a river (when not otherwise defined) is restricted to the channel of the river, and water considered to form part of it, not extending to adjacent lakes or other pieces of water occasionally supplied by overflows of the river, but not actually connected with the channel of it.

1. If a Hindú sell his father's land in his absence, and while living and heard of, such sale is void ab initio<sup>2</sup>, and the son may recover it against his own conveyance, even after his father's actual death, or presumed death from absence for twelve years unheard of. But the purchaser has his remedy by action against the son for the purchase-money, and the ruling power will direct the money to be refunded in whatever manner it deems most equitable.<sup>3</sup> Doe dem. Ganganarain Bonnerjee v. Bulram Bonnerjee. East's Notes. Case 85.

2. But the sale of the land by the son for the necessary support of the family would be binding on him, as much as though the father had made it. Ib.

3. Where an infirm and foolish man, proved by a reference to his Cast to be incapable of managing his own affairs, sold his house at a base price, without the knowledge or consent of his relations, the sale was set aside<sup>4</sup> at the suit of his widow, and she was decreed to be put into possession of the house, the purchaser from the idiot paying all costs, but being at liberty to recover for any sums he might prove to have actually advanced to the deceased. Jankmaldas Vercedas v. Mt. Mankoonwur. 12th June 1821. 2 Borr. 114. — Sutherland.

4. A sale effected by a person who is not the owner of the property sold, but with the concurrence of the owner, is valid. Kumla Kant Chukerbutty v. Gooroo Govind Chowdree and others. 20th Jan. 1820. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 322.—Leycester.

II. MUHAMMADAN LAW.<sup>5</sup>

1. Generally.

5. The sale by a Musulmán of his children's lands, he having declined the guardianship of them, was held to be null and void, and he was directed to refund the purchase-money with interest, with liberty, however, to sue his children for the recovery of the money if it were expended for their benefit.<sup>6</sup> Moulojee Syud Ashraf Ali v. Mirza Qasim and others. 24th Aug. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 49. —Gould.

6. A Musulmán cannot sell land belonging to his wife against her will, and without her concurrence; but where the husband sold a portion of land belonging to his wife, and she subsequently sold the same land to another individual, the first sale was upheld, the wife, under the circumstances of the case, being presumed to have been a consenting party. Chytna Chordree v. Beer Singh Mahtoon. 21st Aug. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 259.—Ross.

<sup>6</sup> It does not appear whether the father had recourse to this measure. If he did, it would have been necessary for him to prove that the debt was necessary for the support or education of the children (see Macn. Princ. M. L. 69. R. 11.); and for the circumstances under which the sale of landed property by a guardian is legal, see Do. 70. R. 14. That, however, did not come into question in the present suit, as the father had expressly declined the guardianship of his children's property; and the sale of it, therefore, by him could not, under any circumstances, have been legal.—Macn.

7. Where a Muhammadan woman, in exchange for a Champdhali, or necklace, gave half of her property to another person, on condition that the latter should not alienate it, but leave it, on her death, to two individuals named in the deed of conveyance; it was held, that the transaction, being a gift for a consideration, was, according to Muhammadan law, in reality a sale; that the conditions of the deed were not binding; and that on the death of the vendee the property would descend to her heirs, to the exclusion of the persons in whose favour those conditions were made. Mirza Beebee v. Toola Beebee. 5th Feb. 1829. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 334.—Turnbull.

2. Bay-i-Tuljiah.

8. Where a father, a Musulmán, by two separate deeds had sold all his property to his son, and made over to him the purchase-money as a free gift, it appearing that the provisions of the contract had never been carried into effect, and that the sale was invalid under the Muhammadan law, as being of the kind denominated Bay-i-Tuljiah, it was held that the sale was invalid.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> A Tuljiah sale is thus explained by the author of the Nár-ul-Ancár. In explaining the circumstances which bar the competency to contract, he mentions, amongst others, Hazl, or jesting; and under that head remarks, "Tuljiah means forcing, and may be defined to be the straining of a contract, so as to produce a different result from what it outwardly bears; so that the parties appear to the world to execute a sale for some purpose which calls for it, whilst, in fact, no sale takes place between them. Hazl is a more comprehensive term, but the rule regarding both is the same; viz. that competency is conditional, and not necessarily destroyed. Hazl consists in this, that the contractors secretly agree that they should apparently execute a sale before men, whilst in reality no contract is formed.

Mt. Hingoo v. Meer Farzand Ali and another. 5th April 1828. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 307.—Turnbull.

9. A sale of the nature called Bay-i-Tuljiah, to which effect has not been given, and which was clearly intended to serve a temporary purpose, is invalid in regard to the transfer of property under such sale. Hidaiet Ali Khan and another v. His sam Ali Khan and others. 25th April 1839. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 257.—Money & Tucker (Ratray dissent).

III. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

10. Where purchases are made in the name of other than the actual purchaser, it is not customary that there should be any document passing between the nominal and real purchaser as to the trusts or purposes of the purchase, but possession, both of the property and deeds, is delivered to the beneficial proprietor, and these are his title. Anon. 4th Term 1813. East's Notes. Case 1.

11. Where land was sold by the widow of an Armenian, who was also his executrix, for a valuable consideration, by bill of sale executed by an Armenian infant (heir to the testator) jointly with his mother, who, in fact, received the purchase-money; it was held that the conveyance was voidable, at least by the infant, and that the infant's entry and claim did entirely avoid it, the infant having derived no benefit, but the reverse, from such disposition of the land. Doe dem. Aratoon Gaspar v. Paddolochun Doss. 9th Nov. 1815. East's Notes. Case 19.

Should they, after such contract apparently made, differ regarding the previous agreement, one party holding that the contract was fictitious, and the other that it was bona fide, the correct opinion is, that the presumption is in favour of the former, and the sale is to be annulled.—Vid. Nár-ul-Ancár, p. 351. Calc. Ed. of 1818.

III. IS THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Of Lands.

(a) Generally.

12. Where the father of the appellants claimed to recover certain lands, sold to the respondent by one of the claimant's sons, on the plea that the son's act was not authorised, and the contrary appeared to be the fact, from circumstantial proof, judgment was given against the claim. Sheodal Rai and others v. Dlamput Rai. 24th Feb. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 128.—Harington & Fombelle.

13. Where A claimed certain lands as having been purchased by him from B, which B denied, and stated the lands to be the property of a third person, to whom B was agent, judgment was given against the claim on defect of proof, joined to strong appearances of fraud. Lukhiwant Rai v. Birjuath Rai. 25th Aug. 1806. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 157.—H. Colebrooke & Harington.

14. On a claim by A against B to recover a Talook in Zillah Gorruckpore, it being proved that the Talook was sold to B's father, in consequence of arrears of revenue due from A, by a public officer duly authorised under the Government of the Nawáb Vizír, such sale was considered conclusive, and the claim was dismissed. Bishen Shahi v. Urmardun Sing. 23d Dec. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 265.—Crisp & Fombelle.

15. A sale by the real proprietor of certain lands was upheld as valid and binding, though his name had never been recorded in the Collector's books as proprietor, and though the property continued to be registered in the name of one of the seller's relations for some time after the sale. Omaid v. Khyrat Ali. 7th Aug. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 258.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

16. Where a claim to set aside a sale was dismissed, the Court declared that the right of a third party was not affected by the decree confirming such sale. Mansa Ram v. Dhan Sing and others. 21st March 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 38.—Leycester, Smith, & Goad.

17. In the absence of a bill of sale for landed property, and a receipt for the purchase-money, the Court held it necessary that the fact of the sale should be satisfactorily established; and in the present instance, considering the proof adduced by the claimant (who was a servant of the alleged vendor, and probably in possession of his seals) to be insufficient to establish the sale, disallowed the claim. Meerza Moolhammad Ali v. Nurab Sulat Jung. 27th June 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 168.—Leycester & Dorn.

18. By the Revenue Regulations, the Governor-General in Council may, upon the report of the Board of Revenue, order a sale for arrears of a monthly instalment before the close of the year; but in order to warrant that act, there must be an arrear of a previous year, or of a monthly instalment, for which default has been made after demand by the Collector. Kirt Chunder Roy and others v. The Government. 15th Feb. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 383.

19. The taking a security bond, with sureties for the payment of accumulated arrears by future monthly instalments, will not discharge the liability of a Zamindári for such arrears, or preclude the Government from proceeding to a sale of the Zamindári if such arrears be not liquidated. Ib.

19a. The Court dismissed a claim for refund of the purchase-money paid by the plaintiffs for certain lands, which had been sold by the Collector in execution of a decree of Court, but which formed part of a joint estate, subsequently (and before possession had been given to the plaintiffs) sold for arrears of revenue, the plaintiffs having merely purchased the right and interest of the debtors in the property sold, and the Collector not being responsible for the errors of the Court. Government Vakeel v. Ram Lochun and another. 24th April 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 157.—Hutchinson & F. C. Smith.

19b. Held that the mere institution of an action for real property is no bar to the sale of the rights and interests of the defendant in such property, in execution of a money decree given against him. Hurrischunder Bonnerjee, Petitioner. 14th April 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 6.—Reid.

19c. It is not the province of the Civil Court, in applying to the Revenue Authorities to effect a sale in execution of a decree of Court, to specify the exact portion of the defendant's property to be sold. The amount of the debt should be stated, and the quantity to be sold left to the discretion of the Collector. Sheebpershad Dutt, Petitioner. 7th Sept. 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 16.—Reid.

20. A Talook, consisting of 210 villages, but classed under the decennial settlement for fiscal purposes as 74 villages, and assessed at 74 separate Sudder Jamas, was sold by public auction by the Collector in one lot, for arrears of Government revenue, at a sum greatly disproportionate to its value. The sale was made by order of the Board of Revenue, but it did not appear that the Collector had informed the Board that the Talook consisted of 74 villages, or that the Board had authorized the sale in one specific lot. The Board subsequently confirmed the sale. The surplus of the purchase-money, after satisfying the Government arrears, was received and appropriated by the Mâl-guzâr. On a suit by the Mâl-guzâr against the purchasers to annul the sale, it was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, affirming the decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal—1. That the act of the Collector in putting up for sale and consolidating the 74 villages into one lot, without the express authority of the Board of Revenue for the sale of such specific lot, was contrary to the Regulations, and illegal, and was not cured by the general authority given previous to the sale, or by the subsequent confirmation thereof by the Board. 2. That the sale being unauthorized, no implied adoption by the subsequent appropriation of the purchase-money could bar the Mâl-guzâr from reclaiming the estate, on the restoration of the purchase-money. 3. That the retrospective operations of Reg. XI. of 1822<sup>1</sup> did not apply to a sale under the present circumstances; it being provided by Cl. 3. of Sec. 6. that in order to prevent the sale being annulled, the Board of Revenue shall have actually given authority to proceed to the sale of the specific lot. But the Courts in India, having proceeded on the footing that the purchaser had realized more than the price of the sale, with interest from the profits of the villages in dispute, did not direct the Mâl-guzâr to refund the purchase-money, or call for an account of the mesne profits. Such part of the decree of the Court below was reversed, and an account directed to be taken in India of the rents and profits received by the purchasers, giving credit for permanent improvements on the estate; and as the purchasers were not responsible for the illegality of the sale, so much of the decree of both the Courts below as condemned them in costs was reversed, and both parties ordered to pay their own costs in the Courts in India and in this country. Maharajah Mitterjeet Sing v. The Heirs of the late Rance, widow of Rajah Jasmunt Sing. 17th Dec. 1841. 3 Moore Ind. App. 42.

20 a. Real property had been bought from a person who was a judgment debtor, after date of judgment. Held, that as there was no attachment of the property at the time, the sale was legal. Beeper

Churn Chuckerbuttee v. Maharajah Dheeraj Mehtab Chund and another. 27th March 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 157.—Reid, Dick, & Gordon.

20*b*. Held, that a summary inquiry into the irregularity of a sale made by an Ameen, under the orders of a Civil Court, is not admissible under Cl. 3. of Sec. 3. of Reg. VII. of 1825, unless a petition written on stamped paper, as required for miscellaneous petitions to the Zillah and City Courts, and stating circumstantially the irregularity which may have taken place, be presented to the Judge or officer by whom the sale may have been ordered within one month after the sale. Mt. Kulloo, Petitioner. 15th April 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 149.—Reid.

20*c*. Possession is the sole point to be looked to and determined on in a summary investigation to a claim founded on unconditional purchase, or other absolute acquisition of the property put up for sale in execution of a decree; and possession by a claimant, when established, was held to be a sufficient ground for stopping a sale, without instituting an inquiry into the validity of the alleged title; any dissatisfied party being left to a regular suit. Baboo Baghwan Lal, Petitioner. 26th Feb. 1846. 2 Sev. Cases, 247.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

(b) Rights and Liabilities of Purchasers.

21. It was held, that lands lying within the limits of a certain village do not necessarily appertain to the public purchaser of such village, provided it shall appear that those lands have been assessed as part of another estate. Hurischunder Chutterjee v. Mudhoosoodan Soondul. 20th March 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 8.—Harington & Stuart.

22. B formerly covenanted to sell an estate to A, and received part of the purchase-money, but subsequently completed a sale to C, whose name was recorded in the Collector's books.

A survived this seven years. The suit of his son (brought four years after his death) to recover the estate and obtain specific performance, was dismissed, no fraud on the part of C appearing and the acquiescence of A being presumable. Rup Chand v. Bhagwan Datt. 4th Aug. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 53.—Leycester & Turnbull.

23. The lands of the treasurer of a Collector having been sold to make good the amount of embezzlements, with notice that his right and title only were offered for sale, it was held, with reference to such notice, and to Sections 21. and 29. of Reg. XI. of 1822<sup>1</sup>, that the buyer was liable to loss on re-sale, in consequence of his failure to pay the purchase-money, though that loss apparently arose from the claims of others to participate, the risk thereof having been incurred by the buyer.<sup>2</sup> Megh Nath Das v. The Collector of Purnea. 22d Nov. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 238.—H. Shakespear.

24. The purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of Court, of the rights and interests of a Patnidár, has no just claim to land situated within the Talook, which had been granted by the Zamindár rent-free to a third party, before the date of the execution of the Patni, and of which the Patnidár never held possession. Gurneharn Paramanik and another v. Odoyenarain Mundal. 28th Jan. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 281.—Tucker & Dick.

24*a*. The institution of a regular suit to set aside a sale of property, sold in execution of a decree of Court, is no sufficient reason for withholding possession of the property from the purchaser. Beguma Jan, Petitioner. 13th Sept. 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 17.—Reid.

25. The mere fact of an estate having been sold at a public sale for arrears of revenue does not exempt the purchaser from liability to an action for mesne profits during the period of his possession, in the event of the sale being set aside by a civil action. Hur Shunker Nerain Singh v. Kishen Deo Nerain Singh and others. 30th June 1842. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 107.—Reid & Barlow.

(c) Relinquishment of Purchase.

26. On a claim by A to hold at a fixed rent certain lands in a Mahall purchased at a public sale by B, judgment was given in favour of A, on proof of an hereditary right to the tenure. B was declared at liberty to relinquish his purchase, in consequence of the rent of these lands having been erroneously described at the time of sale. Collector of Dinaj-poor v. Gorchund Surma. 23d Jan. 1807. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

27. An auction purchaser was allowed to relinquish his purchase in consequence of the separation of a Birmooter tenure, erroneously included in the sale; but availing himself of the option to retain his purchase at the rate assessed at the time of the sale, he was held not to be entitled to any reduction of his Jama, or retrospective indemnification for rent paid on account of the Birmooter tenure. A portion, however, of the purchase-money, computed to be the amount paid for the tenure, was ordered to be returned by the original Zamindár. Ramdoolah Misser v. Muddun Mohun Bhattacharya and others. 17th April 1815. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 143.—Harrington & Rees.

(d) Bidding of Decree Holders.

28. The offer of a decree holder to take property, sold in the execution of his decree for more money than that closed with the first purchaser, was rejected by the Court, the sale being otherwise unexceptionable. Wahced-oon-Nissa, Applicant. 10th Dec. 1838. 1 Sev. Cases, 83.—Reid.

29. But had the decree holder made the offer at the time the sale took place it would have been accepted. Id.

30. The orders of the Zillah Judge who refused to admit, without deposit, the bid of a decree holder for property under sale, in execution of his own decree, were reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which declared, that as the property was to be sold in satisfaction of the claim of the decree holder, the sum receivable by him must be looked upon in the light of the prescribed deposit and purchase-money. Tahir Mahommed, Petitioner. 6th March 1839. 1 Sev. Cases, 87.—Reid & Rattray.

(e) Liability of Vendor.

31. Where A claimed from B and C possession of lands, as having been purchased from B, C claimed them from C, B pleaded that they were not his to sell; that the sale to himself from C was conditional, and did not finally take effect: but on proof to the contrary, and that the plea of B was collusive, (with the view apparently of avoiding the sale of his lands in satisfaction of a public demand against him,) judgment was given for the claimant. Heirs of Medayut Ollah v. Heirs of Roopchand Rai and another. 3d Dec. 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 262.—Harrington & Fombelle.

31a. The Zillah Court reversed the sale of a Tulook made in execution of a summary decree, which summary decree was itself subsequently set aside, and directed the purchaser to sue the decree holder for the price of the estate. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut confirmed the reversal of the sale, but declared the auction purchaser entitled at once to the recovery of the price paid by him, which they decreed against the decree holder, with interest from the date when the money was paid. Koonwar Satchurn Ghosal v. Ruggonath Rae and others. 5th June 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 172.—Reid, Dick, & Gordon.

31*b*. The plaintiff purchased a Patni from the defendant; subsequently a portion of it was declared to be Lakkhiraj. The plaintiff sued for a corresponding reduction of the Patni Jama. It was held, under the circumstances, that the vendor was not responsible for the loss sustained by the purchaser. Maharaja Dheeraj Mchtab Chund Bahadoor v. Eshunchunder Banoorjee. 7th Aug. 1844. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 179.—Reid, Dick, & Gordon.

(f) Sales and Purchases in the name of a third party (Benami).

32. A sued B for lands, alleging that he purchased them at auction through B, in B's name; that a conveyance was afterwards executed to him by B, but that B had since denied his title, and fraudulently retained the property. The alleged conveyance not being established, judgment was passed dismissing the suit; it being held that there was no other ground on which to maintain it, because, even supposing the plaintiff to be the real purchaser at auction in the name of the defendant, and defrauded of possession by the defendant, such purchase being expressly prohibited by the regulations could not form a legal ground of action, or authorize the Courts to interfere in his behalf.<sup>1</sup> Rammanik Moody v. Jynarain. 21st Sept. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 289.

<sup>1</sup> Since the enactment of Reg. VII. of 1799 the Courts can give no remedy against a fraudulent agent employed to purchase lands at a Collector's sale, in his own name, in an action for possession; but may cause him to refund the amount received in an action for debt. Yet, on proof of a conveyance subsequently executed by such agent to the real purchaser, the Court will cause performance, without inquiring too minutely into the grounds of the transaction.

33. Where A purchased his own lands, which were put up to auction for arrears of revenue, by employing a dependant to bid for them, and the latter, by the authority of A, alienated them to B by a deed of mortgage and conditional sale, which sale became absolute, and A afterwards brought a suit to set aside that sale on the plea that B had exacted usurious interest on the mortgage money; it was held, that as the original auction purchase by A was in direct violation of the regulations, and as A had received more for the lands than he gave for them, even admitting a deduction for the alleged usurious interest, the Court could not judge it necessary to investigate the truth of this allegation, and therefore A's claim was rejected. Maharaja Bishenath Roy v. Kareemoolah Chowdhry. 21st July 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 71. — Fombelle & Stuart.

34. It was held that a Collector, is not authorized to annul a sale of lands which he considered to have been made under a fictitious name, contrary to the regulations, the power of confiscating in such cases being reserved exclusively to the Governor-General in Council. Debee Dutt v. The Collector of Goruckpore. 21st April 1819. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 294.—Fendall & Goad.

35. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlat will dismiss a claim to lands, the purchase of which is avowed to have been in the name of another, contrary to Sec. 29. of Reg. VII. of 1799<sup>2</sup>, though with the claimant's money; but the purchase money is recoverable by a new suit, as money had and received by the vendor without consideration. Dilaram and others v. Roopchand Sahoo. 18th April 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 24.—Fendall and Goad.

36. Where lands, purchased by a father in the name of his son, though registered in the name of the latter, yet it was not registered in the possession of the former, that he sale to B was registered and bona fide his property; it was held that the son has no right to dispossess of them.<sup>1</sup> Amanee Tewaree v. Rai Rughoobun Suhai and others. 5th June 1824.—3 S. D. A. Rep. 363. A. Prannath Chaudhari v. Chandramani Devi. Fazil Khan v. The Same. 25th Sept. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 328.—Braddon.

-Ahmuty.

37. It was held that the rule against taking cognizance of claims to land purchased in a fictitious name applies, not only to the parties who engaged in the illegal transaction, but also to their heirs and others, where the illegal transaction forms the foundation of the claim. Goorchunder Rai and others v. Hurrish Chunder Rai and others. 28th Dec. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 188.—Sealy

38. In a suit by a defaulter to set aside the sale of his estate, the Governor-General was moved to confiscate the same for breach of Cl. 3, of Sec. 29, of Reg. VII. of 1799<sup>2</sup> by the buyers, who purchased in a fictitious name; but he declined to do so, doubting the extinction of the defaulters' right in the property. Mah Raja Mitr Jit Singh and others v. Babu Kalsohal Singh and others. 24th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 192.

(g) Registration.

39. A repelled B's claim to an estate, under a registered sale from C, by pleading a purchase under a revocable sale, which was not registered, and which B impugned, and the Lower Court found fraudulent. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, confirming this decision, remarked, that though witnesses deposed to the revocable

<sup>1</sup> The practice of the Courts does not seem to condemn Benami tenures in the abstract. There is, indeed, a legal prohibition against purchasing lands at public auction in a fictitious or substituted name; but here the transaction was of a private nature. The merits of this case would appear to have depended rather on a question of fact than of law.

(h) Specification.

40. A claim to recover a Birt tenure, on the plea that, as there was no specification thereof in the bill of sale, it was not included in the assets of an estate sold by order of the Supreme Court, was dismissed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the grounds of the bill of sale plainly stating that all the lands, both Khirkiraj and Lakkhiraj, included in the said estate, together with all the right, title, and interest of the proprietor therein, were thereby conveyed to the purchasers. Kishenmohun Banhoojee and others v. Ramindar Deb Rai. 17th Oct. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 197.—Ker & Oswald.

41. The late proprietor of an estate having sold the same without specified exception or reservation, his heir sued the vendee for recovery of the compound, or quantity of land immediately attached to the family-dwelling of the late proprietor, on the ground that, by usage, such land never constituted a part of the property transferred by the sale. Held, that the proprietary right to the land was transferred by the sale to the vendee, but that the vendor was equitably entitled to the occupancy of it; and the possession of the land was accordingly adjudged to him, on the condition of his paying rent at an equitable rate to the purchaser. Ram Lochan Pridhan v. Harchunder Chondree. 13th Aug. 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 98.—Barwell & Stockwell.

(i) Notice and Proclamation of Sale.

42. It is essential to the validity of a public sale that preparatory notice be accompanied by a translation in the language of the country, as prescribed by Sec. 32. of Reg. VI. of 1795.<sup>1</sup> Government and Bal Dut Doobey v. Bheechook Singh and others. 17th Jan. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 5.—Fendall & Goad.

43. Lands being advertised for sale in execution of a decree, the amount of the arrears due thereon was entered at the foot of the notice. Held, that the sale has the same effect as a public sale for arrears of public revenue. Sarup Chand Sarkar v. Raja Gris Chandra. 25th June 1821. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 139.—Goad.

43a. It was held that, according to Sec. 5. of Reg. XVIII. of 1814<sup>2</sup>, a second notice was requisite on a sale being postponed, whether the postponement arose from unavoidable cause or otherwise. The Collector of Barilly v. Hearsey. 22d July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 242. —Leycester & Dorin.

<sup>1</sup> Although this rule has been rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. XI. of 1822, yet the decree has been, in substance, re-enacted by Cl. 2. Sec. 7. of the latter Regulation. The question whether or not the auction purchaser was entitled to interest came before the Court in a subsequent application from the Court below; and it was declared to rest on the understanding which might have taken place between him and the Collector at the time of sale, but Bal Dut Doobey was declared at liberty to make this point the subject of a separate action. One of the chief reasons which induced the decision in this case was the disproportionate quantity of property sold to the amount in arrear; but this cannot be taken as a valid objection since the enactment of the rule contained in Sec. 2. of Reg. V. of 1812, which contains this provision, "It is hereby declared, that sales made at public auction for that purpose (meaning the recovery of arrears) are not liable to be annulled by the Courts of Judicature, on the grounds that the proceeds of the estate have materially exceeded the amount of the arrears due from the proprietors of the land to Government." This enactment, it was contended on behalf of the Government, was declaratory, and had a retrospective effect; but the plea was overruled. There was another appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut connected with the above case. The appeal was preferred by the mortgagees, but dismissed, it being held just that the surplus proceeds of an estate sold having been paid to the mortgagees by a summary order of a Zillah Court, they should refund on the sale being set aside as illegal, though the mortgagees had clearly a lien on the estate, and would have been entitled to the surplus proceeds had the sale been upheld. Reg. XI. of 1822 was repealed by Act XII. of 1841, except Secs. 36. and 38.

44. A public sale by auction of a defaulter's lands was set aside, on the ground that notice of the intended sale was not published on the estate.<sup>3</sup> Bhagwant Singh v. The Collector of Goruckpore. 30th March 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 325.—Ahmuty.

45. Where notice of the postponement of a sale for arrears of revenue was not served personally on the proprietor of the estate, as required by Sec. 5. of Reg. XVIII. of 1814<sup>4</sup>, it was held, that knowledge of the postponement derived from his Mukhtar, which was in proof, did not cure the defect.<sup>5</sup> Maha Raja Mitr Jit Singh <sup>3</sup> The third Clause of Sec. 7. of Reg. XI. of 1822 requires that notice of an intended sale shall be sent by a single Peon, to be published on the estate, or in the Mofussil, in the manner therein pointed out; and the fourth Clause goes on to state, that no sale shall be liable to be annulled on the ground of any insufficiency of the notice given, provided it be satisfactorily proved that the copy of the notice required to be sent to the Court for publication was received by the Judge, or other person in charge of the Adawlut, for a period of thirty days prior to the date of sale; and provided there be sufficient evidence that the notice directed to be sent into the Mofussil was received by the parties, or by any manager or agent on their part; or was published at a public Kachhar, after the manner provided, on a date prior to that on which the sale may have taken place by not less than twenty days; or provided it be satisfactorily proved by other circumstances; or there be sufficient ground to presume that the defaulter was fully aware of the demand being outstanding against the Mahall, and of the intended sale, for a like period before the day of sale. In the present instance the required formality was not observed, nor was there reason to suppose that the defaulter was aware of the demand for the prescribed period. This was repealed by Act XI. of 1841.

46. In sales of revenue lands made by Collectors in execution of decrees of the Court, proclamation by beat of drum is not necessary, since, by Construction No. 601, dated 30th Sept. 1831, it is ruled that Sec. 12. of Reg. XLV. of 1793<sup>1</sup> is still applicable to sales made by the Collector in execution of decrees of the Court, and this Section does not prescribe proclamation by beat of drum. Hyat-un-Nissa, Applicant. 14th Aug. 1839. 1 Sev. 47. In sales made in the execution of decrees of Court, a proclamation of the intended sale, with particulars of the time and place of sale, and the amount due for the recovery of which the sale is ordered, must be made thirty clear days before the sale, exclusive of the day and the date on which the proclamation may have been made. *Sheoghoham Singh v. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 16.—Reid.

48. Held, that the failure to publish notice of sale, in conformity with the provisions of Sec. 12. of Reg. XLV. of 1793<sup>2</sup>, on the property advertised, the sale having been made by the Collector in execution of a decree of Court, vitiates the sale. *Aond Behurree Lal and another v. 49. Where A claimed certain lands as included in a Pergunnah sold to him at a public auction, but withheld by B on the plea of a prior private purchase from the late Zamindar, it was held that the private sale was invalid (although the lands had been separated and assessed by the Collector), as the sanction of the Board of Revenue, which the Regulations require in such cases, had not been obtained, and the Board had re-annexed the lands to the Pergunnah, and included them in the public sale; and judgment was accordingly given in favour of A.<sup>3</sup> *Sham Rai and another v. <sup>1</sup> The particular regulations which governed the final judgment in this case are Sec. 10. of Reg. I. of 1793, containing rules for distributing the fixed assessment upon portions of estates; the rules contained in Reg. XXV. of 1793 for the division of estates paying revenue to Government, Sec. 23. of which provides that the whole estate is to be held answerable for the public revenue assessed upon it, until the division shall have been finally adjusted, with the concurrence of the Board of Revenue, or Governor-General in Council; and, as explanatory of the general rules in force, Sec. 12. of Reg. I. of 1801, which declares that all new allotments of the assessment are to be reported for the sanction of the Board of Revenue, and are not to be deemed conclusive or valid till confirmed by that Board, or, in the event of any reduction of the fixed assessment, till approved by the Governor-General in Council.—Maen. Reg. I. of 1793 was affected, in part, by Act IV. of 1846. The other Regulations mentioned in this note were rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. XIX. of 1814.

50. A sale of the respondent's lands in discharge of arrears of revenue by the Collector of the Zillah was set aside, it appearing that the respondent's estate had, for several years, been acknowledged by the Collector and the Board of Revenue, and entered in the public records, as distinct from the estate in which the arrears had accrued, and that separate engagements had been taken for the public revenue, though the two estates were never separated in the mode prescribed by the Regulations.<sup>1</sup> Collector of Tipperah and another v. Kishoreeram Doss. 5th June 1811. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 331.—Stuart.

<sup>1</sup> To guard against collusion, or error, in the distribution of the public assessment on landed property ordered to be divided into two or more distinct estates, the Governor-General in Council, by Sec. 25. of Reg. XXV. of 1793, reserved the power of directing a new allotment of the assessment, if it should be proved, to his satisfaction, within three years after the parties have been put in possession, "That the Jama was fraudulently or erroneously apportioned at the time of the division." By Sec. 3. of Reg. XI. of 1811 (enacted soon after the judgment given in this cause) the period of three years is extended to ten, for re-allotting the assessment in cases of "fraud, or material error;" and the following provisions are added in Sec. 4. of the same Regulation:—"First, the period of ten years shall be calculated from the date on which the partition of the lands and allotment of the Jama may receive the confirmation of the Board of Revenue or Board of Commissioners, according as the lands may be situated in the districts subject to the control of those Boards, in all matters connected with the land revenue respectively, and no such partition and allotment is to be considered to be final or valid, (as is in substance provided by the existing Regulations) until it shall have been formally and expressly sanctioned by one or other of those authorities. Second, in like manner Tahoods executed for portions of estates, and the correspondent engagements, shall not be considered to constitute distinct estates until the acceptance of them shall have been formally and expressly sanctioned by the Government, or the Board of Revenue, or Board of Commissioners."—Maen. Reg. XXV. of 1793 was rescinded by Sec. 2. of Reg. XIX. of 1814.

51. A public sale of the lands of the security of a farmer of an Abkari Mahall, was set aside by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on proof that the farmer was unable to perform his engagements, by not having had possession of the Mahall, or means of enforcing the payment of the Abkari tax from the vendors of the Toddy, he having resigned his Pottas to the Collector, and it being expressly prohibited by Reg. VI. of 1800<sup>2</sup> to levy any duties from vendors of Toddy without a Potta from the Collector. Sheikh Mozaffer Bahsh v. The Collector of Tirhoot. 12th May 1819. 2 S. D. A. 52. Lands separately assessed having been publicly sold in the same lot, contrary to the provisions of Sec. 3. of Reg. V. of 1796<sup>3</sup>, extended to Benares by Reg. 53. The non-payment of the prescribed deposit on the day of sale by an auction purchaser is not a sufficient reason to set aside a sale, provided the purchase-money be paid within the period required; but a sale may be annulled by reason of its being made on a date different from that which was advertised.<sup>1</sup> *The Collector of Benares and another v. 55. 58. Under Reg. the sale having taken place by the direction of the Government, and there being no fraud on the part of the purchaser, the Judicial Committee, under Cl. 2. of Sec. 4. of Reg. App. 100.

61. An order of Court to stay the sale of property, founded on a statement that the debt for satisfaction of which the sale had been ordered had been paid, is insufficient cause for the reversal of the sale, if it shall appear that information of the compromise was not given to the Court in time enough to stay the sale. Nadir Bibi, Petitioner. 27th Dec. 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 42.—Reid.

61a. An order by the Commissioner of Revenue for the annulment of a sale, made by the Collector in execution of a decree of Court, after it had been confirmed by the Civil Court, was held by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to be a nullity, and the Zillah Court was directed to apply to the Collector for the proceeds of the sale. Gopce Nath Shah and another, Petitioners. 25th Feb. 1843. A. Rep. 148.—Reid, Gordon, & Barlow.

62a. The principal Sudder Ameen had set aside a sale made in execution of a decree of his Court, solely because the debtor-defendants, in their petition of objections preferred after the sale, alleged payment of their adjudged debt to the decree holders. This was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on a summary appeal of the auction purchaser, on the ground that a sale once made could not be set aside unless clear and satisfactory proof of any material deviation from the rules prescribed by law in publishing and conducting the sale had been established, or unless an express injunction to the Collector to stay the sale had been actually caused to be issued by the debtor-defendants from the Court which had ordered the sale, on payment of their debt, in satisfaction of which the sale had been advertised, and when such injunction shall have been duly received by the Collector before the sale had taken place. No such irregularity, or express injunction being found to exist, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut upheld the sale. Ramanahgraha Singh, Petitioner. 1st Sept. 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 205.—Reid.

64. Objections to the sale of property in execution of a decree of a Zillah or City Court, alleging possession on the part of the objector, must be first inquired into by the native Judge who had ordered the sale before it can take place. Harsundri Goopteah, Petitioner. 27th Jan. 1846. 2 Sev. Cases, 317.—Reid.

65. In a case where the objector to a proposed sale pleaded possession under the judgment of the Court, and mutation of names in the public records, but preferred such objection two days previous to the day of the intended sale, the principal Sudder Ameen of the district overruled the same without instituting a summary investigation into the fact of actual possession alleged by the objector. This, on appeal, was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under the Circular Order of the 10th June 1842, and the principal Sudder Ameen directed to investigate the fact of possession. But before the passing of this order of reversal, the sale had been effected, and orders subsequently solicited by the principal Sudder Ameen as to whether he should institute the inquiry, previously directed by the Court, into the fact of possession. He was told in reply, that the order must be carried out; and if the possession of the objector were proved, that the sale in that case must be cancelled, and the purchase-money returned to the auction purchaser. Ib.

The sale of such decree cannot be stayed without the consent of the judgment creditor, unless the adjudged claim be paid. Abhayadebi, Petitioner. 16th June 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 191.—Reid.

SOCIETY
PUBLICATION OF ORIENTAL TEXTS.

THE Students of Oriental Literature have always had much cause to regret the existence of many circumstances which tend to embarrass and retard the prosecution of their researches. To enable them to carry out their investigations to any considerable extent, they have necessarily been compelled to have recourse to Works existing only in Manuscript, of which copies are always difficult to be procured. Even when any of the more celebrated Works have been brought to Europe, they are generally to be found only in some of the Public Libraries; and are therefore inaccessible to Scholars at a distance, without inconvenience, delay, and expense. The state of inaccuracy in which they are commonly met with, renders the collation of several copies of the same Work indispensable; and much cost and labour will always be required to make such collation.

The sole remedy for these disadvantages is, manifestly, to multiply, by means of the Press, the principal Standard Works in the different Languages of the East; so that correct copies of them may be easily procurable, by all those whose labours may have been directed to this important branch of Literature. As, however, the number of persons who devote themselves to Oriental Studies is but small, the circulation of Eastern Works, even when printed, must, for some time at least, be too limited for their sale to reimburse the Publishers; nor can it be expected that individuals will often be met with, able or willing to undertake the outlay.

It has been resolved, therefore, by some of the friends of Oriental Literature in Great Britain, to endeavour to raise a Fund, from which assistance may be afforded for the publication of Standard Eastern Works: and they take this opportunity of inviting all the friends of Oriental Literature—and, indeed, of Literature in general, both at Home and on the Continent—to co-operate in a design, which, if successful, cannot fail to be of the utmost importance, in all extended Philosophical, Historical, and Philological inquiries.

The object therefore which this Society proposes to itself, is, to enable Learned Orientalists to print Standard Works, in the Syriac, Arabic, Persian, Turkish, Sanskrit, Chinese, and other Languages of the East, by defraying, either wholly or in part, the cost of such printing and publication.

In order to raise a Fund for this purpose, the Members will pay a Subscription of Two Guineas per annum: for which they will be entitled to a large-paper copy of each book published by the aid of this Fund.

The affairs of the Society will be managed by a President, Vice-Presidents, and a Committee, chosen from the Members, to whom the details of its operations will be entrusted.

SCIRE FACIAS.

1. Formerly a rule to shew cause why judgment should not be revived was granted, as a proper and convenient way of reviving a judgment, the Charter saying nothing about a scire facias, and it being, in effect, the same thing. Punchannund Ghose v. Kissen Mungul and others. Hyde's Notes. 10th March 1777. Mor. 259.

2. This practice appears, however, to have soon fallen into disuse; and in 1781, on the death of both plaintiffs, after judgment and before execution, a scire facias to revive the judgment was granted to the administratrix of the survivor. Anupe and another v. Radakissen Mitter and another. Hyde's Notes. 6th July 1781. Sm. R. 173. Mor. 259, note.

3. The Court subsequently refused to grant a scire facias, suggesting a devastavit against executors, on the ground that no such mode of proceeding was mentioned in the Charter. Cachatoor Isaac v. Andiram Mullick and others. Hyde's

Notes. 25th March 1783. Mor. 259, SEARCH WARRANT.—See A note.

TACHMENT, 31.

4. In an action on a scire facias against defendants as bail, the scire facias must aver that the defendants are subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, the plaintiff, for want of such averment, not being permitted to go into proof of jurisdiction. Ramlachund Ghose v. Nittanund Sein and another. 19th July 1795. Mor. 141.

5. A scire facias was held bad, as not being brought against the representatives of that defendant alone who survived the other defendant in the action in which the judgment was given; for although the rights of the representatives of Hindús are to be determined according to the Hindú laws, as well as who are the representatives, yet the forms of pleading, when those representatives are ascertained, must be in the Supreme Court, according to the English law. Iloyd v. Hurropriah Dabee, Widow and Representative of, &c., and Parbutty, Widow and Representative of, &c. 22d Oct. 1799. Sm. R. 174.

6. On removal of an assignee after judgment, and before execution, a scire facias should be moved for. M'Intyre v. Currie. 27th July 1837. 1 Fulton, 70.

7. Scire facias was granted to a new assignee after judgment on affidavit of judgment signed, no execution issued, new appointment, and defendant living. Same v. Same. 28th Jan. 1837. 1 Fulton, 70.

8. A rule to set aside an order for scire facias was made absolute, all the defendants having died, and judgment having been revived against the representatives of all instead of the last survivor only. Ramnarain Mooharjee v. Nubhochunder Chatterjee. 22d March 1838. Barwell's Notes, 2.

SECURITY.

- II. SECURITY FOR APPEARANCE, 6.
- III. MÁLZÁMINÍ, 8.
- IV. IN APPEALS.—See APPEAL, 20 et seq. 85, 86.
- V. FOR COSTS.—See COSTS, 27 et seq.
- VI. SURETY.—See SURETY, passim.

I. GENERALLY.

1. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut will not enforce the payment of a sum of money promised by A to B, if the security tendered by the latter for the former, in consideration of which the promise was made, had never been acted upon, even though the promise was absolute. Rajah Jypperkash Singh v. Baboo Sahibzada Singh. 28th Sept. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 51.—Goad.

2. The alienation of moveable property, contested in a regular suit, must be prohibited until sufficient security to make good the ultimate judgment that might be passed on the case shall have been given by the defendant. Carr, Tagore, and Co., Petitioners. 17th May 1842. 1 Sev. Cases, 171.—Reid.

3. Objections to the sufficiency, or otherwise, of the security furnished by the defendant, must be made in the Court of First Instance. Ib.

4. On the institution of a regular suit, by a party out of possession, of a disputed right of succession among several claimants, the Lower Court, under Sec. 4. of Reg. V. of 1799, ought to take good and sufficient security from the party in possession; and in default thereof may give possession to the claimant out of possession, on his giving the required security for his compliance with the judgment that may be passed in the suit. Goluknauth Ray Chandhooree, Petitioner. 5th June 1843. 2 Sev. Cases, 31.—Reid.

5. Held, that if the existence of the will of a deceased Hindú be disputed by the heirs, the case must be considered as one of an intestate, and security demanded from the defendants in possession; and in default of such security being given by them, possession may be given to the plaintiff who may be able to give security. In the event of none of the litigants being able to give the security required, the estate must be attached; the native Judge first to decide on the value of the property claimed, and then to demand security according to that amount. Bamun Das Mooherejee and others, Petitioners. 3d July 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 195.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

II. SECURITY FOR APPEARANCE.

6. Security for the discharge of a trust, or for payment of a debt, given directly to the employer, or creditor, is no bar to the demand of security for appearance under Sec. 4. of Reg. II. of 1806. Cadder, Petitioner. 10th Jan. 1843. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 45.—Reid.

7. In a case where the defendant had pertinaciously neglected and refused, after being repeatedly called upon, to give Házirzáminí security, on clear proof of his intention, not only to abscond and withdraw himself from the jurisdiction of the Court, but of his actually having made away with property in his possession whilst the suit was pending against him, to evade the execution of the eventual judgment; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in reversal of the orders of the Principal Sudder Amcen in charge, who had placed the defendant in the illegal charge of two Piádahs, awaiting the return of the Judge, as well as those of the Judge who had subsequently withdrawn the Piádahs, and called upon the defendant for Házirzáminí security, directed, in accordance with previous orders issued on the 18th Feb. 1845 (from the very aggravated nature of the case), that the defendant must be sent to jail direct if he refused to give the security required by law. Daul Mullie Feridoon Beglar v. Arathoon Harapit Arathoon. 11th Aug. 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 209.—Reid.

III. MÁLZÁMINÍ.

8. Málzáminí security given under Sec. 3. of Reg. V. of 1799 by the party left in possession, is not voided by a dismissal of the plaint in the Court of Primary Jurisdiction, but must be continued until the final decision of the suit in appeal. Mahent Ramkrishu Das v. Mahent Balmohunth Das and others. 5th Sept. 1839. 2 Sev. Cases, 297.—Court at large.

9. Failure in a lessee (after a formal written notice duly served) to furnish fresh security, on the death of his Málzámin, annuls the lease and engagement contracted between the lessor and lessee. Mirza Mahammad Hussun and another v. Forbes. 28th May 1845. Decis. S. D. A. 1845. 178. 2 Sev. Cases, 273.—Court at large.

10. On proof of the intention of the defendant to dispose of property in his possession whilst the suit against him is pending, the Zillah Magistrate is authorized, under Sec. 5. of Reg. II. of 1806, to call upon such defendant for Málzáminí security in such sum as may appear sufficient to make good the ultimate judgment of the Court; and in default of such security, within a specified time, to cause the attachment of his lands and effects to the amount or value of the cause of action. Daul Mullie

Feridoon Beglar v. Arathoon Harapit Arathoon. 11th Aug. 1845. 2 Sev. Cases, 209.—Reid.

11. Property litigated in appeal in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut cannot form the subject of Mâl-zâmini security, in a suit instituted in the Lower Court, under the provisions of Sec. 5. of Reg. II. of 1806. Arathoon Harapit Arathoon, Petitioner. 9th Feb. 1846. 2 Sev. Cases, 255.—Reid.

SEQUESTRATION.

I. NATURE AND OPERATION OF. 1.

II. DISCHARGE OF, 17.

III. PRACTICE IN, 28.

I. NATURE AND OPERATION OF.

1. A writ of sequestration under the Charter is analagous to a writ of execution, in respect of the extent to which a Court of Equity will aid its operation. The Sequestration of the Supreme Court on the plea side, under the Charter, seizes the debtor's goods when he runs away, and therefore operates, first as bail, and next, with the assistance of renditioni exponas, as a writ of execution. It gives the Court, through its Sheriff, the power of holding the property in abeyance to the use of him jus habentis. A sequestration cannot be held to be a mere process to compel appearance. It was intended by the Charter as subsidiary to the execution upon the judgment: for it is given to the amount of the debt demanded.

Nemychurn Mullick v. Mackintosh and another. 27th March 1800. Mor. 317.

2. A plaintiff at law, having sued out sequestration against the defendant for non-appearance, may, before judgment, file a bill against third parties for discovery and relief in respect of goods of the defendant which have been fraudulently assigned and removed to defeat the sequestration. Ib.

3. Sequestration may issue against the property of one who has been returned to England more than two years, if the cause of action arose within that time; and though the real demand be more than Rs. 30,000, yet the plaintiff may limit his claim, and sue for that sum only, in order to save the jurisdiction of the Court under the 13th Section of the Charter. Chisholme v. Bruce. 31st Oct. 1817. East's Notes. Case 68.

4. Where one of several defendants died after a writ of sequestration had issued against his effects to enforce appearance, and before notice by the Sheriff, the sequestration was held to be inoperative. Ramchurn Paul v. Carrapiet Sarkies and others. 17th June 1819. East's Notes. Case 100.

5. Sequestration binds property so that it cannot be seized under a subsequent fieri facias at the suit of another creditor. Rustomjee Concasjee v. Dodsworth and another. 3d Term 1821. Sm. R. 211. Cl. R. 1834. 20. Mor. 322.

6. The same was subsequently held, and the plaintiffs obtained the benefit of their sequestration in preference to a judgment creditor who had issued execution subsequent to the sequestration. Cruttenden v. Dodsworth. Sm. R. 211. Mor. 322.

7. Money declared by a decree to belong to a suitor in equity, and in the hands of the Accountant-General, may be seized by the Sheriff in execution as a debt due to the defendant, the party whose money was in the Accountant-General's hands being defendant at law. Rogonauth Chund v. Bishonauth Ghose. 19th May 1824. Cl. R. 1829. 152.

8. Per Grey, C. J. When a party is in contempt, a writ of sequestration of his lands in the Mofussil may be issued, and the Sheriff will take possession of the rents and profits, and appoint European receivers, who take possession through their sircars and servants. Doe dem. Bampton v. Peltumber Mullick. 29th Oct. 1830. Bignell, 40.

9. The writ of sequestration under the Charter (Cl. XV.) is peculiar to the Supreme Court. Doe dem. O'Hanlon and another v. Nicholas Palliologus. 21st March 1839. Mc 323.

10. And it is not merely a writ of mesne process, but a writ of mixed exigency—of mesne process to compel appearance, and of execution to satisfy the judgment; but it is not capable of being completed as an execution, i.e. of being an execution executed without a further act of the Court. Ib.

11. The insolvency of the defendant, and assignment under the Insolvent Act, after the sequestration, and before judgment, does not prevent a writ of venditioni exponas being sued out under the judgment, nor affect the title of a purchaser with full notice of the Sheriff's sale. Ib.

12. An order was made for the Sheriff to sell the property seized by him under the writ of sequestration, and to pay the money due under the secretal orders to the complainant, as also the complainant's costs in suing out the writ of execution, the process of contempt, and its application. Rajah Burrodacaunt Roy v. Binsosoondery Dabee. Jan. 1837. 1 Fulton, 215, note.

13. A writ of sequestration does not justify the removal of property. Doorgadoss Mookerjee v. Sreenutty Bindobossance Dossee. 30th Oct. 1839. 1 Fulton, 370.

14. An action need not be discontinued on the insolvency of a defendant, if a writ of sequestration have been sued out: in such case the judgment does not affect the insolvent, but only the sequestered property. Church v. Ohoychurn Mookerjee and others. 11th Feb. 1843. 1 Fulton, 142.

15. Sequestered goods were ordered to stand as security after the defendant had come in and entered an appearance before the third proclamation. If a summons have issued before the writ of sequestration, the Court has no power to take bail. Jerahirloll v. Bhoyrubmanth Ainslie and Gompersaud. 10th July 1843. 1 Fulton, 211.

16. Semble, Real property under sequestration in equity may be ordered to be sold. Dwarkanath Tagore v. Sibchunder Roy. 12th May 1843. 1 Fulton, 215, note. Bysack v. Bysack. 31st July 1843. 1 Fulton, 215.

II. DISCHARGE OF.

17. The writ of sequestration to compel appearance, where plaintiff is nonsuited at the trial of the case ex parte, may be discharged by an order on the Sheriff in open Court, which should be entered by the Prothonotary, and taken notice of by the Sheriff. Birdy Khan v. Gunga Ram Paul. Hyde's Notes. 26th Nov. 1778. Mor. 315.

18. A defendant being in custody of the Sheriff at the suit of the plaintiff, but in another suit, such will held no ground for discharging the writ of sequestration. Mohun Hollar v. Fenwick. Chamb. Notes. 28th Oct. 1789. Sm. R. 211. Mor. 316.

19. A motion to discharge sequestration on bail-piece being filed, should be on the payment of costs of the sequestration. Horsley v. Cotton. Chamb. Notes. 29th Oct. 1791. Sm. R. 211. Mor. 316.

20. Where the same goods had been sequestered in two different actions, the same party having been plaintiff in both, and it was moved to discharge the sequestration on bail being perfected in one action; it was held that the rule should be drawn up for the release of the goods as to that action only. Ib.

21. A defendant, after sequestration, surrendering himself voluntarily to the custody of the Sheriff, the Court holding the surrender illegal, will order him to be released, and refuse to discharge the writ of sequestration, and release the sequestered goods. Phillips v. Griffith Jones. Chamb. Notes. 11th Feb. 1795. Sm. R. 212. Mor. 317. Rorke v. Dayrell. Chamb. Notes. 4th Term 1795. Sm. R. 212.

22. An application to restrain proceedings under sequestration should be made on the Common Law side of the Court, and not the Equity side. Campbell v. Kinloch. 6th March 1809. Cl. R. 1829. 150.

23. Where three proclamations had been made, it was held that, notwithstanding such proclamations, the property sequestered should be released upon the defendant's appearance and putting in, that is, perfecting bail, the defendant paying all the costs incurred in the course of the ex-parte proceeding. Bungseedhūr Pyne v. Chintamoney Pyne. 5th Nov. 1821. Cl. R. 1829. 151.

24. Amendment of the plaint discharges sequestration and all process to compel appearance. Bluggobuttychurn Mitter v. Soobulchunder Nundy. 1st Term 1828. Cl. Ad. R. 1829. 47. Mor. 277.

25. A sequestration after summons will be set aside on the terms of perfecting bail, and payment of costs of sequestration and motion. Golam Mahomed Khan v. Beebee Nujjoo. 23d Jan. 1829. Cl. R. 1834. 23. Sm. R. 212. Mor. 322.

26. Where the sequestration has issued after summons, and the defendant applies to have it discharged on entering appearance, the plaintiff is entitled to bail, or that the sequestration may stand as a security. Turrachan Chatterjee v. Rammohun Banerjee. 9th Nov. 1829. Cl. R. 1834. 23. Sm. R. 212. Mor. 323, note.

27. It was held that the motion for setting aside sequestration could not be made on perfecting bail, but that the bail must be already justified.<sup>1</sup> Chandermoney Dabee v. Mudsoosoden Sandell. 16th Jan. 1832. Cl. R. 1834. 23. Sm. R. 213. Mor. 323, note.

III. PRACTICE IN.

28. The attorney for the defendant had applied to the Prothonotary for an office copy of the affidavit on which sequestration had issued for want of appearance, in order to apply to the Court to set it aside for irregularity, and this without entering an appearance or putting in bail pursuant to the 23d Plea Rule.<sup>2</sup> The Prothonotary refused to give him an office copy, and the Court refused to compel him, putting the defendant to comply with the terms of his rule. Heeroo Mull v. Moonshee Janshee Doss. 7th March 1833. Clarke's Notes, 110.

29. The Court stated that it would be a contempt if the Sheriff entered a Zanánah to execute a sequestration, not having any Judge's order, even at a time when the females were not in the Zanánah, but had gone to visit at another house. Doorgadoss Mookerjee v. Sreemutty Bindobassanee Dossee. 30th Oct. 1839. Clarke's Notes, 128. 1 Fulton, 370.

I. OF LANDS.

1. In the Bengal Presidency.

1. In a suit brought by A, the Zamindár of Khurukpore, to recover Zamindári Rusum from a dependent estate, to which B pleaded a settlement direct with Government, it appearing that the settlement with B was made exclusive of the Rusum claimed by A, judgment was given for A, and the appeal dismissed with costs. Roopnarayan Deo v. Rajah Qadir. 1809. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 281.—Harington & Fombelle.

2. Where a claim to a Zamindári, in the district of Bareilly, was admitted on proof of right; it was held, that as the claimant had not preferred his claim against the present possessor within three years, being the period for which the first engagement was entered into, he was entitled (in conformity with the provisions contained in Cl. 3. of Sec. 53. of Reg. XXVII. of 1803) to regain possession until the expiration of ten years from the date of the first lease. Nawab Moolahmmud Keramat Oollah Khan v. Desraj. 8th Sept. 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 37.—Fombelle & Stuart.

3. At the formation of a triennial settlement for the conquered provinces, in 1210, P. S., A stood forward as proprietor of an estate, and entering into engagements with Government, held possession for that period. B, the real proprietor, then appeared, and sued to recover the profits received by A, alleging that A acted on her behalf in making engagements for the lands, and under agreement to leave B in possession of her proprietary rights and profits, but had fraudulently applied them to his own use; but no written or other specific engagement between the parties being adduced by B, her claim was dismissed. Ranee Bhudorun v. He-

4. A claim to possession of a fractional portion of an undivided estate, on the ground of a private deed of partition and a distinct settlement with the sharers for the public assessment, was rejected, as no actual partition of the lands had taken place in the mode prescribed by the Regulations. The Collector of Tipperah v. Gholam Nabee Chowdry. 24th Dec. 1813. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 103.—Fombelle & Rees.

5. The Civil Courts are not authorized to interfere with the revenue officers, or pass orders in a summary manner in matters relating to the settlement of estates. The Collector of Benares v. Sheo Narayan Sing and another. 25th Sept. 1818. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 278.—Fendall & Rees.

6. A claim to set aside a settlement made by the Collector with the sanction of the Board of Revenue was rejected, it appearing that the claimant's ancestor had been in possession as farmer only, and the claim not having been advanced until eight years after the conclusion of that settlement. Qamar Oodeen v. Mular Bulsh. 12th March 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 216.—Dorin & C. Smith.

7. A settlement having been made with one individual as proprietor; it was held that, under Cl. 8. of Sec. 53. of Reg. XXVII. of 1803, a Collector is not competent to substitute another individual without a judicial decree.<sup>1</sup> Murdm Sing and others v. Rughoonath Pathak. 19th July 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 239.—C. Smith & Martin.

8. On a suit by the respondent to be exempted from the demand of increased assessment, his claim was disallowed, on proof that the former Collector had erroneously granted a Zamindári Potta, deducting an allowance for Dehyak and Bhuray, which is the right of the Tahsildar alone, and had been resumed on settlement with the proprietors. But the decree providing that no further increase should be demanded, a review was granted, on the application of the Collector; and it was finally decreed that the respondent should not be exempted from increased demand, but that, if dissatisfied therewith, he might apply for a new settlement. The Collector of Benares v. Baboo Ulruk Sing. 26th June 1824. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 381.—J. Shakespear & Martin.

9. Where a person claimed to hold an estate as hereditary Zamindar, in opposition to the person with whom the settlement had been made by Government, the claim adjudged under the circumstances, permission, however, being given to the opposite party to sue for the recovery of the estate under an alleged deed of gift. Ali Buksh Khan and another v. Kustooree Sing and others. 19th Feb. 1825. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 24.—Harrington & Martin.

10. It was held that a suit will not lie against a Malik or Malik-Mukadam with whom the decennial settlement was concluded in Bhagulpoor, for Chahladari, or Chaudhari rights and fees. Munsumath Chowdhry and others v. Bhowany Churn and others. 20th Feb. 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 126.—Leycester & Dorin.

11. It was held that since the perpetual settlement a claim for Mukadami Chaudhari and Chahladari dues will not lie against a Zamindar. Kulian Chowdhree Raja Ikbal Ali. 19th Feb. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 215.—Leycester & Dorin.

12. At the decennial settlement, A, as farmer, contracted for the revenue then fixed on a village, of which B was recorded as owner. A's representatives effected the record of their names as owners, and the suppression of B's name. Partly on a judgment passed in a litigation between themselves, in which the ownership was claimed, B's heirs succeeded, on special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in their action to establish their right to settle for the revenue as owners; but before their case had been judicially set at rest the village was sold for arrears of revenue due by A's representatives as owners. On a suit of B's heirs, the sale was set aside, and their right to settle for the revenue adjudged, it being ruled that the original relation of A to Government as farmer was really that held by his representatives, notwithstanding the irregular record of their names as owners. Collector of Zillah Tirhut v. Dhiraj Pande and others. 24th Feb. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 92.—Turnbull & Rattray.

13. Two brothers, at the settlement of 1197, F. S., contracted for a village in the province of Benares, under title of Mustajirs. At the end of twenty-eight years the Collector resumed and re-assessed. The suit of the heirs against the Government to recover the village as Zamindars, and hold it at the original Jama, was dismissed, notwithstanding long hereditary possession, and acts of proprietary dominion by them and their ancestors. Government v. Dindayal Mir and another. 23d March 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 99.—Ross & Sealy.

14. At the decennial settlement several Zamindars contracted, in the same engagement, for distinct villages on which parts of the gross Jama were assessed: it was held that each parcel was a Huzuri Mahall. Rup Chand Sahu and another v. Jivan Lal Ray and others. 31st Jan. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 168.—Rattray.

15. At the decennial settlement, A contracted for the revenue of a component part of his estate in distinct quotas, but subsequently, in 1808, under a general requisition issued under the authority of Government, signed a consolidated engagement. It was nevertheless held that each component part constituted a Huzuri Mahall. Maha Raja Mitr Jit Singh and another v. Babu Kulahal Singh and others.<sup>1</sup> 24th April 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 192.—Sealy & H. Shakespear.

16. Where the plaintiffs sued to set aside engagements entered into by the Collector with the heirs of the grantee of a resumed Lákhiráj tenure, designated Sarshikan, and to have the engagements made with themselves as Málikhs, in virtue of their proprietary right, their claim was dismissed, it appearing to the Court that the settlement had been rightly made with the heirs of the grantee, according to Sec. 8. of Reg. XIX. of 1793.<sup>2</sup> Sheikh Akbur Alee and another v. Surruhjeet Sing and others. 25th May 1836. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 68.—Barwell & Hockwell.

18. The Sanad-i-Milkiyat-i-Istimrári granted to a Zamindár does not annihilate the claim of a dependent Talookdár on the Zamindári. Rajah Vasseredy Vencatadry Naidoo v. Muctula Vasseredy Vencatadry Naidoo. Case 9<sup>3</sup> of 1813. 1 Mad. Dec. 74.—Scott, Greenway, & Stratton.

2. If the Sheriff do not deliver possession under a bill of sale, he is liable to refund the purchase-money in an action for money had and received. Semble, If interest had been made it would be recoverable in this form of action. Teagapah Chitty v. Miller. 4th Feb. 1807. 1 Str. 223.

3. The Sheriff being a party to a suit, the fiery facias was directed to the Under Sheriff; and it was held that the Coroner could not insist on the writ being directed to him. McClintock v. De Bast. Cl. R. 1829. 44.

4. The Sheriff should apply for relief under Sec. 6. of the Interpleader Act VIII. of 1841, and not under Sec. 1. The Court will not interfere to relieve him where the difficulty he may be in is the consequence of his own act. Murrischander Bose v. Anderson. March 1842. 1 Fulton, 77.

2. Sale of Ships.

2. It was held that the sale of a ship could be decreed upon a hypothecation bond. Framjee Coranjee v. The ship "Shaw Allum." 16th Jan. 1819. East's Notes. Case 93.

3. And the like decree was made for the satisfaction of mariners' wages. Dickens v. The ship "Elizabeth." 10th Dec. 1819. East's Notes. Case 94, note.

4. The sale of a ship was decreed on the Admiralty side to satisfy the mariners' wages, no person appearing on proclamation, and on reading the affidavits of the promovents on which the process issued. De Garcia and others v. The brig "Minerva." 18th July 1820. East's Notes. Case 94.

3. Masters and Commanders.

5. By the usage of the port of Calcutta, ships lying at moorings with two anchors are required to have a third anchor and cable, ready bent, on deck, in case of necessity during the rainy season, when the floods in the river are violent and dangerous: and for want of such precaution, where a ship, by the violence of the flood, in the beginning of July, broke from her moorings at two anchors and drove against another ship, which she damaged, the master was held liable for the damage, though he might not have been on board at the time and was a stranger to the port, of the usages of which he was bound to inform himself; but, in fact, he had received previous warning of the danger, and had said he would provide against it.<sup>1</sup> Hunter v. Harris. 11th Nov. 1817. East's Notes. Case 72.

6. Where a quantity of Sycee silver, shipped in boxes, was stolen by pirates from a ship whilst lying in the Canton river, and it was admitted that neither the captain nor the crew of the ship had been guilty of negligence, the captain was held not to be liable for the loss on the construction of the new bill of lading.<sup>2</sup> Magniac and another v. Brown. 16th Aug. 1818. East's Notes. Case 84.

7. But Seemle, it seems he would have been liable if the loss had been imputable to the want of due protection and care of himself or his crew. Ib.

4. Freight.

8. An embargo laid upon a ship let to a party at a stipulated freight, does not discharge the lessee from freight during the continuance of such embargo without a stipulation for the purpose. Abbott and another v. Defries and others. 2d April 1810. 2 Str. 104.

9. A freighter was held to be entitled to receive back advances made to the master of a ship which was destroyed by fire during her voyage, a covenant entered into between the parties that the freighters should make advances to the master for the disbursements of the vessel, and that such advances should be deducted from the amount due for freight on the return of the vessel, not being considered as a binding or express agreement to pay freight in advance. Jussuff Balladina v. Holderness. 17th June 1843. Perry's Notes. Case 8.

<sup>2</sup> And this though the exportation of silver from China was illegal, and prohibited by the law of that country in which the contract was, in fact, made; yet no objection on that account was taken to enforcing the contract, it being made between British subjects and for the benefit of the United Kingdom and its Colonies.

5. Salvage.

10. Salvage was not allowed to the commander and crew of a Government steamer where they only acted within the scope of their ordinary duty, as the instructions of Government expressly direct the commanders of steam-vessels even to leave any private service upon which they may be engaged when necessary for rendering assistance to ships in distress. In the matter of the ship "Calcutta." 21st June 1838. ## II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Freight.

13. A party chartering a vessel for a certain term, and keeping her out beyond it, partly through neglect and partly owing to detention of the vessel by pirates; it was held, on the evidence of merchants, that freight was due to the owner of the vessel for the time lost by neglect, but not for that elapsed during the detention of the vessel by pirates. Lal Bhaerchand v. Moorad Khan Kooth Khan. 25th Feb. 1808. 1 Borr. 345.—Grant & J. Smith.

14. A (the owner of a ship) drew a bill of exchange, in favour of his agents and creditors, on B (the freighter), payable on the discharge of the ship or her return to port. The obligation was voided by the loss of the ship, but the house of agency, in whose favour the bill was drawn, had insured freight equal to its amount. In a suit by A against B, for the recovery of freight which had accrued while the ship was in the employ of B, it was held that B could not plead, as part payment, the sum received by the creditors of A on account of the insurance policy. Hinch v. Sonningsen. 20th June 1812. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 15.

2. Masters and Commanders.

15. Where goods shipped on board of a Prahu were lost, as asserted by the owner, through stress of weather, the owner denying his liability for the acts of the Tindal of the vessel, who was also a part owner; he, the owner of the Prahu, was held liable for the value of the property lost, in the absence of proof of a necessary sacrifice of the goods, and on the suspicion of dishonesty or gross negligence. Kessoordass Sheodass v. Prunath Bijabhace. 18th Dec. 1827. Sel. Rep. 20.—Romer.

16. The owner of a boat, conveying goods for hire, is responsible for the loss of goods shipped on board such boat caused by the misconduct or negligence of the Tindal of the boat, though the Tindal be only his servant. Ib.

17. Where the cargo of a vessel was seized in consequence of the illegal act of the Tindal; it was held that the owner of the vessel, as master of the Tindal, and as owner of the boat, was responsible for the value of the cargo. Dhoolubh Premchand v. Pranjeevun Laldass. 9th May 1838. Sel. Rep. 99.—Ironsides, Baillie, & Henderson.

1. The marriage of a Musulmán with his slave girl is of no effect in law.

<sup>1</sup> The cognizance of cases of slavery by the Courts of the Honourable Company having been put an end to by Act V. of 1843, the whole of the cases reported on this subject are arranged under one head without comment. Without for a moment underrating the labour and ability expended and displayed in the voluminous Reports of the Indian-Law Commission on the subject of Slavery in India, or questioning the philanthropic feelings which led the Commissioners, and eventually the Government, to turn their serious attention to the subject at an enormous cost to the country, and which ended in the passing of Act V. of

Gholam Husun Ali v. Zainub Beebee. 20th July 1801. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 48. —Lumsden & Harington.

2. A girl had been purchased, when an infant, from her parents by a prostitute; and having been educated in the courses, and for a long time followed the disreputable practices of her mistress, at length agreed to marry a respectable person, promising to relinquish her unlawful occupation. Accordingly, she left the house of her mistress, and proceeded to that of the individual above mentioned. The prostitute who had purchased her, and who, of course, 1843, I cannot resist the attempt to remove any false impression that may exist in the mind of the reader respecting what the real state of the slave was in India, by quoting some remarks of Henry Colebrooke in the Third Volume of Harington's Analysis, p. 745; his opinion will perhaps cause the candid reader to hesitate before he bestows unqualified approbation on the present, or condemnation on the former system: "Indeed, throughout India, the relation of master and slave appears to impose the duty of protection and cherishment on the master, as much as that of fidelity and obedience on the slave: and their mutual conduct is consistent with the sense of such an obligation, since it is marked with gentleness and indulgence on the one side, and with zeal and loyalty on the other. During a famine, or a dearth, parents have been known to sell their children for prices so very inconsiderable, and little more than nominal, that they may, in frequent instances, have credit for a better motive than that of momentarily relieving their own necessities; namely, the saving of their children's lives, by interesting in their preservation persons able to provide nourishment for them. The same feeling is often the motive for selling children, when particular circumstances of distress, instead of a general dearth, disable the parent from supporting them. There is no reason to believe that they are ever sold for mere avarice and want of natural affection in the parent: the known character of the people, and proved disposition in all the domestic relations, must exempt them from the suspicion of such conduct: but the pressure of want alone compels the sale, whether the immediate impulse be consideration for the child, or desire of personal relief." Sir W. Macnaghten confirms and refers to these remarks in the Introduction to his Principles of Muhammadan Law, p. xxxix.

dreaded considerable loss of profit from her departure, petitioned the Magistrate of Furruckabad to compel her to return, with which request that officer, from a mistaken notion of duty, complied. On appeal from the above order, it was held that the claim of the prostitute rested on no legal foundation whatever; that a child purchased in its infancy was at full liberty, when of mature age, to act as best suited its inclination; and that it was even a duty incumbent on the Magistrate to punish any attempt at compelling adherence to an immoral course of life. 1816. Anon. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 142, note

3. A dancing-girl having left her mistress, by whom she had been purchased when a child, and educated, and having discontinued the payment of a monthly allowance to which she had bound herself by a written obligation; on a suit by the mistress to enforce the engagement, or recover the girl, the claim was disallowed, the girl not being legally a slave, and the mistress not having proved that what had already been received was insufficient to cover the expense of her education. Mt. Chutroo v. Mt. Jussa. 28th March 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 141.—Leycester & Dorin.

4. A legal right to the service of another person can only arise to a Musliman, when the party claimed as a slave, or his progenitor, was an infidel captive to a Muhammadan force, prevailing in holy war. Sheikh Khawaj and others v. Muhammad Sabir. 28th Aug. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 59.—Ross & Rattray.

5. In a special appeal by certain slaves, who appealed in formâ pauperis from a decree of the Provincial Court, execution of the decree of the Lower Court was stayed, pending the appeal, without exaction of security from the appellants, the Court holding such exemption to be proper, with reference to the poverty of the appellants, and their inability to pursue the appeal effectually, if reduced to the dominion of the respondent.

Sheikh Khawaj and others v. Muhammad Sabir. 28th Aug. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 59.—Ross & Rattray. Kewal Ram Deo and others v. Golah Narayan Ray. 5th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 243.—Ross & Rattray.

6. A special appeal was admitted in a case of alleged slavery, where the facts found did not seem to justify the inference of legal slavery. The judgment of the Zillah Court affirmed, in appeal, by the Provincial Court, was, on special appeal, reversed in toto in regard to all the defendants, though all were not parties appellant. Kewal Ram Deo and others v. Golah Narayan Ray. 5th May 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 243.—Ross & Rattray.

7. A claims the descendants of B, C, and D as his hereditary slaves. The Zillah and Provincial Courts adjudge the claim, inferring slavery from continuous services rendered, and other circumstances, and by a written acknowledgment purporting to be from B, C, and D. On special appeal, the decisions of the Lower Courts are reversed by one Judge, because he distrusted the evidence offered to shew services rendered and the alleged deed; and by the other for this, that it did not follow, because the defendants had rendered services, as well as paid rent for lands held of plaintiff, that they were his slaves, for claim to rent, including services, ceased on abdication of land. Id.

8. A claimed as his hereditary slaves B and his family, alleging that their forefather C had been one of the slaves of his family, and he and his descendants, including B and the other defendants, had continuously rendered service, and received support in lodging and small assignment of land. A could produce no title to prove the hereditary servitude of B. Held that, if adduced, the Court could not, on the facts charged, equitably adjudge into servitude the existing, and, therefore, all future descendants of C. Kishn Chandra Datt Chaudhari v. Bir Bal Bhandari and others. 24th Nov. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 248.—Rattray.

9. Under the Hindú laws, a slave, who is maintained in consideration of servitude, is entitled to his release on his relinquishment of the maintenance. Kirteenarain Deo and others v. Gouree Sunkur Dutt. 7th Dec. 1835. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 45.—Rattray & Stockwell.

SOVEREIGNTY.

1. A sued B to recover a certain sum of money and lands, and certain superiorities, and C and D, to be acknowledged by them as the lawful successor and person legally entitled to the Putteerunda or Málikánch allowance, and the immunities attached to the rank of the Colatery Rájah. But it being proved by the record that the claims of A were abrogated by the conquest of Malabar by Haidar Ali, and the cession of it to the Company by his son Tipú Sultan, and that thus the ancient sovereignty of the Colatery Rájahs had ceased to exist previous to the period of the English acquisition of Malabar, and that all emoluments and immunities connected therewith were extinguished by the dissolution of the kingdom, A's claims were dismissed, with costs. Colatery Rájah of Colatnaud Cherical v. Cherical Ravee Vurma Rajah and others. Case 9 of 1821. 1 Mad. Dec. 293.—Harris & Gowan.

2. Where a Málikánch allowance, together with the dignity, prerogatives, and property appertaining to a certain Colghum was claimed by A from B, who had usurped them on the death of the late Rájah, as alleged by A; the Provincial Court held that neither party were entitled to the allowance or property sued for, but that the right of succession to the dignity, allowance, and property was vested in C, the senior male of another branch of the family, who was declared at liberty to assert his title thereto. B appealed from this decision, grounding his claim on an alleged testamentary disposition by the late Rájah; and C, on his petition, was admitted by the Sudder Adawlut as an additional respondent. Held, that the decree of the Provincial Court, which was founded on information obtained from the records of the Principal Collector of Malabar, was conclusive as to the rights and order of succession of the family, and that C was entitled to the Colghum, with the prerogatives and property appertaining thereto. *Malosherry Kowilagam Rama Wurma Rajah v. ## I. GENERALLY.

1. Where a suit was brought by the Pancháyit of a Cast (Sidhpoo-ria Gánchís) to recover damages for the breach of Cast rules, it was noticed by the Court, that the agreement upon which the Pancháyit brought their action was written on plain paper; and it was ruled that, in order to render it a valid document, upon which an action could be maintained, it ought, in conformity with

Cl. 1. of Sec. 10. of Reg. XVIII. of 1827, to have been stamped, and the
Pancháyit were nonsuited, with costs.
Deojee Madomjee v. Banubhase Rughoonath. 19th June 1832. Sel. Rep.
108.—Ironsides, Baillie, & Henderson.

2. In a case of succession, A and
B, as joint heirs, claim and obtain a share (one-fourth) of an estate. On appeal of the defendant, the Court awarded to A solely a share (one-third) to which he was legally entitled, exceeding that decreed to him and B jointly by the Lower Court.
Under the circumstances, the complement of stamp duty was not exacted.
*Laxmi Narayan Singh and another
v. Tulsi Narayan Singh and others.*
9th April 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep.
282.—Rattray & Walpole.

3. Per Greenhill, 4th J.—A person suing on a small stamp can recover as much as that stamp will carry. *Weeroopakshapa Ayah v.
Bheemana.* Nov. 1836. Sel. Rep.
168.

4. Held, that the Sicea Rupee is to be taken at par with the Company's Rupee in estimating the amount of stamp duty leviable on actions instituted in the Company's Courts, and is not subject to any rate of exchange for intrinsic difference. And where
A laid his appeal in Sicea Rs. 9639 on a stamp of Rs. 250, and B pleaded that the amount appealed from ought to have been reduced to Company's
Rs. 10,281, and a stamp of Rs. 350 used, his plea was overruled. *Nil-madhob Ghose v. Kriskiochundra the stamp required for the plaint, in has been passed, is unauthorized.

4b. Held, that the copy kept for record in the Court in lieu of the original, of a general power of attorney to act in more than one Court, should be written on plain paper. Smith, Petitioner. 12th Feb. 1844. S. D.
A. Sum. Cases, 56.—Reid.

5. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut ordered the refund of the value of a supplementary stamp, which was filed by the plaintiff after his suit had, as subsequently proved, been lost by default, and summarily altered the amount of the Vakil's fees, which had been allowed by the Lower Court in contravention of Sec. 31. of Reg.
XXVII. of 1814. *Chintamun Awus-

II. CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES.

2. A Statute restricting Courts of Justice from hearing and determining suits upon certain contracts not entered into without the consent of Government, and not registered in a particular manner, does not render those contracts illegal; and therefore, when that Statute has been repealed, such contracts may be enforced in Courts of Justice, although entered into whilst the Statute was in force. Gopce Mohun Takoor v. Raja Radhanat. 8th Jan. 1834. 2 Knapp, 228.

3. Semble, The remedy given by the 53d Geo. III. c. 165. Sec. 105. is concurrent with the remedy under the 9th Geo. IV. c. 74. Sec. 48. In the matter of Russell. 5th Nov. 1838. 1 Fulton, 362.

III. PARTICULAR STATUTES.

1. Of Enrolments.

4. The Statute of Enrolments, 27th Henry VIII. c. 10., was held not to extend to India. Doe dem. Savage v. Bancharam Tagore. Chamb. Notes. 28th March 1785. Mor. 70.

<sup>1</sup> The general rule, however, appears to be, that the law, as it existed when the action was commenced, must decide the rights of the parties to the suit, unless the Legislature in the Statute passed pendente lite express a clear intention to vary the relation of litigant parties to each other.—Mor.

2. Of Fraudulent Alienation.

5. Semble, The Statute 13th Eliz. c. 5. appears to be considered as extending to India. Johnston v. Morris. Hyde's Notes. Chamb. Notes. 23d July 1787. Mor. 358.

3. Of Uses.

6. The Statute of Uses was held to be applicable to the lands of British subjects in India. Doe dem. Savage v. Bancharam Tagore. Chamb. Notes. 28th March 1785. Mor. 70.

4. Of Gaming.

7. Quere, Whether the Statute 16th Car. II. extends to India. Ramchurn Chuckerbutty v. Radamohun Chuckerbutty. Hyde's Notes. 7th July 1781. Mor. 353.

8. In an action to recover a sum lost at play the question was not decided as to whether the Statutes of 16th Car. II. c. 7. and 9th Anne, c. 14. extended to India; but judgment was given for the plaintiff, on the ground that the Statute ought to have been specially pleaded. Ledlie and another, v. Jones. Chamb. Notes. 21st Jan. 1794. Mor. 354.

9. In an action against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, accepted for a gaming debt, judgment was given for the plaintiff, on the principle stare decisis: this leaves it doubtful whether the decision was come to on the general principle that the Statute does not extend to India, or upon the ground that the Statute ought to have been pleaded. However, as the argument proceeded entirely on the general question, and the point of pleading was not raised, this case seems to uphold the inference that the Statute does not extend to India. Cullen v. Swinhoe. Chamb. Notes. 26th Oct. 1795. Mor. 354.

10. In an action of assumpsit for money lost on a wager (A.D. 1782) there was a verdict for the defendant, apparently on the evidence. Taylor

5. Of Frauds.

11. The Statute of Frauds, requiring three witnesses to a will of realty of British subjects, was held to extend to India. Doe dem. Savage v. Bancharam Thakoor. Chamb. Notes. 28th March 1785. Mor. 70. East's Notes. Case 63.

6. 6th Geo. I. c. 18.

12. The Bubble Act, 6th Geo. I. c. 18. s. 18. et seq., was held not to extend to India. Horsley v. Cotton. Chamb. Notes. 15th Nov. 1781. Sm. R. 152. Mor. 364.

7. 2d Geo. II. c. 25. s. 3.

13. In an indictment for stealing a bill of exchange on the Company's Treasury there was a difference of opinion on the Bench as to whether the Statute extended to Bengal; but the indictment was allowed to stand, and the prisoner was tried and found guilty.<sup>1</sup> Rex v. Colliperaud Ghose. Hyde's Notes. 23d Dec. 1786. Mor. 356.

8. Of Mortmain.

14. Semble, That the Statute of Mortmain does not extend to India. The Mayor of Lyons and others v. The East-India Company. 12th Dec. 1836. 1 Moore, 175.

9. 24th Geo. II. c. 44.

15. It was held that the Statute 24th Geo. II. c. 44. extended to India; and that the Justices of the Supreme Court, acting as Justices of the Peace, came within it; and that constables, in executing warrants issued by them,

10. 21st Geo. III. c. 70.

16. The 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 24., protecting Provincial Magistrates in India from actions for any wrong or injury done by them in the exercise of their judicial offices, does not confer unlimited protection, but places them on the same footing as those of English Courts of a similar jurisdiction, and only gives them an exemption from liability when acting bona fide in cases in which they have mistakenly acted without jurisdiction. Calder v. Hallett. 8th July 1840. 3 Moore, 28. 2 Moore Ind. App. 293.

11. 6th Geo. IV. c. 16., and 2d and 3d Will. IV. c. 114.

17. The Statutes 6th Geo. IV. c. 16., and 2d and 3d Will. IV. c. 114., do not extend to India. Wyatt v. Rooplool Mullick. 5th Feb. 1834. Mor. 367. Clark v. Baboo Rouplaud Mullick. 11th Dec. 1840. 3 Moore, 253. 2 Moore Ind. App. 263.

12. 9th Geo. IV. c. 73.

18. Under the 40th Section of the Indian Insolvent Act, 9th Geo. IV. c. 73., a claim for alimony cannot be proved. Gonsalves v. Gonsalves. 8th Nov. 1841. 1 Fulton, 392.

STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.

1. Goods taken up on credit from a merchant, and deposited with the buyer's agent, become the property of the buyer, and do not revert to the seller in the event of the buyer's failure before payment for them; and an order by the buyer in such case for their delivery to a third person was held good against the claim of the seller for their recovery. Hurree Bhaee Dhoollubh v. Bhikaree Bho-

kun. 12th March 1821. 2 Borr. 3. —Elphinston.

2. Goods contracted to be sold and delivered "free on board," to be paid for by cash or bills at the option of the purchasers, were delivered on board, and receipts taken from the mate by the lighterman employed by the sellers, who handed the same over to them. The sellers appraised the purchasers of the delivery, who elected to pay for the goods by a bill, which, the sellers having drawn, was duly accepted by the purchasers. The sellers retained the mate's receipts for the goods, but the master signed the bill of lading in the purchasers' names, who, while the bill they accepted was running, became insolvent. In such circumstances it was held, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council (reversing the verdict and judgment of the Supreme Court at Bombay), that trover would not lie for the goods, for that on their delivery on board the vessel they were no longer in transitu, so as to be stopped by the sellers; and that the retention of the receipts by the sellers was immaterial, as, after their election to be paid by a bill, the receipts of the mate were not essential to the transaction between the seller and purchaser. Fram-jee Cowas-jee v. Thompson and another. 21st June 1845. 3 Moore Ind. App. 422.

I. HINDÚ LAW.

1. A creditor is bound by the Hindú law first to establish his demand against the original debtor before he can come upon the security for that debtor to pay the debt. Bhace Shah Keshoor v. Rajkoonmur. 6th Nov. 1812. 1 Borr. 93.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, Elphinston, & Bell.

1a. A security bond, executed by one member of a joint undivided Hindú family, was held to be binding on the other members of the same family, it appearing to the Court that the separation pleaded in bar to the claim was not established, and moreover deeming it to have been fraudulently alleged in order to evade payment of the debt. Jhyutee Ram Misser and others v. Raja Mhyppal Sing and another. 8th Nov. 1819. 2S. D. A. Rep. 316.—Fendall & Goad.

2. Held, that by the Hindú law the estate of a deceased surety, who engages to fulfil an obligation in the event of default of his principal, is liable for the debts of his principal, accruing on the engagement for the fulfilment of which the surety became responsible. Chattoorbhoj Ramanooj Doss v. Mohunt Hurnerain Doss and others. 13th Feb. 1841. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 15.—D. C. Smyth & Biscoe.

II. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

3. In an action upon a recognizance bond, entered into by the defendant and his sureties by the 68th Equity Rule,<sup>1</sup> to account for the estate of an infant of whom he had been appointed guardian, and accounts were proved filed by defendant to a certain date, and omissions of money received, but the account was not finally settled so as to fix with certainty the extent of the liability of the sureties; the Court gave judgment generally for the plaintiff upon the recognizance, with a stay of execution, and subject to the further order of the Court; but by consent of the parties it was referred to the Master to take an account in order to ascertain the sum. Sir W. Burroughs v. Gopeenath Bose and others. 29th Jan. 1819. East's Notes. Case 24.

2. Liability of Surety.

4. Held, that a mercantile firm is good security for money to be paid out of Court, but the members of it should be made individually liable; and the Court intimated that one firm could not be taken as security for more than one lac of rupees. Anon. 11th March 1839. Barwell's Notes, 15.

3. Liability of Principal.

5. When a surety has paid money for his principal he can recover it on the common money counts, and need not resort to the special contract.

III. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

1. Generally.

6. The surety of a fictitious lessee is not entitled to sue for profits on the plea that the lease had been unjustly cancelled, and that he (the plaintiff) was the real lessee. Koonjbeharee Lal v. Government. 26th March 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 85.—C. Smith.

7. Title deeds in deposit as a further assurance for money lent on a Samedastkhatt cannot be considered to tie up the property as in mortgage. Muncharambhaee Jugceerundas v. Moola Kutboodeen Hussain and another. 26th Sept. 1838. Sel. Rep. 139.—Greenhill.

8. A treasurer of a Collector having embezzled a sum of money, his security was called upon to make good the amount deficient. He deposited it, and received from the Collector three monetary obligations, the property of the treasurer, towards the reimbursement of the sum paid by him. Subsequently Government absolved the surety, and directed repayment of the amount deposited by him. On being required by the Collector to restore the money obligations he declined to do so, and requested that the nominal value of them might be deducted from the amount payable to him. Held, that the Government was absolved from all liability under the obligations in the event of the surety being unable to realise the sums due on them from the parties who executed them. Sulleemoollah Chowdree v. Prannath Chowdree. 18th Sept. 1843. 7 S. D. A. Rep. 134.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

2. Liability of Surety.

9. In an action brought to recover from the sureties of a stamp Muharrir a sum of money alleged to have been embezzled by him from the proceeds of the sale of stamped paper, the plea urged by one of the defendants of fresh securities having been obtained subsequent to his undertaking, on account of his security being considered insufficient, does not entitle him to exemption from his original obligation, the security bond never having been cancelled. Rance Kishenmunnee v. Battye. 29th Aug. 1816. 2 S. D. A. Rep. 195.—Ker & Oswald.

10. And it was afterwards held that a call for further security, in consequence of that already tendered being insufficient, does not absolve the original sureties from responsibility, so long as the security bonds executed by them are not actually rejected or cancelled. Salt Agent of Twenty-four Pergunnahs v. Chunder Seekhar Roy and others. 27th Jan. 1840. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 279.—Lee Warner & Dick.

11. The surety of a native officer employed under a Collector is not liable to make good a defalcation discovered after the death of such native officer, according to the provisions of Sec. 16. of Reg. III. of 1794. The Collector of Moorshedabad v. Lalla Sohan Lal. 3d Jan. 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 65.—C. Smith.

12. In a suit brought by certain Hindú proprietors against the Collector and the surety of their co-partner (who was treasurer, and had defaulted and absconded) for the recovery of their shares of the joint property which had been sold on account of the defalcation, judgment was given in favour of the plaintiffs; and it was held that the surety was solely liable, he having pointed out the property as exclusively belonging to the defaulter. Meer Ashruf Ali v. Mt. Gourmunnee and others. 9th July 1821. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 98.—Goad.

13. A person introducing another to a merchant as the purchaser of goods, and signing the inventory himself, was held liable to the merchant for the value of the goods, on the purchaser absconding without payment; the signed inventory being considered, under the circumstances, as a receipt for the goods. Kasseedas Husechulaz v. Keeka Lal Bhace. 16th May 1822. 2 Borr. 230.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

14. Judgment against a person alleged to be the security of a native officer, a defaulter, was reversed, no investigation having been made by the Court below on his denial, and the fact not admitting of satisfactory proof. Mt. Ram Sona v. Chester. 27th Aug. 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 169.—Goad & Dorin.

15. Where a commission, the amount of which was fluctuating and uncertain, was substituted for a fixed and settled salary, payable to A for furnishing Grām for the Commissariat department, and such substitution was made without the privity and consent of B, A's surety; it was held that B was released from his obligation. Condasmanny Moodely v. M'Leod. Case 7 of 1826. 1 Mad. Dec. 552. — Grant, Cochrane, & Oliver.

16. A becomes surety for B for the performance of a particular service, specified in the security bond. Held, that A's obligation cannot be extended beyond that service, he being surety for B's faithful performance of that service, and no other. Id.

17. Where the Divān of an agent for saltpetre had executed an engagement, making himself responsible for the fulfilment of their engagements by the contractors, who had received advances for the supply of that article, they having already furnished security; it was held that an action by the agent would lie against the Divān, without reference to the other securities. The Company's Agent for Saltpetre v. Rai Neehnunee Mitter and another. 28th May 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 238. — Leycester & Dorin.

18. Under the general denomination of Hāzir and Māl Zāmin, a surety answerable for another, who has contracted for service, is liable for special loss from his misconduct; as though, for instance, he should desert with his employer's goods. Jivan Sarang v. Paine. 6th Jan. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 1.—Achmuty & Dawes.

19. An undertaking to pay a creditor, and assignee of an annuitant, a portion of his pension, imports no liability beyond the life of the annuitant. Mahant Gangot Gir v. Chhem Karan Kumari and others. 14th June 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 35.—Turnbull.

20. The Zillah Judge having exempted the security of a salt Gumāshtah from liability to payment of the value of deficient salt, on the ground that the security bond specified only "the acting Gumāshtah," while it was not clear whether the embezzlement took place while the Gumāshtah was merely "acting" or confirmed in his office; the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut reversed the order, it appearing that, from the whole tenour of the deed, the surety clearly made himself responsible for any deficiency that might occur during the period his principal was in charge of the Golahs or salt stores; the surety, moreover, not having made any application or reference to the agent which intimated that he considered his responsibility at an end when the Gumāshtah was confirmed in his office. Salt Agent of Twenty-four Pergunnahs v. Moolvee Gholam Yuhia and others. 27th Feb. 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 150. — Hutchinson & F. C. Smith.

21. A party who had tendered security for an officer of a Collector's establishment was held to be responsible for the amount of an embezzlement made by his principal, although the Collector had omitted to put his signature to the bond, and to make inquiry respecting the property, a schedule of which was mentioned in it, as every thing necessary to render the deed binding upon the surety, viz. his signing and tendering it voluntarily, had been observed, and no express order rejecting it had ever been passed. Ram Hurree Dutt v. The Collector of Sylhet. 2d March 1837. 6 S. D. A. Rep. 153.—F. C. Smith.

22. Held that sureties of a Treasurer of a Zillah Court are responsible for defalcations and embezzlements made during the period they had guaranteed the faithful and honest administration of his office by the Treasurer, notwithstanding an acquittance from all liability granted by the Lower Court. Tarnee Parshad Narayan Bhattacharjya, Applicant. 19th June 1840. 1 Sev. Cases, 21.—Halhed & D. C. Smyth.

22a. The joint surety of a farmer, against whom, with his joint sureties, a decree had been given for arrears of rent, cannot be absolved from liability on payment of half the amount, the principal and each of the sureties being severally liable for the full amount of the decree, until it has been completely satisfied. Puddum Lochun Mullic, Petitioner. 6th April 1841. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 5.—Reid.

22b. A prisoner confined in jail, in execution of a decree, may be released, with the consent of the decree holder, on bail for his personal appearance, and the surety may be summarily proceeded against on failure to produce the party bailed. Ram Narain Mokerjee, Petitioner. 14th April 1842. S. D. A. Sum. Cases, 27.—Tucker & Reid.

3. Discharge of Surety.

23. On occasion of further caution exacted, A became surety for B, the Collector's treasurer. Subsequently to the death of A, C and others (on different occasions) became sureties, B evaded, and the deficit of his accounts was levied on C's estate. Held, that A's estate was discharged, and C had no resource on his heirs (the clause them binding notwithstanding) for defect of community and special covenant as to continued liability. Raj Kumari Bibi v. Rai Bijai Kishn. 22d June 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 125.—Turnbull & Ross.

24. A covenanted with the Government that B, the Collector's treasurer, should honestly administer his office of trust, and made himself answerable for any deficit due by B. A has no right to claim prospective discharge from his liability, unless, in claiming such discharge, he prove such misconduct of B. Prannauth Chaudhari v. The Collector of Zilla Jessore. 10th Jan. 1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 254.—H. Shakespear, Walpole, Barwell, & Halhed. (Ross & Rattray dissent.)

25. Security of five individuals, tendered by a plaintiff on appeal from the Zillah Court, having been reported by the Nazir to be insufficient, the security bond of an additional surety was offered, and, being reported sufficient, was accepted by the Zillah Court. An appeal having been lodged against the sufficiency of this new security, and the Provincial Court having pronounced it insufficient, it was referred back to the Zillah Court, with directions that, unless sufficient security were given, possession of the property in dispute should be delivered up to the Collector. The Zillah Court, upon further investigation, being satisfied with the sufficiency of the additional surety, a security bond was executed in that Court by the appellant, the additional surety, alone, the other five sureties having failed to perfect their securities. On application, after the decision of the cause, and pending an appeal to the King in Council by the appellant, to be discharged from the liability of his suretyship on the ground that the rejection of his security by the Provincial Court for insufficiency thenceforth rendered his security null and void; and that the acceptance of his security alone by the Zillah Court, without the other five sureties, was without his knowledge and consent; it was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, affirming the judgment of the Court below, that the security bond being on record was not voided by the rejection by the Provincial Court on its supposed insufficiency; the Zillah Court having revived the same by their acceptance of the appellant as surety, and he having taken no steps to discharge his liability by having the security bond taken off the file. Rajah Gopal Inder Narain Roy v. Rajah Jagannath Gurg. 10th Dec. 1839. 2 Moore Ind. App. 311.

4. Liability of Principal.

26. Judgment having been given for the recovery of a debt alleged to have accrued on the estate of a minor, against a person who had voluntarily become his security, and which debt the minor denied to have been due (he not having been cognizant of the suit); it was held not to be sufficient to establish the reality of the debt, and consequently not to make it necessary for the minor to refund the amount; with a reservation, however, that if, on the production of accounts, it could be proved that the money were in reality advanced for the estate, the security would be entitled to credit for it. Ochubamund Gosaen v. Hurindernaraen Bhoop. 29th April 1808. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 234.—Harrington & Fombelle.

27. A sale having been made by a debtor to his surety, and set aside as having been extorted by violence, the Court will nevertheless compel the debtor to pay to his surety the amount (principal and interest) which had been borrowed on the credit of the surety, declaring at the same time that the latter should be responsible to the original creditor. Mullick Ahmad Khan v. Pudum Singh and others. 11th June 1822. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 156.—Goad & Dorin.

28. With a view to procure the execution of a decree passed in favour of the respondents, but which had been appealed from to the King in Council, the appellant's father became surety for the ultimate award; in consideration of which he obtained from the respondents an engagement to pay to him the sum of Rs. 20,000, which sum was stated to have been borrowed from a third person on the credit of the appellant's father. The respondents failing to pay this sum at the time stipulated in their bond, the appellant was served with a notice that he would be sued for the same in the Supreme Court; whereupon he paid the amount. It was held that, in this case, the respondents were liable to refund to the appellant the amount so paid by him, together with the charge for the notice, without reference to the fact, whether the amount of the bond were actually realized by the appellant's father or not. Oomachurn Bunkhojra v. Lukhee Narain and others. 3d Oct. 1827. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 263.—Sealey.

29. It was held, in a case regarding the order in which a decree is to be executed against the heirs of the Názir of a Civil Court, who had given in a false report of a surety's property, that the execution should proceed first against the principal in the first degree, then against the surety, and then against the heirs of the late Názir (who had died in the interim) only in the event of failure to recover the amount from the principals and surety.<sup>1</sup> Mudabee Daseen,

<sup>1</sup> This action (by the decree holder against the surety and the heirs of the Názir, the principals having made default in payment of the amount of the decree) also included among the defendants the heirs of the party on whose security the Názir had been appointed to his situation; but it was held, on appeal, by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the 8th July 1841, that those persons could not be made responsible, as, under the terms of the security bond, the sureties for the Názir could only be made accountable for losses caused by any act of embezzlement or malversation on the part of the Názir of the funds or property entrusted

TITLE.

1. A piece of land locally situated within a certain Mootah was claimed by A, who had purchased the Mootah from the Collector for arrears of revenue. B resisted the claim, asserting that he held the land in question by virtue of a Potta from a former Zamindár. A insisted that the Zamindár had no right to alienate as Mániyam any land upon which the permanent assessment had been fixed; and that such being the case in this instance, B had no right to the land, which formed part of the Mootah conveyed to him by virtue of the public sale of the Zamindár's rights therein. Held, that the Potta was sufficiently proved by B's witnesses, and was not impeached by the evidence on the other side; that it was clearly proved that B had been in possession of the lands some time previously to the sale thereof by the Collector to A; and that the latter had failed to make out that the lands in question were either included in the Circuit Committee accounts, or that it formed part of the land of the Zamindári when the permanent assessment was fixed; and therefore, that if the lands were held by an invalid title, it was for the Collector, and not the Zamindár, to call it in question. *Cotagherey Boochiah and another v. ## TRESPASS.

- I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS, 1.
- II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY, 5.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. In an action of trespass to try the title to land, twenty years' possession by the defendant is a sufficient bar to the action. Bulram Chund v. Tiretta and another. Chamb. Notes. 20th July 1790. Mor. 343.

2. Trespass is not maintainable against a Justice of the Peace for a distress for not paying an assessment for repairs of a road on the ground that it had not been in fact repaired. Compton v. Gahagan. 9th April 1812. 2 Str. 161.

3. Trespass will not lie against a Judge for acting judicially, but without jurisdiction, unless he knew, or had the means of knowing, of the defect of jurisdiction; and it lies upon the plaintiff, in every such case, to prove that fact. Culder v. Halket. 8th July 1840. 3 Moore, 28. 2 Moore Ind. App. 293.

4. Trespass will not lie against the East-India Company for acts legally done by a superintendant of police under a warrant from the Governor in Council of Bombay. Dhachjee Dadajee v. The East-India Company. Perry's Notes. Case 9.

failed to prove that he had been endangered or suffered any loss whatever by the act of B, judgment was given against him accordingly, with all costs. Collector of Malabar v. Attoor Illata Soobhan Putter. Case 1 of 1817. 1 Mad. Dec. 144.—Scott, Greenway, & Ogilvie.

6. A sued B for the recovery of the value of certain property, consisting of jewels, shawls, &c., and money, alleged to have been taken by B from the house of A. The Provincial Court at first refused to take cognizance of the claim, under Sec. 11. of Reg. 11. of 1802, it being of a criminal and not a civil nature; but upon a summary appeal from their order, the Sudder Adawlut directed that the suit should be entertained, tried, and determined on its merits; it being apparent that the act complained of amounted only to a trespass, for which redress was open by civil action. Sree Raja Row Vencata Nee-ladry Row v. Ennoogunty Sooriah and another. Case 5 of 1822. 1 Mad. Dec. 338.—Grant & Gowan.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

5. A sued B, a Collector, for the value of certain grain alleged to have been taken away from his granary. B averred that the quantity taken away was grain received by B as security for the payment of the Government revenue, and deposited in A's granary until the time for selling it should arrive. The Court held, on appeal by B, that the act of the Collector in ordering the granary of A to be opened was a manifest trespass; and that the grain was a deposit which, if refused to be given up by A, could lawfully be recovered only by legal process: it was, however, decided, that though B had committed a trespass, A was not entitled to the value of the grain taken away, as it appeared by the evidence that it was not his property; and A having

A decree which committed part of the estate of an absentee Muslimán to his sister, with provision for eventual conversion of tenure by trust into that of property, was reversed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, no eventual heritable right being found in the case to exist in the sister. Mt. Mani Bibi v. Mt. Sahibzadi. 15th April 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 108.—Turnbull & Rattray.

5. A sister of a childless Hindú (who died leaving the sons of paternal uncles him surviving) having produced, two days before his death, heritable issue, succeeds to the inheritance, by the Bengal law, as trustee for such issue born before the death of his paternal uncles, as well as for the future production of such issue, though not born or begotten at the time of the death of the paternal uncles. Adaitachand Mandal and others, Petitioners. 17th Aug. 1843. 2 Sev. Cases, 131.—Tucker, Reid, & Barlow.

6. A childless widow, carrying on a suit for partition and possession of her husband's share of the joint estate, adopted a son. By the Hindú law the act of adoption vested the right to the share in the adopted son; but it was held, under the circumstances, that she prosecuted the suit as the guardian of her adopted son, and was put into possession as his trustee, and was accountable to him for the profits of the property decreed to her. *Dharm Das Pandey and others v. 3. A member of an undivided Hindú family, holding a grant from Government as trustee for the family, cannot, by obtaining a new grant, less ambiguous than the former one, and giving him the property in severalty, free himself from his trust once created or declared, and the rights vested at the time of such subsequent grant in third parties cannot be affected by such a proceeding. Ellacambadoo Mootiah Moodeliar v. Ellayambadoo Nineapah. 1816. 2 Str. 333.

4. Certain members of an undivided Hindú family were adjudged to pay a debt borrowed by their brother, subsequently deceased, on the ground of the family having been undivided, and the money borrowed having been applied for the benefit of the family generally.<sup>1</sup> Nub Koomar Chowdry and another v. Bairy Cristnamah Chitty and another. Case 3 of 1823. 1 Mad. Dec. 372. — Grant & Gowan.

party claiming exclusive right. Gour Chander Rai v. Hurish Chander Rai. 20th June 1826. 4 S. D. A. Rep. 162. — Leycester & Dorin.

6. Disputes having arisen between the brothers of an undivided Hindú family, and owners of land, certain agreements were entered into between them, by which their mutual interests and liabilities were declared, and the matters in dispute referred to arbitration. A decree having been obtained by a creditor named in the agreements against one member only of the family, and the debt recovered from him alone; it was decided by the Courts below, and affirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee, that the other members of the family were liable to be called upon to contribute in respect of their several shares. Demum Sing and others v. Kasee Ram and another. 10th Feb. 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 366.

USURY.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally, 1.

2. Illegal Interest, 7.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY, 15.

I. IN THE SUPREME COURTS.

1. Generally.

1. It was held that a plea that the contract is void for usury, under the Statute 13th Geo. III. c. 63., must aver that the plaintiff is a subject of His Majesty. But a replender may be moved for, and will be awarded. Delisle v. Allen. Hyde's Notes. 21st July 1787. Mor. 351. Hulodhur Ghose v. Connollyloll Tagore. 9th Feb. 1844. 1 Fulton, 411.

2. An usurious contract between native parties was held to be within the Statute if the contract were made in Calcutta.<sup>1</sup> Greedhur Baboo v. Sree

Luchenundun Doss. Hyde's Notes. 13th July 1781. Sm. R. 52. Mor. 350.

3. But it was held, subsequently, on an indictment for usury against an inhabitant of Calcutta, that, as such, he was not that sort of British subject who is within the prohibition of taking more than 12 per cent. for his money. Manickram Chattopadhyay v. Meer Conjeer Ali Khan. Hyde's Notes. 18th Nov. 1782. Sm. R. 53. Mor. 125.

4. Motion was made, on an affidavit that a large sum had been deducted from a loan, to stay execution on a judgment by confession on a bond. Rule to shew cause was granted, the deduction making the contract usurious. Kistnomohun Baboo v. Raja Dummodar Sing. 29th June 1782. Sm. R. 52.

5. The Court refused to direct an issue to try whether a loan was usurious, when the affidavits put in by the plaintiff and defendant were contradictory, and the affidavit of the plaintiff denying the usury was preferred. Chapman v. Moore. Sm. R. 54. Tulseram Ghose v. Kistnomohun Mullick. Hyde's Notes. 12th Nov. 1787. Sm. R. 53.

6. The laws prohibiting usury apply only to British subjects. Hulodhur Ghose v. Connollyloll Tagore. 9th Feb. 1844. 1 Fulton, 411.

2. Illegal Interest.

7. It was decided on argument that greater interest than 12 per cent. might be allowed on Bengal bonds made before the 13th Geo. III. c. 63. took effect. Rajebullub Chatterjee v. Rangopaul Chowdree. Hyde's

The rule afterwards laid down and acted on will be seen to have been, that the Statute did not apply to native parties, and that the security or contract was not void, but that the Court would only allow such interest as a British subject could legally take.—Mor.

Notes. 20th June 1776. Sm. R. 51. Mor. 231, note.

8. Interest on a Bengal bond, though more than 12 per cent., was allowed, where the 13th Geo. III. c. 63. did not apply. Weston and another v. Chaundraney. Hyde's Notes. 23d Jan. 1778. Sm. R. 51. Mor. 231.

9. A Bengal note being sued upon, the interest on which exceeded 12 per cent., it was held that neither principal nor interest could be recovered, the contract being void by the 13th Geo. III. c. 63. sec. 30.<sup>1</sup> Sreemutty Janakey Dossee v. Durgaram Dossee. Hyde's Notes. 1st Dec. 1779. Sm. R. 51. Mor. 349.

10. A note given for the interest of 12 per cent. of monies lent, to which was added further sums by the name of profit or premium, was held void as usurious; and it was held that the plaintiff was debarred from recovering even the monies really lent.<sup>2</sup> Kisnochurn Shaw v. Rutton Coondoo and another. Hyde's Notes. 21st Nov. 1780. Sm. R. 51. Mor. 350.

11. Interest was claimed by the plaintiff, in an action on a Bengal bond, at the rate of 3 per cent. 2 annas per mensem, which is about 37 per cent. per annum. The plaintiff was nonsuited. Petruse David v. Suchrajat Phahurry. 29th June 1782. Sm. R. 52.

12. A plaintiff can recover treble penalties against a defendant for taking usurious interest under the 13th Geo. III. c. 63. s. 30.<sup>3</sup> Forbes

v. Day. Chamb. Notes. 17th June 1786. Sm. R. 134. Mor. 351.

13. In an action on a promissory note, bearing interest at 15 per cent., the Court observed, that in this, as in other cases of interest reserved by a Hindú, which a British subject could not legally receive, 12 per cent., and no more, would be allowed, and judgment was given accordingly. Ramsunher Haldar v. Anundo Moy. Chamb. Notes. 14th Aug. 1788. Sm. R. 134.

14. Where, in an action on a promissory note, with interest at 12 per cent., it was proved that interest at 24 per cent. had been calculated upon former note, and for the amount so made up a subsequent note had been granted, and that in a subsequent loan on a note a considerable reduction in payment was made for interest at 24 per cent. for nine months in advance, judgment was given for the defendant with costs.<sup>4</sup> Prawn-hissen Dur v. Oditchurn Roy. 22d Nov. 1815. Sm. R. 54.

II. IN THE COURTS OF THE HONOURABLE COMPANY.

15. The original amount of a loan is not forfeited in consequence of the stipulation of illegal interest; nor is a bond taken on the adjustment of the balances of a debt, bearing such illegal interest, held to be an attempt to elude the regulations, and to obtain interest upon interest, which would involve a forfeiture of the principal. Rai Balgovind v. Sheikh Gholam

<sup>1</sup> It does not appear to have occurred either to the Court or the plaintiff's counsel that the Statute is expressly confined to "His Majesty's subjects." The 30th Section provides "that no subject of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, in the East Indies, shall, upon any contract which shall be made from and after the 1st of Aug. 1774, take, directly or indirectly, for loan of any monies, &c., above the value of 12l. for the forbearance of 100l. for one year."—Mor.

By Reg. XV. of 1793 the Company's Courts are prohibited from allowing a higher rate of interest than 12 per cent., and it does not appear that the Supreme Court has ever allowed more since the 13th Geo. III.; but it has not (so far as can be traced), excepting in the above cases, considered a security given by a Hindú or Muhammadan, reserving a higher rate of interest, as usurious or voidable, nor entertained an application to set such security aside on the ground of usury.—Sm.

Ali. 24th June 1805. 1 S. D. A. Rep. 93.—H. Colebrooke & Fombelle.

16. The penalty for illegal interest declared in Sec. 8. of Reg. XV. of 1793 (i.e. forfeiture of interest), is applicable to interest exceeding rates fixed by antecedent regulations from the 28th March 1780, and was applied to interest on two bonds at 25 per cent. per annum, the first dated in 1781 and the second in 1784, although payment had been made under the former bond in discharge of the principal and interest, and the second bond was given for the balance. Ib.

17. It was held that it is not an evasion of the Usury Regulations for the surety to exact more than the legal interest on an advance of Government revenue, made by him as compensation for his risk; and a claim being preferred for the amount of a debt on bond, exclusive of interest, the Court adjudged, in decreeing the claim, that it was optional with the creditor to take interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the date of the plaint to the day of payment, or to institute a fresh suit for interest equal to the principal from the date of the loan. Baboo Motee Chund v. Mooljee Ubdoolah and others. 23d Aug. 1823. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 261.—C. Smith & J. Shakespear.

18. The avowed and open stipulation of increase on a loan, at a rate greater than the legal rate (declared to include interest and mercantile excess), is not a device to evade, which, within Sec. 9. of Reg. XV. of 1793, operates forfeiture of principal and interest, but, under Sec. 8., occasions loss of interest only. Khedoo Lal Khatri v. Rattan Khatri. 2d Feb. 1830. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 10.—Rattray.

19. Where the vendee of land under a revocable sale had exacted illegal interest, by deduction from the principal, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, with reference to Sec. 9. of Reg. XV. of 1793, dismissed his action for the land conditionally sold, considering the deduction as a device of the nature contemplated by the Regulation. Besamber Ade v. Kalim Udden and others. 17th Jan. 1831. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 81.—Turnbull & Leycester.

20. Sec. 6. of Reg. I. of 1814, and Sec. 2. of Reg. III. of 1819,<sup>1</sup> were held not to affect the validity of a bond bearing interest at more than 12 per cent., such bond having been executed in a district not under the Company's government at the date of its execution. Mooljee Kameshwar v. Bhugwandas Wallubhdas. 14th Aug. 1823. 2 Borr. 595.—Romer, Sutherland, & Ironside.

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY.

1. If a cognovit be signed without warrant from the defendant in a cause, a judgment will not be relievable in equity after the death of the attorney who signed it, though the action should be upon an accommodation note, and the execution on the judgment should have been suspended for three years, the conduct of the plaintiff in the action having been bona fide without notice, and the defendants in the action having been guilty of laches. Vencata Runga Pillay v. John Tulloh and others. 13th July 1808. 1 Str. 266.

2. Judgment may be entered up in vacation of the preceding term on a warrant of attorney for entering up judgment, although the party died in the same vacation, before the order obtained for entering up judgment. Muddenmohun Sein v. Reid. 11th Nov. 1815. East's Notes. Case 37.

4. The defendant had obtained a rule nisi to set aside a judgment on warrant of attorney, but had never served it. The plaintiff now came in to shew cause, but the Court would not allow him to do so, the rule having expired by want of service. Sibnarain Ghose v. Coor Ramchund. 8th July 1839. ### WATAN.

1. An illegitimate son of a Muhammadan, who during his lifetime had held a share of an office which was Watan, or hereditary, has no claim to such share on the decease of his father, where the custom of the country does not allow bastard children to succeed to hereditary offices. And although the Muhammadan law recognizes no Watan property, but classes all property under the term Tarikát, or "effects;" and though by that law an illegitimate son would therefore inherit and succeed to the office; yet, under Sec. 14. of Reg. II. of 1800<sup>1</sup>, which directs the customary rule of the country to operate, in certain circumstances, to the exclusion of the written law, such claim cannot be admitted where the custom of the country differs from the law. Mr. Humcedoon Nisa v. Ghoolam Moheood Deen Chowdree. 21st Feb. 1821. 2 Borr. 33.—Sutherland.

2. A female is precluded from participation in hereditary Mujmaahdírí and Pussaieta land, under Sec. 20. of Reg. XVI. of 1827. Bacc Goodab v. Umbaram. Sel. Rep. 128.

3. But it seems that other Watan property, not in lieu of service, may be held by females. Anbarow v. Rutton Kristna. Sel. Rep. 132.

4. In a suit to oust females in possession of Pussaieta land, it was decided against them, on the authority of the preceding case (Marriott, Elliott, and Greenhill). A review of judgment was admitted, on the ground that the application of the law was erroneous, as being ex post facto. Mr. Greenhill observed—"The interpretation of the Court determines that it is contrary to the letter and spirit of the enactment that females should succeed to the office; but it is doubted whether this exclusive law could, or was intended, to have effect in regard to the parties already in possession of the emoluments as co-sharers, under a well-known and recognized usage of the country. Sec. 20. Cl. 2., and Sec. 17. Cl. 4., and Sec. 18. of Reg. XVI. of 1827<sup>1</sup>, recognize and provide for the division of allowances without reference to capacity; and although it may not be lawful for females to succeed after the passing of the Regulation, it appears to be equitable, and not opposed to the spirit of the same, that those who acquired a previous right should continue to enjoy the benefits, as far as the arrangement provided for in the Chapter from which the above Clauses are quoted will permit." The Court thereupon resolved, in supercession of the decree, and upon the grounds on which the revision was admitted, that the female claimants should be permitted to hold their share of the Watan under the provisions of Chap. 3. of Reg. XVI. of 1827.<sup>2</sup> Dessaees Hurreeahankur and Roopshankur v. Baees Mankooer and Umba. 6th Sept. 1838. Sel. Rep. 122.—Giberne, Payne, & Greenhill.

WAZIFAH DĀR.

1. An under Wazifahdār in a village was held to be entitled to the management of his own share of the Wazifah lands, taking it out of the hands of the head or managing Wazifahdār.<sup>3</sup> Mukeer Ghoolam Mooheerood Deen v. Nawab Saifur Jung Bahshee. 20th May 1814. 1 Borr. 116.—Nepcan, Brown, & Elphinston.

<sup>3</sup> The novelty and importance of this case induced the Sudder Adawlut to admit a special appeal in this suit, though it was not equal to the amount declared to be appealable by the Regulations.

I. OF HINDÚS.<sup>1</sup>

1. In the Supreme Courts.

(a) Generally.

1. Where a Hindú married woman has received a legacy from her relations, or the relations of her husband, such legacy is her Stridhana, and the husband has no interest in it; therefore there can be no objection to his competency as a witness to establish the will. Ramduloll Sircar and another v. Sree Mutty Joymoney Daby.

<sup>1</sup> The question as to whether a Hindú has or has not the power of making a will appears to depend entirely upon the sense in which we use the word "will." That he cannot make a will to the same extent as an English testator is certainly true; but there is also no doubt that he can legally dispose of his property, under certain restrictions, by a writing or declaration, accompanied by certain formalities, to take effect after his death. Surely this is, in fact and operation, a will, and comes within the definition—"A will is a declaration of the mind, either by word or writing, in disposing of an estate, and to take place after the death of the testator." 7 Bacon's Abridg. 299. 6th Edit.

All the best authorities on Hindú law, with Henry Colebrooke at their head, concur in stating that the will of a Hindú may be recognized, although he cannot will away property which could not have been the subject of gift or partition during his lifetime. Colebrooke, in a letter to Sir Thomas Strange, says—"The principle I would lay down is, that a man cannot confer on a stranger, or his own kin, by will (which I consider to be a donation in contemplation of decease), what he could not bestow by deed of gift, or partition of patrimony. The utmost that can be said is, that he may do that by testament which he could have done by partition or donation between living persons." And again he says—"In provinces in which the authority of the Mitáshará prevails a Hindú is restricted from giving away immoveables, and from making any other partition of his possessions among his male descendants, but such as the law has sanctioned. Consequently, he would be withheld from distributing immoveables in a mode unauthorized by the law, but may bestow moveables, of which the law permits him to make gifts, on motives of natural affection; not, however, to the extent of his whole property. In short, if there be no sons or male descendants, and the property be not shared by a co-heir, the whole of his possessions, being his separate and distinct property, may be disposed of by will as he pleases."—2 Str. H. L. 435, 436. In another letter he expresses himself still more strongly, giving it as his revised and considered opinion, that "A Hindoo in Bengal may leave by will, or bestow by deed of gift, his possessions, whether inherited or acquired; and the gift or the legacy, whether to a son or to a stranger, will hold, however reprehensible it may be as a breach of an injunction or precept." 2 Str. H. L. 438.

This, I think, is a fair statement of the law on this difficult subject. Amongst those who maintain that a Hindú cannot make a will we find Mr. Ellis, no mean authority, who says—"What, then, is the will of a Hindú? If the distribution of property made by it be contrary to the provisions of the Dharma Shastra it is invalid; if in conformity with them, it is unnecessary." 2 Str. H. L. 421. This, though specious, is not strictly true; since, by the extended sense of the law of gift, a Hindú can vary the rules of distribution without violating the provisions of the law. Again, does not a Hindú alter the distribution by an Adopti Patra? in which he authorizes his widow to adopt a son after his death, who becomes his heir to the exclusion of the relatives: indeed, a writing is not absolutely necessary, verbal authority being sufficient; yet this is in conformity with the law, and may be regarded in some sort, and to a certain extent, as a testamentary writing or nuncupative will.

It is, after all, of but little importance by what name we call the instrument or declaration by which a Hindú governs the disposition of his property after his death; and the question resolves itself into a verbal dispute. A will is everywhere, to all intents and purposes, a gift to take effect after the decease of the donor; and the Hindú gift in contemplation of death has, to the extent allowed by the doctrine of each particular school of laws, exactly the same operation as a will in England; and although the Hindú law does not recognize the existence of a will by name, and as such, still the power of disposition under that law is precisely the same in effect as that exercised by what we call a will in England. I confess that I cannot see why any legal disposition of property after a man's death should, as I have heard argued, be declared not to be a will, simply because such disposition may be under more restrictions than wills were by the civil law. Were it so, we might say, that by the laws of France a Frenchman cannot make a will. 1 Hayes' Introd. to Conv. 596. 5th Edit.

If a law allow any discretionary power over property after a man's death, no matter how limited such power may be, the exer-

Sittings after 1st Term 1816. East's Notes. Case 47.

2. Where a Hindú had the custody and care of certain real property, bequeathed to his son by will, it was held that this did not render him incompetent to establish the will, as he took no beneficial interest under the will, but only as a bare trustee. Ib.

3. Semble, A will established in a former suit cannot be impeached in a subsequent suit brought by the same party. Mubraz Lachmia v. Chale- hamy Vencata Rama Jagganadha Ror. 30th June 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 54.

4. The Court will not interfere to carry out trusts for religious purposes under a Hindú's will, unless those purposes are defined. Sibchaunder Mullick v. Sreemutty Treepoorah Soondry Dossee and others. 20th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 98.

5. On a motion under the 20th Sec. of Act XIX. of 1841 that the brother of a deceased should be appointed curator of the estate and effects, on an affidavit that the deceased had left a will which his widow sought to suppress; that the brother was named executor therein; and that the widow was in possession and wasting the property; the Court held that the 20th Sec. of the Act referred to did not apply, as, should there be no will, the widow's title would be valid. In the goods of Hurrookistno Paul. 24th Oct. 1842. 1 Fulton, 83.

cise of it is a will, or testamentary disposition, i. e. the declaration of a man wishes as to the disposition of his disposable property subsequently to his decease. And in this sense a Hindú can most undoubtedly make a will.

There is no doubt but that, whatever may have been the case in the Courts of the Honourable Company, wills made by Hindús are, and always have been, recognized in the Supreme Courts; and Sir Francis Macnaghten mentions, that, even in his time, where there was a large property to dispose of intestacy was uncommon. Sir Thomas Strange states his belief that "to the southward Hindú wills were only recognized in the King's Courts." A reference, under the present Title, to the Placita 25 b et seq. will shew that wills of Hindús have been upheld in the Courts of the Honourable Company in all the Presidencies, with the restriction that they cannot bequeath property which they were incompetent to alienate during their lifetime.

It seems, on the whole, that there is not any great discrepancy between the recognition of Hindú wills by the Queen's and Honourable Company's Courts. Sir Francis Macnaghten expressly says—"It is now perfectly understood, from the decisions which have taken place in the Supreme Court, that the devise or bequest of a Hindú will be supported there, if it be made of such property as the testator could lawfully (whether sinlessly or not) have disposed of by gift in his lifetime. But the Court never professed to go further than to permit that to be effected by will, which might have been done inter vivos." Cons. H. L. 319.

(b) Power to make a Will.

6. The will of a Hindú devising away lands in exclusion of his daughter and the son of his brother was held valid. Doe dem. Munnoo Loll v. Goper Dutt and others. Hyde's Notes. 16th Aug. 1786. Mor. 81.

7. A devise by a Hindú testator of a house and appurtenances, purchased with money acquired by him in his lifetime, to his third and fourth sons, to the exclusion of the two elder, was held good. The eldest son had separated his estate from the testator's before the date of the will, and the second being totally deaf was probably considered by the testator as incapable of business. Doe dem. Russicklohl Dutt and another v. Ramtonoo Dutt. 26th Jan. 1790. Sm. R. 79.

7 A, a Hindú, by certain papers written at different times in the presence of one witness, appointed B, his wife's brother, to the management of certain property bequeathed for religious purposes, C, the grandson of A's brother, being alive and of age.

The Pandits declared that B was entitled to the management of the property during his life.<sup>1</sup> Sree Cover and another v. Bolaky Sing and another. 17th July 1793. East's Notes. Case 128.

8. A Hindú bequeathing his moveable property to his widow, she takes only a life estate in such property bequeathed to her by his will. The widow is at liberty to dispose, according to her pleasure, of the interest and growing produce of such property; but she cannot dispose of the property itself without the consent of the Supreme Court (who represent those that by the Hindú law are to controul and superintend in those cases), or without the consent of her grandson when he comes of age.<sup>2</sup> Dyalchand Addy and others v. Kishoorie Dossee. 6th April 1795. Mor. 83.

8 a. A will leaving property, real and personal, between the wife and the son of a testator, was affirmed. Dialchand Adie v. Kishoree Dossee. 1799. Maen. Cons. H. L. 35. 357.

9. The will of a Hindú giving the whole of his property to his third son and his fourth son, only requiring them to pay Rs. 10,000 to his wife, and making no mention of his eldest and second sons, the former having left the family, and the latter being deaf, was declared by the Pandits to be valid according to the Shastra. Desherel's Case. East's Notes. Case 124 a.

10. A Hindú having sons living may dispose of immoveable ancestral estate by will, without their consent.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> In this case the Pandits did not call in question the power of a Hindú to make a will, but the case seems to have been decided on other grounds.

<sup>3</sup> There was a difference of opinion upon the Bench in this case, and the question was referred to the Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, by letter addressed to them by the Judges of the Supreme Court. The Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut (Messrs. Ross, Sealy, Rattray, H. Shakespear,

12. Where a Hindú by his will disinherited two of his sons for misconduct, and left the estate for the maintenance of an idol, the will was upheld. Doc dem. Kismohun Sarmono v. Gopeemohun Tagore. 1813. Maen. Cons. H. L. 349.

13. The will of a Hindú was declared to be well proved, but to be wholly inoperative, except as to a disposition in favour of the stepmother of the testator.<sup>4</sup> Issurghunder Corformah v. Govindchund Corformah. Jan. 1813. Maen. Cons. H. L. 320.

14. A will made by a Hindú during his minority was declared to be void. Harrosoondry Dossee v. Cossinanth Bysack. Dec. 1814. Maen. Cons. H. L. 11.

15. A Hindú widow cannot will away personal property derived from her husband. Jushadah Raur v. Sug- and Turnbull) sent in reply a letter, in which they stated their opinion that a Hindú of Bengal, who has sons, can sell, give, or pledge, without their consent, immoveable ancestral property; and that without the consent of the sons he can, by will, prevent, alter, or affect, their succession to such property. The case was accordingly decided in conformity with this opinion.

<sup>4</sup> "Upon a reference to this will enough may appear to justify the Court's declaration, if the declaration had been made without any exception. But that the will should have been declared 'well proved' may, upon a perusal of it, be thought unaccountable; for it seems to be the production of a madman, and I should have thought had, for that reason, been pronounced 'wholly inoperative.' There is, however, an exception with respect to one rational bequest. The testator's whole property, which was, I believe, considerable, is left for the support of an idol. The sons and the widows are to be merely maintained."—Sir F. Maen.

The Pandits were of opinion that a Hindú may make a testamentary disposition of his estate by writing, and also by parol; but at any rate, if the parol contradicts the writing, the latter shall prevail.<sup>1</sup> *Sree Mutty Berjessory Dossee v. 17. A will giving all the testator's property (a provision which he made for his wife excepted) to his brothers was established. Case of Soorjecomar Takoor's will. Macn. Cons. H. L. 360.

18. A Hindú, having a wife and two daughters, made a provision for them by his will, and left the whole of his estate to his brother: the estate was ancestral and acquired, moveable and immoveable. The will was established. Bustom Doss Mullick v. Rajindra Mullick. 1822. Macn. Cons. H. L. 361.

22. A bill filed by a mother, claiming her share of an estate, upon partition having been made between the widow of her deceased son and her two surviving sons, was dismissed with costs, her late husband having left a will the intention of which was clearly to exclude her from participating.<sup>3</sup> Comuknonee v. Joygopaul. 9th Dec. 1823. Macn. Cons. H. L. 90.

(c) Execution.

23. The question whether a will has been properly executed by a Hindú testator must be tried by English and not Hindú laws of evidence.<sup>4</sup> Syed Ally v. Syed Kulle Mulla Khan. 19th Jan. 1813. 2 Str. 180.

(d) Construction.

24. Where a testator directed a religious work to be performed at one place, and a temple to be built at another, it was held that it did not follow that the work at the first place meant the erection of a temple; and it was referred to the Master whether there was any religious building amongst the Hindús less expensive than a temple. Ramtonoo Mullick v. Ramgopal Mullick. 23d June 1829. 1 Knapp, 245.

25. Where a testator directed a Ghat to be built, it was referred back to the Master to inquire whether, by the usages of the Hindús, it was necessary that it should also be consecrated. Ib.

26. A claim by parties for certain jewels, as devised to them by the will of a relation, was dismissed with costs for want of proof that the property sued for was distinct from the estate in the will, and for their share of the balance of which they had filed a separate suit against the widow's brother. Mt. Ruttunkoonoor and another v. Ruttunram Ubbheram and others. 16th June 1819. 1 Borr. 236.—Nepean, Bell, & Warden.

(b) Power to make a Will.

27. A Hindú cannot, under any circumstances, will away the whole of his property whilst there are legal heirs in existence. Toojaram Hajeerun v. Nurbheram and another. 5th Oct. 1811. 1 Borr. 380.—Crow & Romer.

29. Where there are three persons equally related to each other within the seventh degree, and equally entitled each to a share of the property of a certain person, by the Hindú law that person cannot by will bequeath the whole of it to one alone, to the prejudice of the other two, unless they should have resigned their rights to the testator's estate, and such resignation should be expressed in the will. Hureewulubh Gungaram v. Keshowram Sheodas. 26th Feb. 1822. 2 Borr. 6.—Romer.

30. A Hindú cannot by will or deed bequeath or give away the whole of his property to one of his nephews, to the exclusion of the others. *Hureewulubh Gungaram v. 31. Under the Hindú law a man is authorized to dispose of his property by will, which, under the same law, he could have alienated during his lifetime by any other instrument. Mulrauze Vencatu Furdiah and another v. Mulrauze Lutcheiah. Case 3 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 438.—Grant, Cochrane, & Gowan.

31 a. By the Hindú law, as current at Madras, a man may by will bequeath his self acquired property under the limitations of Sec. 8. of Reg. XXV. of 1802. Ib.

32. By the Hindú law, current in the Madras Presidency, a Zamindár, having no issue, has the power of alienating, by deed or will, a portion of his estate, which, in default of lineal male issue and intestacy, would rest in his widow, without her consent. Mulraz Lachmia v. Chalehany Vencata Rama Jagganadha Rom. 30th June 1838. 2 Moore Ind. App. 54.

33. A widow of a Hindú, constituted heiress to all his property by a will, excepting an assignment for defraying the obsequies of the testator, contested the will as destroying her rights as widow, and claimed the money set aside for the performance of the testator's funeral expenses. The will was established by the Court.

<sup>1</sup> I have inserted this case here because it has been very generally considered as deciding the question of the validity of Hindú wills. The gift was in fact, however, a gift by the father in his lifetime. And indeed there is no difference, in the case of Hindús, between a gift and a will, so far as the latter is recognized by the Courts of the Honourable Company.

Gungaram Wiswunath v. Tappee Bacc. 3d Oct. 1811. 1 Borr. 372.—Crow & Romer.

34. A Hindú widow cannot make over property inherited from her husband belonging to her family, by will, to a total stranger, or a man of another and an inferior Cast, to the exclusion of the widow of her late husband's nephew, then living. And in a suit filed under a will of plaintiff's (respondent's) sister in his favour, to oblige defendant (appellant's uncle) to surrender the property left by the aunt of that sister's husband, and seized on by the defendant under pretence of its being devised to him by the will of the aunt as a religious gift to him, her family priest, for the good of her soul, all the Courts agreed in disallowing the aunt's right to dispose of the property by will. The defendant dying in the course of the suit in the Zillah Court, and having in the meantime made away with all the property, except the house which he had mortgaged, that Court, and the others on appeal, declared the mortgage illegal, and ordered restoration of the house to the respondent. *Choonelal v. 35. A will executed by the widow of a Hindú in favour of her own nephews, to the prejudice of the heirs of the male line of her husband, was held to be illegal. Dhoolubh Bhace and others v. Jecree Bhace and another. 30th June 1813. 1 Borr. 67.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

36. Where a disinherited Hindú claimed against his deceased sister's Gumáshtah for recovery of her estate, devised to him at her death by agreement, it was decided that the claim for the estate was good, but the Gumáshtah was held not liable for want of proof of his possession of the property. It was also decreed, that where-ever the property should be found it should be the right, and be put into the possession, of the devisee or his heirs, all costs of suit being defrayed from his estate. Veej Bacc v. Panachund Javehur. 5th Feb. 1824. 2 Borr. 635.—Romer, Sutherland, & Irouside.

(c) Construction.

37. Where a testator by his will assigned as his motive for appointing his son-in-law his Kurta, or heir, that he had no male heirs to represent him on his death; that females were incapacitated for business of the nature contemplated, viz. the management of a large Zá-mindári; that, in consequence, he had surrendered the chief part of his Zá-mindári to the Honourable Company in exchange for a permanent pecuniary grant; and that he had placed the rest of his estate in charge of his said son-in-law for certain defined purposes, chiefly for the maintenance of his family and recovering debts due to the estate; the Court held that the son-in-law of the testator was designed to act as head of the testator's family during his natural life, but that the testator never intended him to be considered his heir by devise; and that consequently no part of the testator's estate was devised to be enjoyed by his said son-in-law and his heirs in perpetuity. Mubranze Venkata Vardiah and another v. Mulrauze Lutchemiah. Case 3 of 1824. 1 Mad. Dec. 438.—Grant, Cochrane, & Gowan.

(f) Validity of Wills.

47. Where a Muhammadan widow bequeathed by will the whole of her property to a stranger, the Court upheld the will, as the testatrix left no heirs, and decreed that the legatee should take the whole of the property; but it was at the same time decided, that had she left objecting heirs two-thirds of the property would have gone to them and one to the legatee. *Mohammad Ameeroodeen and another v. ## 2. Effect of Wills.

48. ## 4. Validity of Wills and Bequests.

55. If a Muhammadan assign property for a pious endowment, and he (or his executor on his part) appoint a trustee, and such trustee (there being no special provision for his successor) on his death-bed bequeath the trust to his sons, the bequest is good in law, and the sons are entitled to the superintendence jointly, and to the lawful profits accruing from it, not subject to the confirmation of the ruling power, neither are they removable quam diu se bene gesserint; but on proof of misconduct, or breach of their trust, the ruling power shall appoint

A widow of a Muhammadan claiming half of a house devised to her by her husband in his will, beyond the share belonging to her by law, was held to be entitled to it, notwithstanding a Fárikhkhatt passed by her, there being no dispute at the time of passing the Fárikhkhatt, the widow then residing on the premises, and it therefore only pertaining to the share willed to the widow as one of the joint heirs of her husband; and although the Muhammadan law does not allow bequests, made as such under a will, to heirs, yet it was held to recognize Nazrs or gifts similar to that recited in the will: and as there was no proof that the widow ever transferred her right by giving it up to be divided among the heirs, nor that she in any way legally alienated it, she was held to be clearly entitled to recover. Mt. Aesha and others v. Mt. Aesha, Widow of Ubdoorrehman. 5th July 1820. 1 Borr. 306.—Hon. M. Elphinstone, Bell, & Prendergast.

59. A testament of a Muslimán was declared null under the Muhammadan law, because he made a partition amongst his heirs, giving some a preference, which the law would not give. Iláayat Ali Khan and other v. Tájan and others. 4th April

1833. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 287.—Walpole.

5. Execution of Wills.

60. The question whether a will has been properly executed by a Muhammadan testator must be tried by the English, and not by the Muhammadan law of evidence.<sup>1</sup> Syed Ally v. Syed Kullee Mulla Khan. 19th Jan. 1813. 2 Str. 180.

III. OF EUROPEANS.

1. In the Supreme Courts.

61. Of two wills, the later in date, though making provision for the same persons, and, in general, to the same effect with the prior of the two, yet, in so far as it may make any different provision, it will be considered as revoking the former. Burt and others v. Wood and others. 11th April 1816. East's Notes. Case 52.

62. A bequest of Rs. 5000, to be invested in a house for B, and Rs. 30 per mensem during her life, was held only to give her a life interest in the Rs. 5000; and the same could not be considered to be in satisfaction of a debt of Rs. 4500 due to her from the testator. Ib.

63. Under a devise of the residue of a testator's estate to his six natural children, and on the death of any of them intestate, and without offspring, the survivor to succeed to the property of such deceased; it was held that the children in the first instance took respective estates for life, with a power of disposition by will, though they had no issue: that as either had offspring born, the interest became vested in the parent; but if there were no offspring born, nor the party made a will, the interest in his share survived to the survivors, the last of whom only would take absolutely; and that the legal estate must continue in the executors till the respective interests, or the interest of the survivor of all, vested. Ib.

64. A testator by his will bequeathed Rs. 20,000 upon trust, to pay the interest arising therefrom to A for life, in case she should continue a widow, and should she marry, from and after such marriage, or her decease, whichever should first happen, as to the said principal sum in trust for B and C in equal shares, if both should be living, or the whole to the survivor if either should be then dead. A married again in the lifetime of the testator; afterwards, and also in the lifetime of the testator, C died. On a bill filed by B, claiming the whole as survivor, it was argued, on behalf of the residuary legatees, that the moiety of C, who died after the marriage of the legatee for life, and before the death of the testator, lapsed. Held, that B was entitled to the legacy, the executors to have their costs out of the estate, and the residuary legatees, and one of the executors who had separated, to pay their own costs. Mendes v. De Souza and others. 1st Aug. 1838. Barwell's Notes, 8.

65. The Court will presume that the formalities required by the new Wills Act have been complied with, unless the contrary appears upon the face of it. In the goods of Davidson. 13th Nov. 1843. 1 Fulton, 338.

66. In the new Wills Act, the term "actual military service" means field service, the Legislature evidently never contemplating the exemption of all military men.<sup>1</sup> In the goods of De Bude. 17th Nov. 1843. 1 Fulton, 337.

<sup>1</sup> In this case, Peel, C. J., observed: "The nature of this country is such, that I am afraid there are many persons in the Mofussil who are far removed from professional aid, and many wills will, in consequence, be inoperative. The Court will not at present refuse probate, but they will consider the case."

67. When an erasure has been made after execution of a will, and is not signed by the testator, the probate must contain the words intended to be erased. In the goods of Leach. 21st Nov. 1843. 1 Fulton, 338.

68. A testator signed his will in the presence of a witness, who subscribed it in his presence. Shortly afterwards, upon the arrival of another witness, the testator, in the joint presence of the former witness and the other subscribing witness, acknowledged his subscription at the foot of the will. The second witness then subscribed the will, and the first witness, in his and the testator's presence, acknowledged his subscription, but did not re-subscribe. Held that, under the provisions of Act XXV. of 1838, such attestation was invalid, as both witnesses must subscribe after the signature on the will has been made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two. In the goods of Casement. 8th July 1844. 1 Fulton, 463.

68*a.* And this judgment was affirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, who held that the requirements of the Act had not been sufficiently complied with; it being necessary that both witnesses should be jointly present at the same act of the testator, and jointly subscribe it in his presence. Casement v. Fulton and another. 19th June 1845. 3 Moore Ind. App. 395.

2. In the Courts of the Honourable Company.

69. A (a native of France) died at Patna, leaving, by will, to his brothers, B and C, a sum, of which the interest was to be paid to the poor until they personally appeared and claimed. His widow, D, was made residuary legatee. On a certified declaration of the citizens of the birth-place of A that B and C had been absent more than thirty-five years previous to the will, it was ruled that the legacy had lapsed, their death prior to that of the testator being presumable. Durand and another v. Boilard and others. 15th Feb. 1832. 5 S. D. A. Rep. 176.—C. Smith & Rattray.

70. A, as next of kin to B, deceased, had authorized C to proceed on his part in regard to the succession, and receive communication of any will. C, on the power of A, sued for a special legacy to D, A's brother, on the ground of his presumed death. A was nonsuited in the Lower Court for defect of kin proved; but the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, advertent to the terms of the power, on proof supplied, reversed the decisions of the Lower Courts, and awarded to A, as heir, his share of the legacy, which was treated as intestate property. Ib.

IV. OF PÁRSÍS.<sup>1</sup>

71. Two Pársís (being adopted sons of the testator), claiming under two separate wills, the one being signed by the deceased, but not witnessed, and the other being neither signed nor witnessed, the signed will was determined to be the true one under the rules of the Pársís, and to pass the estate of the testator, notwithstanding any performance by the legatee named in the unsigned will of certain religious ceremonies in honour of the deceased. Nawee Buhoo and another v. Peshtunjee Loola Bhaee and another. 15th Dec. 1802. 1 Borr. 1.—Duncan, Cherry, & Lechmere.

72. A Pársí claiming a third share of his father's estate from his two elder brothers, on the ground that the will under which they took the property, and by which he was expressly disinherited, was a forgery, and failing to prove such alleged forgery, wanonsuited. Mihirmanjee Ruttunjee v. Poonjeea Bhaee and another. 19th May 1815. 1 Borr. 141.—Sir E. Nepean, Brown, & Elphinston.

73. Where two Pársís claimed from their cousin the amount of a legacy left them by his father's will, there being no direct proof of the existence of any will executed by the uncle, the legacy was decreed to be paid to them, with interest from the time of their first instituting proceedings against their cousin, on collateral evidence of the existence of the will by proof of admission of it by the latter. Poonjeea Bhaee and another v. Nomshirunjee Suhoorabjee. 25th Aug. 1818. 1 Borr. 225.—Sir E. Nepean, Nightingall, Bell, & Prendergast.

74. The heirs of a Pársí merchant having, upon his death, taken possession of his shop, and continued to carry on his business for nearly two years, the Courts below refused to disturb their possession upon the production of a will, by which the business was directed to be carried on by the executor for their benefit until he should think proper to admit them into possession. Held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, affirming the judgments of the Courts below, that the abstaining from producing the will for the above period was a consent on the part of the appellant to the respondents' possession of their father's estate and business, and was therefore a virtual compliance with the terms of the will. Khoorshed-jee Manik-jee v. Mehrwan-jee Khoorshed-jee and another. 23d June 1837. 1 Moore Ind. App. 431.

75. Semble, Where a will has been admitted to probate, and acted upon in the Courts below, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will not enter into the question whether such will be sufficiently proved or not. Ib.

76. If a Pársí be separated from his wife, and if she, at the time of separation, passed a writing to her husband regarding her maintenance, jewels, and clothes, to the effect that if she died the property should go to her husband, while such writing is in existence she cannot, by will or otherwise, bequeath the property to another; and in the absence of a testamentary disposition, the property which she had derived from him, and which had belonged to her, would go to her husband. Burjorjee Bheemjee v. Ferozshaw Dhunjeesham. 10th Sept. 1839. Sel. Rep. 206.—Gibberne, Pyne, & Greenhill.

<sup>1</sup> The Pársí law is not especially reserved to Pársís, but I have classed the cases under one head, as frequently they are allowed the benefit of their laws and customs.

77. But if no such writing had been executed, and she had saved her allowance, sold her jewels and clothes, or thus, or otherwise, accumulated property by her own labour, she could bequeath it to another person, and past her husband. Ib.

V. OF ARMENIANS.<sup>1</sup>

78. A testator, an Armenian, made and executed his will in the most formal manner, in triplicate; he afterwards sent for one of the parts in the hands of one of his executors, upon which it was proved that various alterations were interlined by his dictation. But as these interlineations were not signed by the testator, the original will was held to stand unaltered; the alterations merely shewing that the testator's intention was to make a more formal will. Probate was accordingly granted to the executor named in the original will. Kirakoos Arathoom v. Arubuthnot and others. 19th Oct. 1813. 2 Str. 215.

79. According to the Armenian law, a verbal bequest of self-acquired property to an illegitimate son is good, there being no legitimate children; but such a disposition of patrimonial property is not valid to the exclusion of the legal heirs. Arietick Ter Stafanoos v. Khaja Michael Aratoom. 8th Feb. 1820. 3 S. D. A. Rep. 9.—Fendall & Goad.

80. But on proof that such illegitimate son, after the death of his father, virtually acknowledged the right of his heirs by taking out probate, and benefitting under the will of his great-uncle, and by entering into a compromise with his great-uncle's daughter for her share of the property, the Court held that the verbal bequest should not avail.<sup>2</sup> Ib.
